The whole million of dollars under that exception can be used and expended in repairing and building levees under the pretense that the river is deepened thereby; that is, by raising the banks of the river. If the object of this portion of the bill is to expend the money for the purpose of assisting in improving the river, if the object is not to expend it in making and repairing levees on the river for the protection of private property, then this portion ought to be out; for under this exception, as I said, the whole amount can be expended.

I move this amendment for the reason that I am opposed to expending money for levees on the Mississippi River. I think it is not a plan to advance the interests of the country, or the commerce of the country, and if we intend to act fairly about it and not have a deception practiced on somebody, we ought to make it so clear and plain that all may understand it.

Mr. RANSOM. Will the Senator from Illinois tell me what part of the provision he means to strike out?

Mr. LOGAN. Lines 426 and 427, after the word "whatever," the words "except as a means of deepening or improving the channel of said river;" so that it will read:

That no portion of the sum hereby appropriated shall be used in the repair or construction of levees for the purpose of preventing injury to lands by overflow, or for any other purpose whatever. And it shall be the duty of said commission to make report, &c.

The bill will then deprive them of the power of expending the money to make and repair levees. That is the object I have in the amendment.

Mr. RANSOM. Apprehending the purpose of the Senator from Illinois, and so far as he goes sympathizing with him, I would like, with very great deference, to suggest to him that the way he proposes the amendment does not accomplish the object.

Mr. LOGAN. How am I to do it, then?

Mr. RANSOM. The proviso reads:

That no portion of the sum hereby appropriated shall be used in the repair or construction of levees for the purpose of preventing injury to lands by overflow, or for any other purpose whatever.

If the Senator leaves it there, that will be a prohibition of any use of the money. The first part of the proviso provides that the money shall not be used for constructing levees, and then the words "or for any other purpose whatever" would include all purposes.

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from North Carolina is right.

Mr. LOGAN. Then strike out from the word "overflow." I believe the language of the section might be construed as the Senator says. I will then amend my motion so as to strike out line 426, after the word "overflow," down to the word "river," in line 427. Then it will read:

Provided, That no portion of the sum hereby appropriated shall be used in the repair or construction of levees for the purpose of preventing injury to lands by overflow. And it shall be the duty of said commission, &c.

So that the money cannot be used for that purpose, that being the intention of the bill as I understand it. That will make it so that we shall all understand it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, when the Constitution of the United States was adopted and went into force the ablest thinkers in America were divided on its construction. Mr. Hamilton thought that it could be by construction made to suit his views upon the form of the Federal Government; and thereupon Mr. Jefferson began the agitation in favor of what was called a strict construction of the Constitution. Those two great men were to their dying hour antagonized against each other, the one in favor of enlarging the powers of the Federal Government by construction, and the other in favor of restricting these powers by a strict construction of the Constitution.

I make these remarks in order to ask the Senate where in the Constitution does this body find the power to pass a river and harbor bill? Manifestly there is but one clause in the Constitution which gives the slighest support to such a pretension, and that is the power to regulate commerce. Under the Hamiltonian view of the Constitution, the liberal construction which is contended for, such a bill might be constitutional. Under the Jeffersonian construction, the strict construction for which Jefferson contended, no one can claim that such a bill is constitutional.

I say this with a full consciousness of the fact that I have voted again and again for river and harbor bills. I have done so perhaps because, being educated as a lawyer, having sat on the bench, and having therefore got the idea in my head that stare decisis was a rule of action, I have followed the decisions of the constituted authorities again and again in passing such bills; and yet I must say that I never voted for one of them, although I have voted for many, with a clear conscience. My friend from North Carolina taunted me that I voted for the last one.

Mr. RANSOM. Oh, no; I did not taunt the Senator; far from it. I did not mean that.

Mr. THURMAN. I do not think I voted for it. I know I voted against one, and I claim credit for that; but it is possible that, yielding to the uniform practice of Congress and their construction or interpretation of the Constitution, I have again and again voted for such bills. If so, I can say that I have followed the doctrine of stare decisis much further than I ought to have done. But admitting the constitutional power to pass a river and harbor improvement bill, and not at all bringing into question now that power, it is certainly a very useless piece of business to argue upon a bill of this kind. I never knew any good to come of it, but, still, I wish to say something upon the bill.

While I have voted for such bills, I have always thought, if I had the constitutional power to pass them, the real question before the Senate was a business question, a question such as business men would apply to their own affairs; and now applying the principle that business men would apply to their own affairs, I appeal to the Senate if this bill is one that business men, having their own interest in view, would adopt? Recollect that it is the power to regulate commerce which gives us the right, if we have it at all, to pass this bill. Does that give us the power to regulate the commerce of trout-streams in the mountains of West Virginia? I know the inquiry has been suggested, what would the Ohio River be if frogs were not allowed to wade up in the Alleghany streams? Oh, no, that will not do.

What is commerce? Is commerce the swimming of tadpoles? Is commerce the disporting of frogs in the ponds of North Carolina? Is commerce deepening the French Broad, so that a good big sucker can swim over it? Not the least bit in the world. When our forefathers put in the Constitution of the United States that Congress should have power to regulate commerce between the United States and foreign countries, and among the several States, did they think of improving a tadpole stream in West Virginia, or a frog pond in North Carolina? No, I do not think they did. Those were great men, Mr. President; they had great ideas. You cannot say a word about West Virginia to her credit which I do not indorse, for I am more indebted to her than any other man, perhaps, in the United States; but I want her to stand where Jefferson stood; I want her to stand where the people of the United States ought to stand.

And now, Mr. President, what has been done? Let every Senator put it to his own conscience, what are we doing? There are great improvements, which I grant are proper, which I grant are within the power of Congress. There never was a great harbor that deserved more than the mouth of the Columbia River. That is a thing which is within the constitutional power of Congress, if the Constitution authorizes you to make any improvement of rivers and harbors at all; that is an improvement which the whole country ought to have approved, but it was voted down. The improvement of the Mississippi River is another; for although Mr. Calhoun, after having fought internal improvements for a long time, saw fit to give a name to the Mississippi River and call it an "internal sea," and therefore, upon that view, advocated the improvement of the Mississippi River, I do not stand upon Mr. Calhoun's doctrine. I say the Mississippi River deserves to be improved. No word of mine has ever been uttered against the improvement of the Mississippi River. It is all right. No word of mine has ever been uttered against the improvement of these great inland seas, the lakes. I never have believed in the ichthyological doctrine that no rivers or harbors should be improved but those which float fish that swim in salt water; but when it comes to the ridiculous farce of pretending, under the power for the regulation of commerce, to improve a frog-pond or a trout-stream in West Virginia or North Carolina, do you not feel some compunction of conscience and do you not think you are stretching the Constitution a little? Do you not think you are departing from the teaching of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison and James Monroe and Andrew Jackson?

Mr. RANSOM. You have voted for such bills.

Mr. THURMAN. Oh, yes; I have sinned; I pray forgiveness for it; but in the few remaining days I have to spend in the Senate, I will not sin any more in that way.

Now, Mr. President, let me say one thing more about this bill. The democratic party have been opposed, since 1789 down to this day, to centralization. When the General Government is to take into its cognizance and under its supervision and appropriate money for every trout stream in America, what is the use of talking of being opposed to centralization? Let us give up; let us admit that we have been humbugs; let us say we have talked to the people in words which had no meaning, because our actions were opposed to our words. How can we vote for such a bill and talk of being opposed to centralization?

Mr. President, I am an old man, too old to have much more to say in this world's affairs. I was raised in a school which actually believed in what it said. I suppose it is time the old men should be pushed off their pedestals; that a new doctrine should be announced to the American people, a new doctrine for the democratic party; that the democratic party must abandon all its old ideas of strict construction of the Constitution and must go forth with the cry, "the old flag and an appropriation;" that instead of guarding the public Treasury, as we did for three-quarters of a century, the policy of the party in the future must be to put our hands into the Treasury as deeply as we can. Mr. President, that may be the policy of the party, but I, for one, cannot consent to it. It may be the policy, but I cannot see the propriety of it. If it is to be adopted as the policy of the party that we are in the future to give up all the principles which characterized the democratic party, which gave life and importance and vitality to that party; if every principle which was dear to the democratic party fifty years ago, forty years ago, thirty years ago, is to be thrown overboard and we are to take a new departure and try who can get the most out of the Treasury of the United States, then I beg leave to retire from the field. I shall retire very soon whether that be the decision, or whether it be not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. LOGAN.]

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. Mr. President, I am not going to detain the Senate more than a few moments. I did not intend to say one word upon the merits of this bill or any amendment made or proposed to it; but we have listened to-night to two very distinguished gentlemen on this side of the House who have been very earnest and very anxious, judging from their manner and tone, in the advice which they have seen proper to give to us in begging us to vote against this bill. One of these distinguished gentlemen, one who stands higher perhaps or certainly quite as high as any on this continent in the affections of the people, has seen proper to take the floor and repeat his admonition. Another, scarcely less distinguished than this gentleman, has taken the floor and in a very earnest manner repeated those admonitions. I think under the circumstances I shall be excused, for I have not detained the Senate one moment heretofore, if I now detain it one or two minutes at least.

I will not enter into any discussion with the distinguished Senator from Ohio on the question of the constitutional power invoked by the passage of this bill. He reminds us that the father of the democratic party was a strict constructionist of the Constitution. So he pretended to be and so doubtless he was, and so certainly he thought; and yet I need not remind that distinguished Senator that it was under the advice of that very distinguished father of the democratic party that we acquired the great body of the territory which contains the magnificent streams that we propose to improve by this very bill.

Mr. THURMAN. But he admitted that he acted extra-constitutionally.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. If Jefferson admitted that he acted extra-constitutionally, can we not also, and for the benefit of all the people, imitate his example to a little degree? And, sir, when we follow the example of Jefferson and of the distinguished Senator from Ohio himself, who has over and over again stood upon the floor of the Senate under the solemn obligation of his responsibility and voted for these bills, are we now to be informed that we are disregarding the teachings of the father of the democratic party and the traditions of the democratic party if we follow in the example of its illustrious founder and in the many examples of its most illustrious leader?

Mr. President, it is too late. It is under this doctrine of construction that this country since the days of Jefferson has stretched from a narrow circle along the Atlantic sea across the mountains to the Pacific sea, and to-day this country is great, great beyond precedent, chiefly because of the exercise of the very powers which the honorable Senator rises in the Senate to condemn as unconstitutional.

Mr. THURMAN. No, sir.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. The people have acted on these measures repeatedly. What the people themselves have approved over and over for more than fifty years ought at last to be considered partially settled. But, Mr. President, this matter is in a very different condition from what it was in the days of Jefferson and Madison and Hamilton. They never had in their wildest dreams an imagination of a country of such extent as this, and with such power as that which we this day manifest.

Let Senators remember that this very hour while I speak a few men upon this continent hold more power than any monarch upon the earth. Why, sir, we all know the agitations and excitements which disturbed this country for fifty years because a few masters in the South controlled the labor of a few blacks. The number of slaveholders at the highest point numbered 350,000. The number of slaves at the greatest number, including women and children, never exceeded 4,000,000; and yet, sir, there are less than twenty men in America to-day who hold more absolute and irresponsible power over the labor of 50,000,000 of American people than 350,000 slaveholders held over the labor of 4,000,000 of black people. They can tax every bushel of wheat, every pound of corn, and every bale of cotton reared and grown upon this continent; they can say what shall be the profit on every element of labor, on every branch of industry. They can exert that power without any legal compulsion, without any shadow of authority or official sanction.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the Senator from Georgia allow me?

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I would rather not give way just now.

Mr. MORGAN. The question I wish to ask the Senator from Georgia——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. Yes, sir.

Mr. MORGAN. Does the Senator from Georgia propose to counteract this monopoly of power and influence by spending money out of the Treasury to build up countervailing power and influence, or is it proposed to do it by legislation?

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. The Senator will excuse me. I shall answer the question in a moment and would have answered it without being asked specifically.

We talk of the tariff as an excessive burden upon the people; we talk of the internal revenue as an annoying burden on the people of this country. By the tariff and by the internal revenue we raise a few hundred millions of dollars from the people of this country to support the Government and pay the interest on the public debt; and yet this very day less than twenty men on this continent, without law, at least without legislation, without executive or judicial functions, can lay a heavier tax upon the productive industry of this country than is levied by the Government through its double system of external and internal tariffs. They can sit in one room in New York and assess upon the labor of this country and the production of this country a heavier tax than is assessed by the power of the Government.

These are facts which were not known or imagined in the days that are past and gone. They are great facts which we of this generation must meet. And how has this power been acquired by less than a score of men? In what way have they acquired this enormous power? Sir, they have acquired it by getting control of the transportation facilities of the country. They say where you shall go to market and on what terms you shall go to market. They calculate what expense every pound of productive industry will bear in the way of transportation, and they levy it, and without armies and without navies and without judges and without sheriffs and without marshals they collect it. They can increase the burden when they please; they can lessen it when they please; they can discriminate as they please; they can be heavy upon one and light upon another; and that in this free country, that in this country of equal laws, that in this country of the people! Here less than a score of men exercise to-day a more absolute and a more irresponsible power over the labor of 50,000,000 people than could be exercised by all the monarchs of Europe combined. If the arbitrary autocrat of Russia were to dare to attempt to levy upon his people the assessments for revenue which these men levy on the productive interests of the free people of America, that autocrat of Russia would not wear his crown twenty-four hours. I repeat, this immense power has been acquired by getting control of the transportation power of this great continent. If this power be not arrested these iron bars will become the handcuffs of the nation and the manacles of liberty.

How shall this power be met? Sir, it is a question which must make every American statesman anxious. I am not going into that question. It is one which should challenge every man's attention. Whether it can be managed, in what way, whether under the gentleman's system of strict construction of constitutional power especially, it can be managed, I do not know; I am not prepared to say; I will not now undertake to discuss. But, sir, I see in this bill at least one little relief. I see in the principles involved in this bill some relief to the people. These rivers were made by God, and they are the people's highways; they belong to no corporation; they can be combined and their competitive power destroyed by no syndicate. As my colleague said to you to-day, there are 30,000 miles of navigable streams in this great country. True, they may not be adequate to bring in sufficient competitive power to control the railroad transportation power, but they can do much. Any gentleman who will look at the map of this country will see that if these natural highways, these water-ways, are opened and made free and navigable, they will in many portions of the country furnish immense relief to the people—not all that they ought to have. The railroad corporations, which wield this more than autocratic power of which I have spoken, you have been informed to-day do not hesitate to expend annually $400,000,000 to repair and improve their highways; and yet we are told that this great people and their representatives are to be charged with extravagance, with recklessness, with trampling on the Constitution, because we propose to spend ten or twelve millions to repair and improve the great highways of the people.

Streams which the representatives of the people know would be navigable with a little improvement, with a little assistance, are ridiculed in this high council of the nation as "trout streams" and "frog ponds"—ideas which have been repeated so often in the last ten years that they have actually ceased to be original. Sir, what is $10,000,000 to improve 30,000 miles of highway for the transportation of the freights of this country? I was told the other day by a scientific gentleman, a gentleman who understands that question as well as any man in this country, that the single improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi River would be worth at least $20,000,000 a year on the navigation and commerce of that river. If I chose to take the time of the Senate, I could myself point out some smaller streams even in my own State which, with a few thousand dollars of improvement, would enable the planters on their banks, and on either side, and in different States, to realize in the saving of freights annually ten times the amount expended by the Government.

One gentleman says, "Why this bill is in the interest of every locality on the continent; every place gets an improvement." Really, Mr. President, I am grateful to hear, after we have had so much legislation of a sectional character, so much legislation which seemed to improve simply isolated sections, that we have one bill before us which is national in its character and in which every locality in the country has an interest.

One distinguished gentleman, in his kind admonitions to this body for trampling under foot the Constitution and adopting an unjust and unpopular measure, says that we are actuated by the motive of helping the re-election of Senators. They can only be re-elected if the measure is popular; and if the measure is popular, have not the people a right to it? Gentlemen, you are mistaken. I do not know what the future is; I do know that huge questions are just ahead of us; I do know that the people have got to have representatives; and I do know that their interests are to be looked to and regarded. I believe the improvement of these rivers, which are in such bountiful profusion all over this country, and every portion of this country ought to be improved, and I believe their improvement will distribute among the people everywhere, in every section of the country, more real profit than any other measure which passes Congress.

Sir, I ask pardon of the Senate for having detained it thus long. I had not expected to say one word on this bill. I have the kindest feelings for the gentlemen who have addressed the Senate, but I have felt it necessary to say this much to defend the vote I shall give.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia has told us that the railroad companies expend $400,000,000, if I understood him, in the improvement of their roads this year. I confess that is much more than I thought they had to spend; but if they have expended the half of $400,000,000 in this last year, pray what kind of a show would the United States make in competing with them by spending $10,000,000 upon rivers and harbors? Let us look at this thing as business men, as sensible men. If the Vanderbilts and Goulds and the like can expend $400,000,000 a year in the improvement of railroad transportation, what kind of competition does it make for the Government of the United States to expend $10,000,000 on rivers and harbors?

But, Mr. President, it is not $10,000,000. Take out the appropriations for the harbors on the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts, which are just as much in the interest of the railroads as they are in the interest of the people, and you have got your appropriation for rivers, inlets, and the like, down to about five or six million dollars, hardly a year's income of Vanderbilt or of Gould, to compete with the railroads of the country, which expend $400,000,000 a year!

Ah! no, Mr. President, the railroad interest in this country, the power that it does exercise and may exercise on the country, results from the power of the combination of capital. That is what it is. It is precisely the same thing that makes a combination of capital for manufacturing purposes possible in this country, that makes the rich man in manufacturing swallow up the poor man in manufacturing, that makes the rich railroad company swallow up the poor railroad company. That is what it is; and, Mr. President, it will be the poorest of all possible counteractions of that principle of combination to say that we shall pass a river and harbor bill of five or six million dollars. Ah! no, sir! that will not do at all!

Mr. President, with the kindest regard in the world for the very eminent and intellectual Senator from Georgia, I beg leave to say that when I appealed to the old doctrines of the democratic party, when I appealed to the teachings of Jefferson, of Madison, and of Monroe, I did not expect to hear from him. I know there is in the air now an idea of a new departure for the democratic party and that hereafter we are to march under the banner of "the old flag and an appropriation," that we are to go for getting the largest possible sum out of the public Treasury; but I warn my friends from the South that if they try that game they will be beaten, badly beaten, terribly beaten.

Mr. President, from the beginning of this Government down to this day the eastern portion of the Republic has gone for the dollar and the southern portion for the honors, and the eastern portion made the money until there are more national banks and national-bank capital in the State of my friend who sits before me [Mr. DAWES] than there are in the whole South. That is what it comes to when you go to the Treasury, and I say to my friends here to-night that they never made a greater mistake in their lives than they will make if they undertake to enter into competition with their more astute friends, with the men who have combined capital for a raid on the national Treasury. That will not do. It is a very bad game they are playing, and whenever they undertake to take Colonel Sellers's advice for "the old flag and an appropriation," they will be most awfully beaten; the flag they have, the appropriation will go to other parts of the country.

It may be that I am all wrong in these remarks. My friends around me seem to think so; but I say in all seriousness that this bill is a departure from democratic principles and it is a departure from all business principles. Business men look to that which will produce results, profitable results. No business man would spend money as this bill proposes to expend it.

Mr. KERNAN. Mr. President, my objection to this bill is not because it provides money for navigable streams or for harbors. My objection is that there is a very large amount of money appropriated by it for mere local improvements, streams that never were and never will be navigable in the sense of floating commerce up or down; and as I must vote against it for that reason I have risen to say a word in reference to the argument of the Senator from Georgia.

Sir, the relief to the people of this country who are oppressed by onerous and unjust exactions of railroad corporations in carrying our commerce is not to be found by appropriating money to clear out streams that never will float commerce up them and never anything down them or anything larger than a scow——

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I want to ask the Senator——

Mr. KERNAN. I do not yield now. I am disposed to be patient and kind; but I want to speak only a few minutes.

Who are the railroads, and what is the relief against unjust exactions by them, if there be unjust exactions by them? They are the creatures of the Federal Legislature or of the State Legislatures; they are created by them; and I rejoice to believe that as a rule the charters have reserved the right to alter, amend, and repeal. The remedy against these exactions upon commerce and trade is not by levying upon the people other millions to clear out streams which will not float commerce as against the railroads; but the remedy is for the Legislatures which created the corporations to deal with them wisely and firmly and justly, and see that these creatures of legislation, these aggregations of capital, shall only gather from the people a fair remuneration for carrying their freight. Our attention is to be turned to that as the remedy. It will not remedy the burdens of the people to them a dollar to clear out a stream which will not float commerce for about every dollar we apply to streams which will carry commerce.

I am for giving the people the benefit of navigable streams and harbors for commerce, and I will not delude them as I think it would be to say that we will relieve them from the exactions of great corporations by expending money to carry our commerce by water. These corporations are common carriers. Only by virtue of the fact that they are common-carriers does the Federal Government or do the States give them the right to take private property; and we have the right to deal with them and see that they fulfill the object of their creation by carrying passengers and carrying freight for a reasonable reward.

I would not act unjustly toward these great aggregations that do so much of the work of this country, well I doubt not, but I would always let it be understood that the people through their Legislatures who gave them their charters, reserving the right to alter, amend, or repeal those charters, have the control. Such creatures made by act of Congress reserving the same right should be subject to Congress. The remedy for their exactions beyond a reasonable rate to compensate them and give them a proper income on the capital invested is to deal with them, as I said, not unjustly, but with entire firmness, and it would be a delusion to let the idea go out that we can bring down their freights by spending millions of the people's money on small streams which never did and never will carry commerce in competition with railroads, as is the case with many of the streams provided for in this bill.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. Will the Senator from New York now answer a question? He has repeated a statement made here to-night that this bill proposes to appropriate money to a large number of rivers which neither are nor ever can be made navigable. The Senator has made that statement; he is a Senator for whom I have the highest regard and whose statement is authority always. Will the Senator point out a single one to which money is proposed to be appropriated by this bill which has not been reported by the official engineers as either navigable or capable of being made navigable by the money which is appropriated?

Mr. KERNAN. I answer very frankly that I understand—not from personal knowledge, for I am not on this committee and have not examined these streams, but it has been said here and in the other House—that there are hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars appropriated to streams upon which a steamboat never navigated, upon streams that do not have boats propelled upon them, on streams that are comparatively dry during a large portion of the year, and I say all that class of streams should be left out. They are probably works for the State; and to attempt to delude the people with the idea that the commerce we give to these streams will relieve them from the exactions of railroads, if they be unjust, is an entire delusion. The railroads are to be dealt with as quasi-public corporations, held so by the Supreme Court, and they can be dealt with justly and fairly by requiring them to carry for reasonable compensation, as is the charter and is the law in the State which I have the honor in part to represent.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I come back to the question, and the Senator must not escape. He said that there were plenty of rivers in this bill that were never navigable and that could not be made navigable. I called upon the Senator to point out one. He pointed out none; he says he does not speak from personal information; he says he only repeats, as I understand him, what has been said in the other House, and what has been said here. It has been said in the other House, it has been said here, and for the very reason that it has been said in both bodies, when such a remark is taken up by the honorable and distinguished Senator from New York, I want to know particularly which river is it; I want to know what river it is. Call it back if there is a river in this bill to which money is appropriated that has not been surveyed and reported upon by the official engineers of the Government as proper to be improved.

Mr. KERNAN. I will answer.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator will allow me, I will state that while the Senator from Georgia was talking I opened the report, and the first river I turned to is the Savannah River, in Georgia, and I will read what the engineer says:

6. Savannah River, above Augusta, Georgia.—The act approved June 14, 1880, provides the sum of $16,000 for this work. This is the first appropriation made for it.

During the present fiscal year it is proposed to expend this sum in beginning the work of improvement on that part of the river, sixty-four miles long, between Augusta and Trotter's Shoal, with a view to establishing a pole-boat channel three feet deep and thirty feet wide.

A pole-boat channel in the Senator's own State!

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I am glad the honorable Senator has called my attention to the Savannah River. Now, I wish to make one or two remarks on that subject.

First, the Savannah River above Augusta for a distance of nearly one hundred miles drains two States, and portions of two of the most beautiful and fertile regions in those States, and is capable of developing a very fine and profitable commerce.

Besides, I do not know that the Senator from Illinois is not better informed than I am as to what is a pole-boat; but does that Senator know that three feet of water, and a pole-boat at that, may carry three hundred tons of freight?

Mr. LOGAN. Oh, yes; I suppose it would.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. Very well; is that to be called a trout stream? Is that to be said not to be navigable, and not capable of being made navigable?

Mr. LOGAN. That was not the question.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. That is the very question. The Senator said there were rivers mentioned in this bill that were neither navigable nor could be made navigable. I challenged that expression. I say there is no foundation for it.

Mr. LOGAN. I supposed the Senator meant navigable for steamboats or ships or something of that kind. Here is a stream navigable for a pole-boat, and I will show you, if you will allow me to read it, how it can be made navigable for a pole-boat.

The work to be done—

Mark it, it is to be three feet deep and thirty feet wide; that is, it can be made three feet deep and thirty feet wide—

The work to be done consists almost entirely in blasting rocks and dredging gravel in the channel, and in constructing wing-dams to contract the water-way.

So as to make it three feet deep and thirty feet wide by digging it out so that a pole-boat—that is, a boat pushed with a pole—can be made to go down stream; I do not know whether it can go up or not. That is the report.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. The cause is those rivers have not sufficient depth to carry large steamers. Now, sir, large portions of this country are chiefly interested in smaller boats. As I said before, a boat that will carry three hundred tons burden may not draw, as I am informed, over two-and-a-half feet of water. That will do the commerce of a large portion of this country, including much even of New York and Illinois. Of course we could not carry such boats as go up the Hudson River, but they are ample accommodation for that country; they are ample for the business of that country, and they are navigable for boats, and some of them steamboats, at that.

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to say, Mr. President, in reference to the Savannah River, about which the Senator from Illinois has just been speaking, that nine-tenths at least of that river, within the distance referred to by the Engineer, is navigable for steamboats; and the channel to which he refers is simply through shoals, sometimes half a mile, sometimes three-quarters of a mile, and that is the channel to which the Engineer refers when he says he will make a three-foot channel through, and will put wing-dams up in order to concentrate the water.

Mr. LOGAN. So that a pole-boat can go through.

Mr. BUTLER. The impression that would be created by the remarks of the Senator would be that that channel was intended to be so the entire length of the river, which is a great mistake. I have no doubt, and I think the Engineer has no doubt, that when he does cut that channel through the shoals, it will be navigable for steamboats.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. And it is the cleaning out of those very obstructions that make the appropriation necessary.

Mr. BUTLER. That is what it is for.

Mr. LOGAN. The Senator from South Carolina will notice that I simply wanted to read to the Senator from Georgia an appropriation in his own State which showed that he had a river there that was not navigable. That was all.

Mr. BUTLER. I think that what the Senator said would be very likely to create a misapprehension.

Mr. LOGAN. Not at all.

Mr. BUTLER. Not intentionally, of course, but I think the Senator's remarks would be very likely to mislead.

Mr. LOGAN. Not at all, because the report of the Engineer says it can be made "three feet deep and thirty feet wide" by an appropriation and by a certain character of work. Now, if it is navigable for steamboats up to this place, I suppose the proposition of the Engineer is to run a steamboat up there and then unload the steamboat and load a pole-boat and push it through this channel to another steamboat that never can get through. So these little puddle-holes at the different places between the bars will be used for steamboats and the bars be used by pole-boats. Is that the idea of it?

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator has given a very satisfactory solution of the Engineer's purpose in his own mind.

Mr. KERNAN. Mr. President, I repeat what I said, and I want to make an additional remark. It was said in debate elsewhere and it was said here by a Senator in reference to his own State that there were appropriations in the bill for streams that never would and never could float a steam-vessel or a sail-vessel or anything more than a boat that was floated down with the current and poled up by poles. There are none such in my State. Before we vote money on the theory of providing for commerce, I think there should be some one here who can say the stream is something more than the one alluded to by the Senator from Illinois and by the Senator from Pennsylvania, and I venture to say that no member of the committee and no member of the Senate will rise and say that there are not a large number of streams here provided for which never have been navigable in the sense of floating vessels propelled by steam or vessels propelled by sail or vessels larger than a scow-boat. That is what I said, and I do not think the cleaning out of these streams will relieve us from the exactions of railroads or some other mode of transporting our freights than by these pole-boats.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I notice that there are a good many Senators in the Hall now who have not been in the Hall during the entire evening. Those who have been here all the evening and during the entire session are becoming a little tired. I should like to know whether it would be in order to make a motion to stop talking and proceed to voting. ["Right!" "Right!"]

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. GARLAND in the chair.) Such a motion would not be in order.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. RANSOM. I have been trying to accomplish that for six hours.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. LOGAN.]

Mr. PLUMB. I simply want to answer a part of the question of the Senator from Georgia. He asked if there were any appropriations for the improvement of rivers in this bill which were not recommended as being navigable or as being susceptible of being made navigable by the engineers. I want to call his attention to two which I find on a cursory examination, one on line 523, "for improving Contentnia Creek, North Carolina, $10,000." There is no recommendation at all by the engineers.

Mr. RANSOM. Pardon me. The Senator from Kansas was not in the Senate to-day when I made the explanation. Here is the report of the Engineer, and he recommends $82,000 for it, and says that this appropriation will make it navigable. It is now navigable some distance; this will make it navigable for one hundred and odd miles.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to ask if there is any estimate sent to us by the Secretary of the Treasury, if it came to us in the Book of Estimates?

Mr. RANSOM. No, sir.

Mr. TELLER. It never has been estimated for.

Mr. RANSOM. There was no estimate for it, and for this reason: the survey has been completed since the meeting of Congress. The survey was not completed until six weeks ago.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not refer to private estimates carried around in the pockets of Senators. I was referring to the estimate made in the report of the Secretary of War. I will refer to another, and that is Pea's Creek, in Florida.

Mr. RANSOM. Let me correct the Senator from Kansas. This is a communication made by the Secretary of War to Congress, and published five or six weeks ago.

Mr. PLUMB. There is something upon the subject about what constitutes a navigable stream. I just call attention to two samples which came under my notice in regard to the character of the Guyandotte River, West Virginia:

It is proposed with the funds appropriated for the fiscal year 1880–'81 to continue present operations, extending them up above Logan Court House, into Wyoming, and possibly McDowell County, with the view of improving, firstly, the raft navigation over the entire river, and then, if funds are left, to begin work at certain special points with the view of improving for push-boat navigation—

Which I suppose is a superior kind of navigation—

by the construction of suitable chutes.

And on page 1833 the Engineer refers to the Little Kanawha. Speaking of the accomplishment of the object by the expenditure of the appropriation of last year, he says:

It is believed, however, that in general the object aimed at was accomplished, and that rafting is now practicable at a much lower stage of water than ever before, and consequently much more frequently.

And how frequently is not stated; in other words, there are streams here that can be navigated with rafts semi-occasionally, and that constitutes a navigable stream.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. LOGAN.]

Mr. LOGAN. For the information of the Senator from Georgia, who was desirous of knowing what the Engineer had reported, I will read a paragraph on page 691, from the report of William P. Craighill, major of engineers:

It is suggested that any new appropriation for Elk River be not restricted to certain portions, as in the last case. The river needs improvement below the Big Sandy as well as above. Before the river can be considered properly prepared for the full development of the trade upon it, which the resources of the country will probably produce and maintain, some or all of the private mill-dams should certainly be removed or modified.

The Senator from Georgia will doubtless understand how to modify a private mill-dam. I do not.

Mr. EATON. Where is that stream?

Mr. LOGAN. It is in West Virginia, and I am sorry that the Senator who speaks always for the water of that State is not present. I will read further:

The unexpected cheapness and success, however, of the work of last season lead me to conclude that what remains can be done for very much less than the amount of that estimate, which was $100,000.

That is for the purpose of modifying mill-dams.

An appropriation of $5,000 was made June 14, 1880, which gives a total of $10,000 for this river. The last appropriation was without the restrictions as to locality contained in the first. The money thus far has been spent in conformity to the idea of making an open navigation of ten or twelve inches depth at lowest water.

[Laughter.]

Our friend from Georgia can certainly explain the character of boats which can travel on this river that is to have a depth of ten to twelve inches after the mill dams are modified.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I am unfortunately not an engineer as the Senator from Illinois seems to think he is.

Mr. LOGAN. No; but I think I can steer a raft.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I will not undertake to explain the reports made by the engineers, nor have I had them before me, nor do I care to have them before me. The question I propounded to the honorable Senator from New York, and which no man has yet dared to deny, is, was there a stream in this bill which had not been reported by the official engineers of the Government as a proper stream for the appropriation of the money contained in this bill? Now, if the engineers of the Government do not understand what is navigable and what is not navigable, I am not responsible for their mistake nor for their inefficiency.

Mr. LOGAN. The Senator will understand me; I was merely attempting to sustain his proposition by showing that these engineers had said that they could make a stream ten or twelve inches deep for $100,000 if the mill-dams were modified.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I am very much obliged to the Senator, but I am not engaged to-night in trying to make fun for the Senate or the galleries; I am not engaged in that business. I am indulging in no wit or humor. I am dealing with a question which is of serious consequence to the people, and I endeavor to deal with it accordingly.

What I have said is—and that is the point I make, I care not who says to the contrary; let any gentleman say to the contrary—I know of no stream to which money is appropriated by this bill which has not been reported by the official engineers of the Government as a proper stream for the appropriation proposed, and I believe in almost every instance the appropriation proposed by this bill is scarcely more than one-half of that reported and recommended as the proper estimate by the Government officials.

Mr. EATON. I should like to say one word to my friend from Georgia. I do not propose to participate in this discussion. Does not my friend from Georgia understand exactly how this thing is brought about? He has asked the question, and with a great deal of vigor, Is there any stream where there has not been a report from an engineer of the United States? Now, does not my friend know exactly how that is brought about?

Here comes a petition asking for a survey. We pass it. There is one from my State now that I will not vote for, and it is in this bill, that ought not to be voted for. That survey is voted for; the engineers are put upon it, and the engineers reply in the exact words which have been read by the Senator from Illinois, that if you will spend $100,000 you can get a push-boat over here if it does not draw over ten inches of water. I do not call that a recommendation from the engineers of the United States. They simply tell you when Congress asks them to survey a stream exactly what can be accomplished by the expenditure of $50,000 or $100,000. That does not make navigable streams, permit me to say to my friend from Georgia. They simply tell you what they can do if you will spend $100,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. JONAS. I wish to say a word or two in reference to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois. He proposes, if I understand him aright, to strike out the latter portion of the proviso contained between lines 423 and 427, on page 18. This proviso was inserted in the House of Representatives to prevent and guard against any portion of the sum of money appropriated for the improvement of the Mississippi River being used solely for the purpose of the repair or construction of levees. The proviso reads:

Provided, That no portion of the sum hereby appropriated shall be used in the repair or construction of levees for the purpose of preventing injury to lands by overflow.

The Senator proposes to strike out the remainder of the proviso.

Now, Mr. President, representing as I do a State which requires levees to prevent the encroachment of the river, I do not stand here to advocate the expenditure of a single dollar by the General Government for the purpose of building levees for the purpose of protecting private land from overflow, or for the purpose of preventing destruction to private property from the overflow of the river, and I think this proviso is sufficiently guarded and plain and express. But the Senator from Illinois, in order to make it more plain as he says, proposes to strike out the subsequent words "or for any other purpose whatever, except as a means of deepening or improving the channel of said river."

I object to this portion of the amendment. While I do not ask on the part of the Government that a dollar of this money shall be expended for the purpose of the repair or construction of levees in order to prevent injury to land by overflow, it may become necessary in the opinion of the commission of engineers, under whose direction this money is to be expended, to use the levee system exceptionally and in some portion of that improvement for the purpose of widening and deepening the channel of the Mississippi River; and the effect of striking out this last clause would be to determine that the commissioners charged with this work, the engineers of the Government charged with this work, should not use the levee system at all, even if that system should be necessary for the purpose of deepening and maintaining the channel of the Mississippi.

Mr. President, it may be necessary to use levees; it may be necessary to use jetties; it may be necessary to construct dikes. What we propose is that this million of dollars shall be expended, not for the purpose of protecting private lands from overflow, but for the purpose of deepening and maintaining a channel in the Mississippi River, and if in the judgment of the engineers charged with this work it shall become necessary to build certain levees for the purpose of stopping a crevasse through which the waters of the river have wasted away or for the purpose of confining the water within a narrower channel, because levees after all are nothing more than jetties, levees being built on the bank and jetties being built in the water. I do not propose that they shall be controlled and directed so that a levee may not be built even if a levee should be the best practicable mode for carrying out and achieving the object which we desire to attain by making this appropriation. Therefore I am opposed to the amendment.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, the object I have, as I stated before, is this: under this bill as it is now provided doubtless this commission if it desired to do so could expend the whole of the million of dollars in levees. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] shakes his head. Let me read and see:

That no portion of the sum hereby appropriated shall be used in the repair or construction of levees for the purpose of preventing injury to lands by overflow, or for any other purpose whatever except as a means of deepening or improving the channel of said river.

If the commissioners should come to the conclusion that the best mode of deepening the channel of the Mississippi River in their judgment would be by levees, they could expend the whole of that money for that purpose, because it is a matter in their judgment alone by this bill. "Except as a means of deepening or improving the channel of said river."

Mr. COCKRELL. I think the Senator is thoroughly mistaken. If he will allow me to make the suggestion, that river improvement commission reported a plan and system for improving the navigability of the river, and that plan and system was to give the river in the shoal places, where the river is very wide, the same width between its banks that it has above and below, reducing it to an average width of 3,000 feet, and that that would necessarily give the same depth of water, and they only touch upon the levees incidentally, and that report is not unanimous upon that point at all. The commission will expend this money in pursuance of that plan in taking certain shoals at different points of the river, and where the river is from one to three miles wide, and contracting the channel to the same width it has above and below.

Mr. LOGAN. Not contract it by building levees?

Mr. COCKRELL. No, sir; not by building levees; there is nothing of levees at all. The commission tried the question of levees; they tried outlets; and why? Because we ordered them to do it. Some of them say that levees may facilitate navigation in the end. That is not a unanimous report even on that point. They speak of the outlet system, and they do that because they were directed to consider those different plans; but their plan of improvement to be carried out under the legislation of this bill is to give a uniform width to the waters of the river which must produce a uniform depth; and that will be done in these wide places by using mattresses, by using what they use on the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers, wire netting, sinking them in the wire and forming an embankment; but it is not to be done by the levee system.

I say to the Senator that I do not understand any one here to be advocating a levee system for the reclamation of the alluvial land belonging to private individuals in that section. I say very frankly that I am opposed to that, and I shall never vote one dollar for the object of building levees for the reclamation of private lands belonging to individuals, and the Government has not got an acre of public land up and down the Mississippi River.

Mr. TELLER. I have not the report of that commission on my table now. I have had it here, and I have read it very carefully. I say that no man can read it and not come to the conclusion that they propose to adopt the levee system. They go on and state all of these other systems familiar to engineers, the filling up the break in the bank, and then they speak of the advantage of the levees, and as I read the report they go on and tell why, and then they argue the question as to the power of Congress to authorize the levees. I tell you, the majority of the commission come here, with two of the members dissenting, with the theory that they are to build levees, and that is the plan of the commission, and no other plan can be gathered from that report for the purpose of narrowing the river.

Mr. LOGAN rose.

Mr. COCKRELL. Now I will read from the commission report if the Senator will permit me.

Mr. LOGAN. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. Here is the report:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 17, 1880.

* * * * * * * *

The work assigned to the commission was—

First. To direct and complete such surveys of the Mississippi River between the head of the passes, near its mouth, and its headwaters, as were then in progress; and to make such additional surveys and examinations of said river and its tributaries as might by it be deemed necessary.

Second. To take into consideration and mature such plan or plans as will correct, permanently locate, and deepen the channel, and protect the banks of the Mississippi River; improve and give safety and ease to the navigation thereof; prevent destructive floods and promote and facilitate commerce and the postal service; and with such plans to prepare and submit estimates of the cost of executing the work.

Third. To report specifically upon the practicability, feasibility, and probable cost of the plans known as the jetty system, the levee system, and the outlet system.

They were required to report upon those three systems. I say they did not adopt the levee system, they did not adopt the outlet system, but they did adopt the jetty system or that of net-work along the bank, and they do not report in favor of levees.

Mr. LOGAN. Very well, then, if they do not report in favor of levees and you desire a million of dollars for the purpose of carrying out the report of this commission, why do you provide that they may expend part of this money in levees, I should like to know. It is just exactly like the reports in reference to the small streams; every time you make an appropriation for a small stream here like the one I have read about, it leads to more. I have read the engineers' reports and I find one stream where they can make it deep enough to push a raft down.

I do not know how many more I could find, but whenever an appropriation of money is made and a part of the money appropriated is used for a particular purpose, then it becomes a part of the work of the Government, and the Government must expend money every year for that purpose. If this money is used for the purpose of repairing levees, the very thing made this year will be estimated for next year, and in that way it will become a part of the system that levees shall be established on the Mississippi River, and we shall appropriate money for them every year. The Government of the United States, in my judgment, ought not to appropriate money for either making levees or repairing levees. It is no part of their duty, in my judgment, to do it, because it is certainly a system that never can succeed on the Mississippi river. The Mississippi runs sometimes so as to strike the shore and cuts it away for miles, and then it turns and does the same thing on the other shore. Levees will not hold it within its walls or confine it at all, and the appropriating of money for that purpose is the same as throwing it into the Mississippi River, in my judgment. Hence I hope that this bill will confine the operation to the river in some other form than by giving authority to build levees or maintain levees by the appropriation.

Mr. RANSOM. Now, Mr. President, I hope we shall have a vote on this question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. In line 425, after the word "levees," it is proposed to strike out down to and including the word "river," in line 427, as follows:

Or for any other purpose whatever, except as a means of deepening or improving the channel of said river.

Mr. LOGAN called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered and taken.

Mr. KELLOGG. I am paired with the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. DAVIS.] If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. PENDLETON. My colleague [Mr. THURMAN] is paired during the whole evening with the Senator from Rhode Island, [Mr. ANTHONY.]

The result was announced—yeas 7, nays 37; as follows:

YEAS—7.

Allison,	Jones of Nevada,	Paddock,	Teller.
Eaton,	Logan,	Plumb,

NAYS—37.

Bailey,	Dawes,	Jones of Florida,	Saunders,
Bayard,	Farley,	Kernan,	Slater,
Beck,	Ferry,	Lamar,	Vance,
Brown,	Garland,	McDonald,	Vest,
Bruce,	Hampton,	Maxey,	Voorhees,
Burnside,	Harris,	Morgan,	Wallace,
Butler,	Hereford,	Pendleton,	Williams.
Call,	Hill of Georgia,	Pugh,
Coke,	Johnston,	Ransom,
Davis of W. Va.,	Jonas,	Saulsbury,

ABSENT—31.

Anthony,	Conkling,	Ingalls,	Rollins,
Baldwin,	Davis of Illinois,	Kellogg,	Sharon,
Blaine,	Edmunds,	Kirkwood,	Thurman,
Blair,	Groome,	McMillan,	Walker,
Booth,	Grover,	McPherson,	Whyte,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hamlin,	Morrill,	Windom,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hill of Colorado,	Platt,	Withers.
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Randolph,

So the amendment was rejected.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

Mr. TELLER. I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BURNSIDE, (when Mr. ANTHONY'S name was called.) On this question my colleague [Mr. ANTHONY] is paired with the Senator from Ohio, [Mr. THURMAN.] If my colleague were here, he would vote "yea."

Mr. FERRY, (when Mr. BALDWIN'S name was called.) My colleague [Mr. BALDWIN] is paired with the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. MORRILL.] Were he here, my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. TELLER, (when the name of Mr. HILL, of Colorado, was called.) My colleague [Mr. HILL] is paired with the Senator from Iowa, [Mr. ALLISON.] If my colleague were here, he would vote "nay."

Mr. INGALLS, (when his name was called.) I am paired on the passage of this bill with the Senator from Massachusetts, [Mr. HOAR.] If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. KELLOGG, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DAVIS] on the passage of this bill. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. EATON, (when Mr. PLATT'S name was called.) My colleague [Mr. PLATT] is paired with the Senator from Mississippi, [Mr. BRUCE.] If my colleague were here, he would vote "nay."

Mr. TELLER, (when his name was called.) On this question I am paired with the Senator from Wisconsin, [Mr. CAMERON.] If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. THURMAN, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Rhode Island, [Mr. ANTHONY.] Were he present, I should vote "nay."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. On this question I am paired with the Senator from New York, [Mr. CONKLING.] If he were present, he would vote "nay," and I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 12; as follows:

YEAS—32.

Beck,	Farley,	Jonas,	Ransom,
Brown,	Ferry,	Jones of Florida,	Saunders,
Bruce,	Garland,	Lamar,	Slater,
Burnside,	Groome,	McDonald,	Vance,
Butler,	Hampton,	McMillan,	Vest,
Call,	Hereford,	Maxey,	Voorhees,
Coke,	Hill of Georgia,	Paddock,	Walker,
Davis of W. Va.,	Johnston,	Pugh,	Williams.

NAYS—12.

Bailey,	Dawes,	Jones of Nevada,	Pendleton,
Bayard,	Eaton,	Kernan,	Saulsbury,
Blair,	Harris,	Logan,	Wallace.

ABSENT—31.

Allison,	Conkling,	Kellogg,	Rollins,
Anthony,	Davis of Illinois,	Kirkwood,	Sharon,
Baldwin,	Edmunds,	McPherson,	Teller,
Blaine,	Grover,	Morgan,	Thurman,
Booth,	Hamlin,	Morrill,	Whyte,
Cameron of Pa.,	Hill of Colorado,	Platt,	Windom,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hoar,	Plumb,	Withers.
Cockrell,	Ingalls,	Randolph,

So the bill was passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. THEODORE F. KING, one of its clerks, advised the Senate that the House had postponed the ceremonies fixed for Sunday (to-morrow) at three p. m. in commemoration of Hon. FERNANDO WOOD until Monday evening at eight o'clock.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

A bill (S. No. 76) for the relief of M. F. Clark;

A bill (S. No. 326) for the relief of Henry F. Lines;

A bill (S. No. 367) granting an increase of pension to Isabel L. Evans;

A bill (S. No. 753) to provide for the sale of the remainder of the reservation of the confederated Otoe and Missouria tribes of Indians, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. No. 1181) for the relief of Dodd, Brown & Co., of Saint Louis, Missouri;

A bill (S. No. 1905) changing the name of the First National Bank of West Meriden, in the County of New Haven, and State of Connecticut;

A bill (S. No. 2184) to authorize the commissioners of the District of Columbia to appoint additional policemen for temporary service in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 7036) to establish post-routes;

A bill (H. R. No. 7033) making the city of Chattanooga, in the State of Tennessee, a port of delivery;

A bill (H. R. No. 7103) to constitute Atlanta, Georgia, a port of delivery;

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 79) directing the Secretary of War to investigate the claim of the State of Florida against the United States for expenditures made in suppressing Indian hostilities in said State between the years 1855 and 1860, and to report the result of such investigation to Congress; and

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 156) in relation to the international exhibition of 1883.

AMENDMENT TO A BILL.

Mr. MCDONALD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is pending before the Senate a House bill (No. 6717) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department. The claims have all been passed upon by the proper officers, reported to the House; the House has passed the bill, sent it to the Senate; and it has been referred to the Committee on Claims, examined by that committee, and I have been instructed to report it back favorably to the Senate without amendment. The bill consists entirely of the enacting clause making the appropriation and the names of the parties and the amounts. It can be passed in just a moment. There are fifteen or sixteen States, including the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, and West Virginia, that are interested in it. It can be passed in less than five minutes, if it shall be the pleasure of the Senate to pass it so that it may be enrolled and got to the President before the adjournment. It provides for claims for quartermaster and commissary supplies.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri asks the present consideration of the bill just reported.

The bill (H. R. No. 6717) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The Chief Clerk read the enacting clause of the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. All the rest is simply a statement of names and amounts. I ask that the reading of that portion of the bill be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and the reading will be dispensed with.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE BRIG GENERAL ARMSTRONG.

Mr. PENDLETON. I desire to call up the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio calls up the unfinished business, which is Senate bill No. 1441, for the relief of the captain, owners, officers, and crew of the late United States private-armed brig General Armstrong, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns.

Mr. PENDLETON. Now I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at eleven o'clock and seven minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, February 26, 1881.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by Rev. DAVID WILLS, chaplain United States Army.

JOURNALS OF THURSDAY'S AND FRIDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read the Journals of Thursday's and Friday's proceedings.

The Clerk proceeded to read the Journals.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I move that by unanimous consent the further reading of the Journals be dispensed with to-day.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the Journals should be read.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I object.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the Journals.

The Journals were then approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the morning hour.

Mr. WILSON. I wish to make a privileged report.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to suspend the morning hour to-day to proceed with the sundry civil appropriation bill, and pending that motion that all debate upon the pending paragraph and amendments thereto be closed in twenty minutes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest that the gentleman submit his motion in the form of a suspension of the rules.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then I move to suspend the rules to-day and that the House resolve itself in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of further considering the sundry civil appropriation bill; and also, that all debate upon the pending paragraph and amendments thereto be closed in twenty minutes.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 142, noes 15.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended in manner as stated, and the motion agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Pending the order of the House on the motion to go into Committee of the Whole, the Committee on the Library desire to have printed a Senate bill.

Mr. BURROWS. What becomes of the motion to limit debate?

The SPEAKER. That was embraced in the motion to suspend the rules and go into Committee of the Whole for the purpose indicated.

CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY BUILDING.

On motion of Mr. GEDDES, by unanimous consent, Senate bill No. 1988, authorizing the construction of a building for the accommodation of the Congressional Library, was ordered to be printed for the use of the members of the House.

USE OF THE HALL TO-NIGHT.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a resolution by consent at this time, to which I hope there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded, and the House has resolved to go into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. WEAVER. I will state briefly the object of this motion, and I hope there will be no objection to it. A member of the German Reichstag, Hon. J. W. Fritzsche, will be in the city to-day, and his friends greatly desire that he shall have the use of the Hall to-night for the purpose of delivering a lecture upon the condition of the German people, especially with reference to the laboring and working classes in the German Empire. This is simply a resolution which I desire to pass granting the use of the Hall for that purpose if it be not occupied by a session of the House. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order being demanded on all sides, the Chair is unable to entertain the resolution. Several members have objected.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House accordingly resolved itself in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia, in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union to further consider the sundry civil appropriation bill. The Clerk will report the pending amendment, on which, by previous order of the House, all debate is limited to twenty minutes.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to establish at the Isthmus of Panama naval stations and depots of coal for the supply of steamships of war, $200,000, to be available for expenditure as soon as suitable arrangements can be made to the proposed end.

Mr. HERBERT. Mr. Chairman, the fact that the private secretary of the President appeared before the sub-committee of the Committee on Appropriations on this amendment indicates an extraordinary anxiety for its passage. The House will remember that the President, in a recent message to Congress, asserted a right on the part of this Government to exercise control over interoceanic commerce across the American Isthmus. In his opinion the Monroe doctrine has some sort of application to this subject. This amendment, giving as it does to the President discretion in this matter to spend $200,000 where he may see proper along the Isthmus, if passed will indicate an intention on the part of Congress to enable the Government to carry out that idea as expressed in that portion of the President's message.

If we pass it and the President takes the steps contemplated thereby, it will be taken as an approval by Congress of that portion of the message, and this Government will be committed to a policy which seems to me unwise, untenable, and full of danger.

The Monroe doctrine as I understand it grew out of peculiar circumstances. In 1823 Russia, Prussia, France, and Austria were about to take steps to propagate upon this continent monarchical institutions by force. They contemplated restoring the authority and power of European monarchies over the colonies in South and Central America which had established their independence and set up republican governments. When it was made known to our Government that such intentions were entertained President Monroe sent in his famous message. Read by the light of surrounding circumstances that message simply means this Government will resist any attempt on the part of European monarchies to overturn republican governments on this continent. That declaration was wise and statesmanlike—prompted by the instinct of self-preservation. But circumstances have entirely changed. There is no longer any disposition or manifestation of intention on the part of European monarchies to propagate their systems here by force.

No occasion has arisen to cause any alarm for the safety of our Government. No attack is threatened on republican institutions. The alarm has been sounded by President Hayes simply because some enterprising Frenchmen propose to dig a canal across the Isthmus, and these Frenchmen not only work under a charter from the government to which the Isthmus belongs, but they are themselves citizens of a sister republic, the republic of France. Sir, Mr. Monroe never intended to advance the absurd and dangerous doctrine that the United States had the power or the right to say that the United States of Colombia, a foreign nation, might not charter, if it saw proper, an interoceanic canal within its own borders and permit the subjects of any foreign nation at its pleasure to take stock in and carry on such enterprise.

Mr. WILSON. Provided it was all under the control of the Colombian Government.

Mr. HERBERT. Yes, sir. I say that no intention existed on the part of President Monroe to establish any such dangerous and absurd doctrine as that this Government had the right to control interoceanic commerce across the American Isthmus. His declaration was aimed at the establishment of political institutions, hostile political systems, by the governments of the Old World upon this continent.

Let us, Mr. Chairman, remember that we are not now situated as this Government was then. We are in no danger of foreign interference. With fifty millions of people, brave in war and skilled in the arts of peace, united at home and respected abroad, this Government is safe from any foreign interference whatever. Let us not attempt to interfere, let us not threaten to interfere with the rights of any foreign nations. Let us continue in the ways of peace which is the true policy of this Government, and legislate for the happiness and prosperity of our people, attending to our own affairs and leaving other peoples and other nations to attend to theirs in their own way.

The interest the President has indicated by sending his private secretary before the sub-committee of the Committee on Appropriations or before individuals of the sub-committee on this question springs out of the fact that he desires this Congress by making this appropriation to indorse his policy as announced in that part of his message. This I trust this Congress is not ready to do.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Chairman, I have endeavored to bother this House with my voice and opinions upon public questions as little as possible, and but for the fact that I see some necessity for speech upon this amendment, I would be silent now.

What is the proposition, sir? Why simply it is to appropriate the sum of $200,000 for the acquisition of naval stations on the Central American Isthmus. The importance of naval stations to every maritime power, to every commercial power, or to every power that pretends to anything like great proportions as a nation, either in a military, a maritime, or commercial point of view, must commend itself to the common sense of every Representative here and of every intelligent man in this country. Why, sir, it is the policy pursued by the greatest maritime nation of the earth. England has always sought to acquire naval stations in every portion of the world that her fleets and that her commercial vessels might find relay stations for provisions, stores, and coal as will succor and support throughout all the world.

Then what are the objections to it? The only sensible objection or the only objection that has come here in a form worthy to be answered is that the President of the United States is in favor of it, and that he was so anxious about its passage that he actually sent his private secretary for the purpose of interviewing individual members of the Committee on Appropriations in regard to it. Is that any reason, Representatives, that we should oppose it because the President of the United States is in favor of it, or because his private secretary is in favor of it? Is that any reason why we should oppose it? I do not understand that there can be any force in such an objection. Certainly it is an objection scarcely worthy of the broad brain and enlightened statesmanship of my friend from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT] who has raised it.

Now, sir, what are the advantages to be gained by the adoption of the proposition? In the first place it is the assertion of American power; it is the projection of American influence; it is the advancement of the flag, of the name, and of the interests of this great country in what must soon be the highway of the world's commerce; because commercial necessity is beating at the frail bars of that isthmus, and it intends to dig through that isthmus and to run steam trains over it, that the waters of the oceans on its either side may be united. When that is done it must become the great highway of the commerce of the world. Then the waters of the Gulf and Caribbean Sea will be vexed by the keels of the ships of all the great nations in the eager race and strife for commercial supremacy. And over that water-way or land route from sea to sea this Republic must assert and enforce a protectorate. Such a protectorate will be demanded alike by our interests and our necessities. As a measure of self-defense it is indispensable, and as a matter of national self-respect it is demanded; and our power and our importance as a nation, as well as the overshadowing influence of our proximity, will gain for us—if we be not purblind and our course characterized by criminal apathy—universal assent to the exercise of such a protectorate.

This measure is in the direct line of American supremacy there. It is the carrying out of a doctrine which deserves a broader name than that of "Monroe doctrine." It is the carrying out of the "American doctrine," the assertion of American influence and of American domination over lands and seas, and stupendous interests where we have the God-given right to dominate. "A menace to the world" the gentleman from Alabama calls it. "A menace to the world!" No, sir; not a menace, but in the consciousness of our power among the nations, the calm assertion of our unalterable determination to dominate everything of interest and importance on this continent, to break through the flimsy shackles of that unequal treaty, the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, by which American rights were bartered away and to tell the great nations of Europe, that we intend, despite them, to control and to exercise the supervisory power over all great interests that pertain to or affect the destinies of the Western World.

Mr. HERBERT. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. ELLIS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HERBERT. Does the gentleman say the purpose is to break the Clayton-Bulwer treaty?

Mr. ELLIS. Certainly! I would give England to-day formal notice by the passage of the amendment of my friend from Virginia [Mr. GOODE] that we do not intend to be bound by that treaty, because it is an unequal treaty, because it bartered away the right of the American people to dominate over interests and lands and peoples which they have by virtue of their proximity, the character of their institutions and their interest, as well their might and power.

Mr. HERBERT. Has any such notice been given?

Mr. ELLIS. I propose to give it in the shape of this amendment now.

Mr. SPRINGER. Would you terminate the treaty in a different way from the way pointed out in the provisions of it?

Mr. ELLIS. I regret that the brief time allotted me will prevent full and comprehensive answer to the question of the gentleman from Illinois.

I know not, Mr. Chairman, nor do I care, what provisions exist in that treaty pointing out the particular way by which the termination of that treaty is to be brought about. But I do know, sir, that we tamely surrendered our right to control and supervise most important rights and interests in American waters and in American lands save in conjunction with Great Britain. By it we admitted that power to the plane of perfect equality and equal right with us, to dominate and protect rights and interests in American waters and over projected American highways, and over the interests of American peoples, which duty God and our great destiny alike demand we should solely exercise.

And I would annul that treaty; and if fastidious gentlemen and sticklers for forms will be better pleased if the formal notice of revocation provided in the treaty be given, I care not. But to-day and here I would see the American Congress do an act which will speak louder than all the language of diplomacy, and by the adoption of this wise measure tell England that we will no longer be fettered by the shackles of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and propose a swift and permanent return to the consecrated American doctrine of our fathers.

Does any democrat hesitate? Let him recur to the past. No sooner had Mr. Jefferson conducted the purchase of the magnificent Louisiana territory than his prophetic statesmanship comprehended the vast importance of American influence and control over the Central American Isthmus, and he recommended a thorough survey of its coasts with a view to the establishment of American stations and influence there. Madison and Monroe followed in his lead. Polk and Pierce and Buchanan revived the theories and attempted to carry out the ideas of Jefferson, so that about the close of the administration of Mr. Buchanan a contract had been entered into by which we were to acquire for $300,000 a portion of the rights of the "Chiriqui Improvement Company," which looked directly to the accomplishment of what the amendment now under debate proposes to accomplish—the acquisition of coaling and naval stations on the Isthmus—with a view to the assertion of American influence and domination in that region and over the seas which throb against its shores.

And, Representatives, you cannot have forgotten the matchless effort of Stephen A. Douglas when he sought to prevent the ratification of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the shameful surrender of the doctrine of the fathers of democracy.

Jefferson, Monroe, Polk, Pierce, and Douglas, these were democrats. Not perhaps of the latter-day school of democracy that pertains in the policy and conduct of this House, whose sole creed is a pseudo-economy which has brought upon it the condemnation of the country; an economy that "strains at gnats and swallows camels;" an economy which illustrates itself in its remorseless war against the salaries of petty officials and affects a criminal ignorance or carelessness of the great and real questions of economy which affect the life and well-being of all the people of this great country. Sir, I prefer the doctrines and the examples of the fathers of that democracy, which pointed with its finger the road of progress, whose heart pulsated and sent thrilling, eager life into all the great material interests of the country, and whose all-seeing eye, looking at once at home and abroad, comprehended every interest at home and every necessary line of policy abroad. Around the democracy of our fathers the people gathered. From the democracy of this latter day an unwilling people turn away with well-founded distrust.

And now, Mr. Chairman, to return—and I ask pardon for this digression—let me ask what it is proposed we should acquire by the adoption of the amendment under discussion? On either side of the Isthmus, mid-way between the proposed Panama and Nicaragua canal routes, there is a harbor. One on the Atlantic side is known as Chiriqui Lagoon, and the other on the Pacific side is known as the Golfito. These harbors are exactly opposite each other. They are the only real deep-water harbors on the Central American coast, having an average depth of from thirty to seventy feet of water, and without bars or obstructions. They are also the only available coaling stations on the isthmian coast. Midway between the Chiriqui and the Golfito, which are but eighty miles distant from each other, there is a vast and almost untouched coal-field. It is over fifty miles long, and from seven to fourteen miles in width. Of these harbors and their advantages let me quote from the reports of those who have examined them:

The following decided opinion with reference to the Chiriqui Lagoon is expressed in the report of Captain (now Admiral) Almy to the Secretary of the Navy, Hon. Isaac Toucey, in 1859, with respect to the natural adaptation of the harbor for the purposes in view:

"I will take this occasion, which I do not deem out of place, to remark that the Chiriqui Lagoon, in a national, naval, and maritime point of view generally, cannot be overestimated in the eyes of any nation aiming at ascendency in the Central American States. It is situated just half way between Aspinwall and San Juan del Norte, (or Greytown,) and possesses a healthy climate. From my answers to the preceding questions, and from a glance at the chart, it will be seen that it possesses very many of the requisites for a great naval station, and any maritime nation, of even limited power, once obtaining a foothold there, would make her influence decidedly felt in that quarter."—Report Naval Committee, first session Thirty-sixth Congress, No. 568 House of Representatives, page 51.

The harbors on both sides of the Isthmus are referred to in the report of Captain Engle as unsurpassed for all maritime purposes. Those of the Atlantic side, with an incidental reference to the Golfito on the Pacific side, are described as follows:

"Harbors incomparable, of a size unequaled, depth of water in their three main entrances for our largest ships to enter without pilots, and, when fairly within, can run on any course with certainty and anchor on good holding-ground without fear of any one of the numerous injuries connected with the life of a sailor. The shores in most places are bold. Should it become necessary to wharf for the accommodation of merchant ships, it will only be necessary to give a solid, clean, and clear place to load and discharge; for they can now haul alongside the banks and secure to them. Wood for wharfing or other purposes is at hand. This may also be said of the Pacific Harbor. The entrance to Golfito is perfectly clear; the harbor, for safety or in points to facilitate trading-vessels, is quite equal to that of Chiriqui, but in size or grandeur neither that nor any other can be compared with it. The nearest point from whence to ship coal, I think, will be found to be at Bocas del Drago, which is on the main channel to the beautiful and grand Almirante Bay, thirteen miles long and eight broad, connecting with those of Bocas del Toro, Shepherd's Harbor, and the Poros and Palos Lagoons. The latter are more like large docks; their entrances are narrow, not over one hundred feet wide, with a channel of from eight to ten fathoms of water. When a ship is in her length, on looking around you discover yourself in a land-locked basin of three and a half by one and a half miles.

"Then at the foot of the Almirante Bay, so called from its having been discovered by Columbus in October, 1503, where he remained ten days, lies Shepherd's Island, cutting off one and a quarter miles of it by three and a half miles long, forming a complete place for the terminus of a railroad. There is a channel at each end of the island, giving to sailing-vessels a fair wind at all times. This harbor, for its facilities for wooding, watering, and easy access, with its natural beauties, makes its mark on the minds of navigators never to be forgotten. The island is two hundred and sixty-four feet high, and can be made a spot of immense strength and beauty. The batteries from it would command the entrances, as well as the whole harbor and terminus of a railroad on the southern shore. The average height of the highest of the islands within the harbors is four hundred and fifty feet."—Executive Document No. 41, Thirty-sixth Congress, second session, pages 2 and 3.

The following extracts from official reports of distinguished foreign officers to their respective governments add to the evidence of the great value of the harbors of Golfo Dulce and Golfito, and of the Chiriqui Lagoon, including "Admiral's Bay." Captain Barney, of the Royal Navy, in command of the British frigate Thunderer, who made the official surveys in 1839 of the Chiriqui Lagoon and Admiral's Bay, and the plottings of the charts now used by navigators of these waters, states that "every part of the lagoon affords secure anchorage, and contains harbors within harbors, which will admit ships of the heaviest burden, where, in many parts, they may be concealed by the side of the shore."—Report of Committee on Naval Affairs, supra, page 53.

Captain Hinckley, of the Royal Navy, who, in command of the British frigate Gladiator, visited the Chiriqui Lagoon in 1864, says: "The Chiriqui Lagoon is one of the most splendid sheets of water I ever saw, and has anchorage in most parts all over it; but of the resources which abound on its shores it is impossible to form too high an estimate." * * * "The climate is exceedingly good. The shores, this side, are so 'steep-to' that I found a place by the side of the projected road terminus where, if I had remained a week, I could have 'hove' the ship 'down' with only digging the pits ashore for the 'purchases' and laying 'off anchors' 'off.'"

Captains Colombel and Lallier, commanding the corvettes La Brilliante and Obligado in 1851 and 1852, in their reports to Admiral Pellion, say: "The Golfito should, properly speaking, be called a great salt lake; its waters are never troubled; winds descending fiercely from the surrounding mountains cannot disturb its tranquil waters; its space is too inclosed to permit surges to be formed; never-failing streams from the adjacent highlands enter it. The greatest length of the Golfito is six miles; its width a mile and a half. It is an immense natural basin, or great bay of deep water, and would make the finest military port in the world."

Admiral Pellion, of the Imperial French Navy, in his report to the minister of Marine of the Empire of France in June, 1852, upon the hydrographical explorations of Captains Colombel and Lallier, confirms the foregoing opinion in the following emphatic terms: "Its geographical position and its configuration promise it a brilliant future, and there is no doubt that, the road finished from the Atlantic, it will become the finest port on the Pacific Ocean."—Report Committee on Naval Affairs, supra, page 76.

General Herran, the minister of New Granada, in certifying to the titles to the property, says: "The magnificent entrance to this beautiful region is through the Chiriqui Lagoon and Admiral's Bay, an immense double bay, with fertile shores one hundred and twelve miles in circumference, into which no less than twelve rivers empty themselves—numerous harbors, among which there are two of the most commodious and secure in the world. Near to these are the coal mines, whose titles I have already certified, and they alone, in the present epoch, would be sufficient to render prosperous, as well as an object of desire, any country which may possess them."

Again a report of the Committee on Naval Affairs declares:

For more than thirty years past, there has been a growing necessity for two United States naval stations: one in the Caribbean Sea, on the coast line of the Isthmus of Panama, and one, as conveniently opposite as possible, on the coast line of the Pacific Ocean.

The establishment of such stations requires no action of Congress. They are regarded by all maritime powers as national necessities, to be availed of and located under executive authority whenever required, either for economy, convenience, or protection. In this manner England has promptly secured stations which have contributed largely to the practical strength of her navy and to the extension of her commerce. The United States has secured stations at Valparaiso, Callao, Villafranche, Japan, and Rio Janeiro. In some of these permanent accommodations and rights are held under leases. In others, the purpose is attained by the detail of supply-ships kept at anchor.

Looking to the future interests of our country, as well as to economy in maintaining the stipulations and obligations of the treaty with New Granada, and also of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, President Buchanan sought to obtain by the Cass-Herran treaty a naval station at the Isthmus of Panama. The provision for this purpose was stricken from the treaty, upon the ground that the object in view could be better obtained under a lease through the ownership of the lands by any native or foreign citizen, (all owners of lands, though foreigners, being, according to New Granadian laws, citizens of New Granada.) President Lincoln, coinciding with the views of his predecessor as to the importance of this measure, carried out the intention of the provision referred to, by a formal contract with the Chiriqui Improvement Company, the expressed purpose of each being the protection of our west coast possessions and the Mississippi Valley, as well as the constant enlargement of commerce to each of these sections, and the important aid and security these stations would afford in time of war. The locations sought by both were the Chiriqui Lagoon on the Atlantic, and the Golfito on the Pacific waters. It was well known that Great Britain and France had sought to secure these harbors, but had been anticipated by an American citizen who had obtained valid titles to the surrounding lands by grants and purchases. These harbors are nearly midway between the Nicaragua and Panama routes, dominate both, and are the only good harbors with deep and well-protected waters on the entire American Isthmus.

Between these harbors is an inexhaustible coal field, from which supplies of the best coal for steam purposes can be had at half the present price paid at the various coaling stations of the United States Navy. In the possession of these facilities, economy, naval strength, commercial prosperity, and political importance would be gained to the United States. The possessions of these harbors would save annually from one-half to one million of dollars in coal and in other naval expenditures, and secure forever the absolute control of political, commercial, and military advantages, resulting from the following natural and other conditions, namely:

"The coal basin of Chiriqui is fifty miles long, by a varying width of from five to fourteen miles, and aggregates a thickness of seventy-four and a half feet coal deposit, most of the vein being five to six feet in thickness, all being workable, and forming practically an inexhaustible supply of coal at a point more desirable for the control of commerce and support of a great naval power than any other point in the known world.

"A naval station at the Chiriqui Lagoon would command the Caribbean Sea, the Gulf of Mexico, and the West India Islands.

"Commodore Engle and Commodore Almy (United States Navy) state that it can be so fortified as to be impregnable." (See printed report submitted by each of these officers respectively.)

I trust, Mr. Chairman, that I have by these quotations from the very best authority satisfied the House of the intrinsic value and excellence of these harbors and the advantages to be reaped by acquiring naval and coaling stations there.

There can be no doubt but that within the next decade ship-canals and possibly ship-railways will unite the waters of the two oceans over and through the Isthmus. Then the Mexican Gulf and the Caribbean Sea will be the theater where eager nations will strive for empire and commercial supremacy. The United States must win the prize. And in order to do so she must have naval depots and coaling stations and magazines for supplies. Let us take the advance step here and now.

But again, sir, look at the commerce of that country, and the islands of its seas, from Mexico to Patagonia, known as the Spanish Main. It is $1,000,000,000. The United States—and I say it with shame—enjoys but 22 per cent., or only about $220,000,000, and $780,000,000 goes to foreign nations.

The commerce of that splendid land is not developed by nine-tenths. Its undeveloped wealth cannot be told. Sir, there is no such region on this earth. Its sunshine is gold-dust; its rivers deck their beds with priceless gems; its mountains, like misers, lock within their caverns yellow wealth that beggars the Spaniard's dream of El Dorado. Its trees weep precious ointments; its forests are columned with costly woods; its fields are crowned with plants of fadeless beauty and of healing virtue; its soil is sweet and life-giving with staples of matchless wealth. Every incentive of national protection, national honor, national wealth, urge us to advance American influence and power there. This is an initial step, and I for one propose to take it. When the proposed commercial highways are opened across the Isthmus; when the possibilities of that splendid land are developed, then indeed will the Mexican Gulf become the chalice-cup of Empire. Whose hands shall take it up? The mighty hand of the American people. Whose lips shall quaff it? None other than those which articulate the grandeur and the glory of our common country.

Such, Mr. Chairman, is the spirit and such the dreams of that democracy which I profess.

Mr. GOODE. I desire to submit to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] that having offered this amendment I think it but fair that I should have the right to close the debate upon it. I want to answer that gentleman in the last five minutes for I do not now know what he may desire to say.

Several MEMBERS. That is fair.

Mr. GOODE. I desire therefore that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] shall now speak upon this proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. This is a matter to be arranged between the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] and the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. GOODE.] The Chair understands that the member of a committee who has control of a bill under consideration is the organ of the committee before the House and by courtesy is entitled to close the debate.

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to close the debate, if the Chair will recognize me for the last five minutes.

Mr. GOODE. I want to violate no rule or practice of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that that has been the practice heretofore.

Mr. GOODE. I understood the gentleman from Georgia to say, yesterday, that the whole cost of the coal purchased for the Navy of the United States for the last year did not exceed the sum of $100,000. It was my desire to follow him to-day, because I do not know but he might make other statements quite as erroneous as that.

Since the debate of yesterday I have made some examination of the question, and I find that during last year the cost of the coal purchased in this country for the use of vessels at home was $137,436, and the coal purchased abroad amounted to $192,270. Now, if this coal had been obtained at Chiriqui, at a cost of fifty cents per ton, (and that is the cost of mining the coal there,) there would have been a saving to the Government of at least $200,000 on the item of coal alone, to say nothing of the advantages to be gained by the obtaining of vegetables, tropical fruits, and other things useful to the Navy in that locality.

Official documents show that the United States Government can at these naval stations obtain all the coal needed for the use of the vessels in the naval service primarily for the bare cost of mining and placing the coal on shipboard at the station where the coal-mines are situated. This expense is estimated at about fifty cents per ton, to which is to be added the cost of transportation, which will vary according to the distance of transportation and the locality of the points where the fuel is to be delivered. For what is termed "coal purchased at home" during the fiscal year 1879–'80 the average price paid was $4 per ton, and for transportation $1.90 per ton. For the fiscal year last named the Naval Department purchased at home 23,261 tons of coal, at a total cost of $137,463; the average price per ton, including transportation, was $5.90. The estimate of the probable cost to the Government had this coal been taken at the Chiriqui station would have been about $55,826.40, a difference in favor of the Department of $81,609.40. For what is termed "coal purchased abroad" the average price paid during the fiscal year last named was $9.88 per ton. In that year the Navy Department purchased abroad 19,452 tons, at a cost of $192,270. If this coal had been obtained at the Chiriqui station the cost would have been $77,808, making a total difference in favor of the Department of $114,462. By adding the first-named sum saved in one year for coal "purchased at home," $81,609.40, to the last-named sum saved in one year for "coal purchased abroad," $114,462, we have an aggregate in favor of coal taken at Chiriqui station for one year of $196,071.

When we consider the probable increased requirements of the naval service from year to year, so far as coal is concerned, it is fair to assume that the saving to the Government will not be less than $200,000.

Another item in the calculation is the great saving that will result from the facilities for obtaining for the naval vessels at said stations fresh meats, vegetables, fruits, &c., the immediate products of those regions, at very low prices.

Commodore Engle says:

It is a country of gold, coals, minerals, lands which produce every fruit of the tropics of the highest order—coffee, cocoa, indigo, rice, cotton, oranges, lemons, limes, &c. It is much easier to say what it does not produce than what it does, for everything seems to vegetate and give the best of its kind. On the Pacific the plains are large, and no bounds to the scope of pasture for raising cattle.—Executive Document 41, Thirty-sixth Congress, second session, page 3.

Dr. Evans, who accompanied the expedition of 1860, a geologist of large and varied experience, who had at that time been employed for fourteen years in the service of the Government, says in his special report:

Near the volcano the soil is basaltic, resting on clays of the tertiary period. It is very rich in humus or vegetable mold, and contains all the saline ingredients of a first-rate soil. As you reach the savannas the soil increases in thickness and fertility. The clay is well suited for brick-making and pottery. In the short distance of thirty-five miles in the upper portion of the savannas, you have every variety of climate and soil, well suited for wheat, Irish potatoes, and other products of the Northern and Middle States of the United States; toward the seacoast, rice, cotton, tobacco, coffee, and all the productions of the Southern States and of tropical climates are produced in abundance. In describing the formation of the soil, I have briefly alluded to the productions of the country, but it will not be out of place to refer to special localities and their rich producing qualities. On the Atlantic side there are many streams flowing down from the mountains having bordering valleys, but the most beautiful and extensive are those of the Cricamola and the Changuinola Rivers; these valleys vary from ten to twenty miles in width, their soil inexhaustible. Indigenous to it are cotton, tobacco, coffee, sugar-cane, rice, and all the tropical fruits. These do not grow by single crops, but in succession throughout the year; under the hand of the cultivator four crops a year could be readily gathered, and of qualities inferior to none that earth produces.

There is a great variety of timber suitable for ship-building on the islands of the lagoon and on the mainland; specimens have been collected of each variety; several of these woods are equal to live-oak for vessel-frames, and others are superior to any that are within my knowledge for planking, owing to the quality of the wood and the great length they may be cut, these being from eighty to one hundred and twenty feet. Rich specimens of gold in quartz and in black sand, copper, iron, platinum, and other valuable minerals, have been discovered in various localities; agates, jaspers, opals, diamonds, similar to those used in Chinese ornaments, were found. There is no prevailing disease between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts on the Isthmus of Chiriqui. During the whole of my explorations of the shore-line of the lagoon, the islands adjacent, the various tributaries, and in crossing and recrossing from the Atlantic to the Pacific, not a single member of my party, either the men from the Brooklyn or natives, was sick. The rainy season is a succession of sunshine and showers. If it rains in the morning it is usually fine in the afternoon. Sea-breezes prevail during the day and land-breezes at night. The thermometer varies from 67 to 87 degrees during the year, and toward morning it is so cool that a blanket was comfortable every night during my sojourn on this Isthmus.—Executive Document, 41, supra, page 53.

If this amendment is right and proper it ought to be supported. I trust there is no gentleman here who will be frightened from its support by the vague statements thrown out here yesterday. I repeat that if the amendment is right we should vote for it like men who are not to be driven off by a shadow or by declamation about jobs and lobbyists. If it cannot stand upon its intrinsic merits, if it cannot stand a critical examination, if it cannot stand the test of fair discussion, then let gentlemen vote it down.

I have formed my opinion about this matter from a careful examination of official documents in the archives of the Government. I find that the importance of establishing naval stations on the east and western coast of the American Isthmus and of obtaining an economical supply of coal for our naval and commercial marine in the Caribbean Sea, the South Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, has engaged the attention of our ablest statesmen from the foundation of the Government. The gentleman from Georgia has introduced party politics into the discussion and has raised a loud blast upon his bugle-horn to rally democratic members against the amendment. I take leave to remind him that the idea embodied in the amendment was a favorite idea with Thomas Jefferson himself, the recognized father of American democracy. It attracted the especial attention of the Government during the administrations of Presidents Polk, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, and Lincoln. While Mr. Marcy was a member of the Cabinet he discussed the points connected with this proposition in that able, exhaustive, and luminous manner of which he was always peculiarly the master. While I was listening to the gentleman from Georgia I felt from the bottom of my heart like exclaiming: "Oh, for one hour of Marcy upon this floor to teach the new lights of democracy how to follow in the path of safety, of expediency, and of duty upon a great question like this." Have these new leaders of the democratic party forgotten all the lessons taught by the fathers?

Mr. STEPHENS. Pretty much.

Mr. GOODE. Are they prepared to ignore entirely the doctrine of manifest destiny, referred to by my friend from Louisiana, [Mr. ELLIS,] as connected with the vast capabilities of this great Republic of ours? What could possibly be more important to the people of the United States than the maintenance of free communication by land and by sea between the Atlantic and the Pacific Sta s of this Union?

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HERBERT] says that this amendment would be a menace to the world. Is it not the declared policy of this Government that it will exercise a supervision over any ship-canal or water-way that may be constructed across the American Isthmus? And who can foresee the possible complications which may arise in the future out of that supervision?

Is it not a matter of prudence, a matter of foresight, a matter of wisdom to take precautionary measures to acquire adequate coaling stations and harbors for the naval forces of the United States? I understand that this Government has declared that to be its policy.

I have this to say to my friend from Georgia, if all our talk about the Monroe doctrine, so called, is not a delusion and a sham, then it is a matter of wise foresight and precaution to acquire these naval stations and these commodious harbors as a matter of prevention. We are told that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Let us put our flag there, let us acquire a foothold now in time if we intend to make that supervision efficient and complete.

Mr. Chairman, this question is too large to be dwarfed as some gentlemen are inclined to do here; it is not simply a question of economy; it is not all a question of party politics. It is a large American question, involving an American policy full of great possibilities in the future. We owe it to ourselves and to those who will come after us to review it altogether from an American stand-point.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee rose informally, and Mr. LOWE took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 1996) for the relief of W. A. Reid;

A bill (H. R. No. 2098) for the relief of the heirs of Edward B. Clark; and

A bill (H. R. No. 2844) for the relief of James E. Montell.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

A bill (H. R. No. 7099) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed and requested the concurrence of the House in bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. No. 1943) to provide for a building suitable for a post-office and for the accommodation of the revenue officers and the United States courts and their officers in the city of Clarksburgh, West Virginia; and

A bill (S. No. 1962) appropriating money for the purchase of a site and the erection of a suitable building for a post-office and other Government offices in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] is entitled to the floor to close the debate upon the pending amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I have no time to devote to the rhetoric of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. GOODE] and his invocation of what he is pleased to term the time-honored principles of the democratic party. The gentleman came into this House with a proposition simply to purchase naval stations; that was all—places to deposit coal; but after it gets before the House it seems to be a very different and broader question. We have the Monroe doctrine pressed into an appropriation bill in a debate regulated by the five-minute-rule. Is such a method of reaching this question wise statesmanship? The rules of this House as well as ordinary prudence dictate a different course. We have presented to us the question whether or not we shall make an appropriation for certain coaling stations, when the fact is that our coal is there now on either side of the Isthmus. The Pacific squadron already has a coaling station on the one side. We are told by the gentleman to whom above all others this great question of establishing these coaling stations was referred, the gentleman from Virginia, that all he knows of the economy of the proposition is embraced in documentary evidence; yet the only documentary evidence he presents is an indefinite statement that it is estimated there will be a saving of $250,000.

Mr. GOODE rose.

Mr. BLOUNT. I cannot yield. It is estimated that there is to be a saving of $250,000. Estimated by whom? The gentleman says by officers in that Department. What officers? Let gentlemen take, as I have taken, the expenditures in that Department for coal during five years. In that period, embracing a portion of the administration of the gentleman from New Jersey, [Mr. ROBESON,] the average purchases amounted to $260,000. But that statement does not show the amount actually used. By one of the reports it appears that forty-six vessels consumed 28,000 tons of coal. All the steam-vessels of the Government used in one year $140,000 for the item of coal—not merely the squadrons at the Isthmus, but all our vessels, including the North Atlantic squadron, the South Atlantic, the Asiatic, the European, (cruising in the Mediterranean,) and our Pacific squadron. For all these there was expended in one year $140,000.

The gentleman tells us what was spent last year for coal; not the amount of coal consumed. His report shows in one year an expenditure of $75,000 for coal; in another, $65,000, and so on; but the purchases themselves do not show that there was in any period of five years an expenditure exceeding $260,000. According to the actual expenditures of the Government, as shown by the gentleman from New Jersey, only $140,000 was spent in a single year for all the steam-vessels of our Navy; yet we are told it is estimated, and it comes here in a report from the Secretary, that $250,000 will be the saving in this item.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HISCOCK. I would like to ask the gentleman from Georgia whether the sum actually paid for coal is the only cost of coal to the Navy?

Mr. BLOUNT. No, sir; not by any means. I have gone further; and the reports show that the Department has not spent up to the figures I have given.

Mr. HISCOCK. That does not meet the point.

Mr. BLOUNT. The proposition is to get this coal, including freight and labor——

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is out of order, the time to which debate was limited having expired. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. HUTCHINS. I hope that I may be allowed to say a word. I want to offer an amendment. [Renewed cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] I hope the gentlemen on the other side will not object to my making a statement.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to have read the order by which debate on this paragraph was closed. I want to know the exact terms in which that order was made.

The CHAIRMAN. As the journal clerk is not now at the desk, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] who made the motion to close debate will state it.

Mr. BLOUNT. The motion was that all debate on the pending paragraph and all amendments thereto should be limited to twenty minutes.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to hear the text of the order as it appears in the record; because, if debate was closed only upon pending amendments, then it is now in order for the gentleman from New York [Mr. HUTCHINS] to move an amendment and debate it, as he could not do if debate was closed upon all amendments to the paragraph.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I propose, Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. Chairman, what was the order limiting debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The order was that all debate upon the pending paragraph and all amendments thereto be limited to twenty minutes.

Mr. HUTCHINS. That order referred only to pending amendments. Now I propose to amend by striking out "$200,000" and inserting "$30,000," and I wish to give my reasons for that proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from New York [Mr. HUTCHINS] rise?

Mr. HUTCHINS. To debate the proposed amendment.

Mr. HAYES. As I understand, debate was closed upon the paragraph and all amendments thereto.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to hear the gentleman from New York; but I am sure the order of the House covered all debate on this question.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has so ruled.

Mr. SPRINGER. The order of the House will speak for itself.

The CHAIRMAN. It has been sent for and will soon be here. The Chair has repeated the order. It is in the usual form.

Mr. SPRINGER. I understand the order to be in reference to the paragraph and pending amendments, but not to amendments hereafter to be offered.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York insist on his amendment?

Mr. HUTCHINS. I do. The order was on the paragraph and pending amendments. I offered another amendment which the order closing debate does not cover, and on that amendment I wish to be heard.

Mr. BLOUNT. My proposition was to close debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto.

Mr. SPRINGER. The record will show.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has stated the order of the House was as stated by the gentleman from Georgia in his motion to the House and carried, that all debate after twenty minutes should be closed on the paragraph and pending amendments.

Mr. HUTCHINS. Let the order be read.

The CHAIRMAN. Other amendments are in order, to be sure, but they are not debatable. The Chair has a distinct understanding about it. The Chair is advised that the order was to close debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I withdraw my amendment.

The question then recurred upon Mr. GOODE'S amendment, which was read, as follows:

And to enable the Secretary of the Navy to establish at the Isthmus of Panama naval stations and depots of coal for supply of steamships of war, $200,000, to be available for expenditure as soon as suitable arrangements can be made to the proposed end.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 82, noes 65.

Mr. OSCAR TURNER demanded tellers.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope not, as there is no use in taking up time in calling for tellers; but I give notice that I shall demand the yeas and nays upon it in the House.

Mr. OSCAR TURNER. Very well; if we can have the yeas and nays on it, that will be sufficient. I now withdraw the demand for tellers.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I have an amendment to offer, and I will state to the gentleman from Georgia, with all frankness, that I have no doubt it is subject to the point of order, but I hope he will not interpose that point.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 834, insert the following:

"To enable the Secretary of the Navy to protect and preserve cemeteries in various countries used the most part for the burial of citizens of this Government, the sum of $3,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated."

Mr. WHITTHORNE. No point of order is made, and I ask for a vote on the amendment.

Mr. MCMAHON. I wish to say only a word or two.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted on the pending paragraph and all the amendments thereto; so that the amendment is not debatable.

Mr. MCMAHON. Very well, let the vote be taken. I do not make any point of order against the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I move the following amendment to come in at the end of line 834:

To establish a naval station at Chiriqui Lagoon on the Isthmus of Panama, $30,000.

Mr. GOODE. Have we not passed over that portion of the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. We are still on the paragraph, and the gentleman moves to add to that paragraph what has been read.

Mr. HUTCHINS. And I wish to say a word on that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is exhausted on the paragraph and all the amendments thereto.

Mr. HUTCHINS. Then I withdraw the amendment. Gentlemen on the other side will wish they had heard in reference to it before we get through.

The Clerk read as follows:

Casual repairs, Interior Department building: For casual repairs of the Department building, $8,000.

Mr. MCMAHON. I move to strike out "8" and insert "7," so as to make it read "$7,000." I do so, Mr. Chairman, to make an explanation. I understand that certain members of the committee understood me yesterday as referring to the private secretary of the President as the person who appeared before the sub-committee as an attorney for the Chiriqui Improvement Land Company.

Mr. PAGE. It is so in the RECORD.

Mr. MCMAHON. No, it is not so in the RECORD. Nor did I mean to be so understood. Nor, sir, did I think I was so understood. I spoke, when the point of order was pending, of a gentleman who appeared before the sub-committee, as he had a right to do, to argue as an attorney certain questions before that committee, on which occasion he gave us full information of the interests he represented, which were behind the proposed amendment. At another point of the discussion I used some general language about "sly executive interference or influences;" and after having slept on my language over night I do not think I am under any obligation to withdraw the word "sly."

Mr. HASKELL. You did withdraw it in the RECORD.

Mr. MCMAHON. No, sir; I did not. It is in the RECORD.

Mr. HASKELL. I could not find it there.

Mr. MCMAHON. I did say, when compelled to answer definitely, whom I referred to; that the private secretary of the President of the United States had spoken to me upon the question of the interest of the President in it; and at a later stage of the debate I spoke of another member of our sub-committee as having been spoken to upon this subject by the private secretary, which statement I repeat. But I never said he came before the full sub-committee, or that he came before us as an attorney; but he did speak to me in person and to another, and I think I am looking at that member now, (looking at Mr. MONROE, of Ohio.)

I withdraw the amendment unless some one else wishes to speak.

The Clerk read as follows:

For repairing rooms in north and west wings injured by fire and water in September, 1877, $10,000.

Mr. SPRINGER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 845 insert "for the purchase of Ingalls's portrait of the late Thomas Ewing, first Secretary of the Interior, $600."

Mr. BLOUNT. I raise the question of order upon that amendment that there is no law for such purchase.

Mr. SPRINGER. Do I understand the gentleman from Georgia to make a point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so understands.

Mr. SPRINGER. What is the point of order?

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order that there is no law authorizing it at all. Let the Library Committee buy these pictures if they see proper.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Chairman, in response to the gentleman from Georgia and his point of order, I desire to state that these portraits are denominated as a part of the "furniture" of the Departments, and it is consequently in order for Congress to buy new furniture for the Departments of the Government whenever it may be necessary or proper to do so.

Further, I desire to state that this particular portrait was ordered for the Government by Secretary Delano, but soon after making the order he retired from office; and shortly after the portrait was completed, the artist died and the picture went into the hands of his administrator and remained there from that time to this. This amendment which I now offer is consequently in pursuance of law, for the Secretary of the Interior ordered the portrait to be made. It is now in the Treasury Department, and is a portrait which is recognized as an excellent and correct likeness of the late Thomas Ewing, and is also considered to be well worth the price which was fixed for it when the order was given. Under the circumstances, I hope the point of order will not be sustained, if the gentleman does not choose to withdraw it. I think it is important that the portrait should be purchased, not only for the reasons stated, but also because this gentleman was the first Secretary of that Department.

Mr. KEIFER. I wish to say a word in response to the gentleman who makes the point of order. He says that there is no law for this appropriation, and hence the point of order should be sustained against the amendment. There was, however, sufficient authority to the Secretary of the Interior to make a contract for this portrait of a former Secretary of that Department. The Government of the United States ordered the portrait, and whether there is any law to pay a debt of the United States or not, it is perfectly clear that we owe this sum of money. Now, whether, as I have stated, there is a law for us to pay our debts or not, we ought at least to understand that there is no impediment on the part of the United States to paying what we justly and honestly owe. There is no law prohibiting us paying our debts, as far as I know, and hence this amendment is not in conflict with existing law.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman is correct. We have no impediment to paying our debts; but there is an order of business of this House which covers such cases as this, and if there was a contract to purchase this picture, let the payment for it come in under a separate bill, as it ought to. This is not a debt-paying bill.

Mr. KEIFER. There is no better place for it than this bill. It is as regular as it would be in the deficiency bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. And, besides that, we have passed over the furniture items of this bill. I insist upon the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Capitol extension: For work on the Capitol and general repairs thereof, for fireproofing the gallery of the National Statuary Hall and the rooms adjoining, for shelving the same for the accommodation of the House documentary library, for cutting doorway from the northwestern room to connect with the Congressional Library, and for shelving such rooms in the basement story of the south wing of the Capitol as the Speaker may designate for the reception of the stationery and files to be moved from the rooms connected with the Hall, $50,000.

Mr. HAWK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to come in after line 856.

The Clerk read as follows:

For passenger elevator in the south wing of the Capitol, to be located by the Architect of the Capitol, $7,000; such elevator to be so located as to interfere as little as possible with the use of the offices and rooms of the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. Individually, I have no objection to that, and shall not make the point of order upon it. If any other gentleman chooses to do so he can do it.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Lighting Capitol and grounds: For lighting Capitol and grounds about the same, including Botanic Garden and Senate stables; for gas, pay of superintendent of meters, lamp-lighters, gas-fitters, and for materials for electric lighting, and for general repairs to lamps and pipes, $30,000.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Ohio. I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 865, insert:

"Provided, however, That the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Attorney-General (who are hereby constituted as a commission for that purpose) are hereby authorized and directed, in case they deem it expedient, to enter into a contract with the Northern Electric Light Company for the lighting of the Capitol, public grounds around the same, and the streets of said city on the basis of the proposals of said company now deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, in which event the money hereby appropriated, so far as the same may not have been exhausted for the purposes heretofore mentioned, may be used to pay for electric light under such contract, and the sum of $350,000 is conditionally appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to carry out the terms of said contract: Provided, however, That no part of said money shall be paid until said commission shall have been satisfied that said lighting has been successfully accomplished: And provided further, That said commission shall not enter into such contract unless, in the opinion of said commission, the said contract will be in the interest of ultimate economy to the Government."

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I raise the question of order on this amendment that it is new legislation; that it does not retrench expenditures; and that there is a bill for substantially the same purpose now pending before the House, reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. ATHERTON. I desire to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. Before the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ATHERTON] proceeds, I ask that the amendment be reread. It is a very important matter.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Ohio, rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ATHERTON] has been recognized.

Mr. ATHERTON. Perhaps the other gentleman from Ohio would like to be heard first.

Mr. TOWNSEND, of Ohio. I will not discuss the point of order, but I have something to say in favor of the amendment, if it should not be ruled out of order by the chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that on the point of order his mind is made up in consequence of a precedent having been heretofore set. But if the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ATHERTON] desires to speak upon the point of order the Chair would be glad to hear him. The Chair ruled upon this question the other day.

Mr. ATHERTON. I desire merely to make such suggestions as I can on the question of order as to whether the pending proposition is in order under our rules or not. I supposed from the rulings of the present occupant of the Chair that such a proposition contained such color of being in order as that it would at least be submitted to the committee for its consideration as a similar proposition was submitted to the committee on yesterday. Outside of that, as to whether the amendment is subject to the point of order made against it or not, if that is to be determined by the Chair I think a consideration or two being stated it would appear that the point of order is not well taken.

The gentleman from Georgia has not distinctly stated his point of order; but I suppose it is predicated on some of the subdivisions of Rule XXI. It is therein provided that—

No appropriation shall be reported in any general appropriation bill or be in order as an amendment thereto for any expenditure not previously authorized by law—

And here follow the exceptions—

unless in continuation of appropriations for such public works and objects as are already in progress.

I suppose it is understood, it cannot be denied, that by the appropriation bills of former years, and I believe that is all the law there is upon the subject, appropriations have been heretofore made for lighting the Capitol, the streets of Washington, and the public grounds around the Capitol. Now, what does this provision mean when properly interpreted? It means this: that objects that have been accomplished by the appropriations and by the legislation of Congress heretofore, may still be accomplished, and that appropriations for such purposes shall not be obnoxious to the point of order if in continuation of the same general objects.

To illustrate that, we have had an object and a work accomplished here for years in this city, of sweeping the public streets, and as I understand, it has been accomplished by hiring out the work of sweeping streets to an individual or a corporation, I know not which. Suppose, for instance, that the Appropriations Committee or this House proposed to accomplish the same purpose hereafter not by contracting with an individual or corporation, but by buying their wagons and horses and doing it themselves.

Would it be obnoxious to the point of order because they proposed to do it themselves by purchasing property of their own? Why, no. And why not? Because the object sought to be accomplished is a work that is already in progress; that is, sweeping the streets of the city. Suppose, for instance, you had here in this city a department for street-cleaning purposes, and heretofore the work had been accomplished by contracting with private individuals or a corporation, would it not be competent for this House through its Appropriations Committee, or by amendments to provide that substantially hereafter that work should be done not by a contract with a private individual, but by buying the necessary property with which you were to accomplish the same purpose.

Again, for instance, we light the Capitol with gas. If it was deemed advisable, would it not be competent for this House, or for this Appropriations Committee, instead of the system of contracting with the gas company, to provide necessary means by which the Government itself should manufacture its own gas in its own way? Certainly it would, because the object of the bill would not be to construct new works, but the object as suggested in this rule would be the lighting of the Capitol and the public grounds.

Now, Mr. Chairman, if I am right upon that proposition, what is proposed to be done here? It is proposed to constitute a commission; to make the Attorney-General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and another officer a commission. It is proposed that that commission may investigate the means of lighting proposed by the Northern Electric Light Company; and that if they shall find that that mode of accomplishing this work that has heretofore been accomplished by making contracts with the gas company can be more successfully accomplished in another way, and that it would be in the interest of ultimate economy to the Government, then the electric light shall be used for that purpose, although they propose to furnish it themselves.

The amendment is not obnoxious to the point of order, if I understand the rule correctly. It might be, if the proposition simply was to appropriate a certain sum of money for the purpose of constructing works that were designed to be used hereafter for the purpose of furnishing light to the Government—it might be possible that there could be more said upon the question of order. [Here the hammer fell.] Let me finish my sentence, Mr. Chairman. But the proposition is not that. The proposition is to carry out the objects that are to be accomplished here, the objects that have heretofore been accomplished by a private contract with the gas company, and that is to furnish this electric light by works that the Government shall ultimately own, submitting to a commission as to whether it would be in the interest of ultimate economy. If this be carried out we will then have this splendid Capitol—the most splendid in the world—lighted with a zone of light that will illustrate to the people, not only of this country—to the nations of the world—the coming light of the future—the electric light.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair ruled on a similar question the other day——

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I will say——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is satisfied with the discussion already had so far as the point of order is concerned, and is prepared to rule upon it. The Chair ruled upon the amendment offered the other day by the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. BUCKNER,] an amendment of a similar character. The Chair ruled the amendment not in order, and the committee acquiesced in that ruling. For similar reasons the Chair will rule this amendment out of order.

Mr. ATHERTON. For the purpose of taking the sense of the Committee of the Whole on this question, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal with great pleasure.

Mr. KEIFER. Will the Chair state the reasons for his decision?

The CHAIRMAN. The reasons which the Chair gave when a similar question was up the other day are the reasons which influence his decision in this case, that the amendment is new legislation and does not upon its face appear to be in the interest of economy. In fact the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. BUCKNER,] who moved the amendment the other day, admitted it was not in order by entreating the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] to withdraw his point of order. The Committee of the Whole acquiesced in the decision made by the Chair on that occasion, and the Chair makes the same ruling upon this amendment, being similar in that respect.

Mr. STEVENSON. The vote now is upon sustaining the decision of the Chair?

The CHAIRMAN. It is. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 78, noes 14.

Before the result of the vote was announced,

Mr. ATHERTON called for tellers.

Tellers were not ordered.

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The Clerk read the following:

Furniture and fixtures, National Museum: For cases, furniture, and fixtures required for the exhibition of the collections of geology, mineralogy, natural history, ethnology, and technology, belonging to the United States, $60,000.

Mr. MANNING. I offer an amendment to come in after the paragraph just read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For further investigations by the United States Entomological Commission as to the best means of destroying the cotton-worm and boll-worm, the sum of $10,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order on that amendment that it is not germane to this bill, but if proposed at all should be proposed to the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. MANNING. I am sorry the gentleman makes a point of order against this amendment, although I do not believe it is a good one. This commission, as the gentleman will recollect, was organized several years ago, and has been since prosecuting its labors and to-day is at work. There is no law anywhere to be found repealing the law organizing the Entomological Commission. In the sundry civil bill of last year an appropriation of $25,000 was made to continue the investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust and the work of the Entomological Commission in reference to the cotton-worm and the boll-worm.

As to this amendment not being germane to this bill, allow me to say that this commission is under the Interior Department; it is not under the Agricultural Department, and does not report to that Department. After full discussion it was created as a commission under the Interior Department. We are now considering that portion of this bill which relates to that Department, and it is for that reason that I have offered the amendment at this point.

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to read from the law of last year.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule upon this question, as it did upon a similar question the other day.

Mr. MANNING. I suppose it is not disputed that the commission was organized several years ago.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let me call the attention of the gentleman to the statute, to the sundry civil bill of last year, which I think will satisfy him:

For the completion of the work of the United States Entomological Commission under the Department of the Interior in the special investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust or grasshopper and the cotton-worm, the sum of $25,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That after the close of the next fiscal year all work of the character herein provided for shall be exclusively under the control of the Agricultural Department, and all operations under the Interior Department shall be fully and finally closed before the 30th day of June, 1881.

Mr. MANNING. That does not break up the organization of the commission, nor does it disturb its autonomy; it is still in existence. The very statute which the gentleman from Georgia himself has read contemplates that the commission shall continue to exist, even after the 1st of July next. There can be no controversy upon that question.

With all due deference to the Chair, it does not seem to me that there can be any question in regard to this amendment, if we keep in view the language of the statute of last year which the gentleman from Georgia has himself read. This is a matter of so much general importance and of such magnitude, particularly to the people of the cotton-growing region of this country, that I hope it will not be lightly or hastily disposed of.

I am surprised that the gentleman from Georgia is not in harmony and thorough sympathy with the further investigation provided for by my amendment. I am prepared to tell him, without violating the propriety of a private conversation, that a member of the Committee on Appropriations, who lives in the heart of the cotton-growing section of the country, is not only entirely willing that this amendment should prevail but is anxious for it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not think it is necessary for me to argue to this House whether I am representing the cotton-growing section or not.

Mr. MANNING. I think you are giving it a very serious blow in opposing this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not deem it important to continue discussions of points of order on these small amendments.

Mr. MANNING. Is the Chair going to rule this amendment out of order and close debate upon it because it involves only a small amount?

The CHAIRMAN. This point of order is so familiar to the committee, and has been so often decided, that it is unnecessary to waste time by continuing debate upon the question. The Chair will make his decision, and if the committee does not agree to it it can be overturned upon an appeal much sooner than by continuing the debate. The Chair sustains the point of order and rules the amendment out of order.

The Clerk began the reading of the next paragraph, when,

Mr. REAGAN said: I desire to make an appeal from the decision of the Chair. The matter embraced in the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] is of so great moment that I desire the sense of the committee upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal, and not take advantage of the fact that the gentleman is a little late in making it.

Mr. MANNING. I want to say that probably twenty millions of dollars were saved last year to those engaged in cotton culture by the work of the Entomological Commission. Since the war we have lost two hundred millions or more of dollars by the ravages of the cotton-worm and boll-worm.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal to the committee. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

Mr. MANNING. I hope gentlemen of the committee will have a little patience, so that every member may understand the matter before it is voted upon. I do not want it to go by default; and I hope that the feeling which seemed to exist——

The CHAIRMAN. After the question is stated to the House, it may then be debated. On the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] made a point of order, which the Chair has sustained. From that decision the gentleman from Mississippi has taken an appeal. The question now is, Shall the opinion of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee? On that question the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] has the floor.

Mr. AIKEN. I make another point of order, that the Clerk had read the next paragraph of the bill, and the Chair has no right to go back.

The CHAIRMAN. That point comes too late.

Mr. MANNING. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not want to arraign the gentleman from Georgia. I do not wish to say anything unkind, nor do I desire to criticise what he has done or what he proposes to do in this bill. But, turning back to page 21 of the bill, I call attention to the fact that we have just appropriated under the leadership of the gentleman from Georgia $25,000 for the purpose of continuing ethnological researches among the North American Indians. The question of what races of the human family have inhabited this country in years gone by is interesting and affords intellectul pleasure, but that is all. The masses will hardly keep up with ethnological researclles and would receive no pecuniary benefit if they did. On a proposition involving simply an intellectual feast for certain classes of men this bill gives $25,000. In this bill I find also that you give $23,000 for the propagation of food fishes. A vessel for use by the Fish Commission is to be constructed at a cost of $100,000. More than that, you give $10,000 for the printing of the catalogue of the library of the Surgeon-General's Office. All these appropriations may be proper, but not so meritorious as the appropriation I ask for now in this amendment. I ask $10,000, for what? While it is for the purpose of——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must remind the gentleman that the question pending is a point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will be allowed to proceed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must beg the gentleman from Mississippi not to discuss upon a question of order the merits of the proposition. The time of the Committee of the Whole is very precious.

Mr. MANNING. I will endeavor to proceed in order; and I hope the Chair will not be impatient.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not impatient; but the public business for the time being is to some extent under the control of the Chair, and he must see that the interests of public business are not sacrificed by a violation of the rules.

Mr. MANNING. If the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] is content, I hope the Chair will not be too exacting, and I do hope that the Chair and this Committee of the Whole will take time enough to consider the magnitude of this question, in order to look critically into the point of order which has been raised.

This Entomological Commission is already in existence; its work is not yet done; and it is important that it should be prosecuted, as I learn from the chief of that commission and many others who know whereof they speak. At its head stands the most distinguished man in entomological science in the New World. He came from the Old World with great honors. If you will consult the reports of the Commissioner of Agriculture of France you will discover that when the phylloxera was devastating the wine-growing regions of that country, that commissioner was enabled to solve the question very largely by the scientific assistance of this man; 300,000 francs were offered for a remedy to meet the destruction caused by this insect. Germany was devastated, as were the fields of Italy. Madeira lost its grape crops because of the failure to give attention to this matter. Last year the estimate is that $20,000,000 were saved in the South through the scientific suggestions and mechanical contrivances of this Entomological Commission and its assistants. Several hundred million dollars of the revenues of this country have been annually sacrificed for years by the different insects that prey upon our agricultural products.

Now let me say (and then I am done) that the proposed work is not local but national. That which destroys the cotton-worm will destroy the insects that ravage other crops in all sections of the country.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BLOUNT. In view of what the gentleman has said, I ask two or three minutes. The gentleman started out by saying that he did not propose to attack me; but he calls attention to the appropriation in this bill for ethnology——

Mr. MANNING. And I call attention also to the paragraph just passed appropriating $60,000 for displaying upon the shelves of the National Museum "the collections of geology, mineralogy, natural history, ethnology, and technology," which contribute nothing at all to anybody's material advancement.

Mr. BLOUNT. If I had my own way about it, ethnology and a good many other things would not be in this bill. I do not stand here as the representative of my individual views; but I have charge of the bill as the organ of the committee, and as such I propose to stand by their conclusions.

The gentleman talks about the amount of money which has been saved. Why, already in the annual appropriation bill there has been $5,000 appropriated.

Mr. MANNING. Not one dollar for field-work.

Mr. BLOUNT. I object to being interrupted.

Mr. MANNING. I interrupted when the gentleman stated the case in that way.

Mr. BLOUNT. I am stating my view and not the gentleman's.

Mr. MANNING. You have the act before you.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have not the act before me; but the gentleman from South Carolina understands it as I do.

Mr. MANNING. The Commissioner of Agriculture——

Mr. BLOUNT. Excuse me. Mr. Chairman, there has been a contest between Professor Riley and the Commissioner of Agriculture about this question as to who should conduct this investigation. There was a division in the Agricultural Committee on this subject during last session of Congress and this proviso was inserted in this bill as a conclusion of this whole matter. It is as follows:

> For the completion of the work of the United States Entomological Commission under the Department of the Interior in the special investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust or grasshopper and the cotton-worm, the sum of $25,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That after the close of the next fiscal year all work of the character herein provided for shall be exclusively under the control of the Agricultural Department, and all operations under the Interior Department shall be fully and finally closed before the 30th day of June, 1881.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in obedience to this law of Congress, which the committee recognized and which I recognize, I have raised this point of order which the gentleman from Mississippi asks us to reverse.

Mr. REAGAN. I ask the Chair to hear me for one moment on the appeal. The act of last session, which is still in force as the law of the land, was for the completion of the work of the United States Entomological Commission. It provides for the completion of the work of the United States Entomological Commission under the Department of the Interior in the special investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust or grasshopper and the cotton-worm the sum of $25,000, to be immediately available. That is now the law. The object of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi is to extend that investigation. It is an investigation now going on under the law, and it is no answer to say that this is new legislation because there may be a like provision to the effect that on the 1st of July next there is to be a change in the manner of making this investigation. It is the law, and the gentleman's proposition is to amend that existing law.

There has not been one of these things put upon this bill which stood upon a safer legal footing under the rules than this proposition offered by the gentleman from Mississippi. And, sir, there is not one of these amendments which produces in importance and value to the industries of the country anything like the results which are likely to flow from the legislation proposed by the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi. When we remember that the losses to the active industries of the country, that the losses to the commerce of the country are measured by hundreds of millions of dollars growing out of the devastation of this cotton-worm, and when we are assured by the gentleman from Mississippi that many millions were saved during the last year by this investigation and by the suggestions of the very gentleman whose labors he proposes to extend, surely, unless there is some great reason against it, we should not consent to rule out this small appropriation.

I wish to read what a distinguished Senator said on this subject in the other end of the Capitol, and I hope I will have time to do it. Senator MORGAN in the Senate yesterday used the following language:

> In conversing with him about the State of the cotton crop of the last year in that State, he being one of the very best planters in Alabama, one of the most successful, he said to me, "I lost my crop last year because I did not choose to follow the advice which Mr. Riley had given to the people of that section of the country in reference to repressing the cotton-worm. My neighbors all around me made excellent crops, and I have paid for my folly in the loss of almost my entire crop." That gentleman, speaking intelligently, gives a fair statement of the advantages which Mr. Riley has been able to confer upon the people of Alabama at least, and I have no doubt upon the people of the entire South, reaching from the southern border of Virginia around to Texas, in consequence of these investigations of this pest and of the best means of repressing it.

That is the experience of one of the most successful cotton planters.

I cannot on the question of order go into the facts or the merits of this proposition; but it is known to all persons familiar with it that millions of dollars are lost annually by the devastations of this worm. Here is a law to eradicate them now in force, and the proposition is to continue this commission, and yet we are asked to rule it out of order. I hope the House will not sustain the decision of the Chair.

Mr. PERSONS. My colleague from Georgia is right; there is bad feeling existing between the chief of this commission and the Commissioner of Agriculture. My friend from Georgia is also right in this, that this commission has promised for three successive Congresses, perhaps, they would complete this work, and yet, notwithstanding that, this worm still continues to devastate the cotton of the South. The losses there are millions year by year. There has never been appropriated but $25,000.

Mr. MANNING. Fifty thousand dollars for the grasshoppers and $25,000 for this worm.

Mr. KNOTT. There would be more propriety in an amendment voting $10,000 to buy turkeys to catch the tobacco-worms in my district, for I am sure a single turkey-cock is worth more in the extermination of insects noxious to agriculture than all the entomologists the Government has employed in the last ten years. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia must confine himself to the discussion of the cotton-worm.

Mr. PERSONS. I think, Mr. Chairman, it matters not what the commission may believe. They may say and believe that to complete the work it may take three weeks, three months, or three years. They may say they have done their duty and completed the work. I have no doubt they have done their duty; but if this great interest continues to suffer it is not for that commission to determine when Congress shall have done its duty in the premises. They say they have completed the work. Now, I know nothing in science that is complete. I have no idea but that in three years or in thirty years from now investigations into this very subject may be of profit and importance to this country. And, therefore, Mr. Chairman, I say it is not with the commission to decide, but with Congress to determine when they have completed their work. There is much yet to be done. There is great need for investigation. There is absolute necessity for information. If this commission is unable to do more, I say we should call for another commission, for that work has not yet been completed.

I therefore favor this appropriation. I believe this commission, as I have stated, is capable. I believe the same commission that was established and that have carried on this work up to this time may yet continue to work profitably in the same direction. They have only completed a portion of the great work that is to be done. There is yet much to be done. They say by further investigation they may accomplish more. Therefore I am in favor of their being supplied with money to enable them to continue and do more and by the expenditure of a few thousand dollars here to enable this country to save what has been a drain in past years of from twenty to thirty millions a year; and no year, as statistics show, has this loss been less than $10,000,000. It is but a pitiful amount to be granted where such important issues are at stake.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must hold that the gentleman from Georgia shall confine himself to the point of order.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say a word in reference to this point of order. I wish to say that this very commission came before the Committee on Agriculture and said that they had gathered all of the information that they expected to be able to gather in reference to that work; and they only ask now for a contribution from Congress to enable them to publish the data which they have already gathered. That is all they want; that is all they expect to accomplish. Now, the Committee on Agriculture have voted $5,000 for that purpose.

If this additional appropriation is made, it is made to launch that commission out upon an unknown tide of investigation, for they do not know what to look after when they themselves decide that they have gathered all the data available for the original purpose. They admit themselves that they have gathered all the information which was contemplated or which they can gather upon this subject. Therefore I hope the point of order will be sustained. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. MANNING. Let me ask the gentleman from South Carolina a question before he takes his seat. You have stated that this work is over, that the data has been collected——

Mr. KNOTT. Mr. Chairman, I insist upon the point of order that the rules of the House be enforced.

Mr. MANNING. I hold in my hand a letter from the commissioner, Professor Riley, stating that further work is indispensable. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is on the appeal from the decision of the Chair. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 64, noes 38.

Mr. REAGAN demanded tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. BLOUNT and Mr. MANNING were appointed.

The committee again divided; and there were—ayes 79, noes 53.

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

Mr. VALENTINE. I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 873 insert, "to enable the Signal Service Bureau to examine and report upon the habits of the Rocky Mountain locust, $5,000."

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, that has been offered once and rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman raise the question of order?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do raise the question of order. We have passed that point of the bill to which this is applicable. This is a new object not authorized by law for the Signal Service. It is special legislation upon this bill.

Mr. VALENTINE. I rise to a point of order. The committee is in disorder, and we cannot hear the gentleman from Georgia.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Chairman, while we are trying to get order in the House the Chair disposes, as we understand here, of the point of order raised by the gentleman from Georgia.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio is mistaken. The Chair has not undertaken to dispose of that question, but ruled upon the question of order raised by the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. KEIFER. Then I misunderstood the Chair.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Chairman, I desire the attention of the committee briefly upon this question. A few years ago—and I desire to go into the details more particularly to show that this is in order and that the point of order is not good against it—Congress made an appropriation to create a board or commission who were styled the United States Entomological Commission for the purpose of examining into the nature and habits of the Rocky Mountain locust, which commission was also authorized to extend its inquiry in reference to the habits of the cotton or boll worm. Now, this commission have reported to Congress. They make their report that they are practically through with the work as regards the question of the Rocky Mountain locust; that it is not necessary to make further examination as to their nature and habits.

Their report is not yet before the House because it is not yet printed. But in that report they say, as the result of their investigations, that the Signal Service Bureau should annually send a person or persons into the region of the breeding grounds of the grasshopper, and make report to the agricultural regions liable to be affected by them if they fly that season. Now, then, we have spent about sixty thousand dollars to ascertain what should be done, if anything, to protect the agriculturist from the ravages of the grasshopper. This commission makes its report, and upon that we ask an appropriation of $5,000 to do that with regard to which Congress has spent $60,000 to find out what ought to be done. It is a continuation, and not a new measure.

Mr. DUNNELL. I call for the rereading of the amendment.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. DUNNELL. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the point of order.

Mr. DUNNELL. I shall endeavor to confine my remarks to the point of order. I agree with the gentleman from Nebraska that this is in continuation of a work begun by Congress a few years ago; and it has been held that a work thus begun may be continued, though a year may elapse in making appropriations in regard to it. I will cite an instance. Some five years ago Congress appropriated a sum of money to investigate the subject of forestry and lumber products. Congress made an appropriation for two years. Then there was a lapse of two years or one year when no appropriation was made. Last year a proposition for another appropriation was made. The question of order was raised, but it was decided by the Chair that Congress once having made an appropriation for that work in two successive Congresses as is the case with regard to the locust, it was in order at that time to move to further appropriate for the work. I might say that a more important amendment to this bill has not been offered, and I hope the gentleman from Georgia will not insist on his point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. The very same paragraph which was read in relation to the cotton-worm I now read in relation to the Rocky Mountain locust:

For the completion of the work of the United States Entomological Commission under the Department of the Interior in the special investigation of the Rocky Mountain locust or grasshopper and the cotton-worm the sum of $25,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That after the close of the next fiscal year all work of the character herein provided for shall be exclusively under the control of the Agricultural Department and all operations under the Interior Department shall be fully and finally closed before the 30th day of June, 1881.

Now, sir, here is a distinct provision of law declaring that all this matter in relation to the Rocky Mountain locust and the cotton-worm shall be exclusively under the control of the Agricultural Department. And more than that we have already passed the portion of the bill relating to the Signal Service, and the amendment is offered too late. And even if we were at the portion of the bill where it could be offered, I would make the point that it is new legislation.

Mr. HAWLEY. I desire to be heard a moment on the point of order. This differs very materially from the question raised in the case of the cotton-worm. There the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. MANNING,] perhaps properly—I was a little inclined to think so—desired to continue that primary work of examination into the habits and movements of the cotton-worm. That is not sought for in this case at all.

Congress has declared its determination to find out the character and habits of the Rocky Mountain locusts; and by that it has declared that it means also to check their ravages, if there is any sense in the proceeding at all. But here we are not asking to continue the work of the Entomological Commission. We are not asking to interfere with the declared purpose of Congress last year to turn over hereafter the work of the Entomological Commission to the Agricultural Department. We assent to that as all right enough. The Entomological Commission does not ask to have its investigations continued. But we appointed them for a purpose. That purpose was not to enlarge our Library. It was to assist the great agricultural portion of our population in avoiding or dodging that grasshopper.

The time allowed for the work of the Entomological Commission is to expire next June. We do not want them to continue further their investigations. But they have told us what we can do to avoid the ravages of these locusts or grasshoppers. Information can be given from the mountains in the spring of the year that there will not be a flight that year. When planters receive that information they will know what to plant and be more certain of one crop or another; and always when they are about to sail or fly a notice of three or four or five days could be given, and agriculturists would know the time when they were to come.

Now, the Entomological Commission say we should construct the signal stations all along the hills to keep an eye on these creatures and telegraph in advance what they are likely to do. In short, the amendment now proposed is precisely and nothing else than a continuation of that work. It is another stage of a work which Congress clearly declared its purpose to carry out. And I congratulate these scientific gentlemen on the service they have been to the country, that is to say, if Congress is to avail itself of the valuable information they have communicated.

In reply, therefore, to the point of order, this clearly is an indispensable, logical continuation of that work, and not in conflict at all with the law of last year, which said the commission should wind up their labors in June. They will do so; and we are willing any further investigations of that character should go over to the Agricultural Department. But what in the world did we want with that knowledge if we are not now to avail ourselves of it?

Mr. KEIFER. I do not expect to be able to add anything specially to what has just been said on this point. I understand the gentleman from Georgia to rely wholly upon the point which he made a few moments ago on the appropriation which was sought by the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. MANNING,] and to place his point of order specially on the ground that this whole matter in regard to making investigations relating to the Rocky Mountain locust and grasshoppers and the cotton-worm was turned over to the Agricultural Department.

I rise simply to say, in my own way, that that point of order is certainly not applicable so far as this proposition is concerned. The Agricultural Department can have in no way control over the signal stations. There has been no attempt, either by the law read by the gentleman from Georgia or through any other law, to turn over the duties of the Signal Office to the Agricultural Department. Hence his point of order must fail for that reason.

This proposition is to make an appropriation of $5,000 to enable the signal officers to so extend their investigations as to look into the patent habits of the Rocky Mountain locust for the next fiscal year. It ought to be for every year until the time comes when there will be no Rocky Mountain locusts to infest the western country.

I am told by those who have studied their habits that there are times when any person, whether scientific or not, could tell that these locusts have not been breeding in such vast numbers as have enabled them to swarm over the great territory of the West and to destroy everything before them. There are times that that can be told early in the season. If such information as that could be published all over the West, it would bring contentment and satisfaction to the people, and they would go on and sow their crops without fear of their being destroyed by this great pest of modern times. And there are times when the people can be warned of the approach of these locusts, or of the danger of their appearance during the season, and with that information millions of dollars could be saved. There is no conflict with the existing law or the law that will be in operation after June 30, 1881.

Mr. VALENTINE. I desire to modify my amendment by inserting after the word "habits" the words "and flight;" for that is really all we want to know.

Mr. MANNING. I move to amend the amendment by striking out "$5,000" and inserting "$15,000, $10,000 of which shall be for the further investigation by the United States Entomological Commission as to the best means of destroying the cotton-worm and boll-worm." I am in hearty accord with the proposition for an investigation and observation of the habits and flight of the Rocky Mountain locust. The work of the commission in the past has shown it is of great value to the people of the West.

Mr. BLOUNT. I want to be understood as reserving all points of order on that amendment.

Mr. KEIFER. I am entirely in harmony with the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. MANNING.]

Mr. KNOTT. If a point of order has been made, I insist upon its being decided.

Mr. KEIFER. Allow me to say that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] cannot be entertained until the point of order is disposed of against the original amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to decide the point of order.

Mr. MANNING. I will withdraw my amendment until the point of order has been decided.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska proposes an amendment, which the Clerk has read, to the following paragraph:

Furniture and fixtures, National Museum: For cases, furniture, and fixtures required for the exhibition of the collections of geology, mineralogy, natural history, ethnology, and technology, belonging to the United States, $60,000.

To the clause providing for cases for the exhibition of certain articles an amendment is proposed authorizing investigations concerning certain other things. The Chair thinks that the amendment would be proper to the signal-service clause of the bill, but that clause having been passed, the effect of this amendment would be to go back to that clause without the consent of the committee. For that reason alone the Chair rules the amendment out of order.

Mr. KEIFER. All that the rule requires is that an amendment shall be germane to the bill. With all due respect to the Chair, I must take an appeal.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal to the committee.

Mr. MONEY. Does the Chair decide that an amendment must be germane to any particular clause of the bill, and not to the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that after a special subject in a bill has been passed to which an amendment would be appropriate, it is not in order to return to that subject by indirection.

Mr. VALENTINE. Is it not the fact that the amendment that I have offered is germane to the bill? The paragraph preceding my amendment has nothing to do with the matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal to the committee.

Mr. KEIFER. Allow me one word on the appeal.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no!

The question was taken on the appeal; and upon a division there were—ayes 42, noes 52.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is ruled to be in order.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for tellers on that amendment. No quorum has voted.

Mr. MANNING. I now offer my amendment, and ask the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] to accept it.

The CHAIRMAN. The point is raised that no quorum has voted, and tellers are called for.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. BLOUNT and Mr. VALENTINE were appointed.

Mr. MCMAHON. Let the amendment be again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the amendment and the paragraph to which it is offered.

Mr. VALENTINE. I offer my amendment as an independent paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The paragraph and the amendment will be read.

The Clerk read the pending paragraph and the amendment offered by Mr. VALENTINE.

The CHAIRMAN. On the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] made a point of order, which the Chair sustained. From that decision the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] appeals. The question is on the appeal from the decision of the Chair. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 69, noes 63.

No further count being called for, the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

Expenses of the collection of revenue from sales of public lands:
For salaries and commissions of registers of land offices and receivers of public moneys, at ninety-three district land offices, at not exceeding $3,000 each, $450,000.

Mr. DUNN. I wish to put a question to the gentleman from Georgia. What is the total amount of the expenses of surveying the public lands, and what is the amount here appropriated to pay such expenses?

Mr. BLOUNT. We have not reached that part of the bill yet.

Mr. DUNN. I wish to call attention to an impression I have on my mind which, if correct, would place the action of the committee in a very unfavorable light. If my information is correct there is an aggregate appropriation of $200,000 proposed in this bill to pay for surveys of the public lands, while the actual expense of those surveys would amount to $250,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. Oh, no.

Mr. DUNN. As I understand, there is $1 of appropriation for $1.25 of expense.

Mr. BLOUNT. We have not reached that part of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Surveying the public lands:
For surveying the public lands, $200,000, at rates not exceeding $12 per linear mile for standard and meander lines, $10 for township, and $8 for section lines, except that the Commissioner of the General Land Office may allow, for the survey of standard and meander lines through lands heavily timbered, mountainous, and covered with dense undergrowth, a sum not exceeding $16 per linear mile for standard lines, $14 for township, and $10 for section lines.

Mr. PAGE. I move to amend the paragraph just read by striking out "$200,000" and inserting "$350,000;" so as to read, "for surveying the public lands, $350,000."

If the Committee of the Whole will give me their attention for a few moments I believe I shall be able to show that this amendment ought in justice to be adopted. The Commissioner of the General Land Office in his estimate has asked $455,000 for the survey of the public lands. This sum is to be distributed in eleven States and six Territories—the States of Oregon, California, Nevada, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Alabama, Louisiana, Minnesota, and Iowa, and the Territories of Montana, Utah, Dakota, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington, New Mexico, and Arizona. Our western country embraces a large quantity of unsurveyed public lands. Within a few years past—I believe in the Forty-fifth Congress—a law was enacted for the sale of the timber lands on the Pacific coast embraced in the States of Oregon, California, and Nevada, and the Territory of Washington. This act provides that the timber lands of the country not suitable for agricultural purposes and not fit for settlement may be subject to public entry after they have been surveyed at the price of $2.50 per acre. These lands cannot be settled under the homestead and pre-emption laws. They must be taken up in quantities not to exceed one hundred and sixty acres, and be paid for at $2.50 per acre.

Now, there is no way by which title to these public lands can be obtained until they have been surveyed. In a previous paragraph of this bill there is an appropriation of $40,000 for protecting timber upon the public lands of the country. The Commissioner of the Land Office asked $75,000 to prevent the people of the country from taking timber off the public lands.

If the amount proposed in my amendment be appropriated it will enable the Commissioner of the Land Office so to distribute this money that the lands may be surveyed; and when surveyed they will be subject to be taken up under the laws of the United States, and thus we shall obviate the necessity of appropriating large sums of money year after year for protecting lands of the Government from being denuded of their valuable timber. I hope the Committee of the Whole will unanimously consent that this increase of appropriation be made. It is absolutely necessary.

As I have stated, the $200,000 provided for in the pending paragraph is to be distributed in eleven States and eight Territories. It is not sufficient; it is a mere bagatelle. The money we appropriate in this way comes back into the Treasury as soon as the lands are surveyed. When surveyed, they are open to settlement by citizens of the United States. By the act of 1878 it is made a penal offense for any citizen to take any timber from the public lands, or for any railroad company or person engaged in the transportation business to transport any timber taken from the public lands after the passage of the act. In justice to the people of the country I ask that this appropriation be made, so that these lands may be surveyed, and that citizens desiring under the law to obtain title to timber lands may have the opportunity of doing so. This appropriation is not asked for the benefit of any particular individual, or for the benefit of any surveyor or other public officer. It is asked in the interest of men who are now compelled to occupy some of the timber lands of the country and to take from them valuable timber. For this privilege they are willing to pay by purchasing the lands at the double minimum rate provided by law; but until the lands are surveyed, they are absolutely prevented from doing so. I trust my amendment will be adopted.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, the appropriation for this purpose as embraced in the pending paragraph of the bill is smaller by $100,000 than it has been for quite a number of years. The action of the committee in reducing the appropriation grew out of legislation passed in 1879, which has worked results that did not and could not occur before.

Mr. PAGE. I presume the gentleman is fully aware that the legislation to which he refers does not apply to the class of lands known as timber lands.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman will not interrupt me. He shall have, so far as I am concerned, the amplest opportunity to discuss his amendment.

Mr. PAGE. If the gentleman does not want information or is unwilling to be questioned on this subject, all right.

Mr. BLOUNT. I am perfectly willing to be questioned; but the gentleman was assuming——

Mr. PAGE. I only wanted to remind the gentleman that the law he speaks of does not apply to the class of lands to which I have referred.

Mr. BLOUNT. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have not alleged that it does; I had no such thought, and did not intend to say any such thing to the committee. The law was passed at that time in relation to the lands which are open to pre-emption and homestead entry and which are really the lands we all desire to have occupied, those which may be used for agricultural purposes, and those which settlers from this country and from other countries want as homes. They are the lands in reference to which demand for surveys have mostly been made heretofore.

Now, what do those sections contain? First, that surveys may be had at any time by settlers in a township on the deposit of a sum of sufficient money to make the survey. After the survey is made, the scrip is issued to the party having the survey made, which may be used in payment of the land.

Then, again, section 16 declares the deposit of money in a proper United States depository under the provisions of the previous section shall be deemed an appropriation of the sum so deposited for the objects contemplated by that section. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to cause the sum so deposited to be placed to the credit of the proper appropriation for the survey services. So it will be seen that the amount of money designated in this bill, under the operation of this statute, is not all the money, but wherever surveys are made of lands in any township, not mineral or reserved by the Government, under this deposit system, those moneys can be used for the survey of the public lands, and are an appropriation in addition to the amounts in this bill. And for this reason, these being the great body of the public lands to be surveyed, these being the lands in reference to which the great public necessity occurs, we felt that provision of law contained a continuous appropriation and a supplement and more than a supplement to the amount we have recommended in this bill. The ground covered by this legislation would more than make up what my friend desires to add to the amount of the appropriation for surveys here.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. PAGE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Georgia gave as one of the reasons to the committee why they had reduced the amount appropriated this year from what was appropriated last year that they had discovered a new law, which provided for surveys under what is known as the deposit system. Let me tell the gentleman that the law providing for the deposit system was passed on the 30th of May, 1862.

Mr. BLOUNT. Oh, no.

Mr. PAGE. Well, here it is, if the gentleman would like to read it.

Mr. BLOUNT. That is part of it.

Mr. PAGE. It was passed in 1862, under which this deposit system grew up. There may have been amendments to it afterward. Under this legislation the deposit system grew up, but it is limited to land subject to entry under the pre-emption and homestead laws. They embrace but a small portion of the public lands of the country. That deposit system provides for the survey of the lands occupied by actual settlers; but in many cases there are public land laws which do not provide for actual settlement, such as the desert-land act, the coal-land act, and many other laws providing for the disposition of public lands. In these cases this deposit system does not apply at all. It is limited, as I have said, to the homestead and pre-emption laws.

Now, Mr. Chairman, let us see how this appropriation would stand divided by twenty States and Territories in which there are public lands. How much would it amount to? Why, sir, not enough to survey two townships in each State and Territory. Yet, sir, settlements upon the public lands in the Western States and Territories are now crowding the surveys. Will this Congress then refuse to make sufficient appropriation for the survey of the public lands, when by acts of Congress we have invited settlers to go upon those public lands? Shall we refuse to survey these public lands in order that they may pass into the possession of the people who occupy them? I hope not. It is not economy. This money paid for the public lands as soon as these lands are surveyed and sold comes into the Treasury. There is now a great fund annually turned into the Treasury of the United States arising from the sale of public lands. I hope, therefore, this committee and the Committee on Public Lands, whose duty it ought to be to see to it that settlers on the public lands of this country should have fair opportunity to settle upon surveyed public lands—because in every law I know of there is required survey before settlement can be made—I hope this committee will not permit the appropriation for this purpose to be cut down, but will agree to adopt the amendment which I have offered.

Mr. CONVERSE. I propose to the gentleman from California that his amendment be reduced so as to leave it $300,000, as it was last year. I think if that amendment is made it will be acceptable to the committee. In my judgment, it is the amount which should be given.

Mr. BRENTS. The amount of land which was disposed of last year exceeded the amount disposed of during any preceding year. The number of immigrants who came to this country last year exceeded the number of any preceding year. The United States has acquired these lands for the purpose of having them occupied. Until they are occupied by actual settlers they will yield no revenue to the Government. As an economic measure, therefore, we should make sufficient appropriation to survey them, so they may be occupied. Then they will become valuable. Their owners will pay taxes on them. They will then yield products which will bring revenues into our Treasury. It is the poorest sort of economy to refuse to make appropriation to survey these public lands, when we desire to have them occupied and disposed of. We told the people in the passage of our homestead and pre-emption laws the Government was willing to give them homes upon these public lands. We invited settlement upon them. Yet when the settlers got there, and there are thousands there now, to settle upon them, they find they are not surveyed; they cannot get them; they cannot obtain title to them.

Now, the gentleman recites an act that he says was passed on the 5th of last March, an act providing for deposits by settlers for the survey of these lands. But what benefit can that be to these poor settlers? They must contribute a sufficient amount under this law for survey of the entire township, and for all incidental expenses, before they can obtain any benefit from the provisions of that act whatever. The homesteader who goes there, who is offered land without money or price, must pay a large sum of money in order to have surveys extended, and then these surveys must be extended in the line of the surveys of the Government.

Now, if we refuse this appropriation, these lands cannot be occupied by homestead settlers. If they make deposits under the law and get certificates for them, they can only get their money back by selling or indorsing them to others, and consequently at a heavy discount. This act is for the benefit of brokers in scrip and certificates rather than for the benefit of actual settlers.

Last year we appropriated $300,000, and there is a deficiency. This year we have more settlers crowding upon the public lands, and I am assured by the Commissioner of the General Land Office that there will be a much larger amount of land sold during the coming year than during the last year. Over a million of dollars were received from the sale of public lands during the last year, yet a deficiency exists to-day for the survey of the public lands.

Mr. Chairman, I see the hammer coming down, and so will only ask to incorporate as part of my remarks the following table. Although composed of dry figures, it speaks on this subject with more eloquence than I am capable:

Disposition of the public lands and record of the General Land Office for ten years.

IMMIGRATION AND LANDS.

For the year ending June 30—	1871.	1872.	1873.	1874.	1875.	1876.	1877.	1878.	1879.	1880.
Immigrants arriving	321,350	404,806	459,803	313,339	227,498	169,986	141,857	138,469	177,826	457,257
Lands disposed of.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
Ordinary cash sales	1,389,982	1,370,320	1,226,226	1,041,345	745,061	640,691	740,686	877,555	622,574	850,740.00
Land-warrant locations	525,920	389,460	214,940	133,160	137,000	137,640	97,480	84,720	50,820	88,522.00
Homestead entries	4,600,326	4,671,332	3,793,613	3,518,862	2,356,058	2,875,909	2,178,098	4,418,345	5,260,111	6,045,570.00
College scrip locations	494,447	693,613	653,446	112,933	9,432	2,320	1,280	640	960	1,280.00
To railroads and wagon-roads	3,309,819	4,020,235	6,160,113	3,322,230	3,107,643	1,001,778	762,335	611,969	278,334	1,176,860.15
Swamp approvals	428,567	714,255	238,548	202,188	47,721	1,008,005	320,935	202,926	75,388	3,757,888.99
To colleges, schools, &c	.....	.....	138,680	248,826	181,163	176,615	94,653	197,573	104,992	212,059.19
Internal improvements	.....	.....	190,776	134,987	8,614	52,331	50,985	17,420	81,400	223,140.80
Chip. and S. H. B. scrip locations	16,513	5,760	14,223	11,672	12,708	21,049	8,079	10,576	2,519	7,291.48
Other scrip entries	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	60,460	83,469	89,710	199,131.19
Timber-culture entries	.....	.....	.....	803,945	464,860	607,984	520,673	1,870,434	2,766,574	2,193,184.12
Entries under the mining laws	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	14,103	No report.	No report.	No report.
Desert-land entries	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	310,553	No report.	No report.
Donation claims	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	36,552.50
Under relief act of March 3, 1875	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	160.00
Total	10,765,704	11,864,975	13,030,600	9,530,873	7,070,271	6,524,326	4,849,767	8,686,179	9,333,383	14,792,371.65

Mr. DUNNELL. Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment of the gentleman from California will be adopted by the committee. I am unable probably to increase the force of the arguments which have been already made in favor of that amendment; but I think the committee ought not to forget one fact as stated by the gentleman who presented the amendment, that these lands are to be surveyed at some time, and that it is for the interest of the Government to survey them at once for the reason stated by the gentleman who has just taken his seat. We have but few lands for agricultural purposes remaining. It is manifestly for the interest of the Government that the lands so remaining shall be surveyed at an early day in order that they may be opened to pre-emption and homestead settlers.

It may be remembered, Mr. Chairman, and ought to be, that a large increase of population will take place during the coming and the next year along the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad as an illustration. That road is being pushed rapidly west and east; and in the Territory of Dakota, and also in the Territories of Montana and Washington, there will be a large increase of population demanding lands for actual settlement.

Now, I insist that this act which has been referred to here by the gentleman from Georgia, denominated the "deposit act," is in violation of the real spirit of the homestead law. A settler on these public lands now under the general law is entitled to his homestead. A citizen of New England, for instance, or any State in the Union, is invited upon the public lands under the provisions of the homestead law. It was deemed by those who framed and passed that law to be enacted in the interest of the Government for the purpose of laying its great bodies of agricultural lands open for settlement. The deposit act, subsequently passed, comes in and compels the settler who contemplates locating to deposit a sum of money, and perhaps wait for a survey of the land which he proposes to occupy.

The lands that are open and ready for occupancy may and ought to be surveyed at an early day, so that when the settler is invited to occupy such lands he may not be required to take possession of unsurveyed land, but he can go on lands which have been clearly defined under the surveys, make his entry properly and get his title, and enjoy under the law the benefits of this beneficent act.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there is a great demand for the public lands. There is a tendency toward settlement upon the public land, and it is for the good of the entire country that these surveys should be made. The larger cities of the Union and the more densely populated portions of our Eastern States are rapidly giving up a portion of their population, and that population is finding its way into these inviting public lands of the western country. It is a healthy condition of things, and it is in the interest of the whole country to promote it still further. There is no argument that can be made against the survey of the lands, while there is everything in favor of it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the committee to the fact that the homestead act presupposes the donation of a limited quantity of land to anybody who will settle upon it. It is designed to give homes to a class of persons who are poor and homeless. The gentleman who has charge of this bill very correctly said that by all odds the larger number of acres of land have been disposed of under the homestead act. Now, sir, the class of persons who go upon these lands and take a home under the homestead law have not the means to take lands under the deposit system. That system requires a sum of money to be deposited sufficient to survey a whole township, and that is impracticable in the case of homesteaders as a class. The amount is $800 that the settler must deposit to get a survey under the deposit system. Why, sir, it would be better for the settler, rather than do that, to go upon surveyed lands, if he can find them, and pay a dollar and a quarter an acre; or to purchase from persons and corporations who own lands and have them for sale. If you confine surveys to the deposit system you practically abrogate the homestead laws.

But what I rose particularly to say was this: the deposit system has been in operation ever since 1862; and yet, sir, the sum of money which it is now proposed by the committee to appropriate for survey of the public lands is over $100,000 less than it has been at any time for the last five years; while the amount of public lands disposed of last year is greater than it has been at any time during the preceding five years. In 1877 we disposed of only a little over three million acres of the public lands, and for that year $300,000 was appropriated for survey of the public lands. But in the last fiscal year the number of acres disposed of exceeds eight million, and I am informed by the Commissioner of the Land Office that we have reason to believe that in the next fiscal year that will be increased two million, so that we will have ten million acres disposed of in the next fiscal year, and yet the committee only give $200,000 for the survey of the public lands, while, as I have already stated, in 1877 they gave $300,000 when we only disposed of a little over three million acres.

Mr. DUNN. I desire to renew the question I asked of the gentleman from Georgia some time ago: What is the entire amount appropriated this year for the incidental expenses of surveys in this and in the legislative bill both?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not remember what is the amount in the legislative bill, nor have I made the addition to show the total of the incidental expenses as far as this bill is concerned. I think it is about twenty-six thousand dollars.

Mr. DUNN. I find one item in the legislative bill where it is $32,000 for one State alone.

Mr. BLOUNT. That is for clerk hire.

Mr. DUNN. It is for clerk hire alone in one office besides the salary.

Mr. BLOUNT. For several offices.

Mr. DUNN. Now, there is some economy that is not economy. In a conversation with the Commissioner of the General Land Office this morning I was informed that the salaries, clerk hire, and incidental expenses of the surveyor-general's office provided for in all the appropriation bills relating to survey of the public lands were about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, while the amount proposed to be appropriated for the actual survey is $200,000; so that we spend a dollar and a quarter of expenses for one dollar's worth of work done.

Now, the committee had better appropriate nothing if the action of the committee is based upon the chance of settlers depositing the money for carrying on the public surveys. In that event, better change the law and simply provide that all who desire to purchase lands may deposit money and have the lands surveyed. As the law now is, only one class of purchasers of the public lands can have surveys made, and all other classes who buy lands cannot have them made.

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas. They are the very class who cannot put up the money.

Mr. DUNN. Precisely. And now if we are to rely upon that, and to carry on the machinery as it is, we are in the attitude of a man who builds a steam-mill, hires a crew of hands, turns on steam, sets the whole thing running, but never saws a log. That is not good economy; it is not wise legislation. Either make the surveys commensurate to the wants of the people or shut off the appropriations. I hope that the amendment will be adopted.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

Here the committee informally rose; and Mr. HAYES took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed, without amendment, bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 4646) for the relief of the heirs of Cornelius Boyle;

A bill (H. R. No. 4002) for the relief of the estate of J. M. Micou, deceased;

A bill (H. R. No. 6545) to amend section 3524 of the Revised Statutes so as to authorize a charge for melting or refining bullion when at or above standard; and

A bill (H. R. No. 1197) for the relief of settlers upon the absentee Shawnee lands in Kansas, and for other purposes.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I desire to offer an amendment to the paragraph, or to the amendment of the gentleman from California.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman from Louisiana let us have a vote first on the pending amendment? I suppose his amendment is for legislation in reference to his own State.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I will withhold my amendment for the present.

Mr. BLOUNT. There is a great deal said in a general way about economy and what can or cannot be accomplished under the appropriations we have had. Now, we have since 1876 been appropriating just about this sum of money. In 1876, under the pre-emption and homestead laws, we sold 2,875,000 acres; in 1877 we sold 2,178,000 acres; in 1878 we sold 4,418,000 acres; in 1879 we sold 5,240,000 acres; and in 1880 we sold 6,049,000 acres. These figures show that the amount of this appropriation does not regulate the amount of lands disposed of. And why?

In the first place, the demand has very much to do with it. In the next place, we are in surveys millions of acres ahead already. With the very same appropriations in 1876 and in 1880, you have in the latter year more than two and a half times as much land occupied under those laws as was occupied in the year first named.

Mr. PAGE. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not yield for an interruption.

Mr. PAGE. Then I will get the floor by offering a formal amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. With a view of saving time, and not desiring to embarrass these surveys, as it has been intimated to me that gentlemen are willing to take a hundred-thousand-dollar increase, I will not object, if we can proceed with the bill.

Mr. PAGE. I will modify my amendment so as to strike out "$200,000" and insert "$300,000."

Mr. BLOUNT. I will not object to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I move to amend by inserting after the words "three hundred thousand dollars" the words "twenty thousand dollars of which said sum shall be apportioned to the surveying district of Louisiana, and any part may be employed in such necessary resurveys therein as the Commissioner of the General Land Office may direct."

Mr. BLOUNT. Let me ask my friend——

Mr. ROBERTSON. I hope the gentleman will not make any point of order on that amendment.

Mr. BLOUNT. Will not the gentleman be content with the legislation he proposes and leave out the appropriation?

Mr. PAGE. It is all done now under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. BLOUNT. I must otherwise raise the point of order on the amendment.

Mr. SPARKS. How can you raise the point of order on it? It does not increase the appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] raise a point of order on the amendment?

Mr. BLOUNT. I will withdraw the point of order, as I think we can get along a little faster by determining the amendment upon its merits.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Up to 1876 it was always the custom of Congress in making these appropriations for surveys to apportion the amounts to the different States. Since that time the apportionment has been left entirely to the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

In the Forty-fifth Congress I attempted to have adopted an amendment similar to the one I now offer, and it was ruled out on a point of order. I have attempted to get a just portion of the appropriation made for this purpose allotted to the State of Louisiana for surveys and resurveys in that State, and I have failed. Of the last appropriation made for this purpose, of $300,000, Louisiana received but $12,000, and the year previous that State received about $13,500 only.

Many of the surveys and resurveys out West have been made under what is called the deposit system; and I understand that some $600,000 or $700,000 have been paid in by depositors for surveys out West. The West has not only received its due proportion of the regular appropriation for surveys, but the actual settlers have deposited from $600,000 to $700,000 for surveys. Yet Louisiana, which has from six to seven million acres unsurveyed, or that require resurveying, cannot get what I conceive to be its just amount of the appropriation for surveys. I therefore ask the House to make the apportionment for us. The State of Louisiana is an exceptional State. It is one of the oldest States, and yet the surveyor-general's office is still kept open there. We want to close up this work. There are some forty-odd townships that are required to be resurveyed, and I therefore ask the adoption of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I desire to say a few words more on the question of resurveys.

Mr. ELLIS. I will yield my time to my colleague.

Mr. ROBERTSON. A word in regard to the matter of resurveys. It has heretofore been the custom and the rule in the department to set by a part of this annual appropriation for resurveys. For the last forty years that has been the practice. I understand that the Commissioner of the General Land Office intends in the future not to apply any portion of this appropriation for that service. Hence it is that I seek to have an interpretation given to the law, by including in my amendment that so far as Louisiana is concerned a portion of this amount may be used for resurveys as well as for surveys. As I have already stated, there are some forty-four townships that require resurveys. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope not.

Mr. ELAM. I hope it will be adopted.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 19, noes 48.

No further count being called for, the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I desire to give notice that I shall ask in the House for a vote on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman cannot get in the House a vote on an amendment, unless it is adopted by the committee.

Mr. ACKLEN. I move to add to the pending paragraph that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the part of the sum hereby appropriated that may be apportioned to the surveying district of Louisiana, together with such sums as have been or may be deposited for surveys therein by actual settlers, under sections 2401, 2402, and 2403 of the Revised Statutes, may be in whole or in part employed in making such resurveys as may be necessary in the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Mr. BLOUNT. I want to ask my friend if the purpose is to authorize resurveys?

Mr. ACKLEN. Solely and alone.

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman wants the fund for his State used in that way, I have no objection to it.

Mr. ACKLEN. I desire to say, as has already been said by my colleague, [Mr. ROBERTSON,] that, under the rule of the Land Office, surveys and resurveys have been made without any distinction being drawn between the two under the appropriation contained in this paragraph. But the Commissioner has given notice that unless he is specially authorized by Congress, he will not hereafter resurvey land under a provision authorizing solely and alone surveys to be made.

I do not wish to detain the committee, and will therefore only call attention to the following letter received from my State:

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA, January 12, 1881.

MY DEAR SIR: By the act of June 16, 1880, making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, $300,000 were appropriated in bulk for the survey of the public lands for the current fiscal year, and in allotting this sum among the sixteen surveying districts, the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office gave Louisiana only $12,000. By reference to the annual report of the General Land Office for the year 1879, page 410, you will perceive how totally inadequate this allowance was for the wants of our State, as there detailed.

Louisiana is the only State of those admitted into the Union before 1849 in which the surveys of public lands and private claims have not been completed, and the offices of United States surveyor-general discontinued. Florida, indeed, yet has its surveyor-general, but the surveys there are finished and the office must soon be abolished, it existing now only in name. A glance at the annual reports of the General Land Office for the year 1876, pages 187-90; for 1877, pages 220-23; for 1878, pages 227-28; for 1879, pages 406-10; will show you the injustice which the landed interests of Louisiana would sustain by the discontinuance of the office of surveyor-general here, before the surveys and records are finished as contemplated by law. And yet an evil but little less serious is that of keeping the office open in name, and suffering the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office to discriminate against Louisiana to such an extent as practically to deny her participation in its annual appropriations. To instance a single case: the rich strip of sea-coast region from Vermillion Bay to the Sabine, about one hundred and ten miles in length east and west, and varying from twelve to twenty miles in breadth from north to south, has never yet been surveyed, and cannot be, so long as Congress appropriates money in bulk and leaves it to officers hostile to us or wedded to western interests, to say what portion of the fund Louisiana shall have. I would respectfully suggest to you that so far as Louisiana is concerned, the old practice should be returned to and the money Congress may think needed here be expressly appropriated and placed beyond the power of the officials in Washington to divert it to other surveying districts.

I would also suggest that the appropriation bill should provide that the money appropriated for this State, as well as sums deposited for surveys, under sections 2401, 2402, and 2403, of the Revised Statutes, should be employed in surveys or resurveys, according to the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. The reason for this is that such officer has recently originated a doubt, which never, during forty years of resurveying in this State, occurred to any one else, whether, under appropriations and deposits for surveys merely, he can lawfully pay for resurveys. And he has made it known that unless Congress does clearly grant the power to do so, he will after the current fiscal year refuse to exercise it. This would involve our State in a peculiar hardship, for reasons I will not now trouble you with. While in Washington, in December last, Hon. J. C. S. BLACKBURN, of the House Appropriations Committee, declared he would see to it, that these two points were duly guarded in the forthcoming bill if the Louisiana members should second the suggestions then made him by the writer and now repeated. There could be no objections to this it would seem, and it would in itself be manifestly just, and I therefore take the liberty to inclose a form in which to make the appropriations for Louisiana land surveys with a proviso that the money be used for surveys or resurveys, &c.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. BRADFORD.

Hon. J. H. ACKLEN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

The amendment of Mr. ACKLEN was agreed to.

Mr. BERRY. I move to amend the pending paragraph in lines 970, 971, and 972, as follows: In line 970, strike out "$16" and insert "$24;" in line 971, strike out "$14" and insert "$18," and in line 972, strike out "$10" and insert "$14." That portion of the paragraph will then read as follows:

Except that the Commissioner of the General Land Office may allow, for the survey of standard and meander lines through lands heavily timbered, mountainous, and covered with dense undergrowth, a sum not exceeding $24 per linear mile for standard lines, $18 for township, and $14 for section lines.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order that the amendment changes existing law.

Mr. BERRY. I wish the gentleman would reserve that point of order for a moment.

Mr. BLOUNT. Very well.

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, I think that no member who is at all acquainted with my course on this floor will charge me with being desirous to waste the public money. But, sir, we have appropriated $300,000 for the survey of the public lands; and it has been claimed on this floor that there is a class of lands known as timber lands which cannot be surveyed under the deposit system, but that we must make large appropriations to have those timber lands surveyed, so that persons desiring to purchase them may do so, instead of being compelled to go upon them in violation of law and steal the timber. Now, unless the fees allowed to deputy surveyors are sufficient to enable them to make the surveys, those timber lands will not be surveyed, it matters not what your appropriations may be. Large quantities of these lands are upon the mountains, and in many cases the forests have an undergrowth of brush as dense as the jungles of Africa; and when you confine the compensation for running the lines to $16 a mile, or $12 a mile, or $10 a mile, no deputy surveyor will undertake the work more than once. Even with regard to agricultural lands, where those desiring to settle are permitted to make deposits, the fees allowed to the deputy surveyors are often so small that the settlers are forced to give these officers an additional sum before they will undertake to survey the land. In one instance which I have now in my mind, where there was only part of a township to be surveyed, the settlers made the deposit, but the lands could not be surveyed until they gave the deputy surveyor a bonus of $300 in addition to the amount allowed to him by law.

Now, what I ask is that there shall be an additional allowance for running these standard and meander lines in localities where there are these dense forests, where there is this immense underbrush, where the chaparral covers our mountains and hill-sides, so that there must be a roadway before the surveying can be done. In many of our forests the trees are fifteen feet in diameter; and a line cannot be run any distance without making offsets. Why, sir, upon our coast, which is thickly settled, you cannot run a line for more than three or four chains without being compelled to take another course. Yet, sir, although the surveyor may be two or three days in running one or two miles, you allow him under the law only $16 a mile, or $12 a mile. An appropriation of this kind will be of no avail in many parts of the country, unless you place in the hands of the Commissioner a discretion under which, where the surveyor has his labors obstructed by dense forests, or by the chaparral on our mountain-sides, additional compensation may be allowed to the surveyor for his labor. Are you not willing to trust this discretion in the hands of the Commissioner of the General Land Office?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BLOUNT. I raise a question of order that this amendment changes the existing law as it has stood on the statute-book for many years.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would be glad to be informed whether the existing law provides that the expense of surveys shall not exceed a certain sum per mile.

Mr. BLOUNT. The law, as it has been for many years, provides——

Mr. KNOTT. I make the point of order that the gentleman from Georgia is too late with his point of order. When a point of order is made, it should be made promptly, and should be disposed of before debate upon the merits of the proposition is entered upon.

Mr. BLOUNT. I made the point of order as soon as the amendment was read, but reserved it at the request of the gentleman from California, [Mr. BERRY.]

Mr. KNOTT. If the point of order is not pressed when it is made, then it is waived. I want to reach a vote on the amendment and a vote on the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia, when the amendment had been read, reserved a point of order, in accordance with a practice which has prevailed universally without objection. The Chair asks the gentleman from Georgia to show what provision of existing law this amendment countervails.

Mr. BLOUNT. There has been for a number of years a law fixing the number of surveyors——

The CHAIRMAN. If the law provides that the compensation of the surveyors shall not exceed a certain sum or rate, the Chair would regard the amendment as liable to the point of order; but if surveys are authorized under a general system, and the amount to be allowed to the surveyors was fixed in the appropriation act of a former law, it would be competent, in the opinion of the Chair, for the Committee of the Whole to increase that allowance.

Mr. BLOUNT. I waive the point of order; let the amendment be voted on.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. BERRY, it was declared not agreed to.

Mr. BERRY. I ask for a division on this question. The amendment is manifestly just.

The question being again taken on the amendment, it was not agreed to; there being—ayes 10, noes not counted.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Commissioner of the General Land Office to continue to reproduce worn and defaced official plats of surveys now on file and constituting a part of the records of said office, $10,000.

Mr. CRAVENS. I submit the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Between lines 991 and 992 insert the following:

"For the improvement of Hot Springs Creek, within the limits of the permanent reservation at Hot Springs, Arkansas, the erection of a wall along its west bank, and for such other improvements of the reservation as may be necessary, the sum of $33,744.78, the amount received from the people of said town for rents, and covered into the Treasury, to be immediately available, and expended under the direction and supervision of the Department of the Interior."

Mr. BLOUNT. I raise the point of order that this amendment changes existing law. The law provides for the disposition in futuro of certain rents for improvements. This proposition proposes to take rents already covered into the Treasury and dispose of them in a manner not now provided by law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. CRAVENS] desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. CRAVENS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. The proposition of the gentleman from Arkansas refers to the proceeds of rents for certain lands at the Hot Springs, in Arkansas, heretofore received. The law related to rents which were to be received thereafter. The gentleman's proposition goes back of the statute and takes that which has already been collected and carried into the Treasury under the operation of previous laws. It is not germane to this bill. I will add also that there is a bill pending in the House for the same purpose, and on that ground it must be ruled out of order.

Mr. CRAVENS. I say, sir, there is no such bill. I defy the gentleman to produce any such bill. He is certainly mistaken about that.

It is true the amendment designates moneys heretofore collected and covered into the Treasury. Now, the gentleman from Georgia raises the point of order because of that designation. If the amendment had just appropriated $33,744.78 out of the Treasury, I presume it would not have been subject to the point of order, according to the logic of the gentleman.

But, sir, this is a public work. It is for a public object. The act of 1873 provides for the protection and improvement of the Hot Springs reservation in Arkansas. It is declared to be a public reservation, and that the rents arising therefrom are to be appropriated to that purpose. A subsequent act goes so far as to devote this Hot Springs to the people of the United States, and to declare these lands shall be forever inalienable. It appropriates the rents arising from leases for bath-houses, &c., to provide baths for the indigent poor of the whole country.

But, Mr. Chairman, the last act, and the one to which I call the attention of the Chair, appropriates to this Hot Springs reservation as a special fund the proceeds of the sales of the unawarded lands. And the Secretary of the Interior, in his letter to the House of Representatives on that subject, declares that for this public object there is no money on hand, and, therefore, makes the recommendation of the appropriation of this $33,744.78 now in the Treasury. It is designated because it got there in and through a means hitherto unknown in the history of the country. He sees the justice of the designation, particularly of this amount collected from the people there for rent.

The gentleman, however, raises the point of order on this amendment. But look at the succeeding section in this bill. What does it do? It appropriates $15,000 to the maintenance of the Yellowstone National Park to make a bridle-path for gentlemen of leisure, health, and wealth through that park. And here is an appropriation for this great public object, dedicated as it is to the indigent poor of this entire country, where persons may go, not in search of pleasure, but in search of health.

The point of order is made against it, and yet that appropriation has been made year after year since I have been here; and in this connection I desire to call the attention of the Chair to section 7 of the act approved June 16, 1880. It is as follows:

That that portion of the Hot Springs reservation laid off into lots and blocks and forming part of the town site, but not awarded to any claimants, and not otherwise disposed of or reserved by this act, shall be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at not less than its appraised value, to be made from time to time, at the discretion and under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and after public notice in the usual way in the sale of public lands; and the money arising from said sales, as well as any money paid in under section 1 of this act, shall be held as a special fund for the improvement and care of the permanent reservation at Hot Springs and of the Hot Springs Creek adjacent to and between the permanent reservations, and for the maintenance of free baths for the invalid poor of the United States, as provided by acts of Congress.

Now, the Secretary of the Interior in his letter, a copy of which I have, says by this act of Congress relating to the Hot Springs reservation in Arkansas of March 3, 1877, the Secretary of the Interior was authorized to use the money received for water rents for the protection and necessary improvement of the reservation. We only ask in this amendment the appropriation of money received for rents from houses erected on these public lands. Forty-five thousand dollars was collected; but the amount designated in my amendment was the amount covered into the Treasury.

What objection can there be to it? Is it not for a public object? Has not Congress made appropriation already of these proceeds? Has not Congress declared its purpose to be to make this a resort for the invalid poor of this country? It is a far stronger case than the one presented to the Chair the other day—the Baltimore case. I think there can be no question about it.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman commenced the letter from the Department of the Interior, but only read a portion of it. The material point upon the issue between him and myself he did not read. I will read it. I will commence with the beginning of the letter so it may be understood. The Secretary says:

By the act of Congress relating to the Hot Springs reservation approved March 3, 1877, the Secretary of the Interior was authorized to use the money received for water rents for the protection and necessary improvement of the reservation, and at the date of this act the receiver appointed by this Court of Claims under the act of June 11, 1870, had collected the sum of $30,744.78 for rents, which amount was covered into the Treasury of the United States. Further improvement is very desirable for which there is no fund on hand.

Now, the gentleman says we have been appropriating year after year for this purpose. In that regard he is mistaken. The water rents come by virtue of the statute which he has read. It accomplishes its own purpose. It requires no intervention of Congress from year to year.

Mr. CRAVENS. Will the gentleman allow me——

Mr. BLOUNT. The object of the gentleman is to pass away from the purpose of Congress in reference to the reservation, to pass away from the operation of that act, to get behind it, and to reach the rents received before the law was passed. He cannot do so without new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to decide the question. He holds that this amendment contemplating the withdrawal of the money which has been covered into the Treasury now belonging to the General Government and which does not belong to the Hot Springs is a change of existing law and not in the way of reduction of expenditure and is, therefore, not in order. If it were in reference to rents to accrue hereafter the decision might be different.

Mr. CRAVENS. While I have the greatest respect for the opinion of the Chair, yet I desire to appeal from that decision.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas appeals from the decision of the Chair. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 71, noes 9.

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to protect, preserve, and improve the Yellowstone National Park in compliance with section 2475 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, $15,000.

Mr. CRAVENS. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order upon that paragraph of the bill which has just been read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas will state his point of order.

Mr. CRAVENS. The point I make is under section 2475 of the Revised Statutes. This is exactly an analogous case to the one presented in relation to the Hot Springs, and for that reason it is subject to the same point of order that was made and sustained against the amendment in reference to that reservation. I will read the section of the statutes which refers to this.

The CHAIRMAN. What park does the statute refer to? Is it a special act?

Mr. CRAVENS. The park referred to in this paragraph of the bill.

Mr. VALENTINE. Let the Clerk read it.

Mr. CRAVENS. I will read it myself. It is as follows:

SEC. 2475. Such public park shall be under the exclusive control of the Secretary of the Interior, whose duty it shall be, as soon as practicable, to make and publish such regulations as he may deem necessary or proper for the care and management of the same. Such regulations shall provide for the preservation, from injury or spoliation, of all timber, mineral deposits, natural curiosities, or wonders, within the park, and their retention in their natural condition. The Secretary may, in his discretion, grant leases for building purposes, for terms not exceeding ten years, of small parcels of grounds, at such places in the park as may require the erection of buildings for the accommodation of visitors; all of the proceeds of such leases, and all other revenues that may be derived from any source connected with the park, to be expended under his direction in the management of the same, and the construction of roads and bridle-paths therein. He shall provide against the wanton destruction of the fish and game found within the park, and against their capture or destruction for the purposes of merchandise or profit. He shall also cause all persons trespassing upon the same to be removed therefrom, and generally is authorized to take all such measures as may be necessary or proper to fully carry out the objects and purposes of this section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair asked the gentleman whether the law to which he referred was a special law in regard to the Yellowstone Park or whether it was a general law affecting all parks of the United States.

Mr. CRAVENS. This is a law referring to the Yellowstone Park, the section which I have just read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. CRAVENS. I was about to withdraw the point of order. I simply wanted it stated in order to have this section of the law read to the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

Tenth census: For engraving and printing, $125,000.

Mr. DUNNELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the word "five," in line 1013, in order that I may ask the gentleman from Georgia in charge of this bill a question in relation to the publication to be made of the tenth census.

This section provides for engraving, &c., $125,000. I have not before me the Book of Estimates, and therefore I want to inquire whether this amount or any part of it is to be expended in publishing the appendix to the census?

Mr. BLOUNT. No, sir.

Mr. DUNNELL. Or only applies to the volumes reported from the Committee on Printing of the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. This I do not understand to refer to the volumes at all. It refers to the current work of the bureau, to the work now going on. Certain work of this character is necessary during the current proceedings of that bureau, and this has no reference to printing the volumes which the gentleman from Minnesota refers to.

Mr. DUNNELL. I withdraw my amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the completion of the tenth census, including the compilation and publication of its results, $500,000; and not exceeding $5,000 of said amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be used for payment of rent of buildings in Washington, District of Columbia, for use of the Census Office.

Mr. BLOUNT. I offer an amendment from the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1016, after the word "dollars," where it first occurs, insert the words "to be immediately available."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DUNNELL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Georgia whether he has any information to give to the committee as to the manner in which the results of the tenth census are to be communicated.

This amendment says that $500,000 is appropriated for the completion of the census, including the compilation and publication of its results. Now, I wish to ask in what manner the results of the tenth census are to be given to the country. Are we to have them as we had them in the census of 1870, in the shape of an appendix, and after the character of the large volumes referred to by the Committee on Printing a few days ago? I do not see the chairman of the Committee on Printing here, or possibly he might be able to give me the information himself.

Mr. BLOUNT. This appropriation of $500,000 refers to a great number of estimates which are received from that bureau, and which I hold in my hands, embracing a variety of objects. It will take some time to read them, but the committee thought that the amount appropriated here was ample, and yet was sufficiently limited.

Mr. DUNNELL. But this seems to be for the publication of the results.

Mr. BLOUNT. That is but a small part of the expenses.

Mr. DUNNELL. Now, what I want to know from the gentleman from Georgia is, how these results are to be published; that is what I want to get at. How they are to be communicated to the country.

Mr. BLOUNT. The estimates of the Department will show the amount that they have inserted in those estimates for each of these purposes. The communication shows that the great bulk of the fund is simply designed for the extension of their inquiries.

Mr. HAWLEY. Completion of their inquiries.

Mr. DUNNELL. A day or two ago, when the Committee on Printing reported a bill for printing the quarto volumes, it occurred to me then to ask the question whether, as in times past, we were to have a popular edition of the census, a compendium.

Mr. HAYES. I will inform the gentleman we are.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. HAYES,] of the Committee on Printing, answers the question that there is to be such a compendium. That question was not raised with our committee. The great urgency, as I have already stated, for the appropriation involved the other question.

Mr. DUNNELL. I would further ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES] whether there is any bill pending before the Committee on Printing providing for this?

Mr. HAYES. This House passed a bill only two or three days ago which provided for printing 50,000 copies of the quarto edition. In addition to that, it provided for printing in certain numbers statistics in regard to manufactures, in regard to raising cotton, and other matters, which General Walker is to get up. General Walker being before the Joint Committee on Printing the other day made a statement of what he desired. Not only did he want that quarto printed, but he also proposed to get up a compendium which would be printed some time during the summer, and in addition to that he proposes to select out some of the statistics, and publish them in a still more condensed form than in a compendium.

Mr. DUNNELL. Does General Walker understand that out of this $500,000 he is to print this compendium?

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman will allow me I will answer he does not.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Minnesota propose an amendment?

Mr. DUNNELL. For the purpose of these inquiries I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. BLOUNT. This is simply intended for the publication of the results for their own use, as the work is in progress. It does not relate to what the gentleman from Minnesota speaks of. The communication shows that.

Mr. DUNNELL. It occurred to me the other day, when we provided for the publication in quarto form we did little more than provide for the libraries of the country, and that some time there should be an appropriation, and a liberal appropriation, for the publication of a compendium, a popular volume that may be distributed among the people, because the 50,000 volumes would go no further than to supply the libraries of the country. There ought to be a smaller edition or volume, such as the compendium of the last census, which might be sent more generally through the country.

Mr. WARNER. The compendium would be the last thing published.

Mr. DUNNELL. Not necessarily.

Mr. WARNER. Before publishing the compendium it would be necessary to wait till the results were all in a complete form.

Mr. DUNNELL. I wanted to know if we were committing ourselves to the printing of a compendium in a comparatively small quantity.

Mr. MONROE. Not at all.

Mr. DUNNELL. I wanted to know if we were tying ourselves up to a small edition of a compendium.

Mr. BLOUNT. We are not. The estimate itself does not provide for a publication of any such volume.

The Clerk read the following:

Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb:

Current expenses, Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb: For support of the institution, including salaries and incidental expenses, and $500 for books and illustrative apparatus, and $2,500 for general repairs, $53,500.

Mr. SAMFORD. I make the point of order on that paragraph that it is not in the line of retrenchment. At the same time, I will say if the paragraph could be amended so as to be made in accordance with existing law, I would not insist on the point of order. It changes existing law in this respect: it is one of the institutions of the District which the law requires to be estimated for by the commissioners, the District of Columbia being required to pay one-half of the expense, while this provides that the Government of the United States shall pay the whole of it.

Mr. BLOUNT. If the gentleman will read a little further he will find there is a provision which is intended to be applicable to both sections; a proviso that hereafter one-half of the expense of this institution shall be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

Mr. SAMFORD. I saw that proviso to the next paragraph; but even if it refers to the paragraph under consideration it does not meet the objection I have made, because it merely provides that hereafter one-half of the expense of this institution shall be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia. Now, what are the revenues of the District of Columbia? They are made up of the one-half which the Government of the United States pays, and the one-half which is paid by the District.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let me suggest to my friend from Alabama there is not a great deal of difference between himself and the committee. If my friend would amend by saying one-half of this sum shall be paid out of the treasury of the District of Columbia, and one-half out of the Treasury of the United States, and hereafter the expenses shall be paid in that way, I would have no objection to that amendment.

Mr. SAMFORD. I have here an amendment which I think will meet the point. I send it to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add at the end of the paragraph the following:

"Provided, That the said sum shall be credited as a payment on the one-half of the amount to be paid by the United States for the current expenses of the District of Columbia."

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to say on the point of order raised by the gentleman from Alabama that it is an entire mistake to suppose that this is an institution of the District of Columbia. I have taken pains to look up the law originating this institution, and it is to all intents and purposes an institution of the Federal Government incorporated by act of Congress, the report of the directors of the institution made to the Secretary of the Interior, and no sort of concern in its government or management is allowed to the District of Columbia.

It is true that the Secretary of the Interior, in the law which I have before me—I will read that law for the information of the committee:

That whenever the Secretary of the Interior shall be satisfied, by evidence produced by the president of the institution hereby incorporated, that any deaf and dumb or blind person of suitable age belonging to this District is in indigent circumstances and cannot command the means to procure an education, it shall be his duty to authorize such person to enter said institution for instruction, and to pay for his maintenance and tuition therein at the rate of $150 per annum.

It will be seen by reference to this law that the deaf and dumb and the blind actually belonging to the District of Columbia cannot enter this institution without the authority of an act of Congress and action taken by the Secretary of the Interior under the law.

I will state further that never in the history of legislation has one dollar of the expense of the maintenance of this institution been charged upon the District of Columbia. It is true that at the last session of Congress a proviso was inserted by the Committee on Appropriations in this very sundry civil appropriation bill charging one-half of the expenses of this institution to the District of Columbia, and by a vote of more than two to one of this very House that proviso was stricken out, because it was a Federal institution to be supported by Federal contributions and nothing else.

If my friend from Alabama [Mr. SAMFORD] is right, let us see the effect of what he desires to have done. This bill appropriates $63,742 for the buildings and the maintaining and support of this institution. According to the proviso at the end of another paragraph and according to the views of the gentleman from Alabama, one-half of that amount would be chargeable to the District of Columbia. That is, the District of Columbia would be forced to pay $36,871 for the maintenance and instruction of twenty-seven pupils in that institution, or at the rate of nearly fifteen hundred dollars a year for each pupil. The law says that the District of Columbia shall not be charged more than $150 for each pupil.

According to the views of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SAMFORD] the District of Columbia must pay one-half of the expense of the buildings and one-half of the repairs. Yet, while the District is paying for the buildings and the repairs of the buildings, when erected and repaired those buildings belong to the Federal Government. There is no justice in it, no law in it. The law now makes this a Federal institution to be appropriated for and supported out of the Federal Treasury.

Mr. SAMFORD. What law?

Mr. HUNTON. The law organizing this institution. And when the next paragraph is reached I will move, as I did last year, to strike out the proviso which puts one-half of the expense of this instituton on this District.

Mr. BLOUNT. I might as well say here what I desire the committee to understand in relation to this deaf and dumb institution. I ask the attention of the committee to the law regulating it.

I am surprised—no, not surprised either—but I cannot conceive how my friend from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] can permit such reasons as he has urged to have effect upon his mind in relation to this matter.

What is this deaf and dumb institution? If the buildings do belong to the Government the Government bought the land—though I believe a portion of the land was given to the Government—the Government pays the expenses for improvement and repairs; the Government pays all the expenses of the institution; and who are the beneficiaries? Do they include any human being outside of this District? There are two classes of persons, and two alone, who can obtain permission into this institution. I ask the committee to listen while I read the law:

Whenever the Secretary of the Interior is satisfied, by evidence produced by the president of the Columbia Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, that any deaf and dumb person of teachable age, properly belonging to the District of Columbia, is in indigent circumstances and cannot command the means to secure an education it shall be his duty to authorize such person to enter the institution.

That is one class. Now, another class:

Deaf mutes, not exceeding forty in number, residing in the several States and Territories, applying for admission to the collegiate department of the Columbia Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb shall be received on the same terms and conditions as those prescribed by law for the residents of the District of Columbia, at the discretion of the president of the institution; but no student coming from either of the States shall be supported by the United States during any portion of the time he remains therein.

If he comes from any other section of the country, the expense does not come out of the District, and does not come out of the General Government, but must be paid by the friends of the student. And only forty of such students can be admitted. The institution is therefore essentially an institution for the District of Columbia and for the people of this District.

And when we have gone beyond what is our just proportion of the expense, and have paid all the expense of maintaining this institution, my friend from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] says that we ought to go further. He says, "You have already given us the building; now, because you have been liberal in that particular, you ought to go on and pay every dollar for the support of this institution."

I conceive that when this committee comes to understand the proposition it will not hesitate to say that the people of this District ought to pay one-half of the expense of this institution. The gentleman says the law does not authorize that. If it does not authorize it now, it is competent for us to enact such legislation and insert it here, reducing expenditures on the part of the Government. I trust that this abuse will no longer continue.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. If any gentleman will consult the Congressional Globe and the RECORD for the last fifteen years, he will wonder that this discussion annually arises.

After long and careful investigation, after a long debate, the character and policy of this national institution were established. And among the present directors of this institution, under its charter, are Senators BAYARD and DAWES, Representatives HARRIS and CLAFLIN, and Judge Niblack, formerly a member of this House, and others. It is a national institution, not a local primary school. There was an institution of that sort here many years ago, which gave up its property and rights, and merged itself in this national school.

Now, the law does provide, of course, that forty pupils from outside of the District, residing in the various States and Territories, may be admitted on the same charitable terms as pupils within the District. But there is nothing forbidding any number of pupils coming here from any part of the country.

Let me explain how the necessity for this school arises. A great many States have large and admirably conducted institutions for the primary instruction of the deaf and dumb. They carry a pupil up to the standard of a common-school education, possibly something more than that. But many of the deaf and dumb are persons who deserve and will repay a much higher education. But what State or what private association can provide a college for five or ten such persons in a State? When you take the United States at large, you can collect in a national institution such of this unfortunate class as ought to have a collegiate or university education. This national institution supplies that want. Its character and policy have been stated time and again. There are twenty-seven pupils from the District of Columbia, only four of whom are in the collegiate or university department. The others are mere primary scholars, such as we find in all of our local schools. Now, if you saddle the expenses of half of these upon the District of Columbia, you make the expense to the District for these twenty-seven pupils, twenty-three of whom are merely primary, $2,333 each for the year. Nothing could be more unjust.

The pupils from outside number more than forty. Forty of them have all the privileges of the local pupils as to allowances; but all these from outside provide their own clothing, pay for their own books, stationery, and incidental expenses; they are all required to provide for themselves during the summer vacation, which continues during the months of July, August, and September; all of them meet their own traveling expenses incurred in going to and from their homes at vacation, some of them coming from distant places. The Revised Statutes are not to be construed as forbidding the directors to render assistance to needy and worthy deaf mutes by an abatement or remission of the ordinary charges for tuition. That has been the practice in all cases properly recommended to them, so far as the means at their own disposal will allow; and they are required to do it by the first part of section 4865 of the Revised Statutes.

Now, it has been said that some pupils have been admitted contrary to law. I am authorized by the highly respectable and responsible gentlemen connected with the management of this institution (some of whom I have known from boyhood) to deny this. They would court investigation upon any intimation that they have deviated a hair's breadth from the law.

During the past year the president of that institution has received requests from twenty-two members of Congress for the admission of bright young pupils from their respective States, persons who had already received a primary education and desired to be admitted to this collegiate institution and enjoy the usual advantages offered to indigent pupils—some remission, I suppose, of the tuition charges, or something of that kind. All ordinary pupils pay the expenditures to which I have made reference.

I say that the amendment ought not to be adopted, and that the proviso in the bill beginning in the one thousand and forty-fourth line ought to be struck out, because its adoption would be a radical departure from what has been the policy of the Government for many years past, and would impose a grossly unjust burden upon the District.

Mr. SAMFORD. Mr. Chairman, I am not familiar with previous legislation upon this subject; but it might be a sufficient answer to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] to say that the organic law now in force, passed only two years ago, with reference to this District makes perhaps a radical departure necessary. That organic law, among other things, for the first time in our history imposed upon the General Government one-half the expenses of this District, and requires the commissioners of the District to estimate the cost of maintaining all public institutions of charity, reformatories, and prisons belonging to or controlled in whole or in part by the District of Columbia and which are now by law supported wholly or in part by the United States or the District of Columbia. These estimates are to be revised by the Secretary of the Treasury and afterward transmitted by the commissioners to Congress; and then the law provides that "to the extent to which Congress shall approve of said estimates Congress shall appropriate the amount of 50 per cent. thereof." The remaining 50 per cent. is to be levied and assessed upon the taxable property of the District.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not understand by what authority my friend from Virginia says this is a United States Government institution. I find by referring to the act incorporating the institution that it is entirely a private institution, that the Government of the United States has not the right and does not pretend to take charge of it in any shape or form. Why then, shall the Government support it? No deaf and dumb child from any of the States has any right to enter that institution without paying his way and cannot, under law, under any circumstances be a charge upon the Government of the United States.

Mr. NEAL. What does he pay?

Mr. SAMFORD. I say he does not come unless he does pay his own expenses for tuition——

Mr. NEAL. How much?

Mr. SAMFORD. I do not know.

Mr. NEAL. About one nundred and fifty dollars.

Mr. SAMFORD. If I am to understand my friend from Ohio [Mr. NEAL] as proposing to make this appropriation because the amount which pupils from outside of the District of Columbia are required to pay by the rules of the institution is not sufficient, then I say that the law on the statute-book forbids such a law, and that, too, in direct and emphatic terms. The act says that no student coming from any State shall be supported by the United States during any portion of the time he remains in the institution. If, therefore, it is intended by this appropriation to supplement what gentlemen may conceive to be too small a charge for the care and tuition of pupils by an appropriation from the public Treasury, I say such a proposition violates that provision of the law.

Mr. Chairman, at the instance of the gentleman from Georgia, I do not intend to insist upon the point of order, though I think under a point of order it would go out; but I know its stay out would only be temporary. I am willing this measure should stand or fall upon its merits, and I will leave it with the House to decide on my amendment. I say this is an institution providing alone for the benefit of the District of Columbia, providing for the deaf and dumb children of the District of Columbia alone and exclusively, giving no benefits to any other portion of the country. And while these unfortunate little children have my hearty and cordial sympathy in their misfortune, still it does seem to me the District of Columbia ought to pay for a part of its expense at least. The Government of the United States, under the organic law, for which I am not responsible, and which I think is wrong, pays for one-half of the expenses in this District.

I ask the gentleman on what ground of equity, much less of law, he would contend that the Government of the United States ought to pay for the whole of this? It has not been estimated for by the estimates of the District commissioners. It comes here in the bill. It should be in the bill for the District of Columbia, but it has not been provided for in that bill, and therefore the necessity of my amendment that this amount should be credited to the one-half of the expenses of the District government which is paid by the Government of the United States.

Mr. HUNTON. I will say a word on the point of order.

Mr. SAMFORD. I withdraw the point of order, but I ask for a vote on my amendment.

It does seem to me that there ought to be some end to this everlasting drain from the United States Treasury. This city is getting millions of dollars annually from this Government, making itself a grand, imperial city at the expense of the whole people of the country—$900,000 is appropriated for paving the streets alone. But I have long since found that it is easier to get this House to vote in than to vote out of a bill an amendment appropriating money. I do not understand why, but this is true.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Alabama will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 1038 insert the following:

"Provided, That said sum shall be credited to the payment of one-half of the amount to be paid by the United States for the current expenses of the District of Columbia."

Mr. HUNTON. It is true, as the gentleman from Alabama has stated, that this is a private institution in one sense of the word. It began with a body of incorporators who were incorporated by Congress to carry on an institution for the education of the deaf and dumb. And it was located in the District of Columbia. I take it for granted that every corporation that is thus domiciled in the District of Columbia is not necessarily an institution belonging to the District government. In that sense, therefore, this is a private institution.

It is also true, for one cause or another which it is not necessary in this discussion for me to inquire into, that the Government of the United States has undertaken to appropriate year by year large sums of money for the support, at least in part, of this private corporation.

Mr. SAMFORD. Is it not controlled in part by the Government?

Mr. HUNTON. Not in any particular.

Mr. SAMFORD. Does not the Secretary of the Interior give permits?

Mr. HUNTON. I misunderstood the gentleman. Did you say by the District?

Mr. SAMFORD. No, sir; but by the Government in part.

Mr. HUNTON. Yes; it is.

Mr. SAMFORD. Then I ask, under the organic law, whether——

Mr. HUNTON. The gentleman must excuse me, as I have only five minutes.

Now, the Government of the United States, in incorporating this institution, provided the terms under which the deaf and dumb should be admitted into it. It had the right so to prescribe. When this was placed under the agency of the Secretary of the Interior Congress thought proper, as a matter of generosity to this afflicted class of the community, to pay most of the expense of the institution. But I will say to my friend from Alabama, as well as to my friend from Georgia, never until the last session was it ever supposed this institution came within that provision of the law providing for the sharing of the expenses of the District government between the United States and the District of Columbia.

The gentleman from Alabama read an extract from the organic law of this District, and he no doubt read it accurately, in reference to the institutions in the District which were to be supported by the District of Columbia and the Government conjointly. If my friend will look to the construction of the language, and he is a lawyer, he will be satisfied that this institution never was intended to come within its meaning. He cannot put any such construction upon that statute. I wish to call attention to the language, because I am sure if that organic act does not number this institutiou within its terms my friend from Alabama will not insist further on his amendment. I can assure him that if he will sit down quietly and read that act and apply the law governing this institution he will conclude that it does not come within forty miles of this provision. What does that organic act say. That the said commissioners shall submit to the Secretary of the Treasury for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, and annually thereafter for his examination and approval, a statement showing in detail—I will here skip a portion and come to that which is pertinent to the subject under consideration—showing in detail the cost of continuing the public institutions of charity, reformatories, and prisons belonging to or controlled by, wholly or in part, the District of Columbia, and which are now by law supported, wholly or in part, by the United States or District of Columbia. My friend from Alabama will see that in order to bring this institution under the terms of the act it must belong to or be controlled wholly or in part by the District of Columbia. Now there is no man on the floor of this House who will undertake to say that institution at the date of this act or at any period of its existence belonged wholly or in part, or was controlled wholly or in part, by the District of Columbia. There can be no pretense of that sort. There is nothing in the original act of incorporation or acts amendatory thereto which gives the control or ownership wholly or in part to the District of Columbia; and if I am right, and I know I am, I sincerely believe the gentleman will agree with me that the amendment is not proper or just.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HAWLEY. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. HAWLEY. I yield to my friend from Ohio on the committee; I did not observe that he was about to address the committee.

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Chairman, if the committee clearly understood this question I doubt very much whether there would be a half dozen members on this floor on either side of the House who would be willing to place themselves on record as sustaining the motion made by the gentleman from Alabama.

It has been already said by my colleague on the Committee on the District of Columbia, the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. HUNTON,] that this is not in any sense of the word a District institution, and he has read from the organic law in support of that statement.

Now, I want to call the attention of the committee for a while to some facts and figures bearing upon this point which will show, I undertake to say, clearly and unequivocally to the mind of any gentleman upon this floor the gross injustice which will be perpetrated upon the people of this District if the committee agree to adopt the amendment which the gentleman proposes.

There is a list of one hundred and twenty-eight pupils in that institution during the last year. Mr. Chairman, of this number twenty-seven only were from the District of Columbia.

Out of the one hundred and twenty-eight pupils gathered together from all the States and Territories of the Union twenty-seven only were from the District of Columbia, and of the sum that was collected for board and education, according to the report of the president of the board of directors of that institution, there was only $1,601 collected outside of this District. In other words, the States and Territories of this Union sent their pupils here, one hundred in number, at a total cost to the whole country of $1,600, for their year's board and education, while the few students from the District of Columbia who were placed in that institution paid the sum of about thirty-two thousand dollars, and for only twenty-seven persons. Is that justice? Is that what you call right?

Mr. BLOUNT. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. NEAL. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask the gentleman if there is any law fixing the amount that these persons are required to pay? And I wish to ask him if he does not know that if they do not pay a sufficient sum it is the fault of the administration of the institution itself?

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Chairman, I will answer the gentleman by saying that this is under the control of the Federal officials and not under control of the District.

Mr. BLOUNT. If that is the only difficulty, let me say to my friend from Ohio it can very easily be regulated; they can fix a price that will cover the expense.

Mr. NEAL. I wish to call the attention of this committee and of Congress to the injustice that this Committee on Appropriations propose to perpetrate upon the people of this District by saddling upon them in this appropriation bill an expense of $32,000 for the care and education of twenty-seven students, or at a rate of nearly twelve hundred dollars a year for each, while the people of this whole country, from all of the States and the Territories, pay but $1,600 for the privilege of keeping one hundred students there.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to call the attention of the committee to another thing. In the regulations for this institution I find a regulation as follows:

The charge for pay pupils is $150 per annum.

But the gentleman from Alabama would make this committee believe that it is right that the students of the District of Columbia ought to pay an admission of almost $1,200 a year while the students who come here from all other parts of the country are allowed to come in at an expense of $150 a year. And the amount collected does not even reach that.

Mr. BLOUNT. There is not a dollar paid by a student from this District.

Mr. NEAL. But the gentleman proposes that they shall pay, and he wants to make it the amount that I have shown.

Mr. BLOUNT. They do not pay a dollar; not a dollar.

Mr. NEAL. You propose to levy on the property of the District of Columbia, on the citizens of this District a sufficient sum of money to make up this balance of $32,000 of the expenses of this institution, which is an average of $1,200 for each student who is sent there.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I trust that no member of this committee will sustain any such proposition as that. There is such a thing as fair dealing toward this District, and I sincerely hope that it will be exhibited in this matter; and that this committee will not in this way saddle upon the people of this District an expense which is so exorbitant and unjust as that.

Mr. SAMFORD. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. SAMFORD. I only want to ask a single question.

Mr. NEAL. My time is out.

Mr. SAMFORD. It is very well that it is out, for the gentleman could not answer the question, I imagine.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. HAWLEY. I can strike out the last word, I suppose, by way of amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. HAWLEY. I wish to say a single word and then let the proposition go to the Committee.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. I believe the only matter before the committee is an amendment of the gentleman from Alabama?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will not detain the committee a moment. I desire merely to call attention to the catalogue of the students of this institution, which shows that they come from twenty-five different States.

The question being taken on Mr. SAMFORD'S amendment, the Chair stated that in the opinion of the Chair the "noes" had it.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for a division, and ask that the amendment be again read.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. HUNTON. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 77.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

Buildings and grounds, Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb: For the completion and fitting-up of the gymnasium, $8,242.07; for the erection of a farm-barn, $2,000; in all, $10,242.07: Provided, That hereafter one-half of the expenses of this institution shall be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

Mr. CLAFLIN. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1043, after the word "dollars," insert "for the building and repair of fences, $4,000."

Mr. BLOUNT. The sub-committee rejected that, and I hope the House will not agree to it.

Mr. CLAFLIN. The trustees of the institution say this is needed. This is a large institution having a considerable plot of ground, and in the neighborhood there is an increasing population which makes it necessary that a proper fence should be put up.

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. HUNTON. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the proviso beginning in line 1044, namely, these words:
"Provided, That hereafter one-half of the expenses of this institution shall be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia."

Mr. HUNTON. This question was fully discussed a while ago, and I do not care to say anything on it unless discussion is wanted on the other side.

Mr. BLOUNT. This proviso, as my friend from Virginia has stated, contains substantially the same idea as the amendment we have just been discussing. I will repeat in part what I said in connection with that amendment. The section of the statutes to which I referred, provides that two classes of persons may enter this institution. In the first place, there are the indigent deaf and dumb of the District of Columbia, who are paid for at the public expense. And then forty persons from the other States and Territories may be educated, but their expenses, it is provided, shall be paid by their own friends. This proviso does not change the law, and I trust the House will see fit to sustain the Committee on Appropriations in incorporating it in this bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. This is substantially the proposition which has just been voted down by the House. This country has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on its insane institutions. It has spent enormous sums for education of various kinds. The Government began seventy years ago to make national appropriations to educate the deaf and dumb. The first school in the country for their education was established in my own town, on my own street, and the Government gave a large grant of land to support it, and it is now called the American Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb. It afterward became a local institution, but still has the benefit of the land given by the Government. It is a policy seventy years old.

I hold in my hand a catalogue of the Columbia Institution, in this city, and, as I have said, its pupils come from twenty-five States in this Union. In every respect it is a national institution.

There are many States in the Union that still send deaf and dumb pupils to the institution in Hartford, my own town. The rights of most of the States in regard to it have been relinquished; but Maine and Massachusetts and some other States still send pupils to that institution.

The Columbia Institution is supported in continuation of the national policy adopted seventy years ago, when the institution was established at Hartford; a policy of supporting a national college for deaf and dumb pupils, because there were not enough deaf and dumb pupils in any one of the States to support one such institution.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman from Connecticut has referred to the institution for the insane across the river. How is it in regard to that institution? Its main object is to provide an asylum for the insane of the Army and Navy, the marine and the revenue cutter service. There are in it, coming from all over the land outside of this District, eight hundred and ninety-two inmates, while there are only three hundred and seventy-four from the District of Columbia. It is open to the insane all over this land belonging to the Army and Navy, and to the marine and revenue cutter service. But in regard to this Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, it is provided for the indigent deaf and dumb of the District of Columbia, and all others are excluded, excepting forty persons from the various States and Territories, who are required to pay or have their expenses paid by their friends. The statute expressly declares that the Government of the United States shall not pay any part of the sum.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to say only a few words, and I shall detain the committee a shorter period on account of the debate which has been had upon the principle involved in this amendment that arose on the amendment of the gentleman from Alabama, [Mr. SAMFORD.] It has been provided by the rules of this House that appropriations for every purpose for the District of Columbia shall be made in a bill coming from the Committee on Appropriations, known as the District appropriation bill. That bill has been considered and has been passed upon by this House. And I undertake to say, in my opinion, a great many things of this sort which have been saddled upon the District of Columbia ought not to have been so saddled.

Mr. SAMFORD. I desire to ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. HUNTON. I have only five minutes.

Mr. SAMFORD. I am aware of that. I wish to ask the gentleman if nobody but the deaf and dumb of the District of Columbia is entitled to go into that institution except forty persons from the States and Territories, and they pay their own way, why should not the District pay one-half the expenses?

Mr. HUNTON. It is not fair the gentleman from Alabama should rise and ask me a question in the midst of my remarks on a point I have not yet arrived at.

Mr. SAMFORD. I did not know you were coming to that.

Mr. HUNTON. Yes, but I have not yet arrived at it. I say that all the objects for the support of which the District of Columbia ought to contribute were exhausted in the District of Columbia appropriation bill. I cannot imagine why this matter is inserted in the sundry civil bill, especially when the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] knows as well as I do that the same attempt was made in a similar bill a year ago by the same committee, and it was voted down in the House by more than two to one.

The gentleman says that these people are to be supported by the District. The law says exactly the contrary. I will read from section 4869:

Whenever the Secretary of the Interior is satisfied, by evidence produced by the president of the Columbia Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, that any blind person of a teachable age cannot command the means to secure an education, he may cause such person to be instructed in some institution for the education of the blind, in Maryland, or some other State, at a cost not greater for each pupil than is, or may be for the time being, paid by such State, and to cause the same to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. SAMFORD. That is when they go somewhere else than the District. Now read section——

Mr. HUNTON. I will read just what I desire to support my argument. I do not choose to take up my time in reading what I do not consider relevant. If the gentleman thinks it is relevant, let him read it in his own time.

The law provides that when these pupils arrive at teachable age they shall be sent out of the District if there is no room for them in the institution here, and that the cost of the tuition and maintenance of those so sent shall be paid out of the Treasury of the United States. This demonstrates, according to the doctrine laid down by my friend from Connecticut, [Mr. HAWLEY,] that this is a charity which the Federal Government designs to pay for.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The question was taken upon the motion of Mr. HUNTON to strike out the proviso; and upon a division there were—ayes 77, noes 48.

No further count being called for, the proviso was stricken out.

Mr. BLOUNT. I give notice that I shall ask a yea-and-nay vote on this in the House.

Mr. WILLIS. I move to insert after the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk as an independent paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

To carry into effect the provisions of section 1753 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, $25,000.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not know whether a point of order would lie against that amendment or not. Nobody can tell from the reading of it what it will accomplish if adopted.

Mr. WILLIS. I will ask to have the section of the Revised Statutes referred to in the amendment read by the Clerk.

Mr. ROBINSON. And as a matter of precaution, I will reserve all points of order until that section is read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1753. The President is authorized to prescribe such regulations for the admission of persons into the civil service of the United States as may best promote the efficiency thereof, and ascertain the fitness of each candidate in respect to age, health, character, knowledge, and ability for the branch of service into which he seeks to enter; and for this purpose he may employ suitable persons to conduct such inquiries, and may prescribe their duties, and establish regulations for the conduct of persons who may receive appointments in the civil service.

Mr. WILLIS. I suppose no point of order will lie against that amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. I make no point of order against it.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I tried to listen to the amendment, so as to understand and catch the drift of it. I ask that it be again read.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken; and there were 39 in the affirmative.

Before the negative vote was counted,

Mr. WILLIS said: I desire a moment to explain the amendment.

Mr. BRAGG. I make the point of order that the committee is dividing on the amendment.

Mr. WILLIS. I am sure the gentleman will not make a point of order on the amendment if he hears my explanation.

Mr. BRAGG. I only make the point of order that the committee is dividing.

Mr. WILLIS. The gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. ROBINSON,] as I understood, reserved all points of order on the amendment until the section of the Revised Statutes had been read. I took my seat until he made his point of order, intending to explain the amendment, when the point of order was passed upon by the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts made no point of order, and therefore the Chair did not rule upon it. After a considerable pause the Chair submitted the question upon the amendment.

Mr. WILLIS. I was under the impression that a point of order was pending. I wanted to reserve to myself the right, which I do not often exercise in this House, of briefly explaining to the committee the purport of the amendment. I am sure that no gentleman will interpose an objection to my doing so.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the circumstances the Chair will ask consent for the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] to make an explanation of his amendment. The Chair thinks it is due to him.

There was no objection.

Mr. WILLIS. That section, Mr. Chairman, is now the existing law. The act which it embodies was passed the 3d day of March, 1871. It went into effect January 1, 1872. Under it a commission, known as the civil-service commission, was created, with Hon. D. B. Eaton as president. The commission made a most interesting and instructive report upon the "theory, methods, and results of the reform" introduced under the law. This report was made April 15, 1874. The commission is still in existence. On the 25th June, 1877, President Hayes, through Mr. Evarts, the Secretary of State, requested Mr. Eaton, chairman of the civil-service commission, "to investigate and make a report to him concerning the action of the English Government in relation to its civil service and the effects of such action since 1850." In obedience to this request Mr. Eaton, on the 10th November, 1879, made a most exhaustive report to the second session of this Congress. It is Executive Document No. 1, part 7.

The law as set forth in section 1753 is, I repeat, now in existence. It has neither been amended nor repealed. The commission appointed by the President is also in existence. The amendment I have offered simply proposes to appropriate the amount to execute the law and pay the commissioners. Why should this not be done?

Why should not the officers of this commission and the expenses which it involves be paid? Can any member of this committee give a satisfactory answer to that question? Would any gentleman here refuse to vote money to pay the salaries of our district or supreme judges, our revenue collectors, or territorial governors? And yet, I submit that these officers have no better legal claim than the commissioners under this statute. If we have the right, if it is proper, to refuse an appropriation to these commissioners, it is equally right and proper to withhold any other appropriation to carry out existing law. If this law is not a good one, it should be repealed. If not repealed, it should be obeyed and enforced. There is no escape from such a conclusion. The failure to make an appropriation is a practical nullification of the law. Let us not in this way repudiate our own laws. Let us not by stealth, by indirection, seek what we ought to secure only by open, manly action.

But, sir, if this were not the law, if this legislation were an original question, what objection, what argument, can be offered against it? With a full knowledge of the facts, of the results of this movement for civil service reform, the people of this country have expressed their opinion. Through their party utterances in the press, upon the hustings, as well as in the official declarations of our highest executive officers, the efforts to reform have been approved in the most hearty manner.

The republican national convention, June, 1872, resolved that—

Any system of the civil service under which the subordinate positions of the Government are considered rewards for mere party zeal is fatally demoralizing, and we therefore favor a reform of the system by laws which shall abolish the evils of patronage and make honesty, efficiency, and fidelity the essential qualifications for public positions, without practically creating a life tenure of office.

The national liberal republican convention, 1872, resolved that—

The civil service of the Government has become a mere instrument of partisan tyranny and personal ambition, and an object of selfish greed. It is a scandal and reproach upon free institutions, and breeds a demoralization dangerous to the perpetuity of republican government. We therefore regard a thorough reform of the civil service as one of the most pressing necessities of the hour.

The national democratic convention passed a similar resolution. These declarations have been repeatedly renewed in subsequent conventions, both State and national.

The utterances of the Chief Executive have been in the same direction. On the 18th of April, 1874, President Grant, in sending the report of the civil-service commission to Congress, used the following language:

Herewith I transmit the report of the civil-service commission. If sustained by Congress, I have no doubt the rules can, after experience gained, be so improved and enforced as to still more materially benefit the public service and relieve the Executive, members of Congress, and the heads of Departments from influences prejudicial to good administration. The rules, as they have hitherto been enforced, have resulted beneficially, as is shown by the opinions of the members of the Cabinet and their subordinates in the Departments, and in that opinion I concur.

In his message of December, 1879, President Hayes says:

In every instance they have been found to be as salutary as they are stated to have been under the administration of my predecessor. I think the economy, purity, and efficiency of the public service would be greatly promoted by their systematic introduction, wherever practicable, throughout the entire civil service of the Government, together with ample provision for their general supervision, in order to secure consistency and uniform justice. The reports from the Secretary of the Interior, from the Postmster-General, from the postmaster in the city of New York, where such examinations have been some time on trial, and also from the collector of the port, the naval officer, and the surveyor at that city, and from the postmasters and collectors of several of the larger cities, show that the competitive system, where applied, has in various ways contributed to improve the public service. The reports show that the result has been salutary in a marked degree, and that the general application of similar rules could not fail to be of decided benefit to the public service. * * * I deem it my duty to renew the recommendation contained in my annual message of 1877, requesting Congress to make the necessary appropriations for the resumption of the work of the civil-service commission.

The President-elect, General Garfield, in a speech delivered in this House in 1872, when discussing this civil-service commission, spoke as follows:

The best and noblest reforms and resolutions in the public sentiment of this country have been achieved by the people with patronage, power, and the spoils of office against them, and where not one in a hundred of the successful expected any other reward than the triumph of the principle they advocated. In such conflicts our noblest triumphs have been achieved. But, sir, if we are to look at mere party success, I would still say that a reform in our civil service is fast becoming a demand of our time which no party can afford to ignore. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Butler] tells us we got along well in our war; that the paymasters settled our accounts so well that we stood pre-eminently above England in her settlements during the Crimean war. Our paymasters did well; and why? Because we had a system of service by which every officer was held to a strict accountability—a system under which we do not remove an officer from office upon the demand of any politician who may want his place. Our Navy and our Army both belong to that class of service which is the poles apart from the kind of service to which this measure relates.

There is no great and eminently successful department of this Government which has not been made so by being taken out of the ordinary channel of political management. Is there a man here who would be willing to turn the Coast Survey service over to the fate of our ordinary civil service? In that bureau we have a system of promotion by merit, which has given us the distinguished and noble men who in that service have crowned the nation with honor. So with the Light-House Board, and so with all the branches of our service which have really been an honor to human nature and a glory to the nation itself. It is because we wish to lift other departments to a similarly high plane that we ask the power of Congress to some measure of civil-service reform. I wish to pass to another point. Gentlemen who advocate the purity of our civil service say that it is now doing well, and needs no reform. I ask these gentlemen what they think of the system of political assessments? I ask them what they think of the collector of a great port or chief of any great branch of the service issuing a circular calling for 1, 2, or 3 per cent. of the salaries of all the employés under his control, to be used for party purposes, with the distinct understanding that unless they paid that per cent. upon their salaries others will be found to fill their places who will pay the assessment?

I call the attention of gentlemen around me to that shameful fact that prevails all through our service, and which has prevailed for the last twenty-five years; and I call their attention to the honorable fact that in this very executive order, published two mornings ago, which has met such a contemptuous reception in this House, the President of the United States says: "Political assessments, as they are called, are forbidden in all the departments of the civil service of the United States." There is an executive order forbidding political assessments, and yet gentlemen around me do not want this order of the President to prevail, because the practice which it condemns affords a large so-called electioneering fund, which in many cases never gets beyond the pockets of the shysters, the hangers-on, and the mere camp-followers of the party.

Will any member of this committee dispute the argument here so eloquently presented? What facts can be presented to sustain an opposite view? The results secured under this law are before the country. The efficacy and value of civil-service reform are not a matter of speculation, but of proved existence. The heads of the Departments have publicly approved the method of reform inaugurated under this law. In the report of the civil-service commission of April 15, 1874, page 42, they state that the rules presented by the commission have promoted the public interest in the following particulars:

1. They have, on an average, where examinations apply, given persons of superior capacity and character to the service of the Government, and have tended to exclude unworthy applicants.

2. They have developed more energy in the discharge of duty, and more ambition to acquire information connected with official functions, on the part of those in the service.

3. They have diminished the unreasonable solicitation and pressure which numerous applicants and their friends, competing for appointments, have before brought to bear upon the Departments in the direction of favoritism.

4. They have, especially where competition applies, relieved the heads of Departments and of bureaus, to a large extent, of the necessity of devoting to persons soliciting places for themselves or for others time which was needed for official duties.

5. They have made it more practicable to dismiss from the service those who came in under the civil-service examinations, when not found worthy, than it was or is to dismiss the like unworthy persons who had been introduced into the service through favor or dictation.

6. They have diminished the intrigue and pressure, before too frequent, for causing the removal of worthy persons for the mere purpose of bringing other, perhaps inferior, persons into the service.

7. And, for such reasons, those officers think that it is expedient to continue the reform upon the method upon which it has proceeded, making from time to time such modifications in details as experience may show to be most useful.

In these views an overwhelming majority of the heads of bureaus agree. Their opinions are cited in the report already referred to. The First Assistant Postmaster-General reports:

That in my opinion the application of these rules, judged in the light of their collective and general result, has been in a marked degree beneficial to the public interests. Under the system of examinations prescribed we have, in the first place, secured more competent and reliable persons for appointment; and, secondly, greater zeal and industry in the discharge of duty and more earnest application in mastering the details of any work or position assigned, attributable, I doubt not, mainly if not entirely to the fact that promotion was by the rules made the reward of the most faithful and capable; and, thirdly, greater concern for the service and pride in its success, due largely to the conviction that continuance in it depended not so much on what is called influence or supposed necessities of party policy as merit and efficiency. The protection afforded by the system has tended in no small degree to encourage the feeling of individual responsibility, which in its turn develops manliness and force of character.

The superintendent of the money-order system says:

That my personal experience warrants the expression of a favorable opinion as to the general results of the civil-service system.

Of the appointments made to clerkships through competitive examinations he says:

In point of capacity, as well as of diligence and efficiency, these appointees rank above the average of such as were selected for appointment prior to the application of these rules.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue says that—

The application of these rules referred to, so far as this office is concerned, has been satisfactory, and in my opinion furnishes an intelligent and capable class of clerks for the public service.

The Auditor of the Treasury for the Post-Office Department reports that the first-class clerks appointed under the competitive system "have proved, without exception, to be industrious, capable, and efficient, and I have no hesitation in saying that I regard the competitive system as infinitely superior to the former method of original appointment."

The chairman of the Light-House Board says:

In my opinion the rules adopted by the civil-service commission, if applied to keepers and other employés of the Light-House Board, would be of great importance. Under the present system, it frequently happens that tried men, who, from years of experience, have become perfectly familiar with their duties, are dismissed for no other reason than that their places are wanted for more favored individuals.

The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics states that—

The results obtained have, I believe, demonstrated the utility of the competitive system of original appointments to office. The imperfections in its workings are chiefly such as arise from the friction incidental to the movement of any new machinery.

And thus, Mr. Chairman, I might consume the whole time allotted to me in citing similar opinions from other Government officers. Will any gentleman upon this floor measure his private judgment against this mass of testimony? When we remember that by the enforcement of these rules the power and influence of these officers who testify was largely abridged, that they received these new rules doubtfully and unwillingly, is not their testimony conclusive? But, sir, suppose that there are objections to the rules and methods which have been already put in operation under this statute. Suppose that the opinion of those who had witnessed their operation, instead of being almost unanimously favorable, had been emphatically adverse. Could such a fact be urged against the adoption of the amendment I have offered? Most certainly not. There is no particular system or method demanded by the statute. If the rules heretofore prescribed prove inoperative, other rules, other methods, better calculated to accomplish the object may be adopted. The commission can continue its work and suggest other means.

What we need is a body of intelligent and trustworthy officers, distinct from and independent of the Departments, who can without partiality or prejudice investigate their workings and place before us in authentic form facts—data upon which other needed legislation may be based. To point out but one direction in which such a commission might be useful, what member of this House can upon his own knowledge or investigation state whether ten or forty bureaus are needed for the transaction of business in the Treasury Department? We have over a hundred thousand officers—a great army in itself. What one of us can say that one-half of them or one-third of them are not mere camp-followers who could be dispensed with? Such inquiries might be satisfactorily answered by this commission.

In Sweden, in France, in Germany, and, above all, in Great Britain, civil-service reform has been successfully inaugurated through the work of such commissions. Inefficient officers have been dismissed, the affairs of the Government have been administered upon business principles, the fittest men have been selected, and the interests of the whole public have thus been subserved. Why may not the same results be secured in this country? Is party supremacy the chief object of ambition? Shall the whole public service be jobbed? Shall duty be overcome by patronage? I hope and believe not.

If we would have a wise, efficient, and economical Government, we must see to it that the right men shall be selected for the right places; that mediocrity and dullness shall not be promoted over talent and worth; that the interests of the public shall not be sacrificed to nepotism, connection, or family influence.

But, sir, I do not propose within the limited time allowed in Committee of the Whole to attempt an argument as to the necessity of reform in the civil service. That subject would require hours for a satisfactory discussion. I have sought in the briefest and most cursory way to call attention to the existence of this law which, without the appropriation asked for, is a dead letter upon the statute-book. We should revive the operations of this commission, but we should not, and I hope will not, stop there. We need other and broader laws to secure an efficient civil service.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I would like to hear the amendment again read, and then I wish to submit a remark or two.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 1047 insert:

"To carry into effect the provisions of section 1753 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, $25,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that upon this amendment the House was dividing, the vote having been taken viva voce and a rising vote in progress, when the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] stated that he had intended to make an explanation. The Chair then asked unanimous consent, which the Committee of the Whole granted, that the gentleman be allowed to make that explanation.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. Now I ask unanimous consent that section 1753 be read, so that the Committee of the Whole may understand what it is.

The CHAIRMAN. It has been read already, but it will be read again.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 1753. The President is authorized to prescribe such regulations for the admission of persons into the civil service of the United States as may best promote the efficiency thereof, and ascertain the fitness of each candidate in respect to age, health, character, knowledge, and ability for the branch of service into which he seeks to enter; and for this purpose he may employ suitable persons to conduct such inquiries, and may prescribe their duties, and establish regulations for the conduct of persons who may receive appointments in the civil service.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. Now, Mr. Chairman, a single inquiry. Is it not true that under the provision of law just read what is known as the Curtis civil-service commission was organized eight or ten years ago; which commission for six or seven years has not been appropriated for?

Mr. WILLIS. That is the fact.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, there were—ayes 43, noes 73.

Mr. WILLIS. I call for tellers. To save time I will make a proposition that a vote be taken on this amendment in the House.

Mr. BLOUNT. I cannot agree to that.

The question being taken on ordering tellers, there were ayes 26.

The CHAIRMAN. Not a sufficient number. Tellers are not ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that no quorum voted on the amendment; and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] was entitled to tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. It is too late now to make that point. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Howard University:

For the maintenance of Howard University, $10,000.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I make the point that the paragraph just read is not in order, because it changes existing law, and is not in the line of retrenchment. I presume that not even the gentleman in charge of this bill will deny that this provision is a change of existing law, is not in the line of retrenchment, and hence is not in order. It is true that the amount is small; but I have observed that we begin evils by making appropriations of small amounts, and when a point of order is made against a subsequent appropriation of the same kind on the ground that it changes existing law, the point of order is not sustained for the reason that an appropriation somewhat similar has been made in a preceding year and is then being expended. I feel that this is a measure in the bud; and being in the bud, and this being the only way it can be nipped, I make the point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. I feel it my duty to be perfectly frank with the Committee of the Whole in reference to this appropriation. The Committee on Appropriations in inserting this provision did not claim that it was an appropriation authorized by law. But the Senate the year before last put on an appropriation of this sort. During the last session it was inserted without objection from the District of Columbia Committee. We inserted it this year. We do not claim there is any law authorizing it.

Mr. MONROE. I could not hear the proposition read.

Mr. MCMILLIN. No amendment is pending, but I have raised the point of order against the paragraph in reference to the Howard University.

Mr. MONROE. I submit to the chairman for consideration the fact that for two years past, I believe, appropriations have been made for this institution. A good deal might be said in regard to the merits of the case, but I do not propose to enter into them on the discussion of the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not desire any such discussion.

Mr. MONROE. Last year an appropriation of $10,000 was made for this object. I believe year before last an appropriation was also made, but the exact amount I do not know. I think my friend will find that for two Congresses, the Congress of the United States has made appropriations for this object.

Mr. MCMILLIN. My point of order is that it is not authorized by existing law; and not being authorized by existing law, it is not in order here. I will state to my friend—and in order to convert him to my side of the case, if possible—that it is legislation on an appropriation bill not authorized by existing law and not in the direction of economy.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any law by which the General Government has ever recognized this as a governmental institution?

Mr. MONROE. Have we not in one or two cases had a decision from the Chair that an appropriation bill of last year which is still the law is an existing law for this purpose?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to ask the gentleman whether there is any law which places the Howard University under the care of the Government? No such law has yet been cited, and the Chair therefore sustains the point of order.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Rhode Island. I wish to call the Chair's attention to the fact that this institution was incorporated by an act of Congress; that the land was purchased and the buildings erected by money appropriated by Congress.

Mr. MCMILLIN. That makes no difference.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair desires to decide the question properly and after full information, and if gentlemen cannot show a law by which the General Government assumes the control and management of this institution, and is under no obligation to make appropriation for it, he is compelled to rule the amendment out. He would rule differently if any such law were cited; but, in the absence of such law, he is bound to rule that the point of order is well taken.

Mr. MONROE. The point to which I wish to call the attention of the Chair is this: we have on the statute-book a law passed last year, a law still in force, appropriating $10,000 for the support of this college. What I say is, that this law itself is a law assuming on the part of the National Government the charge to a certain extent of this school, and that that appropriation last year is in spirit such a law as the Chairman has described. It is a law in force to-day.

Mr. GILLETTE. I appeal from that decision of the Chair. This is a matter of immense consequence. There is no more important provision in the bill.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Has any appeal been taken from the decision of the Chair?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has reopened the question for further discussion.

Mr. BAYNE. If it be true the charter of this institution was enacted by Congress, that it was authorized, that it was created by Congress, does it not necessarily follow as an incident that Congress should make proper appropriation for it.

Mr. SAMFORD. I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania to state to whom this institution belongs? In whom is the title to this university?

Mr. BAYNE. I do not know in whom the title is vested; but I know this Congress would never create an institution or incorporate an institution and provide an endowment for it and take every other step necessary for its protection in order that it might accomplish the object for which it was created, and then drop it at a subsequent day and make no appropriation for continuing it. I say by implication there is necessity for Congress to continue appropriations to this institution, and consequently there is abundant law for the provision contained in this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The fact that the General Government incorporated the institution no more creates an obligation on the part of the Government to maintain it than the fact that the Government incorporates railroads or other institutions in the District creates a like obligation on the part of the Government to maintain them.

Mr. BAYNE. The Government has accepted that obligation by making appropriations from year to year.

The CHAIRMAN. But it imposes no obligation on the part of the Government to sustain this institution. In the absence of gentlemen being able to state directly or indirectly any law on the part of the Government providing for its support out of the Treasury, the Chair is compelled to sustain the point of order.

Mr. GILLETTE. I take an appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 61, noes 61.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will appoint Mr. GILLETTE and Mr. MCMILLIN as tellers, a quorum not having voted.

The committee again divided; and there were—ayes 99, noes 102.

So the decision of the Chair was overruled.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I move to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. SPRINGER. I want to know to whom this institution belongs. Can the gentleman from Ohio answer that question? I do not know whether this is a private or Government institution or in whom the title now rests. Can the gentleman from Ohio enlighten me on this subject?

Mr. MONROE. My impression is that the title is in the trustees; that it is an incorporated company.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is it not a private institution?

Mr. MONROE. That is a matter of definition.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I ask the gentleman from Ohio, is it not a private institution, in which those who enter are required to pay tuition?

Mr. MONROE. They do pay tuition, but the amount collected in that way is very inadequate to sustain the institution.

Mr. SPRINGER. Then I understand that this is a private institution, the title to which is in trustees, for the purposes of education.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say——

Mr. BAYNE. I would like to state to the gentleman from Illinois that the Government of the United States has contributed——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. SPRINGER. I believe I have the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair supposed the gentleman had yielded the floor.

Mr. SPRINGER. I yield the floor for the question of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BAYNE. Then I wish to say, in response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Illinois, that the Government of the United States has contributed, as I understand, about seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the purpose of purchasing the grounds and putting up the buildings belonging to this institution, and it is to that extent a quasi-public institution, although not wholly one. And there is another element that enters into this question as to its being a public institution, and that is that the tuition which is charged is altogether inadequate for sustaining the institution. It must depend upon the bounty of the Government for purposes of maintaining it as a public institution.

And another thing that I am advised of just at this moment, that where persons are unable to pay tuition fees they are admitted free and given an education without cost. It is substantially an institution under the auspices of the United States, an institution sustained by the Government, and it has been provided for year after year by Congress, which has made appropriations for its support, and it was undoubtedly contemplated that such provision should continue to be made.

Mr. ROBERTSON. How many beneficiaries are admitted to it?

Mr. BAYNE. I do not know.

Mr. MCMILLIN. How many students has the Government of the United States the right to send there?

Mr. MONROE. The States send them, not the General Government.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Has the United States Government a single one there?

Mr. MONROE. It is open to all.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I do not want an evasive answer. I ask the gentleman if the Government of the United States has the right to send one.

Mr. MONROE. The institution is free to the citizens of the State of Tennessee or to any other State.

Mr. MCMILLIN. By paying their way.

Mr. MONROE. No, sir; not by paying their way; if they are unable to do so they are not required to pay.

Mr. CONGER. This institution was founded for the education of colored teachers and colored preachers in the United States. This Government, and the Congress then of this Government, with great unanimity ordered the expenditure of Government money to buy the site, to erect the buildings, and establish the foundations of this institution. Every year appropriations have been made for it, sometimes a larger amount than this, if I recollect aright, to aid in carrying out that great and good and benevolent purpose on the very principle that there should be in the capital of the United States an institution where that class of people—excluded in many places from other colleges—might receive an education suitable to make them teachers and to make them preachers of their race for their better education and for their advancement in knowledge and in religious belief.

Now, sir, in this bill there are many institutions for which appropriations are made without any other authority of law than that they are quasi-Government institutions. The very next provision in this bill—has no authority at law except the continued precedent of former Congresses.

For the expense of exchanging literary and scientific productions with all nations by the Smithsonian Institution—

For the support of the Freedmen's Hospital and Asylum, immediately preceding this paragraph, there is no other authority of law except that Congress has assisted in establishing it and keeping it up, and has continually from year to year made appropriations for it. This is the bill in which appropriations of that kind are to be made. Now, I think it would shock the moral sensibilities of the people of this country if this little contribution for the education of the colored race and for the support of the institution, against which there is no attack and against which there is no complaint, should be stricken out of this bill. It is admitted to have been an institution of great benefit to the colored race in educating them; and I think I may appeal with safety to all the members of this House in support of the opinion that it is desirable that the colored race of the United States should have educated teachers and educated preachers to go forth among them for their education and training. This institution is the only one in the District of Columbia that can accomplish this purpose. Sir, I should regret of all things to see, in the closing hours of this Congress, this attempt made to cripple and injure an institution against which I have never heard one word of complaint from any party or from any class of people.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to strike out the last word. The first appropriation I find for a number of years was, for the fiscal year 1880, an appropriation of $10,000. It was added to the bill at the instance of Mr. BAYARD, of Delaware. It was continued in the last bill, and the committee inserted it in this. There have been three bills since I have been here, so far as I can ascertain, in which it has been inserted. Congress gave this land and the buildings upon it to this corporation. There are a number of buildings upon the grounds, which they rent, and the receipts from these, in addition to those for tuition, have been used in the matter of maintenance of the institution. And during this fiscal year, in addition to what they have had through the liberality of certain citizens in Boston, they have obtained a subscription of $25,000 for the purpose of endowing a professorship. It is unlike the Freedman's Hospital and Asylum, which is under the control of the Government. Its receipts and expenditures are directed and regulated by the Government. It is as any other charitable institution connected with the Government. This sum is given for the purpose of supplementing the wants of the institution in the matter of maintenance. As I have said, it was given in the bill of last year, and the Committee on Appropriations this year thought it was a small sum, and in view of what has occurred in the past, we should renew the appropriation again for another year. The institution is growing all the while. It is a very small matter, and I think we had better allow it to remain on its present footing for another year. As has been stated by the gentleman from Michigan, there are colored people being educated at this institution and going through the South. They are in my own town. I am not willing, however, to concede the proposition that it is a Government institution, to be sustained by it forever.

Mr. MCMILLIN. But you know it will be when the policy is once commenced.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not know it will be; for in this fiscal year it has obtained $25,000 by way of donation.

Mr. HOUK. I do not know much about the origin and history of this institution. There have been not less than five colored men from my own town educated at that institution. And I am astonished to see one of my colleagues so anxious to exclude this appropriation, when if he will go and investigate the matter he will find there are men from his own district to-day, I should suppose, who are being educated free of charge.

Mr. MCMILLIN. No, sir; they have paid their way. The gentleman cannot give the name of any one there from my district who is being educated free of charge.

Mr. HOUK. I know I can give the names of three from my own district who are not paying their way, but are being educated at the expense of that institution. I believe there is nothing wrong in nourishing it, building it up, and sustaining it until such time as it will be able to sustain itself. The colored people of the South need all the succor and all the attention and all the aid this Government can give them. The Government owes to them a great deal, and their late masters and former overseers should not be here opposing such an appropriation.

Mr. MCMILLIN. Will my colleague permit me to ask him one question?

Mr. HOUK. Yes, sir.

Mr. McMILLIN. If you are so much interested in educating the colored men of the South, why did you so strenuously oppose the proposition the other day to donate the proceeds of the sales of public lands for educational purposes?

Mr. HOUK. I did no such thing.

Mr. McMILLIN. I thought I saw the gentleman among the nays. There was no record kept.

Mr. HOUK. I am ready to vote in support of any measure that will have the effect of educating the people whether white or black, for education would destroy democracy. I would vote to educational purposes, and to educate all classes, colors, and conditions, any and everything necessary for that purpose. I would willingly vote every acre of the public lands for the education of white and black.

When my colleague says I voted against the educational measure mentioned by him, he only shows the information of the average democrat. My political associates with whom I generally vote will bear witness that on this subject I voted with those favoring the gentleman's pet measure—though pet only for present purposes—of a distribution of the proceeds of the public lands for educational purposes. I breathed this inspiration upon the lap of my mother. It was one of the living issues of the grand old whig party, instilled into me when I knelt at my mother's knee. The gentleman's party was and has been opposed to this grand scheme of educating the people, and now he, my colleague, as an iron-ribbed democrat, turns about and upbraids me for what I never did. I never make statements in public debate for which there is no foundation.

Mr. PAGE. I am in favor of retaining the paragraph as it was placed in the bill by the committee; and I rise to say I am astonished my friend from Tennessee [Mr. McMILLIN] should oppose and move to strike it out. I have the honor to serve with my friend from Tennessee on the Committee on Education and Labor, and I know he has been very energetic on behalf of a bill to distribute for educational purposes the proceeds of sales of the public lands among the colored people of the South.

Mr. McMILLIN. Among the whole people of the whole country.

Mr. PAGE. Now, Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of making this appropriation to educate the colored children of the country, and I am in favor of appropriating money out of the Treasury to be expended in the Southern States to educate the colored children there. I think it proper to do it, and I am astonished that the gentleman from Tennessee should endeavor to strike this out of the bill.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the committee rise for the purpose of closing debate on this paragraph.

Mr. McMILLIN. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment? Surely after the admission of the gentleman from Georgia that the paragraph is out of order he will not himself speak on it and cut me off.

Mr. BLOUNT. I withhold the motion until the gentleman from Tennessee shall have spoken.

Mr. BREWER. And then we will take a vote; that will be the best way.

Mr. McMILLIN. In response to what has been said by my colleague on the Committee on Education and Labor, the gentleman from California, [Mr. PAGE,] and I will also make my remarks apply to the statement of my colleague from Tennessee, [Mr. HOUK,] I will say that I am in favor of education. I did that a few days ago which the associates and political friends of the gentleman on the other side of the House did not do. I tried to pass through this House a bill which proposed to give the proceeds of the sales of the public lands to the States and Territories for common-school purposes. I would not put any stumbling-block in the way of the general education of any portion of the people of this country.

Mr. CONGER. Did not the gentleman ask that a portion of that fund should go to colleges?

Mr. McMILLIN. No, sir; I opposed the college feature.

Mr. CONGER. The bill had that provision in it.

Mr. McMILLIN. Not the bill which I proposed to pass and voted for. The gentleman confounds the bill of the Senate with the bill proposed by the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. GOODE,] the chairman of our committee. I tried with other men on this side of the House to prevent the passage of the Senate bill by substituting for it the House bill. I am in favor of the common masses being educated. But that cannot be done by giving $10,000 to this college which cannot be reached by any of our constituents. The masses are reached by the common schools and not by the colleges in the District of Columbia.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the committee now rise for the purpose of closing debate.

Mr. PAGE. I want to ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McMILLIN] what difference it makes whether the money given for education is taken out of the general fund in the Treasury, or whether it is from the proceeds of the sales of public lands?

Mr. McMILLIN. The difference lies in the application of the money. When it is distributed among the States and Territories for common schools, the masses get the benefit of it. When the Government gives it to a college not one youth in every thousand can avail himself of the benefits of the appropriation, and it burdens all, and blesses but few.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Georgia that the committee rise.

Mr. BLOUNT. At the suggestion of a number of gentlemen who think that we can have a vote on the amendment I will withdraw the motion that the committee rise.

The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. McMILLIN; and it was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

Smithsonian Institution:

For the expense of exchanging literary and scientific productions with all nations by the Smithsonian Institution, $3,000.

Mr. CONVERSE. I move to insert after the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

To carry out the provisions of section 1753 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, $20,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. I reserve all points of order on that until I can learn what it is.

Mr. CONVERSE. No point of order can lie against it. It is the same amendment as that offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] a short time ago.

The CHAIRMAN. It has already been voted down by the committee.

Mr. CONVERSE. It has not been voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. Did not the gentleman state that this was the same amendment as that offered by the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. WILLIS?] That amendment was voted down.

Mr. CONVERSE. The amendment of the gentleman from Kentucky proposed to appropriate $25,000. My amendment appropriates only $20,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that this is substantially the same amendment as that upon which the Chair ruled and which the committee voted down. When the other amendment was before the committee it was competent for the gentleman to have moved to amend it by making the amount $20,000. To illustrate: suppose that this amendment was received and voted down by the committee; then another amendment could be offered for $26,000, another for $27,000, and so on ad infinitum.

Mr. CONVERSE. The chairman will certainly not undertake to say that because an amendment has been voted down in one place an amendment on the same subject cannot be moved in another part of the bill? I do not propose to appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then I call for the regular order.

Mr. CONVERSE. So do I. I want the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules that the Committee of the Whole having voted down an amendment of which this is substantially a copy, this amendment is not in order.

Mr. CONVERSE. But nobody has made that point of order.

Mr. KNOTT. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. CONVERSE. I desire to be heard upon it. That is a point of order which has not been made.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. KNOTT] makes a point of order.

Mr. CONVERSE. What is it?

Mr. KNOTT. I make the point of order that the Chair has already decided the question, and it is not in order for the gentleman to proceed to debate it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CONVERSE. I desire to make a statement.

Mr. KNOTT. I object.

Several MEMBERS. Read! Read!

Mr. CONVERSE. The point of order made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. KNOTT] was not the point of order decided by the Chair. As I understand it, the point of order which should be ruled upon is one under the rules.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] made the point of order against the amendment, and the Chair sustained it. The Clerk will read on.

The Clerk read the following:

Preservation of collections, Smithsonian Institution——

Mr. CONVERSE. I desire to appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BLOUNT. It is too late; the Clerk has commenced the reading of the next paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal to the committee.

Mr. BLOUNT. The gentleman himself stated that he did not intend to make any appeal; and after that announcement the Clerk proceeded to read.

The CHAIRMAN. And under that announcement the Clerk will read on. [Laughter.]

The Clerk read the following:

Indian affairs:

Expenses of the Ute commission: To meet necessary expenses of the Ute commissioners appointed by the President under section 2 of the act approved June 15, 1880, $15,000.

Mr. O'NEILL. I move to insert after the paragraph just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk, as a new paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Night inspector of customs: From and after the 1st day of July, last, the compensation to be paid the night inspectors of customs and the captain of the night inspectors at the port of Philadelphia shall be the same as is now paid to similar officers at the port of Boston.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order that that is new legislation and does not retrench expenditures.

Mr. O'NEILL. This bill is one made up of miscellaneous paragraphs. I propose to offer an amendment. Whether the amendment is in order or not is another thing.

Now, sir, as by existing law the night inspectors of customs are paid a certain salary, I presume an amendment offered to increase that salary is not out of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. It is not germane to this bill, at any rate. The legislative appropriation bill would be a more suitable place for the amendment.

Mr. O'NEILL. Mr. Chairman, the amendment is germane to this bill. This is a sundry civil appropriation bill—what is familiarly called in State Legislatures an "omnibus bill." I have brought this amendment to the attention of the committee exactly where it ought to come in, if the committee will vote it in.

Now, as by existing law the night inspectors of customs are receiving a salary, it is certainly in order to offer a proposition here that the salary may be increased; and as in the city of New York and the city of San Francisco the salaries of these officers have been increased in virtue of a law giving discretion in that respect to the Secretary of the Treasury, and as they have not been increased in the city of Philadelphia, I offer the amendment, and I hope that the Committee of the Whole will adopt it.

Mr. URNER. I move to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania by adding "and Baltimore."

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. O'NEILL] is not yet open to amendment, as the Chair has not decided the point of order.

Mr. O'NEILL. Mr. Chairman, before you decide the point of order let me say another word. I am willing to admit the amendment of the gentleman from Baltimore [Mr. URNER] just as I would be willing to admit an amendment from some gentleman representing the city of Boston or any other city where this invidious distinction has been made against these night inspectors of customs as compared with officers of the same class in the cities of New York and San Francisco. Let them all be paid alike; and as, in my opinion, the amendment is in order, let us vote to adopt it. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

A MEMBER, (to Mr. O'NEILL.) Don't let them cry you down.

Mr. O'NEILL. I have said as much as I wish to say on this question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania will address the Chair.

Mr. O'NEILL. I was addressing for the moment a gentleman who wanted me to stand up for my rights, which I usually do; and I have had them from you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania must address the Chair when he "stands up for his rights." [Laughter.]

Mr. O'NEILL. I am doing so. Mr. Chairman, I hope you will rule this amendment to be in order. I have given you a good reason why you should so rule. It carries out existing law by increasing the salary which the law says shall be paid these officers.

The CHAIRMAN. For the reason which the gentleman gives, that the amendment changes existing law and increases expenditures, the Chair sustains the point of order. [Laughter.]

Mr. VALENTINE. I desire to offer an amendment to go in after line 1078, as a new paragraph under the head of "miscellaneous objects." I believe I offer it now in the right place.

The Clerk read as follows:

Rocky Mountain locusts: To enable the Signal Service Bureau to carry into effect the recommendation of the United States Entomological Commission by observing and giving warning of the flight of the Rocky Mountain locusts, $5,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. That amendment is subject to a point of order. I believe the same thing has been ruled on once before. At any rate we have passed the paragraph in relation to the Signal Service.

Mr. VALENTINE. I would like to be heard on the point of order, but first I would like to know what the point is, for I did not hear it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair on a similar question sustained the point of order, but the Committee of the Whole overruled him. The Chair must be regulated by the will of the Committee of the Whole. He therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. KNOTT. Has not this very amendment been already voted on?

Mr. VALENTINE. It was ruled out because I failed to offer it at the proper place. Now, I offer it under the head of "miscellaneous objects."

Mr. SIMONTON. I beg to say that if the Chair will consult the record he will find that the Committee of the Whole sustained his ruling in reference to the amendment offered before.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

The question being taken, the amendment of Mr. VALENTINE was not agreed to, there being—ayes 58, noes 81.

The Clerk read as follows:

Defending suits in claims against the United States: For defraying the necessary expenses incurred in the examination of witnesses and procuring of evidence in the matter of claims against the United States and the District of Columbia pending in any department, and for necessary expenses incurred in defending suits in the Court of Claims, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, $25,000.

Mr. URNER. I move to amend by inserting after the clause just read the provision which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Quartermaster-General and the Commissary-General are hereby authorized to designate United States commissioners to take testimony to be used as evidence in claims pending in their respective offices presented under the provisions of section 300 A and 300 B, Revised Statutes, and act of Congress approved July 4, 1864, entitled "An act to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims," and the acts and joint resolutions explanatory thereof and amendatory thereto, who shall have the authority to administer oaths and affirmations and take the testimony of witnesses, and shall transmit such testimony, verified by his official certificate, to the proper officer: Provided, That the claimant shall pay the fees of such commissioner for taking the depositions of witnesses called by them, but such fees shall in no case exceed ten cents per folio; and all claims now pending under said acts, and not heretofore investigated and reported, shall, upon motion of the claimant or his attorney, be referred to the United States commissioner residing nearest the place where his claim originated for the purpose of taking testimony as herein provided; and no testimony shall be taken without due notice to the claimant, who shall have the privilege of being present and cross-examining witnesses.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order that that is new legislation and does not retrench expenditures.

Mr. URNER. I should like to be heard on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. URNER. I submit this is not new legislation. My amendment refers directly to the act of 1864, one section of which refers to the Quartermaster-General and the other to the Commissary-General. The one referring to the Quartermaster-General is in these words:

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all claims of loyal citizens, in States not in rebellion, for quartermaster's stores actually furnished to the Army of the United States, and receipted for by the proper officer receiving the same, or which may have been taken by such officers without giving such receipt, may be submitted to the Quartermaster-General of the United States, accompanied with such proof as each claimant can present of the facts in his case; and it shall be the duty of the Quartermaster-General to cause such claim to be examined, and if convinced that it is just, and of the loyalty of the claimant, and that the stores have been actually received or taken for the use of and used by said Army, then to report each case to the Third Auditor of the Treasury, with a recommendation for settlement.

The next section, in reference to the Commissary-General, is as follows:

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That all claims of loyal citizens, in States not in rebellion, for subsistence actually furnished to said Army, and receipted for by the proper officer receiving the same, or which may have been taken by such officers without giving such receipt, may be submitted to the Commissary-General of Subsistence, accompanied with such proof as each claimant may have to offer; and it shall be the duty of the Commissary-General of Subsistence to cause each claim to be examined, and if convinced that it is just, and of the loyalty of the claimant, and that the stores have been received or taken actually for the use of and used by said Army, then to report each case for payment to the Third Auditor of the Treasury, with a recommendation for settlement.

The Quartermaster-General sends out special agents to examine these claims, but there is no such practice in the Commissary-General's Office. These agents, who are not learned in the law nor familiar with the rules of evidence, go into the neighborhood of claimants and take ex parte testimony, frequently without the witnesses being on oath.

Mr. BRAGG. I make the point of order that the gentleman is discussing the merits of the amendment and not the point of order.

Mr. URNER. I am discussing the effect of the law authorizing the Commissary-General to have these claims examined. My amendment refers to the mode by which that is to be done. In that aspect this cannot be considered new legislation. The paragraph under consideration provides for taking testimony in reference to these claims. By my amendment we only ask in behalf of these claimants that the testimony shall be taken before United States commissioners; that the witnesses shall be under oath, and that the claimants shall be notified and have an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses if they so desire.

Now, on the question of retrenchment of expenditure, I submit this amendment will accomplish that purpose. The Quartermaster-General in his report recently made speaks of the enormous expense attending these investigations, and he recognizes there should be new agents; that there should be some new provision made, for, in his language, "much expense can be saved by hastening the work of investigations required to be made by agents."

He asks that new agents be appointed. This does not provide for that, but it does provide that the testimony shall be taken before United States commissioners at the expense of the claimant himself.

The Quartermaster-General says that these examinations amount in the neighborhood of thirty dollars for each claim investigated, and that there are many thousands of claims, and that the expense of investigating these claims has amounted to something like one hundred thousand dollars per annum as the expense incurred on account of the agents alone.

We submit that it is no change of existing law, and that in addition it does curtail the expenditures of the Government, and that, therefore, the point of order is not well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like the gentleman from Maryland to state, or the gentleman from Georgia, whether this amendment shows on its face that it changes existing law; and furthermore, if it does change existing law, the Chair would like to be informed whether it retrenches expenditures. In reference to this point the Chair is not sufficiently informed to decide. He would like, therefore, the opinion of the committee on the question.

Mr. BRAGG. Does not the rule which authorizes amendments to be made in the interest of economy require that the subject-matter, of the amendment shall also be germane? Now, must not the amendment be germane to the subject-matter of the bill? This is to pay certain sundry civil expenses of the Government. The amendment proposes to create a new officer——

Mr. URNER. No, sir.

Mr. BRAGG. And to vest that officer with certain powers, and to prescribe rules of evidence in the court to be created by the amendment, and is in no manner germane to the bill to provide for the payment of the sundry civil expenses of the Government.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call the attention of the Chair to a rule most familiar to the Chair and most familiar to members:

Nor shall any provision in any such bill or amendment thereto changing existing law be in order, except such as, being germane to the subject-matter of the bill, shall retrench expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States, by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of amounts of money covered by the bill.

I submit there is no proposition in that amendment looking either to a reduction of the number or salary of officers, or any other condition which makes it in order to this bill. There is a provision authorizing the creation of a certain commission, but it does not appear from that paper there is any such reduction as is required by Rule XXI.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Everything, Mr. Chairman, to meet the requirements referred to by the gentleman from Georgia is included in this amendment. The Quartermaster-General is authorized to employ certain agents in the examination of these claims. The amendment only changes the character of these agents; and it is in the line of economy, because the report of the Quartermaster shows the expenses of these agents for the last year were $132,000, while this amendment provides that the agents who are to be selected, these United States commissioners, are to receive no pay or compensation except what is paid by the claimants themselves.

Mr. BRAGG. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRAGG. This amendment does not repeal the provision which creates these agents or authorizes the quartermasters to employ them. Consequently, as it provides additional officers to do the same duty, is it not simply cumulative?

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. This does not create additional officers. It provides that officers already in existence shall perform this service; and consequently these special agents will not be necessary. It therefore, instead of being cumulative, has a positive tendency to decrease the number of officers.

Mr. Chairman, the object of the Quartermaster-General in sending out these agents is to protect the Treasury against unauthorized or improper claims. Now, if he has the authority, as the amendment proposes, to select his agents without costing the Government anything, I cannot conceive where any injury can be done by it, or where the point of order can be made against it; and to that extent this amendment is certainly in the line of economy.

It is not new legislation, for the Commissioner of Claims acted under the authority of law identical with it, the act of April 29, 1871. That act authorized the Commissioner of Claims to designate certain persons before whom the testimony should be taken, therefore this is in pursuance of existing law. Now, if it would be in order to say a word on the merits of the amendment itself I would like to do so.

Mr. WHITE. Go on. I would like to hear that.

Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee. Under the present system the agents are sent out by the Quartermaster-General to protect the Government, as I have said, against these illegal claims; but all the testimony that is taken in reference thereto is ex parte testimony and without notice whatever to the claimant and without any opportunity to cross-examine witnesses. That testimony is forwarded to Washington and piled up in some department, and the claimant never hears a word of it until it is too late to make any defense or to furnish witnesses in support of his own rights in the matter. There are some twenty pensioners, Federal soldiers, in my own district who had their claims defeated upon testimony that they never heard a word of.

Mr. URNER. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a word in response to what the gentleman from Wisconsin has said. I understand him to argue that the amendment would increase the number of officers of the Government. Now, I wish to show him that he is mistaken in that respect. The amendment provides that the United States commissioners already in existence, already appointed under the provisions of law, shall be designated to take this testimony. Consequently no new expense is incurred in that way. It does not require the appointment of new officers. The testimony is to be taken before the United States commissioners, and it will not be necessary to employ special agents. Consequently the employment of special agents will be rendered unnecessary, and they will drop out of the service and thus reduce the expenses of the Government.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand a request from the Quartermaster-General addressed to the sub-committee of the Committee on Appropriations, in which he refers to the class of claims to which the gentleman from Maryland refers in his amendment. In that communication he asks to be allowed to employ ten additional clerks for this fiscal year. He wants additional officers to carry on the very work the gentleman now speaks of. I have his letter, and this provision he wants to have incorporated in the general deficiency bill. The gentleman from Maryland cannot maintain his proposition on the ground that it will retrench expenditures.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will decide that the existing laws provide for the manner of taking testimony. This changes it, and it does not appear upon its face to retrench expenditures. The Chair holds, therefore, that it is out of order.

Mr. URNER. With all respect I must appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The decision of the Chair was sustained.

Mr. HOUK. I desire to offer an amendment to come in after the word "dollars," in line 1105.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, however, That no pensioner shall be deprived of his pension, nor the same be in any wise suspended, by the report of any special agent or other ex parte evidence furnished to the Pension Department. But that whenever testimony is to be taken, or evidence to impeach the right or to stop any pensioner from drawing the pension he may now be drawing under the law, such testimony shall not be considered or have any effect unless such pensioner shall have had reasonable notice of the time and place of the taking of such testimony, with the names and residence of the witnesses where testimony is to be taken for such purpose, and that such pensioner shall have an ample opportunity to rebut the testimony taken against him.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Chairman, I raise the question of order that this is new legislation. It is not germane to the bill. It ought to have been incorporated in the pension bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. HOUK. Yes, sir; I desire to speak for a moment on the point of order. By a brief discussion of this subject touching the merits and an examination of the section to which this amendment refers it will be found that every word and every line and sentence has reference to the investigation of claims against the Government of the United States. Therefore it is certainly germane to that proposition. It extends also to that provision which contemplates an investigation on the part of the Government that shall not work an injury to the claimant against the United States as a pensioner.

I know personally of a large number of worthy pensioners who have been stricken from the pension-rolls without any notice, and who have been deprived of their pensions, after an investigation or without an investigation, whether such investigation was open, fair, just, or consistent, or after an investigation in which they, the poor pensioners who have been left in darkness and have had no opportunity to be heard in their own defense, in vindication of their rights, and when they are bearing honorable scars, and have poured out their blood and doubled their scars thus incurred in the defense of the country known as the Union, the United States Government.

Now, on the subject of changing existing law, I wish to say that I know of no possible law that that provision can possibly change, impair, or alter in any possible manner. I do not know of any such provision. It strikes directly at an evil which has afflicted the country long enough. I stand here as an ex-Federal soldier in behalf of Federal soldiers to protest and if possible to provide by legislation against the wrongs constantly inflicted upon them by agents who suppose their official tenure depends upon the amount they can take from the poor pensioner and save to the Government. I appeal to this committee to stand by the soldier and sustain the amendment.

It seems the soldiers of the country are to be regarded as beggars; that when they appeal for justice, and a just mode of preserving rights invested by law, they are to be told that their rights are to depend upon assumed investigations by irresponsible parties detailed from the Pension Office and dignified by the name of "special agents." And I do not know a better designation for them, for they take "special" care not to inform the poor pensioners of the devices they are resorting to in a clandestine manner in order to deprive them of their rights, and take the bread out of the mouths of the infirm, helpless, and poorest of the poor in the land.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. HOUK. On that question I appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The question being put to the committee, the ruling of the Chair was sustained.

The Clerk read the following:

For payment of the fees and expenses of United States marshals and deputies $600,000.

Mr. HORR. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out lines 1141, 1142, and 1143—the entire paragraph—and insert in its place the following:

"For payment of the fees and expenses of United States marshals and deputies, $598,790: Provided, That out of said sum shall be paid to Deputy Marshal William F. Gary, of Pickens County, in the State of South Carolina, the sum of $100 per month from and after February 14, 1881, so long as he remains disabled by wounds recently received in the discharge of his duty while attempting to enforce the laws of the United States; said payment to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury monthly, upon proper proof of his disability, but to cease in any event after twelve months from February 14, 1881."

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order on that amendment that it is not germane, and that it does not retrench expenditures.

Mr. HAZELTON. But it is just.

Mr. HORR. Will the gentleman from Georgia waive his point of order while I make a statement?

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to make this statement, and I hope the gentleman from Michigan and other gentlemen will hear me. The opinion of Senator BECK, as communicated to me, is that unless this bill pass the House at this sitting it is impossible for it to become a law. I hope gentlemen will not needlessly occupy time. I will not withdraw the point of order. The Senate is waiting for this bill now.

Mr. HORR. I sympathize as deeply with the desire of the gentleman from Georgia to pass this bill as any man can. But the case before the House, which the amendment I offered reaches, is a case of actual and absolute necessity. My proposition is to pay this man $100 per month while disabled.

Mr. BLOUNT. I rise to a question of order. The gentleman from Michigan is discussing not the point of order but the merits of the proposition.

Mr. REED. He has a right to state what it is.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan must confine himself to the point of order.

Mr. HORR. I am trying to do that; but it is utterly impossible for me to show the amendment is germane to this bill without showing the facts in this case.

Mr. BLOUNT. I submit the facts in the case have nothing to do with the point of order. The question is whether the proposition sent to the desk in writing is subject to the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman must confine himself to what appears on the face of the amendment in discussing the point of order.

Mr. HORR. Mr. Chairman, that is what I am trying to do. I offer this amendment in no spirit of strife, but simply that justice may be done a brave and efficient officer who has just been struck down while in the discharge of his duty. Mr. Gary is one of the deputy marshals of the United States court, who lives in Pickens County, South Carolina. Only a few days ago, on the 14th of this month, while attempting to serve process upon a man charged with violating the law of the land, he was shot down, and now lies suffering and disabled on account of his wounds. To show the House that this is no fancy picture of my own, I will read a short letter just received by an officer of the Government now in this city. This letter is written, as I have stated, by one of the ablest democratic lawyers in the county of Pickens, South Carolina.

Mr. BLOUNT. I submit this is not in order and ask the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. ROBESON. Will the gentleman pardon me a moment? This is an appropriation for the payment of the fees and expenses of the United States marshals and their deputies. Now, if that letter shows this amendment is necessary to pay this man his expenses it is in order, and his medicines are just as much a part of his expenses as his food.

Mr. BLOUNT. This bill makes appropriation for the next fiscal year and has nothing to do with the expenditures of this year.

Mr. REED. How can we understand whether this amendment is in order without having a statement of the facts?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has ruled that the gentleman from Michigan must confine himself to the point of order. The Chair is sure the gentleman from Michigan understands the rule as well as any man, and the Chair appeals to his fairness and generosity to keep within the rule and not attempt to make a speech on the merits.

Mr. HORR. If there is anything I pride myself on, it is that I understand fully every question of order that is presented to this House. [Laughter.] This letter says:

On last Monday night William F. Gary, while on duty as deputy United States marshal, was dangerously wounded by a gunshot in this county. He is now at home in a very critical condition, suffering much and requires good medical attention. I have just seen the physician who has been attending him, who seems to be very much interested in his case. He says that without some hope or assurance of being paid for his services he cannot afford to gratuitously take the responsibility of treating his case. I have encouraged him to go ahead and give this man careful attention, with the expectation that he will be paid for his services by the Government in whose employ he was at the time he was shot.

Will you be so kind as to inform me what provisions have been made by the Government for such purposes, and what course must be pursued that this unfortunate man may have proper and humane attention? He is a very poor man with a large family to support, and in my judgment the Government shoul see that he has proper medical treatment.

Mr. AIKEN. I ask the gentleman from Michigan to give us the name of the writer of that letter.

Mr. HORR. I would cheerfully give it. But up to this time they have been in the habit of shooting only republicans down there. This man is a democrat and I do not want to be responsible for their commencing to kill democrats hereafter.

Mr. AIKEN. Let me say that the information I have received is different from what the gentleman has read.

Mr. HORR. I assert that this letter is from a leading democratic lawyer in the county of Pickens, in the State of South Carolina.

Mr. PHILIPS. I rise to a question of order. I think the time of the committee should not be consumed in such discussions when the only matter pending is a point of order.

Mr. AIKEN. The county of Pickens is in my district, and I know all the lawyers in it. This man is not a prominent lawyer, or the gentleman would mention his name. I assert that three-fourths of what is written in that letter is untrue.

Mr. BLOUNT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLOUNT. Under the rules of the House the Chair is not compelled to listen to any gentleman for any longer period on a point of order than he sees fit. The gentleman from Michigan has no right to be heard at all; and as he is abusing the time and the patience of this House, I ask if it is not in order for the Chair to conclude his discussion on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has one minute left of the five minutes.

Mr. HORR. Now, Mr. Chairman, when men are disabled in this way who are on the rolls of the Internal-Revenue Department, they can get some relief by being kept on those pay-rolls and being paid their wages during their recovery. But this man is one of the deputies of the United States court and dependent upon the fees of his office for the support of himself and his family, and he can receive these fees only when able to discharge his duties as such officer, and in that way earn them. He has a wife and four children dependent upon him for support; and he is poor. It does seem to me that if our Government sends these men to perform such perilous duties in enforcing its laws, that the time has certainly come when the Government should care for their personal wants and should see to it that they and their families do not lack the necessities of life in case they are shot down while in the faithful performance of their duties. That is all I seek to do in this case. I know the objection is raised that the precedent is a bad one, and the question may be asked if there are not other cases equally meritorious. My answer would be that there are. I do not forget that there are to-day living in the South twenty-four widows whose husbands were killed precisely in the same way, while in the discharge of their sworn duty in endeavoring to enforce the laws of their country, and that these women were all made widows during the conciliatory policy of the present Administration.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HORR. By what right does the Chair rap me down? I am not through discussing this question.

The CHAIRMAN. The five minutes of the gentleman have expired.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for the regular order.

Mr. BURROWS. I submit that there is no rule limiting debates on points of order to five minutes.

Mr. BLOUNT. I submit that no gentleman has the right to say anything on a point of order unless the Chair is willing to hear him.

Mr. BURROWS. There is no rule limiting debate on questions of order to five minutes. If there is such a rule, I ask to have it read.

Mr. BLOUNT. Has any gentleman the right to argue a point of order unless the Chair is willing to hear him?

Mr. BURROWS. The Chair has recognized the gentleman to speak on the point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. So I understand.

Mr. BURROWS. Having recognized the gentleman for that purpose, there is no rule limiting him to five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The present occupant of the Chair has ruled several times during the consideration of this bill, and no appeal has been taken from that ruling, that while there is perhaps no express rule as to debates on points of order, yet while operating under the five-minute rule in considering the bill no gentleman can be allowed to speak more than five minutes on any question. As remarks upon points of order are always addressed to the Chair for his information, the Chair has heretofore allowed gentlemen to speak upon points of order under the five-minute rule, and will adhere to it in future until the committee shall reverse it. Gentlemen will remember that whether the Chair hears any debate upon points of order or not is entirely discretionary with the Chair. The mind of the Chair may be so clearly made up, whether rightfully or wrongfully, that argument would be wholly unnecessary and useless. If any information is needed by the Chair, it is within the discretion of the Chair as to the time to be allowed for that purpose. The Chair has heretofore adopted the practice of allowing members to speak for five minutes upon points of order. The five minutes' time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HORR] has expired.

Mr. HOUK. One word on the point of order.

Many MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. HOUK. I will not occupy five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman want to speak in his own behalf?

Mr. HOUK. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for that purpose.

Mr. HOUK. It is rather to make a suggestion. It is that if the Chair should rule out this amendment on the point of order, I want to offer an amendment to send a committee to the State of South Carolina to kill this doctor who is not willing to wait on this man.

Mr. HORR. Does the Chair hold that I have no right to speak longer on the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule on the amendment.

Mr. HOUK. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. That the gentleman has a right to do. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair, that debate upon points of order shall be limited to five minutes, stand as the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 97, noes 20.

No further count being called for, the decision of the Chair was sustained.

The CHAIRMAN. If the Chair can now have the attention of the committee he will give his decision upon the amendment; the Chair has not ruled upon the amendment yet.

This amendment proposes to reduce the appropriation contained in this paragraph, but it does not at the same time strike down any of the means of creating expenditures. The law provides that marshals and deputy marshals and such officers of the Government shall receive a certain sum for certain services. If this item was reduced so as to appropriate only $1,000 it would leave a deficiency, and each person to whom money was due would still have a claim on the Government. To illustrate—— [Laughter.]

Many MEMBERS. That is enough.

Mr. REED. Give the Chair five minutes. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. HORR. I hope gentlemen will allow the Chair his full five minutes. [Continued laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules the amendment out of order.

Mr. HORR. I appeal from the decision of the Chair, and I want to be heard on the appeal.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is entitled to the floor for five minutes.

Mr. HORR. I do not wish to take five minutes. I was about to state that this is the eighteenth man that has been stricken down in this way in the State of South Carolina during the same time, and that five of them were killed outright, and that the men who committed these crimes have never one of them, so far as I can learn, been arrested and tried by the State authorities for these crimes. But it would be of little relief to this man to tell him these things, and to go into these sickening details would only stir up strife, which I would avoid. [Cries of "Order!" "Order!"] For one I care not for the precedent in this case; and let me say to the gentlemen of the State of South Carolina that this is a peculiar case. This man has been for a decade a faithful officer; besides, he is no "carpet-bagger," no "scalawag." He is not an "alien" to your soil. No one can claim the right to shoot him on that account. He was born and reared in South Carolina and his wife and children also; all of them first saw light in the Palmetto State. The only air he or his family ever breathed was the air of South Carolina. Now, I submit to you all whether it is not the duty of this nation to grant the relief I seek by this amendment. [Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

The question before us now is, shall we give aid to this stricken officer. This great nation of ours requires these hazardous duties of these men, and when misfortune overtakes them shall she not stand by them? For one I am ready here and now to say to the country that the Government of the United States is supreme in this land, and to further announce that the laws of this country must and shall be obeyed, and further, that whenever any of her faithful officers are stricken down while in the discharge of their duties that want and starvation will be kept from their doors at least during the time that their wounds are being healed. [Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

Mr. BRAGG. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BRAGG. The gentleman from Michigan is not discussing the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BRAGG] raises the point of order that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HORR] is not discussing his appeal from the decision of the Chair, and the Chair sustains the point of order. The Chair hopes that the gentleman from Michigan will confine himself to his appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. HORR. I have been endeavoring to show, and I wish to show, that while I am aware this might open the door to further expenditure, and on that account be subject, perhaps without an examination, to a point of order, still the Government ought to stand by these men. [Cries of "Vote!" and "Order!"] I know, gentlemen, and you men who are shouting "vote" ought to know, as I have already stated, that this is the eighteenth man who has been stricken down in this same district during the last four years while attempting to enforce the laws of our land; and I desire to say to you, gentlemen of the South, that—[cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] Mr. Chairman, I wish to say——

Mr. ATHERTON. I rise to a point of order.

Mr. HORR. I cannot finish my remarks in such an uproar. Members should remember that my voice is feeble. [Laughter.]

Mr. ATHERTON. I make the point that the gentleman is simply continuing the line of remark which the Chair has already declared out of order.

Mr. HORR. I am discussing the point of order; and I trust when I get through the Chair will not be sustained in his ruling.

Mr. ATHERTON. Am I not upon the floor on my question of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has sustained the point of order made by the gentleman.

Mr. ATHERTON. I want to say further——

A MEMBER. You cannot discuss your point of order after it has been sustained.

The CHAIRMAN. It is impossible for the Chair to restrain the gentleman from Michigan in his line of discussion when, after being informed what is a violation of the rules of order, he continues to violate them.

Mr. WILBER. I think there has been disorder all around.

Mr. HORR. I should have been done before this time if I had not been interrupted. I simply desire to add that this is not a question which appeals to sectional strife. This man who has been stricken down as I have already stated—— [Cries of "Order!"]

Mr. BURROWS. I make a point of order that when a member has been recognized, and is addressing the Chair, no man and no body of men have the right to cry him down.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MCMAHON. I desire to amend the gentleman's point of order by adding that no man has the right to proceed out of order against the express remonstrance of the Chair.

Mr. WILBER. I insist that the Chair and not the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCMAHON] has the right to enforce points of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hopes that order will be observed on both the right and the left.

Mr. COX. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. How long does this debate run?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is limited to five minutes.

Mr. HORR. I was simply going to add that this is not a sectional case. This marshal was born on the soil of South Carolina, and all I seek is to insist that he shall be saved from starvation during his painful illness, especially since he has fallen while in the discharge of his duty and during an attempt to enforce the laws of our common country.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BURROWS. Under what rule?

The CHAIRMAN. Under the five-minute rule.

Mr. BURROWS. The five-minute rule does not apply on an appeal.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee of the Whole, to which the question was referred the other day, has decided otherwise. Does the gentleman appeal from the decision of the Chair?

Mr. BURROWS. I understood the Chair to say that the gentleman's five minutes had expired. I wish to state that, in my judgment, there is no rule limiting debate on an appeal to five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that when the Committee of the Whole is acting under the five-minute rule, debate on all questions, incidental as well as direct, is limited by that rule. That has been the decision of the Chair heretofore, and the Committee of the Whole sustained the decision.

The question being taken, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee? it was decided in the affirmative.

The Clerk read as follows:

For expenses and fees of bailiffs, furniture, for payment of expenses of district judges who may be sent out of their districts in pursuance of law, and for other miscellaneous expenses, $325,000; in all, $2,950,000.

Mr. MCMAHON. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to move to amend by inserting after the paragraph just read the following:

To supply district judges and district attorneys, who have not already received the same, with the reports of the Supreme Court and Statutes at Large of the United States, and also to furnish complete sets of the same where there are none, at such points where United States courts are authorized to be held, and to supply broken sets where there are missing volumes, a sufficient sum of money is hereby appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOUSE. I move to amend by inserting after the amendment just adopted the provision which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

For payment to Seraphene, the widow, and Rosalie and Josie Trigg, daughters of Connally F. Trigg, late United States district judge for the middle and eastern division of Tennessee, the balance for the year of his salary from April 25, 1880, the time of his death, to August 25, 1880, the date of the qualification of his successor, the sum of $1,166.66.

Mr. BLOUNT. There is no authority of law for that.

Several MEMBERS, (to Mr. BLOUNT.) Do not make a point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. Very well; I withdraw the point.

Mr. WARNER. If there is no authority of law for the amendment I must renew the point of order.

Mr. SPARKS. If the gentleman from Ohio does not, I will.

Mr. HOUSE. It is subject to a point of order, if gentlemen choose to make it. But it is only to pay a few months' salary to the widow and daughters of a United States judge.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I move to amend by inserting the following:

To enable the Attorney-General to provide for the preservation of the records of the United States courts at Frankfort, Kentucky, by rebinding, indexing, and arranging the same under his direction, $1,000.

In support of the amendment I ask to have read a dispatch from the Department of Justice.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., February 25, 1881.

To J. C. COURTS:

In reply to your telegram of to-day the following is suggested as a draught of a clause to general sundry civil bill: "To enable the Attorney-General to provide for the preservation of the records of the United States courts at Frankfort, Kentucky, by rebinding, indexing, and arranging the same under his directions, $1,000."

SAML. MULLIKEN.

Mr. BLOUNT. There is no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMAHON. At the request of the chairman of the committee, I offer the following amendment:

For the purpose of preparing and publishing the reports of the supreme court of the Territory of Wyoming, from the March term, 1878 to 1881, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

STATE DEPARTMENT.

For commissioners, not exceeding three in number, to represent the United States at a conference to be called to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bimetallic money and securing fixity of relative value between those metals, the sum of $5,000 each, and their reasonable expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of State; and for a secretary to each of such commissioners, the sum of $3,000; the amount necessary to pay such compensation and expenses to be immediately available out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I make the point of order that that is new legislation and increases expenditures, and is therefore not in order in this general appropriation bill.

Mr. WARNER. On the point of order I desire to say that by the act of February 28, 1878, the President was authorized to call a conference to establish a common ratio between gold and silver in the mintage of the different countries. Second section of that act provided in terms that "immediately after the passage of this act the President shall invite the governments of the countries composing the Latin Union, so-called, and of such other representative nations as he may deem advisable, to join the United States in a conference to adopt a common ratio between gold and silver, for the purpose of establishing internationally the use of bimetallic money," &c. Under this act a preliminary conference was called, which met at Paris in August, 1878. An appropriation to pay the commissioners was contained in the act approved June 20, 1878.

At the first session of the Forty-sixth Congress $20,000 more was appropriated "for negotiations"—and I will quote the words of the act—"with foreign governments, with a view to the international remonetization of silver." Under that act and with that appropriation negotiations have been carried on prudently and wisely, I think, by the Secretary of State; and as a result of his negotiations France has asked the United States to join in an invitation to the states that participated in the conference of 1878, and also to other states, to a further conference, with a view to establishing internationally bimetallic money on a common ratio.

Mr. WEAVER. I hope we will have order, so that we may hear what the gentleman is saying.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I have not been able to hear a single sentence that has been uttered.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired, but in view of the interruption the Chair will give him two minutes longer.

Mr. WARNER. I was calling the attention of the Chair, as bearing upon the point of order, to the act of 1878, and especially the act of the first session of the Forty-sixth Congress, in which $20,000 was appropriated for negotiations with foreign governments with a view to the international remonetization of silver. In pursuance of that act, I say negotiations have been carried on by the Secretary of State, and, as a result of such negotiations, a further conference is asked. The conference now proposed, therefore, is in continuation of the very purpose for which the $20,000 was appropriated in 1879. I submit, therefore, that it is not new legislation, but in pursuance of legislation already on the statute-books that this appropriation is asked, and, therefore, not subject to the point of order; and as to the merits of the question, I think there can hardly be two opinions.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. The gentleman only shows that appropriations have been made, which does not relieve it from the point of order.

Mr. WARNER. I beg pardon; I referred also to the act of the 28th of February, 1878.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. That does not constitute law in the meaning of the rule.

Mr. WARNER. Besides, Mr. Chairman, the Constitution itself, which is the supreme law, under the treaty-making power gives the President authority, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint ministers and embassadors; but as the power to "coin money" and "regulate the value thereof" is lodged with Congress, of course any negotiations must come to Congress for confirmation or rejection.

Mr. WEAVER. Certainly it cannot be claimed that this section of the bill is not subject to the point of order. Will any gentleman contend that you could pay the salaries of these commissioners without an appropriation? Certainly not. There in no law in the world for it now, and the very object of this paragraph is to provide money. It is new legislation, and does not retrench expenditure, and therefore I can see no reason in the world why it should be inserted into this bill. It is simply an attempt to bring about some kind of international agreement or quasi-legislation to be followed finally by an act of Congress by which the silver product of this country will be so manipulated that it will be impossible to pay it out for the public debt. For the purpose of placing this country, the greatest silver-producing country of the world, within the power of France, it will limit the amount of silver we shall have in circulation.

Mr. WARNER. I hope the gentleman will discuss the point of order.

Mr. WEAVER. I am. That is the object of this legislation. It is new legislation. It is very well known to the members of this House that the Latin Union restricts the members of that union to the amount of silver they shall keep in circulation. That is the amount of this legislation, and that is one of the objects of appointing this commission.

The gentleman from Ohio says that the proposition is for unlimited coin; but this is to ask the powers of Europe to allow us to have unlimited coinage in this country. I object to it. If they do agree it will be of a kind and character that will not be used in payment of the public debts, and I am opposed in principle to the whole proposition, and regard it as obnoxious to the point of order made against it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will rule upon this question. It is manifest that it is not new legislation. It is only legislation prescribing in detail what parties are to be paid in pursuance of this prior legislation. Consequently, it is in pursuance of existing law, and the Chair holds that it is in order.

Mr. MONEY. I desire to offer an amendment to this paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of State is hereby required and instructed to address circular letters to diplomatic and consular officers of the United States residing in governments having adopted Government postal-telegraph systems, requesting them to report upon the workings of such systems in the governments to which they are accredited, giving the rates charged, the cost of construction and operation, and all other facts which may be obtained in reference thereto. Such reports shall be printed and transmitted to Congress at its session in December next.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make a point of order upon that.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman state his point of order?

Mr. BLOUNT. It is new legislation.

Mr. MONEY. It does not cost a cent.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I hope the gentleman from Georgia will not insist upon the point of order. This is important information, which the Government ought to have.

Mr. BLOUNT. I must insist upon the point of order.

Mr. MONEY. I will say that it does not cost the Government a single cent. It simply requires our consular agents to furnish us with this information upon questions of great importance.

Mr. BLOUNT. It is new legislation, and not authorized to be placed in this bill.

Mr. MONEY. But, I repeat, it does not cost anything.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair holds that the point of order is well taken. It is new legislation.

Mr. MONEY. But the Chair will observe that this involves no expense to the Government whatever.

The CHAIRMAN. In order to bring it within the rule it must tend to reduce expenditures. There is nothing here to show that this does. The Chair consequently holds that it is out of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the proportion to be paid by the United States of the joint expenses of such conference, the sum of $7,500. And the report of said commissioners shall be made to Congress for ratification or rejection.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to offer an amendment to this paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That the commissioners on the part of the United States shall be instructed to agree to no adjustment which does not recognize silver coin as a part of the money system of the governments joining in such conference.

Mr. SPRINGER. I am in favor of this commission, and I simply want to add this by way of a proviso to the paragraph. I think there will be no objection to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KEIFER. I wish to offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay to the officers and employés of the House of Representatives borne on the annual roll on the 15th day of June, 1880, one month's extra pay at the compensation then paid them by law, which sum shall be immediately available.

Mr. KEIFER. I wish to state that this amendment is identical with the provisions of House resolution No. 333, which passed the House on the 15th of June last, and which was indefinitely postponed by the Senate. It is identical in substance with the act of July 1, 1879, first session of the Forty-sixth Congress. I will say also, Mr. Chairman, that it has been customary for many years to give one month's additional pay to the employés of the two Houses upon the theory somewhat of its being in the nature of mileage, most of the employés living at remote parts of the United States. It also equalizes the salaries of the employés of the House with those of the Senate; the latter receiving in some instances all the way from 10 to 40 per cent. greater compensation than the House employés performing similar duties. I hope there will be no objection to the amendment.

Mr. VANCE. Why not include the Capitol police serving under the House in this item?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay the widow of Hon. E. W. Farr, deceased, late a member of the Forty-sixth Congress, $1,626, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. FORT. I wish to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Charles Diemar a sum equal to one month's pay at the date of his discharge from the disabled soldiers' roll.

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to hear an explanation of this amendment. I will not make the point of order at this time.

Mr. FORT. This is a one-armed soldier that happened to be discharged, and it is usual to pay one month's extra pay in such cases.

Mr. BLOUNT. Let it go.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay the following claims, audited and recommended by the Committee on Accounts, to wit: To L. Q. Washington, $234; to John E. Kelly, $30; to Watson Boyle, $200; to J. C. Courts, $400; to J. S. Jones, $54.12; to Silas Carr, $100; and to Alvah W. Hicks, $100; the same to be immediately available.

Mr. BARBER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the paragraph just read insert the following:
"To pay Buford C. Lee the sum of $75, to be immediately available."

Mr. BLOUNT. That, I will inform the gentleman from Illinois, is already in the deficiency bill.

Mr. BARBER. Then I withdraw the amendment.

The Clerk read the following:

That the parties named below be allowed the amounts set opposite their names, in full of expenses incurred by them respectively in contested-election cases.

Mr. WHITE. I raise the point of order against that clause. The point of order is that it is new legislation not authorized by previous law and not in the interest of economy.

The CHAIRMAN. The whole paragraph has not been read.

Mr. WHITE. The paragraph has been read.

Mr. HAYES. How far does the paragraph extend?

Mr. WHITE. My point of order is made on the paragraph just read, extending from line 1236 to line 1238. That raises the question and relieves me of the necessity of raising it on each paragraph mentioning the name of each individual.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman again state his point of order?

Mr. WHITE. My point of order is that the paragraph is obnoxious to the twenty-first rule with which the Chair is familiar.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest that the clause which has been read does not of itself make an appropriation and the point of order does not lie against it.

Mr. WHITE. Then I will wait till the next clause is read.

Mr. HAYES. That is the enacting clause of what follows.

The Clerk read as follows:

Jere Haralson, $1,250.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania waive his point of order on the lines first read from 1236 to 1238?

Mr. WHITE. I make the point of order on the lines from 1236 to 1240, including what has just been read:

Jere Haralson, $1,250.

I raise the point of order in this case so that I may not be charged with discriminating against anybody.

Mr. BLOUNT. I wish to ask the gentleman a question for information; if the point of order he raises would not apply to all that follows to the end of the bill?

Mr. WHITE. Yes, sir; but I desire to make the point of order here. I raise it right here and it is this: that this is obnoxious to the twenty-first rule; that it is new legislation not authorized by existing law and not in the interest of economy. It is not necessary for me to repeat the rule, it is so familiarly known.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like the gentleman to refer to the law on the subject of paying expenses in contested-election cases.

Mr. WHITE. There is no statute on that subject.

Mr. KEIFER. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania will ever get through stating his point of order, I will read the law on the subject.

Mr. WHITE. I am stating the point of order.

Mr. KEIFER. The gentleman is stating it over and over again by saying there is no law on the subject, when there is.

Mr. WHITE. Where is the law?

Mr. KEIFER. I will state it when the gentleman gets through.

Mr. WHITE. I am merely exercising my duty here. I make the point of order as distinctly as I can make it, that this is contrary to the twenty-first rule, that there is no law authorizing this expenditure, and that it is not in the interest of economy.

What clearer does the gentleman want than this statement? Now, sir, while I am upon the floor I will indicate my position by saying this is in no sense a political question. I object to the principle of these appropriations. I care not whether I strike friend or foe in so doing. This item is for Jere Haralson, who is a colored republican, I believe, from Alabama. He contested for a seat and lost. Following this are items for a number of cases. A few clauses further on there is an appropriation for Noble A. Hull, of $2,000. Now, this Mr. Hull sat here for nearly two years, drawing his salary and mileage all the while, amounting to nearly, indeed more, I believe, than ten thousand dollars. He was turned out by the unanimous report of the Committee on Elections a few weeks ago, and his contestant, Mr. BISBEE, seated. Mr. Hull, it seems, had not the shadow of a claim to the seat, yet it is proposed to give him $2,000 as an encouragement for fighting and keeping the rightful occupant from his seat. There are other appropriations in contests of some twelve to fifteen years ago. There are appropriations to the losing side as well as the successful.

This is, in my opinion, not right. It is a well-recognized rule of common-law proceedings that in litigation the losing party pays the costs. Yet in these appropriations the losing man gets as much as the successful one. I have counted up the different items following, and they amount to $37,431.12. Of this sum, $8,623.95 is given to the losing parties. This has been growing and growing for years upon the Government. It is a practice more honored in the breach than in the observance. If you continue to indulge this extravagance you will invite contests all over the country. If I had the power I would make an inexorable rule to pay in no case the losing party anything. You would then prevent much of that log-rolling which makes the contestant's friends, as well as those of the contestee, vote to pay both parties. In many of the State Legislatures this folly and extravagance became so flagrant that it was stopped by constitutional provision. Notably is this the case in Pennsylvania. I shall oppose all these items. I care not what may be the party politics of the person to whom the appropriation is made. It is a matter of principle with me, and I hope Congress will call a halt on this abuse.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to state for the information of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that there are two statutes on this subject. One of them is a section in the Revised Statutes—I cannot give the number now—which provides that the witnesses appearing before commissioners taking testimony in contested-election cases shall be entitled to so much per diem for their attendance, and that the notaries public shall also be entitled to so much per folio for taking the testimony.

There is also a statute, passed at the last session of the last Congress, which limits the amount to be allowed in any contested-election cases to $2,000 upon each side. There are two statutes, then, which recognize and authorize the payment of expenses of this kind. And in addition to that, it has always been the custom of Congress.

Mr. KEIFER. If it is desired, I can have the sections of the statutes read.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. The statute in relation to the payment of witnesses provides for the expenses being paid by the parties, and not by the Government. It is as follows:

SEC. 128. Every witness attending by virtue of any subpœna herein directed to be issued shall be entitled to receive the sum of seventy-five cents for each day's attendance, and the further sum of five cents for every mile necessarily traveled in going and returning. Such allowance shall be ascertained and certified by the officer taking the examination, and shall be paid by the party at whose instance such witness was summoned.

Mr. McMAHON. The gentleman from New York forgets that a contested-election case is never treated by the Government as a contest between two private individuals. It is regarded as in the interest of the public, for the benefit of the electors, and in the interest of good government; and therefore it was never contemplated and never has been the practice that the individual should bear the expense.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to decide the question. The Chair is familiar with the law which was passed while he was chairman of the Committee on Elections. It is said that in no case should the expenses of contestants or contestees exceed $2,000, which was an implied admission that they had a right to expenses going to $2,000. Therefore the Chair overrules the point of order so far as relates to this paragraph giving to Jere Haralson, $1,250.

Mr. WHITE. Then I move to strike out the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the paragraph which the gentleman moves to strike out.

The Clerk read as follows:

Jere Haralson, $1,250.

Mr. WHITE. I find that section 130 of the Revised Statutes provides as follows:

No payment shall be made by the House of Representatives out of its contingent fund or otherwise, to either party to a contested-election case, for expenses incurred in prosecuting or defending the same.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is familiar with that law. It used to be the habit of the House on the last day of the session to pay from the contingent fund large amounts by resolution for expenses in contested-election cases. Therefore, the law was changed so that such payments should be by an act approved by both Houses and signed by the President, in the nature of a law. That has no application to the appropriations in this bill.

Mr. WHITE. I merely want to state my conviction about this matter.

Mr. WILSON. Ask leave to print. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. WHITE. I know it is an ungracious proceeding to assail a provision like this. Here are a lot of old stale claims revived in an appropriation bill and sought to be run through in the late hours of a Saturday's session. I rise for one to protest against it. I find that the aggregate appropriation proposed in this bill for this purpose is over thirty-five thousand dollars; some of them being for old claims of thirteen to sixteen years' standing. The amount appropriated for persons who commenced contests and lost is $8,600. We are establishing and recognizing a principle here which is obnoxious to the principles of our common-law courts. When a man commences a contest and fails he should pay the expenses out of his own pocket.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I support this amendment because I desire to root out an evil that has grown up in the practice both of this House and in the Senate. It has become the custom to allow large sums of money each year for the pay of expenses in contested-election cases. It has come to be understood that in every contested-election case both the contestant and contestee are to be paid out of the public Treasury the expenses which they have incurred in making their contest. This has resulted in encouraging parties to make contests even when, in many instances, they had no good ground for so doing. These contests have not only taken up much of the time of the Election Committee and the House, thus greatly delaying important public business, but they have cost and are now costing us a large sum of money each year. How large this sum is I suspect very few gentlemen on this floor understand. I have taken some pains to look the matter up and to ascertain what we have paid out in connection with these cases during the past few years. I find in the laws of the second session of the Forty-fifth Congress a resolution, approved June 19, 1878, and appropriating the following sums to the parties herein named on account and in part of the amounts due them for expenses of contest for seats in the House of Representatives, Forty-fifth Congress of the United States: J. J. Finley, second district Florida, $1,000; Jere Haralson, fourth district Alabama, $1,000; John S. Richardson, first district South Carolina, $1,000; G. D. Tilman, fifth district South Carolina, $1,000; Peter D. Wigginton, fourth district California, $1,000; R. Pacheco, fourth district California, $1,000; Thomas M. Patterson, Colorado, $1,000; James B. Belford, Colorado, $1,000; J. H. Acklen, third district Louisiana, $1,000; Chester B. Darrall, third district Louisiana, $1,000; John R. Lynch, sixth district Mississippi, $500; and to M. P. O'Connor, sixth district South Carolina, the sum of $500 for all his expenses of contest.

The aggregate of the above items amounts to $11,000. In addition to this, I find in the sundry civil bill for 1880, passed at the third session of the Forty-fifth Congress, approved March 3, 1879, the following items appropriated.

In the Senate:

Pay to D. T. Corbin, late contestant for a seat in the United States Senate from the State of South Carolina, his expenses of such contest, $10,000.

In the House the following:

That the parties named below be allowed the amounts set opposite their names on account of expenses incurred by them respectively in contested-election cases: Charles M. Shelley, $2,500; Jere Haralson, $2,500; P. D. Wigginton, $2,500; Romualdo Pacheco, $2,000; T. M. Patterson, $237.35; J. B. Belford, $666; J. J. Finley, $1,262.71; Horatio Bisbee, jr., $4,000; J. H. Acklen, $2,000; C. B. Darrall, $1,000; J. B. Elam, $500; C. E. Nash, $1,000; E. W. Robertson, $750; Benjamin Dean, $1,500; Walbridge A. Field, $1,500; John R. Lynch, $1,000; Lyne S. Metcalf, $1,700; R. Graham Frost, $2,000; James L. Nutting, $4,000; James B. Reilly, $4,000; John S. Richardson, $2,000; Joseph H. Rainey, $2,500; G. D. Tillman, $2,000; Robert Smalls, $2,500; Joseph Jorgensen, $1,000; in all, $46,616.06, to be immediately available.

The aggregate of these items in both Senate and House amounts to $56,616.06.

In the sundry civil bill for the year 1881, passed at the second session of the Forty-sixth Congress, and approved June 16, 1880, I find the following:

That the parties named below be allowed the amounts set opposite their names, in full of expenses incurred by them respectively in contested-election cases: Joseph Mason, $2,000; Sebastian Duffy, $2,000; J. M. Bradley, $1,500; W. F. Slemons, $1,500; in all, $7,000.

In addition to this, the Senate passed a resolution on the 22d of this month giving to H. M. Spofford, who was contesting the seat of Mr. KELLOGG, pay from the 4th of March, 1877, to August 20, 1880, amounting to about $20,000.

Now, sir, after having allowed all these sums, we find the Appropriations Committee recommending in the bill now before us as follows:

That the parties named below be allowed the amounts set opposite their names, in full of expenses incurred by them respectively in contested-election cases: Jere Haralson, $1,250; Charles M. Shelley, $1,250; Noble A. Hull, $2,000; Horatio Bisbee, $2,000; Ignatius Donnelly, $2,000; W. D. Washburn, $2,000; J. H. Acklen, $750; J. J. Martin, $2,000; Jesse J. Yeates, $2,000; J. E. O'Hara, $1,373.95; W. H. Kitchin, $1,000; George B. Loring, $1,943.17.

To pay John D. Young, of Kentucky, salary as a member of the Fortieth Congress, $6,865.

To pay George M. Adams, of Kentucky, his expenses in the contested-election case of Barnes against Adams for seat from the eighth congressional district of Kentucky, in the Forty-first Congress, $4,000.

To pay Thomas Cottman, of Louisiana, compensation as a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress from the State of Louisiana, $2,000.

To pay Randall L. Gibson, of Louisiana, the expenses of his election contest in the Forty-third Congress, $1,000.

To pay J. Hale Sypher in full of all claims for salary and mileage due him as a Representative in Congress from the first congressional district of Louisiana in the Forty-first Congress, and in full of all expenses incurred in contesting his election, $4,000.

The sum of the items in this bill is $37,432.12. If now we add all the sums that have thus far been appropriated for contested-election cases as I have indicated above, and the sum that is proposed to be appropriated by this bill, we have the grand aggregate of $132,048.18.

But this is not all. In the Forty-fifth Congress Mr. Finley, of Florida, was given a seat in this body, to which he was not entitled, just eight days before that Congress expired, and was allowed full salary and allowances for the whole two years of that Congress, which amounted at least to $11,000. Besides this, in the present Congress, Mr. Hull, from Florida also, was allowed to hold a seat in this body, to which he had no claim, until only a few days ago, when the rightful claimant was seated. Mr. Hull was allowed to go with another $11,000 of the people's money. Again, Mr. YEATES was given a seat a few days ago which belonged to Mr. Martin, and he was allowed pay for the whole of the two years during which he performed none of the duties of a member of this body, which pay amounts to another $11,000. Add these three sums to the $132,048.18, above mentioned, and we have the enormous sum of $165,048.18.

But this is only a part of what these contested-election cases have cost us. There are many other items, especially in regard to double salaries, which I have not been able to get, which, no doubt, would swell the above figures to over $200,000. These figures are startling, and it does seem to me that something should be done to prevent such a lavish expenditure of the people's money. As far as the past is concerned we can, of course, do nothing, but as to the future we can, and ought to, so hedge about contested-election cases that they shall not cost us such enormous sums of money as they have cost heretofore.

The question was taken upon the amendment of Mr. WHITE, and it was not agreed to—ayes 3, noes not counted.

Mr. WHITE. I shall move to strike out each clause as it is read, unless I can be allowed to move to strike them all out when their reading has been concluded.

Many MEMBERS. All right.

The Clerk read as follows:

Charles M. Shelley, $1,250.

Mr. SPEER. By instruction of the Committee on Elections, I move to insert after the clause just read that which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

N. P. O'Connor, $2,000.
E. W. M. Mackey, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

Noble A. Hull, $2,000.

Mr. KEIFER. I move to amend by striking out "$2,000" and inserting "$3,500."

Mr. BLOUNT. I make a point of order on that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be compelled, in a matter so plain as that——

Mr. KEIFER. I want to be heard upon that.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hopes the gentleman will not insist upon being heard.

Mr. KEIFER. I must insist upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will through courtesy hear the gentleman, for he has great respect for him.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to know what is the point of order.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will read from the sundry civil appropriation bill of last year:

That hereafter no contestee or contestant for a seat in the House of Representatives shall be paid exceeding $2,000 for expenses in election contests.

Mr. KEIFER. I suppose I understand fully the scope of the point of order. I submit that if the clause which has been read is binding on this House at all, it could not apply to this case. It cannot be held to be retroactive in its effect, to operate upon cases where the expenses were incurred in a contest going on at the time the law was passed. It will hardly do for the Chair, in giving construction to that law, to say that it applies to cases that were then being contested, and in which expenses had then been incurred.

I will state to the Chair, what will not be disputed, that this case of Noble A. Hull was in progress and nearly through at the time the Committee on Appropriations concluded that they would put in their appropriation bill of last year, in such a form that it was entirely overlooked by the House, a provision that hereafter no Congress should exercise its right and power to pay what had been justly and properly expended in carrying on election contests. I do not believe that is binding upon this House in the sense of a law. It is simply a naked declaration that any future Congress would do no more than allow the sum of $2,000 for expenses in election contests.

How would it do for us now to say, in the face of existing law, when we come to pass upon certain other cases that we will not pay what has already been contracted in the shape of expenses in old cases? The clause which the gentleman has read, and which the Chair has examined and is familiar with, certainly cannot apply to this case.

The CHAIRMAN. The mind of the Chair is so well made up on this question that he must beg that there be no further discussion upon the point of order. The limit of the law is $2,000, and the law is so plain that the Chair must sustain the point of order.

Mr. KEIFER. And I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the appeal to the committee.

Mr. MANNING. I am not sure that in all this hub-bub and confusion the Chair heard the point which the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] was endeavoring to make; and which was, that this two-thousand-dollar law, upon which the Chair predicates his decision, was passed subsequent to the incurring of the expenses in this case; and the legislation cannot apply to this case and to others in this bill which will soon be reached.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair took that fully into conideration. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 60, noes 54.

Before the result of the vote was announced,

Mr. KEIFER said: No quorum has voted, and I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. KEIFER and Mr. BLOUNT were appointed.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Will the Chair state the question before the committee?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] moved to increase the proposed allowance to Noble A. Hull from $2,000, the sum named in the bill, to $3,500. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] made the point of order that the appropriation could not go beyond $2,000, on the ground that the statute fixes that limit in such cases. The Chair sustained that point of order. The question is now, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee?

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 67, noes 65.

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

Mr. WHITE. I now move to strike out the pending item:

Noble A. Hull, $2,000.

Here is a gentleman—I do not know anything about him—who claimed a seat in Congress, and who sat here for nearly two years, drawing, I suppose, the salary in the mean time, amounting to nearly ten thousand dollars. The Committee on Elections reported, and this House decided, that he had no title to the seat; and now we propose to pay him $2,000 as a premium for holding for nearly two years a seat to which he was not entitled. I am opposed to that principle, and I want to make that square issue here. To allow expenses of contest in such a case violates the ordinary common-law rule recognized all over the country that a man who loses in a contest must pay his expenses. I want to make a record on this question and show what is the opinion of the House. I know it is an ungracious task to raise such a question; and I do it without any feeling, merely for the purpose of being consistent with what I believe to be a correct principle.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. White, it was not agreed to; there being ayes 4, noes not counted.

Mr. WEAVER. I move to amend by inserting after line 1242 the following:

Seth H. Yocum, $8,500; A. G. Curtin, $8,500.

Mr. ATHERTON. I make a point of order on that.

Mr. BLOUNT. I also make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WEAVER. I want to be heard a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question has just been discussed and decided on a similar proposition; and the Chair cannot permit the time of the committee to be consumed on a question which has just been decided by the committee itself.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Chairman, this is a different proposition. I must be heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order, and the gentleman must come to order.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Chairman, I appear here on behalf of the Committee on Elections, and I wish to be heard on this proposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order has just been made on a similar proposition and sustained by the Committee of the Whole. The Chair cannot allow the time of the committee to be consumed by hearing the same question again discussed.

Mr. WEAVER. I appeal from the decision of the Chair; and I wish to be heard a moment. This amendment is offered by direction of the Committee on Elections. It is well known, at least to members of that committee, that the contest to which gentlemen named in this amendment were parties was in progress at the time that the law which has been read was passed; and every cent of this expenditure was incurred before the publication of that law. The truth is that these gentlemen had each expended over $17,000 in prosecuting the contest; and for this Congress to say that they shall not be reimbursed beyond $2,000 of their expenses is simply to say that no man shall prosecute a contest for a seat in this House unless he is a man of wealth. I submit that the law which has been read cannot apply to a case in which every dollar of expenditure was incurred before the law was in existence.

The question being taken, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee? there were—ayes 77, noes 38.

Mr. WEAVER. No quorum has voted; I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. BLOUNT and Mr. WEAVER were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 78, noes 54.

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

Mr. BLOUNT. I desire to make a statement. The last vote shows no quorum present. This bill cannot be passed unless we have a quorum. The Senate is in session waiting for the bill; and I simply make this statement, accompanied by a request that members will remain here until the bill is passed.

Mr. SPRINGER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, to come in after line 1244.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay John J. Wilson, $750; J. C. Holmes, $750; James McCabe, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay Ignatius Donnelly, $2,000.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. I move to strike out that line. I do not make any objection to paying anybody for a contest, if they had the color of a claim; but in this case pressed forward by a pirate [cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] in politics and a freebooter—[cries of "Vote!" "Vote!" and "Regular order!"]

Mr. MANNING. If the gentleman from New York would only speak according to the facts of the case and without malignity, then, perhaps, I might deem it necessary to answer him.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. And where a man seeks to establish his claim by fraud, perjury, and forgery, [cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] now I say the dignity of the House is involved, and we ought not to pay such a claim.

Mr. MANNING. That is all inane gabble. Mr. Donnelly is a gentleman. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. Then I ask consent to print the rest of my remarks upon this subject.

Mr. MORRISON and others objected.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay J. H. Acklen, $750.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. I move to strike out that line.

The amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. WEAVER. I move to insert after line 1245 the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay E. Moody Boynton, $2,000.

Mr. WEAVER. I offer this by the authority of the Committee on Elections.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 86, noes 3.

Mr. WHITE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. ANDERSON. Then I suggest that the gentleman from Georgia call the House, so that we may have a quorum to put the bill through to-night.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. WHITE and Mr. WEAVER were appointed tellers.

Mr. SPRINGER. The objection of the gentleman from Pennsylvania can only end in confusion here. We must pass the bill to-night or it will be too late. I hope he will withdraw it.

Mr. COX. I raised the point of order before tellers were called for.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. COX. I will not make the point of order that I intended to make, but I will make the point whether or not it would be in order for the Chair to reduce the number of members in this House to the orderly conduct of business. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. It is impossible for the Chair to control two hundred and ninety-two members unless they are disposed to be controlled.

Mr. COBB. What is the pending amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the pending amendment.

The amendment was again read.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order was made that no quorum had voted, and the Chair appointed tellers. The Chair will ask the Doorkeeper and Sergeant-at-Arms to notify members to come in, in order that there may be a quorum. If a quorum appears this bill will be passed to-night, otherwise under the rules the roll will have to be called, and it may take all night to get through with it.

Mr. WHITE. I thought I could induce the gentleman to withdraw his resolution on the point that no quorum has voted; therefore I withdraw the point.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order as to a quorum having been withdrawn, the ayes are 86, noes 3; therefore the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. MORSE. I give notice that I will call for the yeas and nays on that amendment in the House.

Mr. COWGILL. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert after the amendment just adopted, Godlove S. Orth, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay George M. Adams, of Kentucky, his expenses in the contested-election case of Barnes against Adams for seat from the eighth congressional district of Kentucky in the Forty-first Congress, $4,000.

Mr. WHITE. I make the point of order that $4,000 is not authorized by law. The law limits it to $2,000.

Mr. SPEER. That was contracted before the law was passed.

Mr. BURROWS. So were the others which were ruled out to-day.

Mr. PHISTER. Mr. Chairman, let me say a word in reference to this matter. This clause of the bill arises out of a contest that occurred a number of years ago. Mr. Barnes was the unsuccessful contestant; and he was allowed by Congress $5,000 to pay his expenses.

Mr. Adams was successful in that contest and retained his seat, and although he incurred an equal amount of expense yet he is allowed in this bill $1,000 less than was allowed Mr. Barnes. This Congress will not, I hope, commit itself to the mistake of offering a premium against the right in favor of the wrong, by discriminating against Mr. Adams, who had the right on his side, in favor of one who was declared not to be entitled to the seat.

Now, as his competitor in that contest received $5,000, it seems to me only fair and just that the successful member, whose right was clearly established, should receive an equal amount at least; and certainly it ought not to be reduced below the amount which the committee has allowed him in the bill.

Mr. CARLISLE. Mr. Chairman, I know how anxious the committee is to vote and conclude the consideration of this bill as early as possible, and therefore I will take but a few moments in discussing this matter. The fact has been already stated and will not be disputed by anybody that this contested-election case occurred several years before the passage of the act of 1879.

Mr. PAGE. There was no law for paying anybody before then.

Mr. CARLISLE. That act provides that hereafter no more than $2,000 shall be paid to defray the expenses of contests in such cases, and that this shall not be paid unless the party shall have taken vouchers for his expenditures and filed them with the Clerk.

Now, it is said that this is out of order because it proposes to appropriate more than $2,000. In other words, it is contended that this law which provides that hereafter not exceeding $2,000 shall be paid, applies to contested-election cases which occurred four, five, or six years previous to the passage of the law. I think my friend from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] makes the best illustration of that sort of construction, when he says that upon the same principle a gentleman should have the right to resolve, now, that hereafter he will not pay more than $10 a month for his board last January. This law operates simply on future contests and not on those which occurred prior to its passage. Otherwise the parties could not receive anything whatever, for they could not comply with that provision of the law which requires them to take vouchers when the payment is made, and file them with the Clerk.

Mr. ATHERTON. I desire to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the point of order requires no further debate. He considers that this case stands by itself, the expenses having accrued before the passage of the law, and the Chair will therefore take the opinion of the committee on the point of order.

Mr. BRAGG. Before the question is submitted, I would like to say a word on the question of law as put by the gentleman from Kentucky, unless the Chair holds that the point should be decided when only one view has been presented, and not the other.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BRAGG. There was no law providing for the payment of election expenses until the passage of the law of 1879. There was a law for the payment of witnesses, but not for the payment of counsel. And I desire to say to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] that is not a law creating a power or granting a right, but a law limiting the appropriating power of the Government. The gentleman from Kentucky says it is unwise and impolitic to apply that law to old cases. Let me suggest to the gentleman from Kentucky it is no more unwise for us to make that application of the law than it was for a contestant who claims he expended $4,000 in his contest to lie out of it from the Forty-first Congress to the closing hours of the Forty-sixth and then come in and ask payment.

Mr. CARLISLE. I do not say it was unwise or impolitic for us to apply the law. I said the statute or law itself did not apply.

Mr. KEIFER addressed the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hopes he will be allowed to submit the question to the committee.

Mr. KEIFER. Very well.

The CHAIRMAN. The question the Chair submits to the committee is this: Is the point of order well taken?

The question being taken, there were ayes 18.

Those who voted in the negative having risen,

The CHAIRMAN said: It is evident that a large majority have voted in the negative.

Mr. ATHERTON. I do not think the committee understood the question on which it was voting.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair stated it very distinctly. But he will submit it again. If a majority of the committee vote "ay" the point of order is sustained and the paragraph is ruled out. If a majority shall vote "no" the committee decides that the point of order is not well taken.

Mr. BRAGG. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BRAGG. Did not the Chair rule a short time since that $2,000 was the limitation under the statute, and was he not sustained by the committee in that ruling?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman had his right to appeal from the decision of the Chair and has no right now to criticise it.

Mr. BRAGG. I am not criticising the decision of the Chair. I am asking whether the decision of the Chair was not sustained.

The question being again taken, there were—ayes 15, noes 77.

So (further count not being called for) the point of order was not sustained.

The Clerk commenced the reading of the next paragraph.

Mr. CHALMERS. I move to strike out "$4,000" and insert "$2,000."

Mr. BLACKBURN. I make the point of order that the gentleman is too late in offering his amendment. The Clerk was reading the next paragraph.

Mr. CHALMERS. I was not too late. I rose to offer my amendment as soon as the point of order was settled. I rose immediately thereafter.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair did not hear the gentleman from Mississippi. But on his statement that he rose in time he will recognize him.

Mr. CHALMERS. I think a party should not be paid more than $2,000 whose debt, if it occurred at all, occurred before the passage of the law. That has been settled by the House in one case already, and I am opposed to stultifying ourselves by making a change in that ruling. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] says that hereafter, under the law, not more than $2,000 shall be paid; but he makes that applicable to debts contracted after the passage of the law. The law does not say so. The law simply says that hereafter not more than $2,000 shall be paid.

Now, the Clerk of the House is a popular man. I am a friend of the Clerk of the House, but I am opposed to doing injustice. I am opposed to applying one rule to one man and another to another.

The question being taken on the amendment offered by Mr. CHALMERS, to strike out "$4,000" and insert "$2,000,"

The CHAIRMAN stated that in the opinion of the Chair the "noes" had it.

Mr. WHITE. I call for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 19, noes 66.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay Frank Galt, assistant to the journal clerk, his salary for December, 1880, and up to and including January 27, 1881, at $6 per day, the pay of a committee clerk, $318, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. I will explain that in one word.

Mr. BLOUNT. Does that come from the Committee on Accounts?

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. It does.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection to that. It has been the rule for years to appropriate for such expenses.

Mr. WHITE. I raise the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WHITE. My point of order is that there is no law authorizing this payment.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. Yes, it is authorized.

Mr. WARNER. Was the service performed?

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. WHITE. I want the poor privilege of understanding what it is. If it is authorized by law, and all right, then I——

The CHAIRMAN. It is to pay a clerk for services rendered to this House.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. And authorized by resolution of this House.

Mr. WHITE. Has it been passed by the Committee on Accounts?

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. Yes.

Mr. WHITE. Why did you not say so?

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. I did, but you would not hear me.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following:

To pay Thomas Cottman, of Louisiana, compensation as a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress from the State of Louisiana, $2,000.

Mr. WEAVER. I hope the House will now see no further objection to the amendment which I wish to offer, and which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Andrew G. Curtin, $8,000; Seth H. Yocum, $3,000.

Mr. WEAVER. One word. Every dollar of this expenditure was incurred before the passage of that law.

Mr. RYON, of Pennsylvania. And a great deal more.

Mr. WEAVER. That amount twice over.

Mr. BLOUNT. Debate is not in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk began the reading of the next paragraph, when,

Mr. HUNTON said: I ask consent to go back to the paragraph providing for a portion of the funeral expenses of a member of this House, the late Mr. Douglas, of Virginia. I move to add to that paragraph, "the same to be immediately available."

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection to that; I think it is right.

There being no objection, the amendment of Mr. HUNTON was agreed to.

Mr. WEAVER. I want a vote on my amendment.

Mr. BRAGG. I raise a point of order on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] asked the attention of the Chair.

Mr. WEAVER. I want a vote on my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. What amendment?

Mr. WEAVER. The amendment to pay to Mr. Curtin and to Mr. YOCUM, $8,000 each.

Mr. BLOUNT. I made a point of order on that amendment.

Mr. BRAGG. My point of order is on the paragraph before that; the paragraph appropriating compensation to the person named, as a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress of the State of Louisiana. Now the point of order is——

Mr. ELLIS. The gentleman is too late; the paragraph has been read and passed.

Mr. BRAGG. No, sir; I made the point of order when the paragraph was read.

Mr. ELLIS. The point of order was not recognized by the Chair, and an amendment has been received since then.

Mr. WEAVER. In the first place, the paragraph was not read all through.

Mr. ELLIS. The point of order comes too late. The Clerk had finished the paragraph and passed on to the reading of the succeeding paragraph before the gentleman rose to make his point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not informed as a matter of fact whether that is correct or not.

Mr. ELLIS. The reading clerk can inform the Chair.

Mr. KEIFER. We do not understand what paragraph of the bill the point of order is made upon.

The CHAIRMAN. If gentlemen will be kind enough to keep order the Chair will endeavor to state the question before the committee. The gentleman from Wisconsin, [Mr. BRAGG,] raises a point of order upon the paragraph embracing lines 1262 to 1264, inclusive, to pay Thomas Cottman, &c. The gentleman from Louisiana, [Mr. ELLIS,] raises the point that the Clerk had begun the reading of the next paragraph, and therefore the point of order is made too late. The Chair does not recollect the facts, and will call upon the reading clerk to inform him.

Mr. BRAGG. In the first place, the Clerk did not read the entire paragraph. In the next place, I demanded the attention of the Chair immediately after the paragraph was read, and struggled to make my point of order before the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEAVER] was offered.

The CHAIRMAN. The reading clerk informs the Chair that he had announced the reading of the next paragraph before the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BRAGG] was heard to make his point of order.

Mr. BRAGG. The Chair is mistaken.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the information the Chair receives from the reading clerk.

Mr. ATHERTON. I was near the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BRAGG] all the time, and I know that he endeavored to obtain the attention of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from Wisconsin says that he rose in his place and tried to obtain recognition of the Chair before the Clerk read any further, the Chair will recognize the gentleman as in time to make his point of order.

Mr. BRAGG. I did. And the point of order I make is that this paragraph is new legislation and for a purpose not authorized by any law. If this gentleman was a member of Congress the law provides for his payment; and there is no necessity for passing this appropriation to pay him, for he could draw his salary under the general statute. I understand this is to pay a man who did not serve as a member of Congress.

Mr. CONGER. I understand that this man did not serve as a member of Congress; but this is to reward him for breaking through the lines and trying to get here.

Mr. ELLIS. I will state briefly the facts of the case. During the civil war a provisional government for the State of Louisiana was organized by President Lincoln. This gentleman, with four others, was elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress from the State of Louisiana. Their names were enrolled by the Clerk, and they participated in the organization of the House in that Congress. During the session the question was raised as to the right of the State of Louisiana to be represented in that Congress; and it was finally decided that she had no right to be represented in Congress at that time. The colleagues of this gentleman were all paid. A test question was made in the case of Judge Field, who was returned to the same Congress from the first district. They were all paid except Dr. Cottman; and he is certainly entitled to be paid.

Mr. BRAGG. I am not disputing his right to pay, if he has any just claim against the Government. What I am disputing is our right upon a sundry civil appropriation bill to pass a provision of law which recognizes a claim against the Government.

Mr. ATKINS. I do not know this old man at all; but I am perfectly satisfied in the first place that he was a loyal man; in the second place, I am perfectly satisfied that he was elected to this House; and in the third place, though he was a wealthy man at that time and did not ask for this compensation, he is now in indigent circumstances, almost at the door of the poor-house; and for that reason he now asks this allowance. I do not know anything about him personally; he lives in Philadelphia, I believe.

Mr. BRAGG. I desire to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations whether he thinks it proper legislation by a provision in a sundry civil appropriation bill to take an appeal from the action of the Congress to which it is stated this man was elected, and to determine in this way that he was entitled to the seat and entitled to salary?

Mr. ATKINS. I will answer my friend in this way: in every single case analogous to this the party has been paid by the action of Congresses which were just as good as this Congress.

Mr. ELLIS. The colleagues of Dr. Cottman were paid by the Thirty-eighth Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will decide the question upon the phraseology of the bill:

To pay Thomas Cottman, of Louisiana, compensation as a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress from the State of Louisiana, $2,000.

Mr. PRICE. But, Mr. Chairman, this man was not a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. But the paragraph implies that he was a member of Congress, whether he served or not.

Mr. ATKINS. There is a report on this case by the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. LINDSEY.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair knows that there is a law for the election of members of Congress; and this provision implies that this man was elected. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. BRAGG. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ATKINS. I ask that the report of Mr. LINDSEY, of Maine, upon this case be read.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no; print it.

Mr. ATKINS. Well, let it be printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection, and the report will be published in the RECORD.

The report is as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Thomas Cottman, have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

The claimant asks for compensation as a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress. It appears that the petitioner was a member of the State convention of Louisiana which passed the ordinance of secession; that he opposed the secession of the State to the utmost of his ability; that after the passage of the ordinance he attested it by his signature, but strenuously opposed every measure taken tending to its enforcement.

After the war commenced he was volunteer aid on General Wool's staff, at Baltimore. In October, 1862, he returned to New Orleans and assisted in the reorganization of the State government, under the direction of President Lincoln; designated the appointment of civil officers in certain parishes in the State, under the authority of General Shipley, military governor; returned north in 1863, and was intrusted by Mr. Lincoln with missions to parties in Mississippi in reference to the restoration of the Union. He was elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, at the regular time for the congressional election, to represent the second district of Louisiana. Judge A. T. Field was returned to the same Congress at the same time for the first district. They were both enrolled by the Clerk as members, and participated in the organization of the House. Afterward a question was raised as to the right of Louisiana to representation, and the matter was referred to the proper committee, and the case of Mr. Field agreed upon as a test case. The decision was adverse to the right of the State to representation, and they were excluded. Mr. Field was paid $2,000 by a resolution of the House.

Mr. Cottman is a physician by profession, and made no application at the time for compensation, but later proceedings were initiated by Mr. Field to procure compensation for his colleague also, but died before action was had.

It is proper to state that Field, Benzano, Wells, Taliaferro, and Hahn were elected to the following—the Thirty-ninth—Congress, but were not admitted to their seats, though each of them was paid the sum of $2,000.

Dr. Cottman remained in Washington for some time prosecuting his claim to a seat, and undoubtedly had probable ground for his claim, and, under the uniform usage, was entitled to compensation, and compensation was voted to all the parties similarly situated except him. He was then a man of fortune, and the compensation was not a matter of necessity with him. He is now far advanced in years, and is poor. Your committee think he is entitled to the same compensation received by his colleague and the others elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, ($2,000,) and they report the accompanying bill, and recommend that it do pass.

Mr. WHITE. Did I understand the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. ATKINS] to say that the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LINDSEY] had made a report in this case?

Mr. ATKINS. Yes, sir.

Mr. WHITE. A report about what?

Mr. SPRINGER. Sustaining this claim.

Mr. WHITE. Is there a bill pending?

Mr. BRAGG. It has been reported as a claim against the Government. It has never passed Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless an appeal is taken, the Clerk will read.

Mr. BRAGG. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. I understood the Chair to decide this question "upon the phraseology of the bill." Now, I wish to make this inquiry: suppose I offer an amendment describing one of our pages as a member of Congress, and providing compensation for him as such. Is that in order?

The CHAIRMAN. When the gentleman offers such an amendment, the Chair will decide on it. That question is not now before the committee. The Chair has trouble enough to decide questions before him. [Laughter.] The amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa will be again read.

The Clerk read as follows:

After line 1264 insert:

"A. G. Curtin, $8,000; Seth H. Yocum, $8,000."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has ruled upon this question believing that the expenses arose subsequent to the passage of the law. But if the information given to the Chair that these expenses were incurred before the passage of the law be correct, the Chair will submit the question to the committee.

Mr. MANNING. I desire whenever it is in order to offer an amendment to the amendment. I want to do justice to all. This House should not deal out justice to one man and injustice to another.

Mr. WEAVER. There is a point of order pending; no amendment is in order.

Mr. MANNING. I understood the Chair to say that he would submit the question to the Committee of the Whole.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair said that if he could be satisfied that these expenses were incurred before the passage of the law lim ting such allowances to $2,000, he would submit the question to the Committee of the Whole; but if the expenses were incurred after the passage of that law, he would rule the amendment out of order.

Mr. WEAVER. Not one dollar of these expenses was incurred after the passage of the law.

Mr. MANNING. That is true also in the cases of Hull vs. Bisbee and Donnelly vs. Washburn. If an allowance of this kind is made in the case of Curtin vs. Yocum it ought to be made also in these other cases.

Mr. SPRINGER. The case of Curtin vs. Yocum was one of the most voluminous contests ever brought into this House. It arose out of an election which took place in 1878. The contest began soon after that election, and the evidence was taken in the winter of 1878–79. The law to which reference has been made was approved March 3, 1879, after the expenses in this case had been incurred. The evidence when printed made four volumes of the size I hold in my hand. On sworn vouchers before the committee it appeared each of these contestants paid $13,000 in expenses.

Mr. ATHERTON. How much was taken before the act was passed and how much afterward?

The CHAIRMAN. The act was passed March 3, 1879. It is impossible to say how much of the evidence was taken before that time and how much afterward. Upon the statement of the chairman of the committee it was all taken before that time the Chair will submit the question whether it is in order or not.

Mr. SPRINGER. I find I have been mistaken in reference to the whole of the testimony being taken before the passage of the act of March 3, 1879. It seems that one-half of the testimony was taken before that time and one-half of it afterward, although all the expenses for attorneys were incurred before the passage of the act.

Mr. ATHERTON. I want to make a statement to the Chair. I do not propose to take more than five minutes, but I do propose to make a suggestion on the point of order. I ask the lawyers of the House whether it makes any difference whether this case occurred before the act of 1879, or afterward? Why does it make any difference? Why is it claimed that it makes any difference? It could only make a difference if there was a vested right in the case. Is there any vested right unless a man has rights under a contract or something of that kind?

Mr. BRAGG. Or previous law?

Mr. ATHERTON. Yes; or previous law? There was no law in force at the time which gave these men any rights at all.

Mr. KEIFER. That is a mistake. There was a law at that time.

Mr. ATHERTON. If there was a law, why does he not vindicate his rights under that law?

Mr. KEIFER. He is doing that here.

Mr. ATHERTON. No; there was no law in force at that time which gave him the right to anything. [Cries of "Order!"] One minute, and I am done. I regret to take the time of the committee. This is simply a demand upon the bounty of the Government, and no claim arising by virtue of any contract or previous law.

Mr. WILSON. Does the gentleman not know that prior to the passage of the two-thousand-dollar law, it was the practice of Congress to pay these expenses?

Mr. ATHERTON. I do not care what the practice is; I am talking about vested rights.

Mr. WILSON. Not only to pay the expenses, but to pay the salary.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I wish to say a word, and I can say it in a minute if I can get the attention of the committee. The Chair has asked to submit this point to the committee, if I understand him.

Mr. WHITE. No.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. The gentleman says no; but I say, as I understand it, the Chair desires to present this case to the committee for action. I only want to say that I think the Chair is right on that point, and that the point of order is not well taken.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair states that being informed these expenses were incurred previous to the passage of the law, he would do as he did in the case of Adams, and submit it to the committee. The chairman of the Committee on Elections informed the Chair these expenses were so incurred, and subsequently he said that some of them were incurred before the passage of the law, and some afterward. Still, as it is more complicated, he will submit it to the committee, only asking a vote so we may get on with the business.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. These men ought to be paid from motives of public policy and in order that we may preserve the purity of the ballot. The gentleman says there is no contract to pay them. They ought to be paid every legitimate expense. It is not right to make fish of one and flesh of another.

Mr. HAWLEY. One single word on this matter. The gentleman makes the point that in the absence of the law of March 3, 1879, there was no law for the payment of any expenses incurred by contestants. I affirm there was. In the first place, there was the right of Congress to do it. Then there was the common law; the custom to do it generation after generation; and this is law enough.

Mr. KEIFER. I desire to say a word in conclusion. I have said to the gentleman from Ohio who says there was no law prior to the passage of the act of March 3, 1879, that he was mistaken.

Mr. ATHERTON. Where is the law?

Mr. KEIFER. If the gentleman will read the Revised Statutes he will find the law is not only specific but defines the amount which is to be paid.

Mr. ATHERTON. If the gentleman knows so much why can he not point to the law?

Mr. KEIFER. It has been twice read to-night during the discussion, but the gentleman seems not to have heard it. It fixes the fees to be paid to witnesses by the Government, or that is the effect of it, and of the notaries and all the officers of the Goverement.

Now, let me say, I regard this statute of the 3d of March, 1879, as the most absurd thing which was ever written into a law.

Mr. WARNER. Therefore, you propose to nullify it here.

Mr. KEIFER. It is equivalent to saying that the Constitution failed to give members of Congress the right to vote as they please. It is equivalent to saying that hereafter no member of Congress shall vote to pay a just claim in the matter of contested elections however just or proper or right it may be if the amount exceeds $2,000, no matter what may have been necessarily expended in establishing the right. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. ATHERTON. I simply want to say right here [cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"] that the gentleman is mistaken in his interpretation of the statute. It only made provision for the expenses of the officers taking depositions in such cases, but required the parties to pay their own expenses. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must insist on the committee's being in order.

Mr. ATKINS. I wish to say, Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The committee must be in order. The Chair desires to state the question.

Mr. MANNING. I rise to a question of order. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The committee must be in order. The Chair cannot understand what gentlemen are saying. The Sergeant-at-Arms will request members to take their seats.

Mr. WHITE. I hope the Chair will state the question; nothing can be heard here.

Mr. ATKINS. I want to say a word. I desire to say to the House that the purpose of this law was to discourage these election contests. It was believed by the Committee on Appropriations at the time it was enacted that there had been in the history of this Government a great many contests that were not based upon merit, but simply in order to get the fees and expenses paid, and for that reason the limitation was imposed. I believe that it was a just limitation, and that it was competent for Congress to impose the limitation. I believe it was just as proper for Congress to impose that limitation as it would be for Congress to put a limitation upon any other possible case that might be presented before it in reference to any question.

But what I rose to say was, that it is too late now to make a question of that kind here. The contest has already been made; the expense is incurred in this case. It is too late to discuss the question now as to whether that limitation was proper or otherwise in the absence of any formal proposition to repeal the law. But I rose to say that as the expenses of these gentlemen, Messrs. Yocum and Curtin, were incurred prior to the passage of this act, I believe that good faith on the part of this House requires that we should pay the sum. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MANNING. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. ATHERTON. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ATHERTON. I want to know, as a parliamentary inquiry, whether it would be in order for me to correct a statement made by the gentleman from Ohio about this statute. He has stated to the House that I was mistaken in my statement in reference to it. Now, I hold the statute in my hand, and I want to say, if I am permitted to do so, that the gentleman himself is the one who has made a mistake, and that there is no such conclusion to be drawn from the statute as he has drawn. [Cries of "Regular order!"] It will bear no such interpretation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot entertain the proposition.

Mr. ATHERTON. I say that it is a fact that there is no such law, but the parties are required to pay themselves their expenses and not the Government at all. Provision is made for paying the officers taking depositions, &c., but— [cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MANNING. I rose, Mr. Chairman, only to submit a remark, and I do it particularly for the benefit of my friend from Tennessee, who doubtless conceived this statute, limiting the amounts to be paid in contested-election cases. I refer to my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, as addressing himself to the evil of too many contested elections, and undertaking to repress that evil by providing that hereafter only $2,000 shall be allowed in such cases.

Now, I submit that cannot be done in this case; that it is not just, and I would like to inquire of my friend whether it would be in order, whether he would consider it wise——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman must confine himself to the point of order.

Mr. MANNING. I am talking to the point of order. I would like to know if the gentleman from Tennessee wanted to put a provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill now being closed up of such a character that it would hereafter reduce the sundry civil expenses of the Government to less than $5,000,000 per annum——

Mr. ATKINS. I hope it will be reduced, but I cannot limit it.

Mr. MANNING. No, the gentleman cannot limit that. Nor can he limit these contested-election cases. Every case must be determined upon its individual merits.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state the question. The amendment of the gentleman from Iowa will now be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1264, insert the following:
"To pay A. G. Curtin $8,000, and to pay Seth H. Yocum, $8,000."

Mr. STEVENSON. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. I wish to inquire before we vote upon this proposition of the chairman of the Committee on Elections whether or not the testimony does not show that these gentlemen have expended that amount of money in this contest?

Mr. KEIFER. Much more than is appropriated here.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was stating the question before the committee.

Mr. MANNING. I will answer the gentleman myself. My understanding is that vouchers were presented to the Elections Committee by Mr. YOCUM and Mr. Curtin, respectively, footing up in the aggregate about forty thousand dollars.

Mr. ATHERTON. Then I ask the gentleman why he does not incorporate the whole amount in his bill here? There is just as much reason for putting in the whole amount of $40,000 as there is for putting in $8,000.

Mr. MANNING. The Committee on Elections made a recommendation for even more than is allowed here, and the gentleman from Ohio himself voted against it.

Mr. ATHERTON. When such cases arise the parties should pay their own expenses.

Mr. ATKINS. It is not what the gentleman from Mississippi understands, but what are the facts of the case here. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Elections.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is stating the question to the House. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MANNING. I will say, for the benefit of the gentleman from Tennessee, that the vouchers were submitted to the Committee on Elections, and show what I have stated to be the fact.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlemen will come to order. The question before the committee is on the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa, on which the gentleman from Georgia makes the point of order. The Chair now submits the question. Those who believe the point of order is well made, and that the amendment ought to be ruled out, will say "ay;" those of a contrary opinion will say "no."

The question being taken, there were—ayes 35, noes 79.

So the point of order was not sustained.

Mr. MANNING. Now, I move to amend the amendment by inserting "$3,500" instead of "$2,000," where the latter amount occurs in lines 1243, 1244, 1245, and 1246; so that it will read:

Noble A. Hull, $3,500.
Horatio Bisbee, $3,500.
Ignatius Donnelly, $3,500.
W. D. Washburn, $3,500.

And also to insert after line 1246:

Joseph Mason, $2,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has passed from those items. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa, which will be again read.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay A. G. Curtin $8,000; to pay Seth H. Yocum $8,000.

Mr. MANNING. I want to know if my amendment is not to be voted on first?

The CHAIRMAN. It is not before the committee.

Mr. MANNING. I have offered it as an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not in order.

The question being taken on Mr. WEAVER'S amendment, there were—ayes 78, noes 45.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ATHERTON. I desire to give notice that I shall call for a vote by yeas and nays in the House on this amendment.

Mr. MANNING. Now I offer the amendment I indicated a moment ago.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the amendment just adopted insert the following:
"Noble A. Hull, $3,500; Horatio Bisbee, $3,500; Ignatius Donnelly, $3,500; W. D. Washburn, $3,500, instead of the amounts appropriated in lines 1243, 1244, 1245, and 1246; also to Joseph Mason, $2,000."

Mr. BLOUNT. I object to going back.

Mr. WARNER. I make the point of order that these propositions have already been voted on.

Mr. ATHERTON. And we have passed the place where they could come in.

Mr. KEIFER. They are all one paragraph.

Mr. WARNER. I submit we cannot go back and strike out anything we have already voted on. We have voted on these propositions already.

Mr. WHITE. I ask the Chair if any one has raised the point of order on the amendment?

Mr. HAYES. I make the point of order on it. We have already disposed of those cases.

Mr. MANNING. If the point of order is made that we cannot go back to lines 1243 to 1246, I will change the language of my amendment, and will say $1,500 in addition to the amount allowed in those lines are hereby appropriated to the parties named in said lines.

Mr. WARNER. The subject has been disposed of already.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will decide the point of order after the amendment as the gentleman from Mississippi now proposes to modify it has been read.

Mr. SPARKS addressed the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Illinois after the amendment is read as modified. The gentleman from Mississippi will reduce his amendment to writing, and while he is doing so the committee will come to order.

The Clerk read the amendment, as modified, as follows:

That the sum of $1,500 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated in addition to the sums heretofore appropriated in this bill respectively to Noble A. Hull, Horatio Bisbee, Ignatius Donnelly, and William D. Washburn; Joseph Mason, $2,000.

Mr. WHITE. I make the point of order that the committee has already voted down the proposition to increase the compensation of Noble A. Hull from $2,000 to $3,500.

Mr. KEIFER. That has never been submitted to the committee.

Mr. WHITE. Then I modify my point of order. It is that the Chair has ruled this amendment out of order.

Mr. KEIFER. I will say in reply to the gentleman that the committee has overruled the Chair on that point.

Mr. WHITE. I do not think it did.

Mr. SPARKS. Mr. Chairman, one word on this point of order. The bill before us and from which I now read provides:

That the parties hereinafter named be and are hereby allowed the amounts set opposite their names in full payment of all expenses incurred by them respectively in contested-election cases.

And then proceeds to give among others as follows:

To Noble A. Hull, $2,000; to Horatio Bisbee, $2,000; to Ignatius Donnelly, $2,000, and to William D. Washburn, $2,000, &c.

Now, as is admitted and well-known, all that portion of the bill has long since been acted upon and passed. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] now, subsequent to that action of the committee and allowance of those amounts to those parties respectively, comes in and moves an amendment to increase each of those amounts, or a part of them, $1,500. This, sir, is in effect going back on the bill, and objection being made is clearly out of order, in flagrant violation of the rules, and every member who has ever read them knows it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule on the point of order.

Mr. CAMP. I desire to be heard on a question of fact. The account of Mr. Mason has not been passed upon at all, and is included in this amendment. He was voted $2,000 by last Congress, his case having then been considered and passed upon. The expenses he actually incurred were $5,100, and the vouchers are on file. This amount of $2,000 is not in this bill, and has not been passed upon.

Mr. BLOUNT. I rise to a question of order. I understad a point of order has been made and the Chair has stated he is ready to rule on it. I insist that the Chair shall give his ruling, and that we proceed with the business before the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will give his decision. When the name of Noble A. Hull was reached in the committee a motion was made to amend by inserting $1,500 additional. This is the same proposition, coming in another form, which was presented to the Chair for decision in an earlier part of the evening. The Chair then ruled it out of order, because the amount was in excess of the amount allowed by law by the statute of 9th of March, 1879, which says that hereafter no contestant or contestee shall receive more than $2,000. An appeal was taken from the decision of the Chair, and the committee sustained the decision. This amendment being to accomplish the same purpose, the Chair rules it out of order.

Mr. MANNING. I desire to take an appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. KEIFER. And I also appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. MANNING. And I desire to be heard on the appeal for a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. MANNING. I understood the gentleman to say, immediately after we had settled the Curtin and Yocum cases, that he would entertain a suggestion in reference to these other cases, because when he ruled upon them before he thought the act of 1879 applied to them, and that the expenses had been incurred subsequently to the passage of that act, and therefore the act was applicable to those cases. We have allowed the sum of $8,000, each, to Mr. Curtin and Mr. Yocum, because the act of 1879 did not apply to them, the expenses in their cases having been incurred prior to the passage of that act.

Now, if we propose to conform our action to the commonest standard of decency, we cannot refuse to pay these other gentlemen the expenses which they incurred before the act of 1879 was passed. If the act of 1879 was applicable to one set of cases, it was to the others. I want to see whether this House is prepared for the gross stultification which will appear if we refuse this act of justice.

Mr. KEIFER. I only want the committee to understand the facts of the case. The Chair is exactly correct in stating that I made a motion to strike out $2,000 and insert $3,500, in relation to the case of Noble A. Hull. But no further did I go, and no other gentlemen on the floor went any further in reference to the other persons named in the pending amendment. Now, are we to understand that the point of order is to be sustained upon the whole amendment, which applies to four other persons, simply because the Chair sustained a point of order in regard to an amendment offered in reference to one of the persons named in this amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would say to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] that an amendment must be good in whole or faulty in whole; if bad in part, it is bad in whole.

Mr. KEIFER. I understand that. The original proposition was one applying to line 1243 of this bill; a proposition to strike out and insert in reference to the case of Noble A. Hull. The proposition of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MANNING] is to make an amendment to another part of the bill, not to strike out anything.

Mr. MANNING. Nor to go back.

Mr. KEIFER. Nor to go back. And allow me to say further, that while it is true that the Chair ruled my amendment out of order against my protest at the time, and while it is true that the committee by a vote of 67 to 65 sustained the decision of the Chair; yet a few moments ago, when an amendment was offered to give $8,000 to Mr. Curtin and $8,000 to Mr. Yocum, and the same point of order was raised upon it, the committee, after further consideration and by a large majority, overruled the very same decision of the Chair on the very same point of order. That is the last decision of the committee, and that decision was made upon the principle that this money was for expenses incurred prior to the passage of the foolish and unconstitutional act of the 3d of March, 1879.

Mr. BLOUNT. I trust this House will observe upon this proposition the same rules of proceeding which have obtained in reference to every other provision in every other appropriation bill which we have acted upon this session.

I care not what branch of the public service we may have considered; this House during the consideration of this bill, and during the consideration of other appropriation bills, has acquiesced in the proposition that a subject once acted upon cannot be returned to when objection is made. I care not how important that subject may be; the House has uniformly and earnestly sustained that line of action.

Now, if it comes to a question relating to the pay of a member of this House, are we to turn into a mob and trample under foot all our rules of procedure? Will the dignity of this House permit us to do any such thing? Is there no disposition here to preserve this House from the scandal which will be engendered in the public mind by this course of proceeding in reference to matters relating to our own pay, and which course is calculated to bring this body into disrespect? I ask if this committee, as we are approaching the close of the session, as we are nearing the end of a bill involving appropriations of more than twenty millions of dollars, will abandon without reason the rules which have governed our action until we have reached this point, because the question now before us relates to the compensation of some of our own members?

Mr. KEIFER. We have had a lecture from the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. BLOUNT,] and now let us have a vote on the appeal.

Mr. MANNING. The gentleman from Georgia may be technically right; but I would rather vote for what is just and fair than to surrender to that gentleman my sense of justice and fair dealing.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Chair decided that no greater sum than $2,000 was in order for the payment of expenditures incurred by the parties named in this bill in election cases, it was upon the hypothesis, if not upon the statement of some member, that all these parties, commencing with Noble A: Hull, and proceeding along until George M. Adams was reached, had incurred expenses after the passage of the law of March, 1879.

When the point was reached of those who claimed compensation for expenditures incurred in contests anterior to the passage of that law, the Chair submitted the question to the committee, as in the cases of Yocum and Curtin, and in the case of Adams. In all three of those cases the committee decided that the point of order was not well taken.

In that view of the question, and in view of the fact that the committee in those three cases has decided that the point of order was not well taken, the Chair feels instructed by the committee to decide that the pending amendment is in order. If any gentleman desires to make an appeal from this decision of the Chair the appeal will be entertained.

Mr. KNOTT. I appeal.

The question being taken on sustaining the decision of the Chair, there were—ayes 66, noes 44.

Mr. WARNER. I make the point of order that no quorum has voted.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. KEIFER and Mr. MCMILLIN were appointed.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported ayes 92, noes 55.

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

Mr. WARNER. There is another point of order. I made a point of order on this amendment before any other point of order was made. My point was that we had already acted upon the compensation in these several cases and could not go back. [Cries of "Too late!"] The Chair has not ruled upon that point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. It has all been acted on.

Mr. WARNER. The question was not submitted to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The question was whether the proposition was in order; and it was decided that it was.

Mr. WARNER. I appeal to the record.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi. Those in favor of it will say "ay."

Mr. WARNER. I demand my rights of the Chair. I insist upon being heard; and I appeal to the record in proof of my statement that the Chair did not submit the question upon my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. WARNER. I appeal from the decision of the Chair on that point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Sergeant-at-Arms will see that the gentleman takes his seat.

Mr. WARNER. A member on this floor has his rights; and in the maintenance of those rights I am not to be put down.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee of the Whole have their right, through the chairman, to see that the gentleman observes the rules of the House.

Mr. WARNER. If I am not right I shall be very glad to take my seat; but I insist upon my right to stand here and be heard on the point of order I have made, [cries of "Order!"] and I shall not be cried down.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman will let the Chair speak a moment he will probably be satisfied.

Mr. WARNER. I insist on my rights.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not desire the gentleman to think that the Chair or anybody else has done him injustice. When the amendment was offered by the gentleman from Mississippi a point of order was made upon it, and among the reasons assigned for the point of order was that it went back to a question that had already been acted upon. Another reason urged in support of the point of order was that it proposed to an allowance beyond two thousand dollars. Both these reasons were involved in the decision by the Chair. It is true that the Chair——

Mr. WARNER. I appeal to the record; and if the statement of the Chair be true——

The CHAIRMAN. It is true the Chair did not refer to the action of the Committee of the Whole——

Mr. WARNER. Nor to my statement, nor to my point of order; but only to the point of order raised by another gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WARNER. I trust the Chair will make a reference to the record to settle the question of fact. If I am in error, I shall be very glad to acknowledge it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot go back of the action on the point of order to ascertain what was said. The point of order was made upon this amendment that it was out of order; and two reasons were assigned—one by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] that the sum named in the amendment went beyond the amount limited by law.

Mr. WARNER. Two points of order were made, and only one was submitted.

The CHAIRMAN. And the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WARNER] assigned another reason why the amendment was out of order. There can be but one point of order made to the same amendment, though there may be different reasons assigned for the point. An amendment may be out of order for two or three reasons, but there can be but one point of order to one amendment. The point of order was made and overruled by the Chair; and the committee sustained the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. WARNER. Does the Chair decide—[cries of "Order!"] Wait a moment; let this question be settled. Does the Chair decide that only one point of order can lie against an amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair requests gentlemen to take their seats and come to order.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. One point of order is already pending. The Clerk will read the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

While the Speaker is putting a question or addressing the House no member shall walk out of or across the Hall, nor, when a member is speaking, pass between him and the Chair; and during the session of the House no member shall wear his hat, or remain by the Clerk's desk during the call of the roll or the counting of ballots, or smoke upon the floor of the House; and the Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper are charged with the strict enforcement of this clause.

The CHAIRMAN. I am satisfied the members of the committee have forgotten that rule or they would have observed it. [Laughter.] The Clerk will read from the Digest.

The Clerk read as follows:

A question of order just decided on appeal cannot be renewed even on the suggestion of additional reasons.

Mr. WARNER. Grant that; but let the Chair rule on it, and I shall be satisfied.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Three gentlemen are rising to a point of order at once, which gentlemen must know is not in order. There is one now pending.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Then I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WARNER. I do not yield the floor until my point of order is decided.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will take his seat.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WARNER. I insist on my right to state my point of order.

Mr. ROBERTSON. The point I make is this——

Mr. WARNER. I wish to be respectful, but I want a decision on my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen will please resume their seats. If the committee will be quiet, the Chair will hear the gentleman from Ohio, who evidently believes that some injustice has been done to him.

Mr. WARNER. Two points of order were submitted by two different gentlemen. I made one, and the other point was made by another gentleman. The other point of order was submitted to the House on appeal. My point of order has not yet been ruled on or submitted to the committee. [Cries of "Vote!" "Read!"] I have a right to the floor, and gentlemen will not bull me down. You might as well understand it now as at an hour later. I desire the Chair to rule on the point I made or submit it to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Ohio that while he calls it a point of order it simply is different reasons for the same thing, for there can be but one point of order pending at a time. There may be different reasons why an amendment is bad; you call it a point of order; your point was that it went back, while the gentleman from Georgia made the point that it changed existing law as the law only allowed $2,000. The Chair, in deciding the question, took both into consideration and overruled the point of order made by the gentleman, although he did not name that in his argument before the committee, and he also overruled the point of order made by the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. WARNER. If the Chair says he overruled my point of order that is enough.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair meant to do so and so stated to the House. The question now recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. MANNING.]

Mr. CONVERSE. I move to amend that amendment. I desire that the other names in this bill shall be included, Mr. Yeates and the other gentlemen that have been reduced to $2,000.

Mr. KEIFER. The full amount has been allowed.

Mr. CONVERSE. No; not the full amount of their expenses.

Mr. CAMP. The facts are different; in the various cases where allowance has been made of a higher amount the expenses were incurred before the passage of the law.

Mr. CONVERSE. But they were begun before the passage of the law, as they were in the cases I refer to.

Mr. EVINS. The fair interpretation of the law was that it should apply to cases thereafter arising. It did not apply to cases then going on. If the contestants are allowed the amount of their expenses who took testimony before the law was passed, there is no reason why every gentleman who took his testimony and whose contest was going on at the same time should not be paid the same amount. If the point is good at all it should apply to all the contests existing at the time of the passage of the law in 1879.

Mr. CONVERSE. I insist on my point of order, and I desire to limit it to this extent.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will reduce his amendment to writing.

Mr. CAMP. Allow me to make a suggestion. Some of the claims presented to the committee showed only an expenditure of $1,350. I cannot call to mind all of the cases; but it would not be right to allow some of these men $3,500 when they claim only to have expended $1,350.

Mr. WHITE. That shows the folly of the whole proceeding.

Mr. CAMP. No, sir; in every case mentioned the expenses were over three thousand dollars.

Mr. OSMER. Is the question divisible?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. OSMER. Then I request a separate vote on each one.

Mr. CONVERSE. I find on examination that the expenses of Mr. Yeates and Mr. Martin were only $2,250 apiece. I desire only their allowance shall be increased to that amount. It is only an increase of $250 to each one.

Mr. KEIFER. That is right.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 26.

Mr. WHITE demanded tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

Mr. WHITE and Mr. CONVERSE were appointed.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 78, noes 34.

Mr. WHITE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. ATKINS. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his point of no quorum.

Mr. WHITE. No; I will withdraw it if the gentleman will withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The tellers will resume their places, and the count will be continued.

The committee divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 98, noes 51.

So the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. I give notice that I will call for the yeas and nays on this in the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment as amended.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 71, noes 32.

So (no further count being demanded) the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. I submit the following amendment, to come in after line 1264:

Pay to H. A. Olcott and W. H. Smith, $250 each, for extra services in the Library of the House during the present Congress.

Mr. BLOUNT. I make the point of order upon that amendment. I wish to know if it comes from the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. BAKER. I offer that amendment as a simple act of justice to equalize the salary of these employés with those occupying the little library in the alcove here.

Mr. SPARKS. I make the point of order upon it.

Mr. BLOUNT. On the statement of the gentleman from Indiana, I have no objection to the amendment myself.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. This does not come from the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. BLOUNT. Then I object to it. My understanding was that it came with the approval of the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. SPARKS. I have made a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Indiana desire to be heard upon the point of order.

Mr. BAKER. For a moment. I do not know whether the Committee on Accounts have reported for or against it. I offer the amendment on my own responsibility. I know that these employés up in that little library have a great deal of duty to perform. It is a much larger library than that in the alcove here, and as they are paid $250 a year less than the employés in that library, it seems to me to be a matter of only simple justice to allow this sum to equalize the salaries, and the House will not be doing what it ought to do if it refuses to allow it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is addressing himself to the facts in the case. The Chair would request him to confine himself to the point of order.

Mr. BAKER. I am trying to get at the point of order. I first stated the facts. It is undoubtedly in order to pay these men as much as the other men are paid, who have to perform similar services.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. DUNNELL. I wish to offer an amendment at this point.

The Clerk read as follows:

There is hereby appropriated a sum of money sufficient to pay to the members of the Capitol police force one month's extra pay, at the same rate of compensation that is now paid by law.

Mr. BLOUNT. I must make the point of order upon that amendment.

Mr. DUNNELL. I hope the gentleman will not make a point of order. Last year the appropriation made for one month's pay to the employés was supposed to cover the police force; but it was found afterward that it did not.

Mr. WARNER. Ever since I have been here——

Mr. DUNNELL. Let me be heard, if the gentleman pleases.

Mr. WARNER. Is it subject to the point of order? If so, I make the point of order upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Minnesota upon the point of order.

Mr. DUNNELL. The act of last year giving one month's extra pay to the employés of the House was supposed to cover the police force of the House and Senate. It was subsequently decided that it could not be done. Now, these men employed here as policemen are kept here during the entire year. The employés in all the other departments of the Government, the Treasury and everywhere else, as a general rule, are allowed one month's leave of absence. These men are kept here at a low compensation all the year round. I am not personally acquainted with any of them. They are no appointees of mine or on my recommendation; but they are faithful and deserving employés of the Government, and it is only fair that they should have the one month's extra pay which is usually allowed to the employés. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon the point of order.

Mr. WARNER. I insist upon it. Ever since I have been here there has been an effort in the last days of the session to get a little more pay for a little less labor. The people someway or other have to pay it, and must do a little more work for a little less pay in order to make up the difference. That is the matter in a nutshell.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the point insisted upon?

Mr. BLOUNT. I did make it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Minnesota if there is any law for it.

Mr. DUNNELL. There is no law for it that I am aware of. It is only proposed as an act of justice to these men.

The CHAIRMAN. Are these men employed by the month or borne on the annual roll?

Mr. DUNNELL. They are paid annually, I believe.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

To pay J. Hale Sypher in full of all claims for salary and mileage due him as a Representative in Congress from the first congressional district of Louisiana in the Forty-first Congress, and in full of all expenses incurred in contesting his election, $4,000.

Mr. WARNER. I make the point of order upon that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will decide the point of order. This amendment proposes to pay a man who had a claim upon the Government for mileage during his service in Congress and for service rendered. Now we have passed bills not only paying for services rendered, but we have even gone back some twenty-three months and paid for services past. Therefore the Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. WHITE. How much will be due this gentleman?

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the committee rise and report the bill with amendments to the House.

Mr. WHITE. How much salary did Mr. Sypher get?

Mr. KEIFER. I desire to suggest to the gentleman from Georgia, if he will permit a single verbal amendment which should be appended to this bill——

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the committee rise and report the bill and amendments to the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio desire to offer an amendment?

Mr. KEIFER. I hope the gentleman will hear me for a moment. It has been usual to provide that all these payments for expenses in contested-election cases, salaries, &c., should be made available immediately.

Mr. BLOUNT. I have no objection to that.

Mr. KEIFER. I send the amendment to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 1238 insert "which amounts shall be immediately available."

Mr. BRIGGS. I wish to know to what portion of this bill the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Ohio applies?

Mr. KEIFER. It applies only to the amounts appropriated for the payment of expenses in contested-election cases.

Mr. BRIGGS. I have but one word to say. In this last section, or these last sections of this bill, you have been appropriating money by thousands and thousands of dollars in payment of gentlemen who have contested seats, and in payment of members of Congress who years ago occupied seats upon this floor. You have done this while you have over six hundred pension bills on your Calendar, which you cannot find time to consider. You can find time to provide for the payment of these bills of members of Congress and ex-members of Congress and contestants, while the claims of the maimed and disabled soldiers go unheeded.

The question being taken on Mr. KEIFER's amendment, it was agreed to.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the committee rise and report the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. HARRIS, of Virginia, reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass with sundry amendments.

Mr. BLOUNT. I ask the previous question on the bill and amendments.

The question was taken and the main question was ordered.

Mr. BLOUNT moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Illinois, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. No. 76) for the relief of M. F. Clark;

A bill (S. No. 326) for the relief of Henry F. Lines;

A bill (S. No. 367) granting an increase of pension to Isabel L. Evans;

A bill (S. No. 753) to provide for the sale of the remainder of the reservation of the confederated Otoe and Missouria tribes of Indians, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. No. 1181) for the relief of Dodd, Brown & Company, of Saint Louis, Missouri;

A bill (S. No. 1905) changing the name of the First National Bank of West Meriden, in the county of New Haven, and State of Connecticut; and Joint resolution (S. R. No. 79) directing the Secretary of War to investigate the claim of the State of Florida against the United States for expenditures made in suppressing Indian hostilities in said State between the years 1855 and 1860, and to report the result of such investigation to Congress.

Mr. WARD, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled a joint resolution of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

Joint resolution (S. R. No. 156) in relation to the international exhibition of 1883.

Mr. WILBER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the Committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. No. 2184) to authorize the commissioners of the District of Columbia to appoint additional policemen for temporary service in the District, and for other purposes.

Mr. KENNA, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 7033) making the city of Chattanooga, in the State of Tennessee, a port of delivery;

A bill (H. R. No. 7036) to establish post-routes; and

A bill (H. R. No. 7103) to constitute Atlanta, Georgia, a port of delivery.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move that the House take a recess till Monday at half past nine o'clock a. m.

The SPEAKER. Pending that, the Chair desires to recognize the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.]

CEREMONIES IN MEMORY OF THE LATE HON. FERNANDO WOOD.

Mr. TUCKER. I ask the House to adopt the order which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That the ceremonies fixed for Sunday (to-morrow) at three p. m., in commemoration of the late Hon. FERNANDO WOOD be postponed until Monday evening, at eight o'clock, and that the Senate be advised of the change.

The SPEAKER. The effect of this is to postpone the ceremonies until Monday evening, for the reason that the burial of Senator CARPENTER takes place about the same time on to-morrow that it had been ordered there should be a session of the House. Of course the Senate and such of the members of the House as may desire to attend the funeral of the late Senator CARPENTER could not do it and at the same time participate in the ceremonies in the House under the original order. In view of that fact the postponement has been deemed necessary.

The order was agreed to.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has been asked for a general leave for members to have printed in the RECORD such remarks as they may desire to print on the apportionment bill, and also on the sundry civil bill.

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. LADD to have printed in the RECORD remarks on the bill (H. R. No. 4068) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue a register or enrollment for any vessel built in a foreign country owned by a citizen of the United States. [See Appendix.]

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. COVERT. I move that the bill (H. R. No. 7099) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, with amendments by the Senate, be taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and printed, with the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

JEANNETTE RELIEF EXPEDITION.

The SPEAKER, by unanimous consent, laid before the House a memorial of the professors of Yale College, in favor of the passage of the bill for the relief of the crew of the Jeannette; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a memorial of the president, professors, and instructors of Johns Hopkins University, in favor of the passage of the bill for the relief of the crew of the Jeannette; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. PACHECO, for one day, on account of important business.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave was given to withdraw from the files of the House papers in the following cases, there being no adverse report thereon:

To Mr. WHITEAKER, papers in the case of James B. Sinclair, not acted upon, from the files of the Committee on Military Affairs;

To Mr. WHITTHORNE, papers in the case of Stephen Casey;

To Mr. HENKLE, papers in the case of Norman Wiard; and

To Mr. ATHERTON, papers in the case of W. H. Price for compensation for loss of horse in the service; no adverse report.

TAXES ON BANK DEPOSITS, ETC.

The SPEAKER laid before the House resolutions of the Cotton Exchange, of New Orleans, Louisiana, recommending the abolition of the special taxes levied on the capital and deposits of banks and bankers, and also a repeal of the law levying tax on bank checks; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

RENT OF ROOMS FOR COURT OF CLAIMS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, calling attention to the fact that no appropriation for rent for rooms occupied by the Court of Claims has been incorporated in any appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

VICKSBURGH NATIONAL CEMETERY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, relative to the roadway of the National Cemetery at Vicksburgh; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

SAN FRANCISCO BAY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting copy of a report on the subject of the tidal area of San Francisco Bay; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

MULLEN WAGON ROAD.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, relative to repairs of Mullen wagon road; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

WEST POINT CAVALRY BARRACKS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of War, relative to the cavalry barracks at West Point; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

EMPLOYÉS IN THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting lists of persons employed in the Treasury Department; which was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department.

ARIZONA PRIVATE LAND CLAIM.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the papers in Arizona private land claim of San Juan de las Boguillas y Nogales; which was referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

MERCHANT MARINE.

Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, by unanimous consent, presented the report of the sub-committee of the Committee on Commerce, authorized under House resolution of June 4, 1879, to inquire into the causes of the decadence of the merchant marine; which was ordered to be printed and recommitted.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, by unanimous consent, submitted the views of the minority of that committee upon the bill (S. No. 1935) to confirm to the city of Chicago the title to certain public grounds; which was ordered to be printed with the report of the majority.

FUNERAL OF SENATOR MATT. H. CARPENTER.

The SPEAKER appointed as the committee authorized by resolution of the House to act in connection with a similar committee appointed on the part of the Senate in relation to the funeral of the late Senator MATT. H. CARPENTER, of Wisconsin, the following members:

Mr. LAPHAM of New York, Mr. TUCKER of Virginia, Mr. ROBESON of New Jersey, Mr. CARLISLE of Kentucky, and Mr. PAGE of California.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLOUNT. I now call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the motion of the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. BLOUNT,] that the House now take a recess until half past nine o'clock Monday morning.

Mr. PRICE. I move to amend so as to make it ten o'clock.

Mr. O'NEILL. I hope the House will vote down any motion for a recess, and that we will remain here for two or three hours longer and do the work that is before us. I am opposed to doing anything that may bring up on Monday morning a most obnoxious bill on the Speaker's table; I mean the funding bill.

The SPEAKER. The question before the House is not debatable.

Mr. O'NEILL. I do not now know whether it is debatable or not, but I hope the House will vote it down. I know the object of this movement is to force the funding bill through on Monday morning.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. RICE] to the motion of the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. BLOUNT,] so as to make the recess until ten o'clock Monday morning.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope gentlemen will allow us to meet here at half past nine o'clock.

The question was taken upon the amendment; and upon a division there were—ayes 69, noes 50.

No further count being called for, the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion as amended.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at nine o'clock and five minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until Monday next at ten a. m.

MORNING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House (at ten o'clock a. m. Monday, February 28) resumed its session.

PORTRAIT OF FREDERICK A. MUHLENBERG.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] desires to be heard for a few moments on a matter of much interest.

Mr. CLYMER. Mr. Speaker, I crave the indulgence of the House for a very few moments. For several days past I have been prevented by the urgent business before us from performing a pleasant duty, which is to present to you, and through you to this body, a portrait of Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, who was the Speaker of the First and Third Congresses. I do so on behalf of his great-grandchildren, Mary Baldwin Irwin, wife of George Brooke, esq., of Birdsboro', Berks County, Pennsylvania, and Elizabeth Muhlenberg Irwin, of the city of Philadelphia, whose desire it is that a fitting likeness of their ancestor should appear and be preserved among those of the other distinguished men who in times past have presided over the deliberations of this body.

He was of that German race which more than one hundred and fifty years ago came in great numbers, fugitives from the civil and religious persecutions then raging in their mother-land, and settled in the fertile valleys and along the lovely streams of Eastern Pennsylvania. In Christian faith they were generally disciples of Luther and of Calvin. In their new home they never forgot the teachings of these great reformers, nor did they ever abandon their devotion to the principles of civil liberty. For these they had risked the dangers of the sea and undergone the hardships and trials of a life in the wilderness, and so it was that when the war was waged which made us free, to be a German from the Palatinate or the descendant of one was to be a patriot. Time will not admit in these closing hours of the session to recount at length the noble part they took in the heroic struggle for independence, or to show how great and beneficial has been their influence upon the character and politics of my native State. Their descendants have been its Governors, its Senators and Representatives in Congress, its judges, its great lawyers, its skillful physicians, and its learned and eloquent divines. One of the first and foremost of those who planted the race in Pennsylvania was Rev. Dr. Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, who in 1742 was sent by the mother Church in Germany as a missionary to the children of Luther who had settled on these far-off shores. He was a learned and devout man, who to the faith of the Christian added the sturdy devotion and courage of the patriot, and for nearly half a century he ministered to the spiritual needs of his people, and during the long years of revolutionary trial he stood side by side with Washington and Franklin and Wayne and Morris and the other patriots who were engaged in that grand struggle. His name and memory are deeply treasured, and wherever there are followers of Luther in this land he is spoken of as "father."

He had three sons, all of whom were distinguished in Church and State, in civil and military life. The first was Major-General Peter Muhlenberg, of revolutionary fame and memory, whose statue, by order of the State of Pennsylvania, is soon to be placed in our Hall of Worthies. The second was Frederick Augustus, the statesman, and the third Henry Ernst, the divine and naturalist. In early life they were sent to Germany and educated at the university in Halle, and upon their return home they studied divinity and were ordained ministers of the Lutheran Church. Only one of them, Rev. Dr. Henry Ernst, of Lancaster, pursued his calling to the end. Peter became a soldier at the personal solicitation of Washington himself, and Frederick Augustus a statesman at the call of the people of his native State, who in 1779 and 1780 elected him to the Continental Congress. For three years subsequently he was a member of our State Legislature. He then became a member and speaker of the Council of Censors, taking a leading and conspicuous part in calling the convention which revised our State constitution in 1790. He was president of our State convention called to consider the ratification of the Federal Constitution, and gave it earnest and efficient support. He was a member of the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Congresses, and by reason of his experience and fitness was elected Speaker of the First and then again of the Third.

My limited time to-day will not permit me to enter upon any detailed statement of the leading facts of his long, honorable, and most useful public career. It will suffice to say that he was the firm and unflinching friend of Washington, who relied on him in every great emergency. After his long service in this body he was appointed the register of the land office in our State, holding which he died in 1801.

His portrait, which I have the honor to present, was painted by Mr. S. B. Waugh, of Philadelphia, and is a copy of a likeness of him painted by Wright in 1790, during his first Speakership, and by all who knew him it was deemed faithful in expression and admirable in outline and in detail.

To those whose gift it is, it is a heightened pleasure that he by whom it is received, is, as was the first Speaker, a Pennsylvanian.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to offer a brief resolution concerning the matter of which our friend from Pennsylvania has spoken.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker be requested to inform Mrs. Mary B. I. Brooke and Miss Elizabeth Muhlenberg Irwin of the satisfaction with which their present of the portrait of their great-grandfather, Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg, Speaker of the First and Third Congresses, has been received, assuring them that it shall be placed and preserved among those of the other distinguished men who in times past have presided over this body.

The resolution was adopted.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The House, according to order, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, the main question having been ordered on the bill and amendments.

Mr. BLOUNT. I move to concur in gross in all the amendments of the Committee of the Whole to this bill except the one on page 35 relating to naval stations, the one on page 44 in relation to the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, and the one on page 52 relating to the payment of expenses of election contests to members of Congress and contestants.

Mr. PRICE. I think we had better take a vote on the amendments in their order. I insist on that.

The SPEAKER. That is the gentleman's right.

The first amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read as follows:

On page 3, after line 51, at the end of the paragraph appropriating $350,000 for continuation of post-office and court-house at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, insert the following:

"Provided, That the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of the amount hereby appropriated, shall be expended in completing immediately and fitting up for use the rooms in said building intended for occupancy by the United States courts and the officers connected therewith: And be it further provided, That there be expended out of the amount herein appropriated, a sum sufficient for the completion and fitting up of as many of the rooms of said building as will accommodate the post-office of said city."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

At the end of the paragraph relating to the custom-house and post-office at Saint Louis, Missouri, add the following as a new paragraph:

"For a post-office and other offices in Baltimore, Maryland, on the site purchased by the United States for that object, the sum of $250,000, to be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury according to the plans and estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the cost of said building shall not exceed the amount of said estimates."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

At the end of line 135 insert:

"For completing the Cape Henry light-house station, Virginia, $25,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the amendment just adopted insert the following:

"The money heretofore appropriated for establishing a fog-signal on Sandy or West Point, Puget Sound, shall be applicable to the establishment and construction of both a light-house and fog-signal at that point."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 253, under the heading "repairs of light-houses," insert the following:

"Of which sum $35,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be applied to the rebuilding of the light-house on Sharp's Island in Chesapeake Bay, to be immediately available."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 387 insert:

"For the collection of statistics relative to the annual production of the precious metals in the United States, $4,950, to be expended under the direction of the Director of the Mint."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 423, in the paragraph relating to the salaries and traveling expenses of agents at seal fisheries in Alaska, insert "two assistant agents at $2,190 each," and correct the total of the paragraph so as to read "$12,150."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Add to the paragraph appropriating $25,000 for continuing ethnological researches among the North American Indians the following:

"Five thousand dollars of which shall be expended in continuing archæological investigations relating to mound-builders and prehistoric mounds."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

In line 514 strike out "70" and insert "50;" so as to read: "For shop H, an iron-finishing shop for the armory, $50,000;" and at the end of the line insert: "For shop K, the last of the armory shops, $20,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 573, under the head of "buildings and grounds in and around Washington and the Executive Mansion," insert:

"For improving various reservations, $10,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 581, insert: "for constructing elevator in Executive Mansion, $500;" and correct the total of the paragraph so as to read, $38,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

In the paragraph relating to lighting the Executive Mansion and public grounds insert, after the word "gas" in line 591, the words "including lighting, cleaning, and keeping in repair the lamps."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

In the paragraph providing for repair and care of telegraph connecting the Capitol with the Departments and Government Printing Office strike out "$500," in line 604, and insert "$1,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the paragraph relating to maintaining and improving national cemeteries insert the following:

"For continuing the improvement of the national cemetery near Chattanooga, Tennessee, by constructing a road or public highway from said cemetery to the city of Chattanooga, $5,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out lines 664, 665, and 666, as follows:

"For the purchase of the private papers of the late confederate generals, Braxton Bragg and Leonidas Polk, relating to the late war of the rebellion, $20,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "for," in line 668, insert the following:

"Continuing the preparation of the publication of the official records, indexing, and proof-reading, and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 762 insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transport free of charge subsidiary silver coin when requested to do so, provided that an equal amount in coin or currency shall have been deposited in the Treasury by the applicant or applicants; and that there is hereby appropriated $20,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary, for that purpose, and that the same be available from and after its passage."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 834 insert the following:

"To enable the Secretary of the Navy to establish at the Isthmus of Panama naval stations and depots of coal for the supply of steamships of war, $200,000, to be available for expenditure as soon as suitable arrangements can be made to the proposed end."

Mr. BLOUNT. I demand the yeas and nays on this amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 114, nays 85, not voting 91; as follows:

YEAS—114.

Aldrich, N. W.	Daggett,	Kelley,	Russell, Wm. A.
Aldrich, William	Davidson,	King,	Ryan, Thomas
Anderson,	Davis, George R.	Kitchin,	Sapp,
Baker,	Davis, Horace	Ladd,	Sherwin,
Ballou,	De La Matyr,	Lapham,	Smith, A. Herr
Bailey,	Deering,	Manning,	Speer,
Barber,	Dick,	Mason,	Starin,
Beale,	Dunnell,	McCook,	Stephens,
Belford,	Dwight,	McGowan,	Stone,
Bisbee,	Ellis,	McKinley,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Blake,	Felton,	Miles,	Townsend, Amos
Bland,	Ferdon,	Miller,	Updegraff, J. T.
Boyd,	Fisher,	Monroe,	Urner,
Brewer,	Forsythe,	Norcross,	Valentine,
Briggs,	Fort,	O'Neill,	Van Aernam,
Browne,	Frye,	Orth,	Vance,
Burrows,	Gibson,	Overton,	Van Voorhis,
Butterworth,	Goode,	Pacheco,	Voorhis,
Calkins,	Harmer,	Page,	Wait,
Camp,	Hawk,	Phister,	Ward,
Cannon,	Hawley,	Prescott,	Washburn,
Carpenter,	Hazelton,	Price,	Whitthorne,
Caswell,	Heilman,	Ray,	Wilber,
Chittenden,	Hiscock,	Reagan,	Willits,
Claflin,	Horr,	Reed,	Wilson,
Conger,	Hubbell,	Rice,	Yeates,
Cowgill,	Hunton,	Richmond,	Yocum.
Crapo,	Jorgensen,	Robeson,
Crowley,	Keifer,	Robinson,

NAYS—85.

Acklen,	Coffroth,	Kimmel,	Shelley,
Aiken,	Colerick,	Knott,	Simonton,
Armfield,	Cook,	Le Fevre,	Singleton, J. W.
Atherton,	Cravens,	Martin, Benj. F.	Slemons,
Atkins,	Culberson,	Martin, Edward L.	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bachman,	Davis, Lowndes H.	McKenzie,	Smith, William E.
Bayne,	Dibrell,	McLane,	Sparks,
Beltzhoover,	Evins,	McMahon,	Springer,
Berry,	Forney,	McMillin,	Stevenson.
Bicknell,	Gillette,	Mills,	Tillman,
Blackburn,	Gunter,	Morrison,	Tucker,
Blount,	Hall,	New,	Turner, Oscar
Bouck,	Hammond, N. J.	Nicholls,	Turner, Thomas
Bragg,	Haskell,	Persons,	Waddill,
Buckner,	Hatch,	Phelps,	Wells,
Cabell,	Hayes,	Philips,	White,
Chalmers,	Herbert,	Richardson, J. S.	Whiteaker,
Clardy,	Herndon,	Robertson,	Williams, Thomas
Clark, John B.	Hill,	Rothwell,	Wise.
Clements,	Hostetler,	Ryon, John W.
Clymer,	Hutchins,	Samford,
Cobb,	Kenna,	Sawyer,

NOT VOTING—91.

Barlow,	Converse,	Errett,	Harris, John T.
Bingham,	Covert,	Ewing,	Henderson,
Bliss,	Cox,	Finley,	Henkle,
Bowman,	Davis, Joseph J.	Ford,	Henry,
Brigham,	Deuster,	Frost,	Hooker,
Bright,	Dickey,	Geddes,	Houk,
Caldwell,	Dunn,	Godshalk,	House,
Carlisle,	Einstein,	Hammond, John	Humphrey,
Clark, Alvah A.	Elam,	Harris, Benj. W.	Hurd,

James,	Money,	Pound,	Townshend, R. W.
Johnston,	Morse,	Richardson, D. P.	Tyler,
Jones,	Morton,	Ross,	Updegraff, Thomas
Joyce,	Muldrow,	Russell, Daniel L.	Upson,
Ketcham,	Muller,	Scales,	Warner,
Killinger,	Murch,	Scoville,	Weaver,
Klotz,	Myers,	Shallenberger.	Wellborn.
Lindsey,	Neal,	Singleton, O. R.	Williams, C. G.
Loring,	Newberry,	Steele,	Willis,
Lounsbery,	O'Brien,	Talbott,	Wood,
Lowe,	O'Connor,	Taylor, Robert L.	Wright,
Marsh,	O'Reilly,	Thomas,	Young, Casey
McCoid,	Osmer,	Thompson, P. B.	Young, Thomas L.
Mitchell,	Poehler,	Thompson, W. G.

So the amendment was agreed to.

During the roll-call the following pairs were announced from the Clerk's desk:

Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois, with Mr. HENDERSON.

Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts, with Mr. WARNER. Mr. HARRIS would vote "ay," Mr. WARNER "no."

Mr. THOMPSON, of Kentucky, for the remainder of this legislative day, with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. GEDDES with Mr. WILLIAMS of Wisconsin, for this day.

Mr. YOUNG, of Ohio, with Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi, on all questions, until Monday at noon.

Mr. ORTH with Mr. MYERS.

Mr. JAMES with Mr. O'BRIEN.

Mr. EINSTEIN with Mr. MULLER.

Mr. POUND with Mr. TALBOTT, on this vote.

Mr. ERRETT with Mr. SCALES, on this vote.

Mr. BRIGHAM. I ask permission to vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair under the rules cannot entertain that request.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. GOODE moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the amendment just adopted insert the following:

"To enable the Secretary of the Navy to protect and preserve cemeteries in foreign countries used for the most part for the burial of citizens of this Government, the sum of $3,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 845, insert:

"For the purchase of Ingall's portrait of the late Thomas Ewing, first Secretary of the Interior, $600."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 856, insert the following:

"For passenger elevator in the south wing of the Capitol, to be located by the Architect of the Capitol, $7,000; such elevator to be so located as to interfere as little as possible with the use of the offices and rooms of the House."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After line 963, insert the following:

"Under head of 'Surveying the public lands,' strike out $200,000 and insert $300,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Under the head of "Surveying the public lands," insert the following:

"Provided, That the part of the sum hereby appropriated that may be apportioned to the surveying district of Louisiana, together with such sums as have been or may be deposited for surveys there by actual settlers under sections 2401, 2402, and 2403 of the Revised Statutes, may be, in whole or in part, employed in making such resurveys as may be necessary in the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

In line 1016, under the heading "For completion of the tenth census," insert as follows:

"To be immediately available."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Under the heading of the "Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb," strike out the proviso in lines 1044, 1045, and 1046, which reads as follows: "Provided, That hereafter one-half of the expenses of this institution shall be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia."

Mr. BLOUNT. On that amendment I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BLOUNT. As it is now nearly eleven o'clock, I move the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at ten o'clock and forty-eight minutes a. m., February 28) the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following petitions, memorials, and other papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows, viz:

By Mr. WILLIAM ALDRICH: The petition of 1440 citizens and business men of Chicago, Illinois, for the repeal of the tax on bank deposits—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BAILEY: The petition of 350 citizens of Albany, New York, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. CARPENTER: The petition of F. C. Jennings and 64 others, citizens of Ida County, Iowa, for legislation to protect stock-growers from pleuro-pneumonia and other contagious cattle diseases—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HORACE DAVIS: Resolutions adopted by the convention of wheat-growers of California, in relation to an interoceanic canal—to the Committee on Interoceanic Ship Canal.

By Mr. ERRETT: The petition of 520 citizens of Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the tax on bank deposits—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAWLEY: The petition of Charles D. Barnes and others, of Southington, Connecticut, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LE FEVRE: The petition of W. T. Exline and 16 others, that a pension be granted Simeon M. Hickman—to the same committee.

Also, the petition of Herman Laut and others, for the reduction of the tax on cigars—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, the petitions of Joseph Turner and others, and of J. B. Robbins and 170 others, citizens of Ohio, for the imposition of a tax on incomes—to the same committee.

Also, the petition of W. C. Davis and others, citizens of Willshire, Ohio, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, the petitions of John J. Alexander, H. C. Wilson, and 175 others, of Joseph Turner and others, of Anna, and of E. Blanchard and others, of Oran, citizens of Ohio, for legislation to protect innocent purchasers of patented articles—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petitions of John J. Alexander and 176 others, and of Joseph Turner and others, citizens of Ohio, that the Commissioner of Agriculture be made a member of the President's Cabinet—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, the petitions of John Gartley and 228 others, of D. Curtner and others, of Michael Clouse and others, and of J. B. Robbins and 176 others, citizens of Ohio, for legislation to regulate interstate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. LORING: The petitions of 300 citizens of Salem and of 1,080 citizens of Boston, Massachusetts, for the repeal of the tax on bank deposits—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MILLS: The petition of citizens of McLennon County, Texas, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. NEAL: The petition of S. P. Wood and 150 others, citizens of Ohio, for legislation regulating transportation on railroads—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of A. Jacoby and 15 others, citizens of Ohio, for such changes in the patent laws as will protect innocent purchasers—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. O'NEILL: Resolutions of the Board of Trade of Philadelphia, favoring the appointment of a commission to prepare a bill regulating interstate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. RAY: The petition of Luther W. Smith and 5 others, against the sixty-surgeons bill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. W. A. RUSSELL: The petitions of E. A. Coffin and 319 others, citizens of Lowell, and of Richards & Currier and 199 others, of Lawrence, Massachusetts, for the repeal of the tax on bank deposits—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SAMFORD: Memorial of the city council of Eufaula, Alabama, asking an appropriation for dredging the harbor at Appalachicola, Florida—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. William E. SMITH: The petition of citizens of Randolph County, Georgia, for the passage of a law regulating interstate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of the same parties, for the passage of a law to protect innocent purchasers of patented articles—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petition of the same parties, for the passage of an income-tax law—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WISE: Two petitions of citizens of Pennsylvania, that the Commissioner of Agriculture be made a Cabinet officer—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, the petition of the same parties, for an income tax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, two petitions of the same parties for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. YOCUM: The petition of D. C. Walter and others, citizens of Clinton County, Pennsylvania, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

IN SENATE.

MONDAY, February 28, 1881.

The Senate met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. J. BULLOCK, D. D.

On motion of Mr. RANSOM, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was dispensed with.

PHILEMON B. HAWKINS.

Mr. RANSOM. I regret to be compelled this morning to ask a personal kindness of the Senate. I am so sick that I am fearful I cannot even remain here during the session to-day. I seldom trespass upon the indulgence of the Senate. There are two small bills on the Calendar which have been passed by the House and reported on favorably and unanimously by two careful committees of the Senate, the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Claims, which I hope the Senate will permit me to call up and have disposed of. If they provoke any discussion, I shall not insist upon their consideration now. First I ask the Senate to consider House bill No. 375.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 375) for the relief of Philemon B. Hawkins. It authorizes the Treasurer of the United States to pay to Philemon B. Hawkins $7,190.63 for stone furnished for the court-house and post-office building in the city of Raleigh, North Carolina.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. THOMPSON.

Mr. RANSOM. The other bill that I ask the Senate to consider is House bill No. 346.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 346) for the relief of William H. Thompson. It relieves William H. Thompson, late collector of internal revenue for the fifth collection district of North Carolina, from the payment to the United States of $2,709.60, which came to his hands as taxes due the United States, but was forcibly taken from one of the deputies of the collector by disguised robbers in the public highway while the deputy was on his way to make return thereof.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CREDENTIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented the credentials of William Mahone, chosen by the Legislature of Virginia a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1881; which were read and ordered to be filed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a communication of the Chief of Engineers and accompanying report of Lieutenant-Colonel Q. A. Gillmore, Corps of Engineers, upon a survey for the reopening of the Santee Canal, South Carolina, made in compliance with the provisions of the river and harbor act of June 14, 1880.

Mr. McMILLAN. As that communication relates to the river and harbor bill, which has already been disposed of, (the chairman of the Committee on Commerce is not in the Senate,) I do not know whether it is necessary to refer it to that committee. I move that the communication lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. I move that it be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a communication from R. H. T. Leipold, commissioner of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, relative to the omission of an estimate for rent of rooms for the Court of Claims, and asking that an item for that purpose be inserted in the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a communication from the Quartermaster-General recommending an appropriation of $15,000 for the construction of two new bridges over the Hell Gate and Bitter Root Rivers, near Fort Missoula, Montana Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. McMILLAN presented the petition of E. M. Ostrander and others, citizens of Paynesville, Minnesota, praying for the establishment of a post-route between that place and Grove City, Minnesota; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HAMLIN. I present certain resolutions adopted by the Legislature of Maine, relating to the East River bridge. I suppose this may be a legal question, and I move the reference of the resolutions to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WILLIAMS presented two memorials signed by James McBlanset and others, citizens of Litchfield and Hudsonville, Kentucky, ex-Union soldiers, remonstrating against the passage of the bill (S. No. 496) providing for the examination and adjudication of pension claims; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, presented a memorial of 64 ex-soldiers of the late war and members of the Grand Army of the Republic of Pennsylvania, protesting against the passage of the bill (S. No. 496) providing for the examination and adjudication of pension claims; which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. COCKRELL submitted the views of a minority of the Committee on Military Affairs on the bill (H. R. No. 3477) for the relief of Carlile Boyd; which were ordered to be printed.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I present, from the Select Committee to examine into the circumstances connected with the removal of the Northern Cheyennes from the Sioux Reservation to the Indian Territory, the testimony taken by them at the present session in regard to the removal and present condition of the Ponca Indians, which matter was also committed to that committee. I move that it lie on the table and be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I am directed by the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 2437) for the relief of several persons impressed into the United States naval service, to report it without amendment. The bill is for the relief of the survivors of the vessels Champion No. 3 and No. 5, which were destroyed on Red River during the late war, and I ask that the Senate consider it at this time, for the reason that I was not able to report it earlier in consequence of my absence.

Mr. TELLER. It is a House bill?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. It is a House bill. It has passed the House, and is a highly meritorious measure. The object of the bill is to enable the Navy Department to do in this particular case what the military establishment has power to do under the general law—that is, to audit and pay the accounts of persons impressed into the naval service of the United States during the time that they were held in captivity. These men were taken prisoners on Red River after the destruction of the vessels upon which they were employed, and but a few escaped out of the whole crew. In one boat seven men escaped, and there were ten in all who escaped out of one hundred and seventy. They were taken captive and brought to Texas, where they remained in captivity, and the bill authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to pay them their wages during the period that they were held in prison.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TELLER. I shall object to its present consideration. I want to obtain the assistance of the Senator from Florida to hold a night session.

Mr. McPHERSON. One objection, I suppose, puts the bill over?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It does.

Mr. McPHERSON. Then I ask that the Senate consider House bill No. 3983.

Mr. McMILLAN. Has the morning business been concluded?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not.

Mr. COCKRELL. I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. McPHERSON. I will simply state that this bill was passed over on Saturday in my absence from the Senate. It is a House bill, and comes under the rule for considering House bills on the Calendar, and is a very important bill relating to the Navy.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator after the regular morning business shall have been concluded. Are there further reports from committees, standing or select?

Mr. McDONALD, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6479) for the relief of Thomas Snell, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. CONKLING, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5088) to authorize the registration of trade-marks and protect the same, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1751) to provide for the publication and registration of the title and claims to the property called trade-marks, moved its indefinite postponement; which was agreed to.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 2214) donating condemned cannon to the Brooklyn Veteran Union, Brooklyn, Iowa, reported it without amendment.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. HILL, of Colorado, asked and, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 2223) to amend section 2326 of the Revised Statutes in regard to mineral lands; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. WALLACE asked and, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to introduce a bill (S. No. 2224) for the relief of Orange M. Blair, administrator of Thomas P. Blair, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The VICE-PRESIDENT signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, which had previously received the signature of the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

A bill (S. No. 76) for the relief of M. F. Clark;

A bill (S. No. 326) for the relief of Henry F. Lines;

A bill (S. No. 367) granting an increase of pension to Isabel L. Evans;

A bill (S. No. 753) to provide for the sale of the remainder of the reservation of the confederated Otoe and Missouria tribes of Indians, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. No. 1181) for the relief of Dodd, Brown & Co., of Saint Louis, Missouri;

A bill (S. No. 1905) changing the name of the First National Bank of West Meriden, in the county of New Haven, and State of Connecticut;

A bill (S. No. 2184) to authorize the commissioners of the District of Columbia to appoint additional policemen for temporary service in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 7036) to establish post-routes;

A bill (H. R. No. 7033) making the city of Chattanooga, in the State of Tennessee, a port of delivery;

A bill (H. R. No. 7103) to constitute Atlanta, Georgia, a port of delivery;

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 79) directing the Secretary of War to investigate the claim of the State of Florida against the United States for expenditures made in suppressing Indian hostilities in said State between the years 1855 and 1860, and to report the result of such investigation to Congress; and

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 156) in relation to the international exhibition of 1883.

WILLIAM H. DAVIS.

Mr. BOOTH. On Saturday House bill No. 6860 for the relief of William H. Davis was referred, by mistake I think, to the Committee on Military Affairs. It should have gone to the Committee on Claims. With the consent of the chairman of the committee I move that the Committee on Military Affairs be discharged from its further consideration and that the bill be referred to the Committee on Claims.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The vote ordering the former reference will be regarded as reconsidered and the bill referred to the Committee on Claims, if there be no objection.

ISTHMUS SHIP-CANALS.

Mr. WINDOM. I ask permission to give notice to the Senate that at three o'clock to-morrow I shall ask the consent of the Senate, if it does not too much interfere with its business, to address to the Senate some remarks upon the subject of the resolution reported by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. EATON] from the Committee on Foreign Relations in relation to the Isthmus ship-canals. I give the notice because I am constantly engaged on appropriation bills, and I shall be very much obliged to the Senate if I can have that opportunity to-morrow.

Mr. EATON. I hope that my friend may make his remarks to-morrow, because I shall then ask for a vote upon the resolution. I do not desire to discuss it myself, but I want a vote of the Senate upon it.

Mr. BECK subsequently said: This morning the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WINDOM] gave notice that to-morrow at three o'clock he desired to be heard upon a given subject. I rise for the purpose of asking if it would not suit his convenience this afternoon at three as well as to-morrow, because we hope by to-morrow to have the sundry civil bill ready to report to the Senate and may by three o'clock to-morrow desire to go on with it. If he could do it as well this afternoon, it would be much safer than to wait till to-morrow.

Mr. WINDOM. It will suit my convenience quite as well; and if the Senate is agreeable, I shall be glad to go on at three o'clock this afternoon. I therefore give notice that I will endeavor to take the floor at that hour.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MCPHERSON and others addressed the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there further business for the morning hour? If not the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON] asks the Senate to consider——

Mr. SAUNDERS. I ask unanimous consent to take up——

Mr. COCKRELL. I call for the regular order.

Mr. TELLER. I call for the regular order, and I give notice that I shall object to any bill being passed by unanimous consent out of its order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is called for, which is the consideration of the Calendar of General Orders.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I wish the Senator from Colorado would withdraw that objection for a moment. I will state that a bill——

Mr. TELLER. I decline to withdraw it for anything. There is no use wasting the time of the Senate in talking about a bill that will be reached in its order on the Calendar.

Mr. SAUNDERS. We do not know about its being reached. That is the trouble. If we knew it would be reached there would be no objection to letting it go over; but what I want to state is that——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded by several Senators.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask for it.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I ask to have the Senate consider House bill No. 3983.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I think I have the floor.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator had not the floor.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I certainly thought I had the floor unless we were going to the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognized the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MCPHERSON] fifteen minutes ago to ask for the consideration of the bill he indicated when the business of the morning hour should have been completed.

Mr. MCPHERSON. This bill was passed over in my absence; it is upon the Calendar; is a House bill, and a very important one. It provides for a permanent construction fund for the Navy by the sale of old vessels and old materials that are to-day costing the Government hundreds of thousands——

Mr. SAUNDERS. I insist on my right to the floor if we do not go to the Calendar. If the call of the Calendar is proceeded with, I am willing to abide by that.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Does the Senator object to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. SAUNDERS. Is it the first bill in order on the Calendar? If it is the first in order then I yield.

Mr. BURNSIDE. The bill was passed over without prejudice.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I do not understand about bills being passed over without prejudice.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I ask the Chair what is the meaning of the term "passing over without prejudice?" The bill to which the Senator from New Jersey refers was passed over without prejudice.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It means simply that when the Calendar shall again be called in regular order it shall be the first stated.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. That is my understanding of it; and that bill was passed over without prejudice.

Several SENATORS addressed the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is nothing in order but the regular order, which is the call of the Calendar for House bills, under the special order adopted on Saturday last.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I am willing to yield to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the first bill.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Do I then understand that it is not in order to go back and call for a bill passed over without prejudice?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has made no such ruling.

Mr. MCPHERSON. If the Chair so rules, then I shall ask for a vote of the Senate to take up the bill (H. R. No. 3983) to provide a construction fund for the Navy, and for other purposes; and in that connection I wish to state——

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Senator to yield to me a moment until I explain. Last Saturday when that bill was called nobody was here to explain it, and I objected simply, not to put it at the foot of the Calendar, but that it go over without prejudice, to be taken up when the Calendar was again called. It really stands at the head of the Calendar. If the Senator insists upon going into a discussion here we shall lose an hour. All he has to do is to wait until the Calendar is called, and then the bill is at the head of the Calendar.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. MCPHERSON. I yield to everybody.

Mr. ROLLINS. I call for the regular order.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I desire to say in reply to the Senator from Colorado that he did not state the exact fact, that there was nobody here to explain the bill. I so stated distinctly, and the bill was passed over without prejudice, with the understanding that it should not lose its place.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Has the Chair ruled that the bill stands at the head of the Calendar?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not so ruled.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Then I ask for the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. TELLER. I believe I am incorrect. I believe the statement the Senator from Rhode Island refers to was made, and finally I said inasmuch as the Senator from New Jersey was not here, and if discussion arose it probably would lead to a lengthy debate, I would object.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I ask the Chair to please rule whether the bill stands at the head of the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The present occupant was not in the chair at the time. He understands from the Secretary of the Senate that the bill was passed over without prejudice.

Mr. BURNSIDE. That was the understanding.

Mr. HOAR. What is the bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be announced by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (H. R. No. 3983) to provide a construction fund for the Navy, and for other purposes."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If that be the fact—is it disputed?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. That was the fact.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If that be the fact, the Chair rules that it is first to be considered upon this call.

Mr. PADDOCK. There was yet another bill which went over without prejudice before this one, if I recollect—a bill in charge of the Senator from Tennessee, [Mr. HARRIS.]

Mr. MCPHERSON. Then I call for the Calendar.

Mr. TELLER. Why do we not have the Calendar called and proceed to the consideration of cases on the Calendar?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If precedence be not claimed for any other bill, the Secretary will report at length the bill called for by the Senator from New Jersey.

CONSTRUCTION FUND FOR THE NAVY.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 3983) to provide a construction fund for the Navy, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I think some member of the committee ought to make an explanation of the bill.

Mr. McPHERSON. But little explanation is needed; it seems to me the bill speaks for itself very plainly.

The first section of the bill provides that an inventory shall be taken of the goods and stock on hand in the Navy Department and in the several navy-yards of the Government, which has not been done since the war, which seems to be a very proper thing indeed.

The second section of the bill curtails the power of the Secretary of the Navy. Section 1541 of the Revised Statutes gives the Secretary of the Navy power to sell any old vessels he may choose to sell and report the same to Congress. This bill provides that it shall not be done except upon the report of a competent board of officers recommending such a thing to be done, and gives the Secretary of the Navy then the power of either adopting or rejecting the report.

The third section of the bill provides for the establishment of a fund consisting of the proceeds of the sale of old and worthless material now in the yards, the sale of old and worthless vessels not worthy of reconstruction or repair, and the placing of that money in a fund to be called the permanent construction fund of the Navy, which money shall be drawn from it in accordance with the fourth and fifth sections.

The fourth section of the bill provides for the repair of vessels, and that if the completion or repair shall exceed 40 per cent. of the cost, and if in the opinion of a board of naval officers it is not best to make the improvement, then it shall not be made.

The fifth section provides for the report of the Secretary of the Navy to Congress in detail.

The sixth section provides that not more than $1,000,000 shall be expended by the Secretary of the Navy during a fiscal year except in the manner provided, and by appropriations by Congress.

The Committee on Naval Affairs, who had this bill under consideration, considered that the very large amount of material lying at the different naval establishments of the country which was comparatively worthless should be sold, and the money placed in a permanent construction fund to be used by the Secretary of the Navy for the purpose of the repair of vessels which are worthy of repair.

The Senate Committee on Naval Affairs have adopted as their report the report of the House Committee on Naval Affairs; and if the honorable Senator from Iowa will turn to that report, he will find on the first page, if he has it before him, that there are to-day in the United States Navy one hundred and forty-two vessels borne on the Naval Register. Of these, sixty-seven are steam sea-going vessels of war, twenty-two are sea-going sailing vessels of war, twenty-four are iron-clads, two are torpedo vessels, and the remaining twenty-seven are tugs, dispatch boats, &c.

The steam-vessels of the Navy are divided into four classes, as first rates, second rates, third rates, and fourth rates, and to this particular part of the report I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Iowa. The first rates are five in number, of the steam-vessels. Not one of the five is to-day a worthy sea-going vessel. They are used for traning-ships and receiving-ships. Of the twenty-seven second-rate vessels we find that there are only nine of them fit for the sea; under repair, two; awaiting repair, three; disabled on account of yellow-fever, one; a mere store hulk, one; worthless, and to be sold, seven; on the stocks unfinished, worthy of completion, one; rotten on the stocks and worthless, three. Of the twenty-seven vessels we find that only nine of them are fit for sea, and the rest of them are hardly worthy of reconstruction.

Of the twenty-nine third-rate vessels we find that six are laid up in ordinary, worthless for naval purposes, and should be sold or broken up to save the expense of their care; six are deemed worthy of repair, and are undergoing repair or laid up awaiting repair; two are antiquated paddle-wheel steamers, and have scarcely any value whatever for naval purposes; fifteen are comparatively small cruising vessels, the largest being less than 1,000 tons burden. So with regard to the sailing-vessels.

These old worthies of a past age—

Says the report of the House Committee—can no longer serve their country in war. Their cost for care and preservation is greater than their usefulness can justify, and their names should disappear from the Navy, some of them to reappear in new vessels worthy of themselves and of their country. Only five of them are now in condition to navigate the ocean.

Without detaining the Senate longer with respect to the present condition of the Navy, I will simply state that in the opinion of the committee the bill is sufficiently guarded. It simply confers upon the Secretary of the Navy this power, and only this additional power to that which he now exercises——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired under the rule.

Mr. McPHERSON. If permitted, I should like to go on one minute longer.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. ANTHONY. I hope the chairman of the committee will be allowed to proceed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection; and the Senator from New Jersey will proceed.

Mr. McPHERSON. The bill gives the Secretary of the Navy the power to expend a million dollars annually from this permanent construction fund, which will be in the Treasury Department as at present. The sums for which these old vessels will be sold will be placed in the Treasury to be used for two purposes: first, for new construction, and secondly, for repairs. It will be noticed that, by the fourth section of the bill, when repairs are made "the cost of such completion or repairs shall be made from said permanent construction fund of the Navy." I apprehend that for the next two or three years no part of this construction fund will be used for any purpose except for the repair of those vessels deemed most worthy of repair by a competent board.

Mr. BECK. I do not propose to offer any amendment to the bill, nor do I propose to discuss it under a five-minute rule, but I desire to say to the Senate, after looking at it with as much care as I could some time ago, that it is a bill which ought to be carefully and fully discussed. It is a bill which gives the Secretary of the Navy a right to dispose of our ships, that he may call unseaworthy, just as he pleases, to sell them for what he pleases, and to make a construction fund which shall not be covered into the Treasury, but held as a permanent fund to the amount of a million a year to do as he likes with. It is too dangerous a power to be conferred on anybody; and such a bill should not be entertained at all unless there is time to consider it more carefully than can be done now.

While I do not propose to object to its consideration, I think it is the most dangerous bill I have seen in the Senate. It is going back to the old trouble we had ten years ago, which we got rid of with so much difficulty. When we limited the right of sale to old scraps, charges were made that vessels were broken up and sold as old scraps, and it will be so again. It is a surrender of the power of Congress not only over the ships of the Navy but over the proceeds of those sales. It surrenders to the Secretary the power to do as he likes with any of the fund on hand arising from these sales. I shall call for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill, and shall vote against it for that reason.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

Mr. BECK. I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary began the call of the roll by calling the name of Mr. ALLISON.

Mr. EATON. Mr. President, I desire to say one word. I agree with the Senator from Kentucky that this bill gives a very dangerous power to be placed in the hands of one man. I cannot vote for the bill under these circumstances. I do not think there ought to be a fund of this sort placed in the hand of the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary of the Navy or anybody else. If it is necessary to break up the old vessels of the Navy and sell them, break them up and sell them at public auction and turn the proceeds into the Treasury of the people; and when it is necessary to build a new vessel appropriate the money out of the Treasury to build that vessel; not have a fund here that will be seized. I do not undertake to say that the incoming Secretary of the Navy will do anything that is wrong; but I will not give him the power to do it; I will not permit him to do it by my vote. When it is necessary to build a ship let Congress appropriate the money needed for the purpose.

In the few days that I stay here, if it becomes necessary to vote $1,000,000 or $2,000,000 or $5,000,000 to the public defense of the United States, I stand ready to vote it; but not to vote money into irresponsible hands to do what they please to do hereafter. It is suggested to me that if the Secretary of the Navy were to do what I have stated he would be guilty of a misdemeanor, and my friend from New Jersey might say that he may be punished for a misdemeanor if he does not do what is right. That will not answer. Do not let us give him any power to be guilty of a misdemeanor. That is my view of the case. I have spoken my five minutes.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President, I should like to have unanimous consent, as I suppose under the rule I can speak but once on this question, to answer the objections of the Senator from Connecticut, and the Senator from Kentucky. If these two Senators would address themselves to the correction of the present law which confers upon the Secretary of the Navy extraordinary power, it would be much more consistent than to find fault with this bill. I will read section 1541 of the Revised Statutes:

The Secretary of the Navy is authorized and directed to sell, at public sale, such vessels and materials of the United States Navy as, in his judgment, cannot be advantageously used, repaired, or fitted out; and he shall, at the opening of each session of Congress, make a full report to Congress of all vessels and materials sold, the parties buying the same, and the amount realized therefrom, together with such other facts as may be necessary to a full understanding of his acts.

So the Secretary of the Navy has full, unrestricted, unlimited power to sell any and every vessel of the Navy that in his judgment and opinion is not worthy of repair.

Now I will call the attention of honorable Senators to section 2 of this bill, which we propose to enact into a law:

It shall also be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy, as soon as may be after the passage of this act, to cause to be examined by competent boards of officers of the Navy, to be designated by him for that duty, all vessels belonging to the Navy not in actual service at sea, and vessels at sea as soon as they shall return to any naval station within the United States, and said boards shall ascertain and report to the Secretary of the Navy, in writing, which of said vessels are unfit for further service, or, if the same are unfinished in any navy-yard, which cannot be finished without great and disproportionate expense, and shall in such report state fully the grounds and reasons for their opinion.

Then, after having received that report, the Secretary of the Navy has the power to accept or reject it. In other words, he has the report of a competent board to advise him, in connection with his present power, and over all that is the power of the President of the United States.

I had an idea that we had repealed section 1541 of the Revised Statutes, but on examination of the matter I can find no repealing act. But whether it has been repealed or not, I wish to ask the Senate how it is possible for the Government to dispose of this old and worthless material which is to-day burdening the Government with a vast expenditure of money yearly for the purpose of keeping these old hulks alive? They have to be caulked and painted for the purpose of keeping them in fit repair, and after that they are of no use whatever to the Government. Unless we confer the power somewhere to dispose of these old worthless hulks, they are a continual burden on the Government.

The committee believed that it was proper to give that power to the Secretary of the Navy with the guards this bill throws around him, a competent board of naval officers first to take charge of the matter and make report to the Secretary, and if that report is confirmed by the Secretary the vessels are then to be sold at public sale to the highest bidder. I cannot for my part see any other method that can be suitably adopted.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Mr. President, I notice in the third section of this bill a most dangerous precedent. It will be recollected that some years ago a system grew up under the sale of old materials that induced Congress to pass a statute, which this bill recognizes, and proposes to repeal, to some extent, directing that the proceeds of all such sales should go into the Treasury and not be used till reappropriated regularly. This is the first great step—there have been several smaller steps in the same direction, but this is the first great step made—in the direction of repealing that act. It is most dangerous, I say again, and I cannot but think the Committee on Naval Affairs, as well as the Senate, have not had their attention called to this third section, which says:

> No unexpended balances of said construction fund shall hereafter be covered into the Treasury—

Notwithstanding the law which now requires that all such moneys should be covered into the Treasury. This bill goes on to repeal that law and is intended, I think, to give a large sum, a million dollars per annum, into the hands of the Navy Department to do that which Congress knows nothing about. It ought not to pass, and if a single objection stops this bill I must enter that objection. I think it the most dangerous provision I have known presented here this year, and it would lead to greater abuses than any measure which has been proposed. It is a bill of which, apart from that section I have called attention to, I know nothing about; but this particular section is most dangerous, and I shall either move to have it stricken out or I shall object to the bill. I cannot think the Senate will agree to repeal a law which has worked so much good to the public Treasury and which has stopped so much evil, as my friend from Kentucky has well said, and which but a few years ago Congress was ready to enforce almost to the verge of impeachment of some officers. I hope the Senate will not, under any circumstances, consent to the third section of this bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. This bill has passed the amendable stage, except by unanimous consent.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Then, unless the committee agree that this third section be stricken out, I must object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. ROLLINS. It is too late to object. The roll-call has already commenced on the passage of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The roll-call has not commenced.

Mr. ROLLINS. The roll-call had commenced, and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] had responded.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. The Senator from Iowa is not in his seat.

Mr. ROLLINS. The Senator from Iowa was in his seat, and responded to his name on the roll-call.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is not the declaration of the Secretary.

Mr. BURNSIDE. The name of the Senator from Iowa was called.

Mr. ROLLINS. It is a fact, whether the Secretary says so or not.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If the Senator from West Virginia objects to the consideration of this bill, it goes over.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I object, unless by consent of the committee the third section is stricken out.

Mr. McPHERSON. The committee cannot consent——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia cannot attach conditions to his objection. He must object absolutely and without condition or not at all. Does he object.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I do object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill goes over.

Mr. McPHERSON. Does one objection put the bill over?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It does.

Mr. McPHERSON. I ask for a vote of the Senate on the question. I move to postpone the pending and all prior orders, for the purpose of continuing the consideration of this bill by taking a vote on its passage, which is all that is necessary to conclude it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill has gone over and the Senator from New Jersey now proposes to postpone the pending order, which is the consideration of the next House bill on the Calendar, and states his purpose if that motion shall prevail to move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill just postponed under the rule. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. TELLER. I hope the Senate will stay by the Calendar. This bill is of no more importance than hundreds of others on this Calendar. Why should we stop now at this hour? If there is anything in this rule at all I cannot understand why we should not carry it out. There will probably be opportunities for this bill to be called up after the morning hour and have proper discussion.

Mr. McPHERSON. Why not have a vote on it and vote it down if the Senate does not wish to pass it.

Mr. TELLER. I am willing to have a vote on it; but I am not willing to have the Calendar displaced.

Mr. McPHERSON. It will take no longer to vote now than at any other time.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I rise to a question of order. I ask the decision of the Chair as to whether after a name has been called on the yeas and nays debate is in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is in order if the Senator called has not answered to his name, as in this case.

Mr. ANTHONY. I hope this motion of the Senator from New Jersey will prevail, and that we shall have no discussion on the bill, but take the vote. It is very important, if we ever mean to have a navy.

Mr. TELLER. You will have discussion.

Mr. ANTHONY. The Senator from West Virginia says we are authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to do what we know nothing about. Of course we are. We know nothing about ships, and he and the heads of his bureaus do know something about them; and this bill is to delegate to him the authority to do what we do not know how to do ourselves.

Mr. HOAR. I think the Chair is really right in his ruling on the point of order; and even if the Senator from Iowa had answered when without objection, by general consent, debate proceeded, it is to be considered as a waiver of that call. It seems to me that the Senate ought in this instance to take up the bill, and not stand by the Calendar, because the discussion of the bill had taken place; it had gone on; the Senate had voted upon it; it had been reported from the Committee of the Whole to the Senate; it had passed its amendable stages; and it seems to me, therefore, that we ought not to lose all the time we have occupied. I hope the motion of the Senator from New Jersey will prevail.

Mr. McPHERSON. I call for a vote on my motion that the pending order be postponed for the purpose of voting on this bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Jersey.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 23, noes 15.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia, and Mr. TELLER called for the yeas and nays; and they were ordered.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I just wish to say a few words in reply to what has been said. I do not think the objection presented in such strong terms by the Senator from West Virginia is entitled to much weight. The object of this bill, in short, is to get rid of a lot of accumulated, worthless material of the Navy, to dispose of it for money, and place that money in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy to substitute for the old material new material which will be of some use for the service of the country. The bill guards in every possible way the sale of the old material, and you must have confidence somewhere or in somebody. It is not possible for Congress to superintend personally business of this description. It is purely executive business, and you must have faith in somebody to carry out your wishes. The bill clearly prescribes the duty of the Secretary of the Navy, what he shall do with this fund, and from what is said here, one would suppose that there would be under this bill an annual balance of millions every year to be expended. It may be all disposed of in one year. If we can get one good ship out of the sale of three bad ones, surely the country would be profited by the exchange, however you accomplish it. If you dispense with the existing vessels of war and provide no fund to supply their places, the country, in case of an emergency, may be helpless. It will not do to provide for the sale of this material and then put the money into the Treasury and await the meeting of Congress to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to build a ship.

We had some experience on this subject in 1870, when we were brought face to face with a very great emergency in our complications with Spain, and it became necessary for the executive government to expend a very large sum of money to meet the exigencies of that case. The country does not stop to inquire in times like that how it ought to be done; but it must be done, and if these ships are not of the proper size and character to meet emergencies of this kind, you must repose confidence somewhere, and I am not one of those who are entirely without faith in the officers the people have designated to give effect to the popular will.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. It is not the part of the bill of which the Senator from Florida has been speaking that I object to specially, but it is the third section, which prevents the proceeds of the sale of those vessels going into the Treasury, and gives the Secretary of the Navy power to do as he may think proper with the fund.

Mr. LOGAN. Read the section.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I ask that the Clerk read the third section.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

There is hereby established a fund, to be called and known as the construction fund of the Navy, which shall comprise the appropriations made therefor from time to time by Congress and the proceeds arising from the sale of old or condemned vessels of the Navy and of old and condemned materials and condemned stores and supplies as hereinbefore provided, which said fund shall be used and expended by the Secretary of the Navy in the construction, armament, and equipment of new naval vessels, and for no other purpose. No unexpended balances of said construction fund shall hereafter be covered into the Treasury or be made available for any purpose not provided by this act, any law to the contrary notwithstanding. The Secretary of the Navy shall not contract to expend for the purposes provided for in this act, during any one fiscal year, a greater sum than the amount standing to the credit of said fund during said year, including additions from the sale of vessels, materials, stores, and supplies, and the balance of the previous year, if any. But in the construction, armament, or equipment of new vessels of the Navy as herein provided for, the Secretary of the Navy may make use of any materials, stores, or supplies now on hand, which, in his opinion, will not probably be required in the repair of the vessels, their armament or equipment, now in the Navy, but not otherwise.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair reminds Senators that the merits of this bill are not to be discussed on this motion.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Florida have been discussing the merits to some extent; and, if the Senate will indulge me, I think there is a perfect answer to the objection made by the Senator from Kentucky and the Senator from West Virginia. I do not want to trespass upon the rule, but if I may be indulged by the Senate I will state what seems to me to be a perfect answer.

The law that requires the proceeds of the sale of old materials to be turned into the Treasury and reappropriated was enacted for this purpose, to meet this trouble. In the Army and in the Navy Departments it was the custom to dispose of old material and then to consider themselves at liberty to apply the proceeds to any exigency in those Departments that the heads of those Departments thought necessary and proper. There was no account of such dispositions regularly made and they were not known except as one would go through the books of the Departments covering ten, fifteen, or twenty years. A law was passed—the Senator from Kentucky and myself had something to do with the making of that law; either he or myself drew it, I do not remember which—which required the proceeds of such material, when sold, to be turned into the Treasury and there await a specific appropriation.

Now, in reference to the old material of ships, it is proposed by this bill, instead of that, to make an account of those proceeds and appropriate the money here in this bill specifically to the sole use of construction in the Navy; and it is just as much a specific appropriation of the proceeds of old material as it would be for the Secretary of the Navy under existing law to report to Congress that he had sold old material to the amount of $20,000, and Congress should thereupon appropriate that $20,000 to the repair of a ship. It is specific, just as much so as the course contemplated by the law to which the Senator from West Virginia calls attention, and the fund is as clearly accounted for and always before the country as if that law remained applicable to these materials. There is no curtailment of the provisions of that law. It is only in advance directing how this fund shall be kept by itself before the public and used for this specific purpose.

Mr. PADDOCK. I rise to a question of order. I would like to inquire if it is in order to discuss this question upon the merits on the motion to postpone.

Mr. DAWES. I understand that, and I asked the indulgence of the Senate to be allowed to follow in the line of the other Senators, and no one objected to my request. If the Senator from Nebraska thinks I ought not to proceed under those circumstances, I retire; but I thought the Senate was indulging me in what seemed to me to be an answer to the objection.

Mr. LOGAN. While the Senator is on that point I should like to ask him if this proposed law does not affect the existing law so far as that law requires the proceeds of these sales to be turned into the Treasury?

Mr. DAWES. I have stated wherein it affected that law. That law was made because turning these proceeds into the Treasury prevented the using of them for anything the Departments desired, according to the former practice; but this, instead of that, requires an account to be kept of this particular fund, and is in advance a direction by Congress how it shall be used. That is the difference. All the good that was to come from the present law, in the way of having knowledge on the part of Congress of what the sales of materials came to and what was done with the proceeds, is still retained. If Congress do not desire to appropriate the money to the uses indicated in this bill, of course they will not pass the bill; but if they desire to use so much money for the purpose indicated, they keep it within the spirit of the existing law precisely, but do not, as that law does, turn the proceeds into the Treasury and require a future appropriation to take them out.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, if there is any rule of the Senate which will require the Senate to confine itself to the subject before it, I propose to invoke it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to postpone.

Mr. COCKRELL. I do hope the Senate will not lay aside the Calendar. If we are to do any business at all, we must stick to the Calendar and dispose of other cases.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I ask that the rule be enforced.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. What rule?

Mr. BURNSIDE. If this motion is not debatable on the merits of the question, why is such debate allowed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri has not alluded to the merits of the bill at all. He is entirely in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. If I ever spoke out of order, I do not know it, Mr. President.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I beg the Senator's pardon; I thought he was out of order.

Mr. COCKRELL. If other Senators would attend to the rules as closely as I do, we should transact business more rapidly than we do.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 30, nays 23; as follows:

YEAS—30.

Allison,	Conkling,	Jones of Florida,	Pugh,
Anthony,	Dawes,	Jones of Nevada,	Rollins,
Baldwin,	Farley,	Kirkwood,	Vance,
Brown,	Groome,	Lamar,	Voorhees,
Burnside,	Hampton,	McMillan,	Whyte,
Butler,	Hill of Colorado,	McPherson,	Withers.
Call,	Hoar,	Morrill,
Cameron of Pa.,	Johnston,	Platt,

NAYS—23.

Beck,	Eaton,	McDonald,	Slater,
Blair,	Ferry,	Maxey,	Teller,
Booth,	Garland,	Morgan,	Walker,
Cockrell,	Hereford,	Paddock,	Williams,
Coke,	Hill of Georgia,	Plumb,	Windom.
Davis of W. Va.,	Logan,	Saunders,

ABSENT—22.

Bailey,	Edmunds,	Kellogg,	Sharon,
Bayard,	Grover,	Kernan,	Thurman,
Blaine,	Hamlin,	Pendleton,	Vest,
Bruce,	Harris,	Randolph,	Wallace.
Cameron of Wis.,	Ingalls,	Ransom,
Davis of Illinois,	Jonas,	Saulsbury,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey now moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 3983) to provide a construction fund for the Navy, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I should like to amend section 3 by striking out from the word "no," in line 10, to the word "notwithstanding," inclusive, in line 13.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is not now amendable. The question is, Shall the bill pass, upon which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Do I understand that the bill has been reported to the Senate and is not now amendable?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been reported to the Senate, ordered to be read a third time, and read the third time, and is not now amendable. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I simply wish to call the attention of the Senate to the words commencing on line 10 of section 3, down to line 13, which I will read:

No unexpended balances of said construction-fund shall hereafter be covered into the Treasury or be made available for any purpose not provided by this act, any law to the contrary notwithstanding—

Showing clearly that this bill itself recognizes that it is contrary to the present law as to covering money into the Treasury funds obtained from condemned vessels or from any other sales. It is an innovation upon the law as it now exists and prevents the money from going into the Treasury as it should and being appropriated if its use is necessary. It is intended, as I understand, to put a permanent fund of $1,000,000—if there be so much realized from condemned material sold—into the hands of the Secretary of the Navy to do as he thinks proper with it.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Does the Senator say it gives the Secretary the power to do whatever he pleases?

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Certainly for construction.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. He must use it for the construction of ships.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. It is the same thing. He is to use it, as far as he thinks proper, without Congress knowing what it is. He can sell under this provision, as I understand, anything that is condemned and use the money realized as he may think proper, so far as it goes, to construction.

It is an unusual thing, and perhaps the only innovation on the law passed some years ago requiring everything to be turned into the Treasury and regularly appropriated, and that law ought not to be repealed, but this bill repeals it to a certain extent.

Mr. McPHERSON. Does the Senator know that it is not to be put into the general Treasury fund appropriated for the Navy, but put into a separate fund which is set apart in the Treasury as a separate fund to be known as "the construction fund of the Navy," which shall receive the moneys arising from the sale of old material, and that fund is to be applied to the construction of new ships? Everything goes into the Treasury, but only to the credit of a fund from which no money can be drawn except for certain purposes.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Why not let it go regularly into the Treasury to be appropriated by Congress, as is done in all other cases? Why make an exception here and make this fund one to be under the control of the Secretary of the Navy when all other funds go into the Treasury regularly and come before Congress for an appropriation? It is wrong in principle.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President, are we now debating this bill under the five-minute rule?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands.

Mr. BECK. That being the case, I will say to my friends that I do not want to be interrupted, as I am limited to five minutes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator has three minutes of his five minutes left.

Mr. BECK. Three minutes will do me.

Mr. President, I object to this bill for these reasons: we have passed laws time and again requiring all the officers of the Government to account to us for all sales made of Government property. We stopped a late Secretary of the Navy from selling ships, and confined him to selling old scraps and old material, because he was selling what Congress thought good and valuable vessels. We required all proceeds of the sales to be paid into the Treasury; we confined him to expending moneys appropriated by Congress, and we took supervision over these matters ourselves and endeavored to retain it.

Now, here is a bill which not only deprives Congress of all power over the vessels of the Navy, but authorizes in the first section the Secretary of the Navy to appoint any board he may please, they may be his own subordinates, and they may not only condemn all the ships at our yards which they say are not sea-worthy, but all on foreign stations as soon as they arrive at home, and all the iron-clads now on the stocks if they say they are not fit for use hereafter and sell them, without submitting the matter to Congress or taking our judgment upon it. Every ship that has not such rooms as the gentlemen on these boards would like to sail in may be sold at public auction before the next Congress meets, and we may have no Navy at all if the Secretary and three of his clerks see fit to sell them. The meaning of it all is to absolutely make the Secretary of the Navy master of the existing ships of the Navy, without the consent of Congress, to sell them as he pleases, and then deposit the money received as a special fund subject to his order, which he is to call a construction fund, and out of it he can build what he likes, put it where he chooses without our consent and without our knowledge. He may build palaces if he pleases for his officers, ships that would not resist a Whitworth gun or any other gun of any foreign nation, and Congress has no control or power over him.

It is a bill transferring the whole power over the Navy of the United States to the Secretary of the Navy and his subordinates, and all the money that they may receive will be expended in such construction as he may see fit; and, my word for it, when this bill passes nine-tenths of the old ships of the Navy that these fancy gentlemen do not want to sail in will be condemned as unfit for their use, and a system of building up magnificent vessels such as would be agreeable to them will be established, and Congress cannot stop it. If you allow the Secretary to begin the construction of such ships as these boards may advise, without coming to us and without giving us any authority over them, you will be forced year after year to furnish all the money needed to carry them out. This means to sell all the iron-clads on the stocks; it means to sell every old ship these men do not want to sail in, and sell it for nothing, for that will be the result, and to get the construction fund to do what they like with it, and we are not to be allowed to say a word or to know whether it is right or wrong. There is not a ship in the American Navy that they cannot sell under this bill. Even the best ships we have got with improved arms they can sell to-morrow on short advertisement, if the Secretary of the Navy can get three of his clerks to say it ought to be done.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to say to the Senator from Kentucky that he may speak without limit. The Chair in his previous statement overlooked the fact that the rule had been set aside in order to continue this bill.

Mr. BECK. I hope it will be a long time before any such power will be given to any executive officer.

Mr. McPHERSON. I should like to call the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to the second section of the bill, by an examination of which he will see how unnecessary his argument has been on this question. A competent board of naval officers are required to examine into the condition of these vessels and report to the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. BECK. Am I to understand the Chair to say that I have a right to go on?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky has a right to speak without limit, the pending order having been set aside for the consideration of this bill.

Mr. BECK. I only want a very few minutes longer. I will read the second section. The first section provides that—

Such appraisal shall be made by boards of officers of the Navy, to be designated by the Secretary.

He has the appointment of the officers to constitute the board, and he can sell the old ships as he likes. Then section 2 provides:

It shall also be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy, as soon as may be after the passage of this act, to cause to be examined by competent boards of officers of the Navy, to be designated by him for that duty—

Whoever he says is competent is competent; whoever he wants can be placed on the board—

all vessels belonging to the Navy not in actual service at sea, and vessels at sea as soon as they shall return to any naval station within the United States, and said boards shall ascertain and report to the Secretary of the Navy, in writing, which of said vessels are unfit for further service, or, if the same are unfinished in any navy-yard—which cannot be finished without great and disproportionate expense, and shall in such report state fully the grounds and reasons for their opinion. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy, if he shall concur in opinion with said report, to strike the name of such vessel or vessels from the Navy Register and withdraw them from the Navy. And such vessels shall thereupon be appraised in such manner as the Secretary of the Navy may approve. And if the said Secretary shall deem it for the best interest of the United States to sell any such vessel or vessels, he shall advertise for sealed proposals for the purchase of the same for a period not less than three months, in such newspapers as other naval advertisements are published in, setting forth the name and location and the appraised value of such vessel, and that the same will be sold for cash to the person or persons or corporations offering the highest price therefor above the appraised value thereof.

That includes all the iron-clads—

That is the authority; any ship in commission, out of commission, at sea or in port, built or being built, which the Secretary and his board say they do not want and think is not fit for the service, they can sell. Congress might disagree with them; the sense of the country might be against them; we know that all officers seek to have all the authority and power they can, and they will usurp it whenever they can.

It is, in other words, as I said, withdrawing all our supervision over the whole of the ships of the Navy and transferring it to the power of the Secretary and such board as he may appoint, and after they are sold it overturns a carefully prepared law which provides that the proceeds of all sales of the property of the United States shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and then shall be drawn out under the Constitution in accordance with an appropriation made by law. Congress ought to determine what ships shall be built, what construction fund shall be used, how it shall be used. The Secretary of the Navy, one of the executive officers of this Government, is the servant of Congress, but you seek by this bill to make him the master. He is not to deposit this money in the Treasury to be subject to your appropriation, but deposits it subject to call by him whenever he wants to have a ship constructed in any way he sees fit without even advising you how he is going to do it. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] says to me that he cannot do it under the Constitution. Pass this bill, and he will not wait to have any constitutional scruples about it. Did you ever know an officer of this Government to hesitate to assume all the power given him on the ground that it might be unconstitutional? You have seen officers often usurp authority not given them; but never have any constitutional scruples stopped them from exercising any authority granted by law.

This is the provision in the third section:

No unexpended balances of said construction fund shall hereafter be covered into the Treasury or be made available for any purpose not provided by this act, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

I do not care to argue it longer; I shall record my vote against it, it is an overthrow of all the safeguards which for the last twelve years we have been attempting to throw around the executive department of this Government. I could state the abuses which once existed and verify them by the record; but I will not do anything that looks like getting up a party quarrel now.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask one question for information? What accountability attaches to the Secretary of the Navy under this bill as to the expenditure of the money?

Mr. BECK. No other accountability that I know of except that the money shall be expended in the construction of something that he calls ships.

Mr. BUTLER. Is he not required to report annually that expenditure?

Mr. BECK. He reports annually what he has done; that is, after he has constructed a ship which the Senate would not authorize at all, which Congress would not authorize, he tells you what he has done, and he has done it by authority of this law and you cannot prevent him from doing it.

Mr. McPHERSON. Is there not a limit to the exercise of that power by the Secretary of the Navy?

Mr. BECK. There is a limit of a million each year, I understand, and only that limit; but he may begin a work and invest a million in it that will either have to be abandoned or require you to appropriate millions more to carry it on. He may have the iron-clads lying at the navy-yards condemned as old iron, upon which we have expended already $3,600,000; and care is taken to insert in section 2—the Secretary I suppose had it arranged—that he may not only sell ships at sea and those that are here, but all that "are unfinished in any navy-yard." He can sell them if he thinks there is going to be "a disproportionate expense" in finishing them. We have some iron-clads now that were contracted for, as many of us contend, in plain violation of law; the contracting party had no power to bind the United States by the contract; but I am not going into that.

The meaning of it is that not only will these iron-clads be sold, but sold for old iron. They will bring no more. Any wooden ships that a board of officers will report ought to be condemned will be sold, because they do not want to sail in them any more, and they will begin under this construction fund to build such ships as suit their comfort and convenience without consulting us.

I have heard no argument in favor of the bill; I never saw the bill until it came up the other morning, and then only for a few minutes; I have read it very hurriedly now; but I know it is going back on all that for twelve years Congress has been trying to do in the way of placing limitations on the power of executive officers.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I rise to present a conference report. I offer the report of the committee on conference on the legislative, executive, and judicial bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia, from the committee of conference on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, makes a report which will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7101) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 24, 28, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 41, 42, 56, 57, 66, 67, 70, 84, 85, 86, 91, 95, and 97.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 22, 23, 25, 26, 29, 30, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 68, 72, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 82, 87, 88, 90, 93, and 94, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 1: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out from the words proposed to be inserted by said amendment "eight thousand and nineteen" and insert in lieu thereof "seven thousand seven hundred and thirty-one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out from said amendment the word "laborer" and insert in lieu thereof the word "assistant;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Insert after the word "clerk" the words "and stenographer;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 27: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the word "monthly" proposed to be inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out, in line 15, after the word "thousand," at the end of line 14, page 15 of the bill, the words "two hundred and fifty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 40: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,975,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 43: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out therefrom the word "four" where it first occurs and insert in lieu thereof the word "two;" strike out the word "four" where it last occurs and insert in lieu thereof the word "six;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words proposed to be inserted by said Senate amendment and insert in lieu thereof "six hundred and forty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 69: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words "four thousand" and insert in lieu thereof "three thousand six hundred;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 71: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$591,010;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 73: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Add after the word "dollars," at the end of the amended paragraph, the following: "And the provisions of section 5485 of the Revised Statutes shall be applicable to any person who shall violate the provisions of an act entitled 'An act relating to claim agents and attorneys in pension cases,' approved June 20, 1878;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 81: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 81, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "4,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 83: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$17,100;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 89: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 89, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$204,660;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 92: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 92, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$51,200;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 96: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 96, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "ten" and insert "twelve;" and the Senate agree to the same.

H. G. DAVIS,
WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
W. B. ALLISON,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. D. C. ATKINS,
HIESTER CLYMER,
JOHN H. BAKER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Will the Senate consider this report at this time? The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, there were some of the amendments made by the Senate of very great importance, and it is manifestly impossible to ascertain from a numerical recitation what were agreed to and what were disagreed to and what were modified. I allude especially to the amendments made by the Senate providing for a large increase in the clerical force of the Pension Office and of the Surgeon-General's Office, and I ask upon that point particularly if the Senator from West Virginia will advise us what action was taken by the conference committee and how does the bill now stand?

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. In reference to the pension question, the amendments providing additional force and facilities to the three offices, that of the Commissioner of Pensions, the Surgeon-General, and the Adjutant-General, the bill stands, I believe, precisely, without a single change, as the Senate passed it. There is no difference whatever in these respects. As to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. LOGAN,] about the three medical assistants, the committee on the part of the Senate felt itself bound, after what took place here, to insist upon that amendment, but the House resisted it, and at last the Senate receded in that particular. In all other respects, so far as the pension items are concerned, the bill is left precisely as the Senate passed it.

Mr. LOGAN. The amendment the Senator referred to is not agreed to—the one offered by me.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Not agreed to by the House, and the Senate did not insist upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the report of the committee of conference.

The report was concurred in.

NAVAL CONSTRUCTION FUND.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 3983) to provide a construction fund for the Navy, and for other purposes.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, the condition of the American Navy is certainly no source of pride to the American citizen; and this not by reason of any fault whatever on the part of its personnel, for if any nation now or at any time has had reason to be proud of the officers and of the seamen of its Navy, I believe we are that nation; and in case of collision with any foreign power, so far as the men who compose the Navy are concerned, we are certainly in as good condition to compete with the world as we have been at any former period of our history or as we could ever desire to be in any future war that it may be our misfortune to wage. But, sir, owing to modern improvements, to changes in the conditions of naval warfare, we are without the vessels wherein to carry on with vigor and with success a contest upon the ocean at the present time. The consequence of this is that at the present time we are under the necessity or we are coming directly to the necessity of substituting almost wholly a new Navy for the old. Then we must sell our old ships or we must use our old ships as material to be converted into the construction of the new; and at this particular point, just at this juncture, in comes this bill proprosing at very great disadvantage to the Treasury and to the American people, as I think, to sell out the Navy to such customers as we may find for it at a very great sacrifice to the nation at large and to the very great advantage of such individual combinations as can be made to purchase the old ships and the old material. I think, sir, if we could get to the bottom of this bill, learn who are its urgers and its promoters, we should find that the same class of men who have in former times profited largely by the sales of American vessels belonging to the Navy are hoping for a repetition of the profits they received hitherto. I believe that the bill is a bad bill in that direction, and if we dispose of the vessels of our Navy in conformity with its provisions we shall realize but the merest song in comparison with the true value of the ships and the material of which they are composed.

Now, we have navy-yards; we have an existing machinery; we have the means of taking apart our vessels, those of them which are not suitable to the conditions of modern naval warfare, those of them which must be replaced by new ships, and we have the means of taking them apart as cheaply as anybody else can do it. We are lacking in labor. Those who have control of our navy-yards complain constantly that they are without the necessary amount of work to keep the capital there invested properly employed. Now, if we can, with the machinery which we possess to make a ship, also take it apart as cheaply as anybody, what is the reason that we may not take the vessels which perhaps should be condemned and which should be replaced, and ourselves separate them into their constituent parts, as must these purchasers in order to make them of any value whatever, and preserve the materials?

I have made a little inquiry, not in reference to this bill particularly, because I have never seen it until this morning, but with regard to the general proposition. I know some of the leading constructors of the Navy say that the vessels which it is proposed to sell under some bill—and I suppose this must be the bill, for there is no other one pending—can be taken apart at our own navy-yards, and the material, wood, brass, iron, and other things which enter into their composition and which can be used in the construction of the vessels we must have hereafter can in that way be made to realize to us many times the value which we can obtain by the sale at auction outright to private parties.

Mr. McPHERSON. May I ask the Senator a question in that connection?

Mr. BLAIR. Certainly.

Mr. McPHERSON. Would not, therefore, a competent board of naval officers be very likely to so report?

Mr. BLAIR. In regard to the "competent board of naval officers," what will they report? What does the bill provide that they shall do? They take a ship as it stands, a ship which is not suitable to modern naval warfare, which is of no use to the country whatever in its existing form, and they appraise the value of that ship, and it is not worth a whalebone to the United States; it is of no consequence whatever to the United States as a ship to do fighting with; and what will that board of naval officers appraise the vessel to be worth? Instead of appraising it to be worth anything, they will appraise it to be worth nothing or next to nothing, except possibly what the materials which enter into its composition might be worth after it was taken apart. They may possibly say that it is worth a little something in that way, but they appraise it as it stands, and, of course, in the separation of these materials, the separation of the good from the bad, the taking apart of the vessels, there is a large amount of labor necessary; and one point I am now making is that we may just as well utilize the capital which we have invested in our navy-yards and perform that labor ourselves. It is going to be some years before we are satisfied precisely what form of vessel we should substitute for those we now use. Constant improvements, constant inventions, are taking place, and before we decide on the navy which it is necessary for us to have when we assert the Monroe doctrine, and assert it with vigor, as I hope we shall, there must be some delay, very considerable delay; and during this interim, while the intellectual process is being carried on which invents the Navy we are to build, our yards remain in idleness, and the capital therein invested is unemployed. We may just as well keep these vessels by themselves; and when the proper time comes, not by any wholesale condemnation, but ship after sbip, as it is found necessary or deemed judicious, condemn it and separate it into its constituent elements, and in that way give employment to labor at our navy-yards, and employment to the capital which we have therein invested. These yards are now rotting down; the machinery is going to waste, and we may just as well use it in taking apart the old vessels as sell them to private individuals, who expect to come in here by virtue of their combinations and buy the navy for a song, and then convert it into material to be disposed of otherwise. No doubt it is expected that these individuals, when they get this material, will sell a very large portion of it right back to the Government when we commence our new ships.

These are no mere idle suspicions and whims on my part. It is true I have not made any very thorough investigation into this matter, but when I have come in contact with men who are interested in the reconstruction of our Navy who do know and who are competent to give an opinion on this subject, I am but reiterating ideas which I have received from them. The navy will sell for a song in this way. We may as well keep it as sell it.

This naval construction fund which it is expected to realize can, from the very nature of things, be but a very small one if we adopt the theory of the bill itself, because, as I was saying a moment ago in reply to the suggestion of the Senator from New Jersey, a naval board must appraise a naval ship at that value which it is worth to the United States, and a single gun upon any of the modern vessels of France, or of England, or of other continental powers, would knock two-thirds of our Navy into pieces, and therefore our ships are utterly valueless for fighting purposes at the present time, and will likely be appraised accordingly.

I do not believe, at all events, that a bill like this should be put through until its features are more carefully examined than they have been by the Senate, and I protest against our selling out what little Navy we have got at the value which is likely to be realized from that class of combinations which have in similar instances hitherto been found to be the only purchasers. There can be no competition for these ships. We do not want to buy them, and the few individuals who want to take them and perform the labor of their separation will not have the slightest difficulty in the future any more than they have had in the past in so combining that each one of them will take the vessel which he wants at a mere nominal price, and I believe the bill should be defeated.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, may I inquire what is the stage of this bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, shall the bill pass?

Mr. CONKLING. It has been ordered to a third reading?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been.

Mr. CONKLING. Without amendment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without amendment; and the question is, Shall it pass? and upon the question of its passage the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. CONKLING. Has it been read the third time, or has it merely been ordered to a third reading?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been read the third time, and the question is, Shall it pass?

Mr. CONKLING. I beg pardon of the Chair; I misunderstood the condition of the bill.

Mr. President, I shall venture to move to reconsider the vote ordering the bill to a third reading in order that I may offer an amendment which, before asking that the motion be put, I will state and endeavor to explain.

I move to strike out in section 3 from lines 10 to 13 the words:

No unexpended balances of said construction fund shall hereafter be covered into the Treasury or be made available for any purpose not provided by this act, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

This is House phraseology and therefore the committee of this body will take no exception if I say that it is rather extraordinary, not to say defiant language, "any law to the contrary notwithstanding." However, my objection is not to the phraseology of this provision; it is to its substance.

Section 1 of the bill exposes to condemnation all the stores of the Navy:

And all such stores and supplies as shall be found by boards of appraisers to be unserviceable for use in the Navy shall be condemned and sold in the manner hereinafter provided for the sale of old materials, and the proceeds thereof shall be paid into the Treasury to the credit of the permanent construction fund of the Navy in the same manner as is hereinafter provided concerning the proceeds of the sale of old vessels of the Navy.

In view of these words, I repeat that all the stores and all the supplies of the Navy from time to time are liable to condemnation at the hands of boards of appraisers without its being possible to know now who they are to be, and as far as they are condemned and sold the proceeds are to have the light which I will speak of in reference to the proceeds of vessels condemned. The next section provides:

SEC. 2. It shall also be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy, as soon as may be after the passage of this act, to cause to be examined by competent boards of officers of the Navy, to be designated by him for that duty, all vessels belonging to the Navy not in actual service at sea, and vessels at sea as soon as they shall return to any naval station within the United States, and said boards shall ascertain and report to the Secretary of the Navy, in writing, which of said vessels are unfit for further service, or, if the same are unfinished in any navy-yard, which cannot be finished without great and disproportionate expense, and shall in such report state fully the grounds and reasons for their opinion.

Thus all the Navy ships in ordinary, ships not at sea, ships uncompleted, and ships consisting of parts not yet assembled, are exposed to appraisement, condemnation, and sale, and for this purpose whenever they return to any naval station anywhere they are exposed to inspection and condemnation.

The Senate will observe that these broad terms invite appraisers and other scrutinizers to consult their own judgment as to the tonnage, the fashion, the character of vessels which it is wise to be continued in the Navy. The test is not seaworthiness.

Mr. McPHERSON. Would it disturb the Senator if I should ask him a question?

Mr. CONKLING. Far from it.

Mr. McPHERSON. If he will turn to section 1541 of the Revised Statutes, the Senator will find that the Secretary of the Navy has all the power now unguarded which we propose to give him under the proposed bill.

Mr. CONKLING. Will the Senator be kind enough to read it?

Mr. McPHERSON. It is as follows:

The Secretary of the Navy is authorized and directed to sell, at public sale, such vessels and materials of the United States Navy as, in his judgment, cannot be advantageously used, repaired, or fitted out; and he shall, at the opening of each session of Congress, make a full report to Congress of all vessels and materials sold, the parties buying the same, and the amount realized therefrom, together with such other facts as may be necessary to a full understanding of his acts.

If the Senator will yield to me one moment longer, he will take notice that under the second section of the bill which he is now criticising, our purpose, in addition to the power already conferred upon the Secretary of the Navy, is to create an advisory board of competent naval officers; and if the judgment of competent officers cannot be taken on a matter of which they are supposed to have greater knowledge than anybody else, certainly I think greater knowledge than the Senator from New York or myself can have upon the value of a naval vessel, then I do not see whom we are to trust.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, it frequently happens in the course of debate that a Senator is interrupted by a question which seems very pertinent, as this does, but which, did the Senator who puts it withhold it for a few moments, would not seem so pertinent. I think I can show my honorable friend from New Jersey that his citation of the statute does not bear upon the argument which I am going to level at the words I want to strike out.

I need not remind the Senator from New Jersey how individuality centralizes responsibility. The Secretary of the Navy as an individual official has the power, whenever in a given case he is moved to do it, and feels that he can justify it, to say of a particular vessel what disposition shall be made of her as there indicated by the statute. When you come to appoint boards in the plural to catch every vessel when she comes in to any naval station in the United States—that is what the bill says—and begin to ransack and examine and cat-haul the whole Navy, big and little, with a view to disposing of it, vessels finished and vessels unfinished, you have changed entirely, as every practical man knows, the whole scope and bearing of the provision. But it is not for that reason that I criticise the language I have moved to strike out. I will state to the Senate now the reason for which I do it.

Under the existing statutes the proceeds of sold vessels, like all other proceeds and all other money whatsoever, under the uniform legislation for years, are covered into the Treasury, become subject to the expiration of the time when they may be used, go upon the books of the Treasury Department, appear in the reports, and become parts and undivided parts of the moneys in the Treasury. By the words to which I have called attention this fund, the amount of which is to depend absolutely upon the wish of the Secretary of the Navy and these manifold boards whom he may designate—a fund which may be a million, two million, three million, five million as they from time to time elect by the number of vessels and the amount of stores and supplies they condemn and sell, is to be perpetually kept segregated, intact, a fund by itself never to expire, never to be covered in under those drag-nets of statutes which lay hold of every other particle belonging to the United States after a certain time and cover it into the Treasury whence it cannot go again except by direction of the law-making power. That is the reason why I inveigh against these provisions.

I say that to take any Department of the Government and except it out of provisions which experience has shown to be wholesome for all Departments, namely, those provisions that fix a day after which funds shall not run unaccounted for but when they shall return to the Treasury, is to expose it to uncomfortable suspicion and accusation, to put it upon a footing which I think no head of that Department would care to have it occupy. But when in addition to that you commit to the head of the Department to say how large and how small from time to time this fund shall be, so that its amount no longer depends like all other funds upon appropriations made by Congress but upon the ipse dixit of the Secretary of the Navy, he not even to appear in propria persona but to appear by proxy here and there through boards to roam all over the naval stations and determine how many vessels in their estimation are out of fashion; how many are underneath a certain minimum of tonnage; how many are not clad with armor as thick as in their estimation would be desirable; how many in their port-holes are too diminutive to permit such guns to speak as they may think a vessel should carry, and so on, and then to condemn them, one by one, or in classes—when you provide for that and then provide that in perpetuity "any law to the contrary notwithstanding" this shall remain a special fund in the hands and subject to the absolute direction of those who create it, I submit to the honorable Senator from New Jersey that such a statute would be what doctors would call a foreign substance in the legislation of the country.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Will the Senator from New York allow me to call his attention to the words of the statute, "vessels and materials?" In the bill are added the words "stores and supplies," so that the bill goes much further than the present statute.

Mr. CONKLING. I agree with the Senator, and I should agree with him if he were to affirm that the bill as to vessels themselves goes a great deal further. The whole intendment of the act, what I may speak of as the atmosphere of the act, is entirely different. That statute intends to provide for the disposition of a crippled or an undesirable vessel here or there; this act is intended as a drag-net to spread all over the Navy and create machinery by which not an exceptional vessel now and another vessel again some other time may be dropped, but by which vessels as a rule as they return to a naval station are to be examined with a view to their dismissal from the Navy and their disposition to private parties. That is enough to distinguish between the two acts; but the broad distinction, the active, operative, and, as I think, pernicious distinction which will strike every business man is this: there stands a statute under which a vessel may be sold and the money turned into the Treasury to be governed by the forces and methods applicable generally to moneys in the Treasury; here comes a statute which commits to certain executive officers the final disposition of the fund, its maintenance separately in perpetuity, and then commits to them the question whether by selling more or less they shall from time to time make that fund greater or smaller as they may choose.

In common phrase, it is burning the candle at both ends. It is, in the first place, depositing with these men the power to appropriate money practically, and in the second place depositing with them the option and judgment what shall be done with that money ultimately, and if I have the ear of the honorable Senator from New Jersey I venture to direct his attention to some lines at the top of page 5, which, if I read them aright, are to the effect—and I should not object to that if it stood alone—that these same authorities in place of selling in the modes provided materials and stores and supplies now on hand may use them by way of barter, that is, may make a contract for the construction of a vessel to pay so much in money and to turn in so much of material in kind. If I apprehend aright the intention of the provision that might be very provident. It is one of the reasons why these other provisions should not be so broad. I do not know whether I apprehend this aright or not.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the Senator yield to me a moment?

Mr. CONKLING. Certainly.

Mr. McPHERSON. I do not consider that the section to which the Senator has invited my attention confers any such power at all upon the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. CONKLING. Let me read the words:

> But in the construction, armament, or equipment of new vessels of the Navy as herein provided for, the Secretary of the Navy may make use of any materials, stores, or supplies now on hand, which, in his opinion, will not probably be required in the repair of the vessels, their armament or equipment, now in the Navy, but not otherwise.

What do those words mean, will the Senator tell me?

Mr. McPHERSON. I suppose the meaning is that the Secretary of the Navy may make use of any materials, stores, and supplies now on hand which will probably not be required for the repair of vessels. We confer upon him the power to sell any materials not required.

Mr. CONKLING. That is conferred by the preceding section; there is no doubt about that. I asked him what is the force of the words "may make use of any material."

Mr. McPHERSON. It certainly does not mean to exchange it, because we would not employ the word "use" if we meant to confer any power to exchange. He may make use of it in any manner he pleases, I suppose, so far as the repair and construction of vessels is concerned.

Mr. CONKLING. Suppose he pleased to make a contract for constructing a vessel and pay so much in money and to turn in for use such material as he has on hand, would not that be competent under this section?

Mr. McPHERSON. I do not think it would.

Mr. CONKLING. The Senator is certainly wrong about that. The words "the repair of the vessels" are for a different purpose—

> Which, in his opinion, will not probably be required in the repair of the vessels, their armament or equipment, now in the Navy, but not otherwise.

That is, if I understand it, he may use not all the materials, but he may use all such as he thinks will not probably be required for the repair of the vessels which we own now, and he may use these materials in the construction, armament, and equipment of new vessels.

Mr. McPHERSON. He may use in new construction the materials which will not be required for the purpose of repairing the old vessels. This is the intent and meaning, I suppose, of the section.

Mr. CONKLING. That is what I said in the first place, but I understood my honorable friend to challenge the assertion.

Mr. McPHERSON. If the honorable Senator can make use of any other language that will convey the idea or make it any plainer, the committee will accept the language.

Mr. CONKLING. The Senator from New Jersey entirely misapprehends me. I do not wish to use other language; I do not wish to defeat this language; I make no objection to it. My whole purpose in referring to it was to state its meaning, which meaning is as now ascribed to it by the Senator from New Jersey, and to say that that power, very proper as it seemed to me, being contained in the bill was an additional reason why these preceding and unexampled powers should not also be conferred. It is, I submit, a reason why the Secretary should not have other powers that by this section he has power not only to contract for vessels and pay for them with money derived from appropriations and also from the sale of other vessels, but that he has also power to put into the contract that paying so much in money he will also use in construction such and such materials, be those materials live oak, Russian cordage, iron, or any other of the materials which enter into the act of ship-building. I say by as much as he has that power, by so much——

Mr. McPHERSON. I must confess it is a very far-fetched construction.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, then my honorable friend far-fetched it, because the echoes of his eloquent voice have scarcely died away since he told us that that was what it meant, and my regard for him as a Senator and as a mariner is so great that I never doubt anything he says.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the honorable Senator yield to me just one moment?

Mr. CONKLING. Always.

Mr. McPHERSON. In order that I may not be misunderstood again by him, let me repeat that I declared it to be my understanding of the section that the material not needed for repairs of vessels could be used by the Secretary of the Navy in permanent construction. Now, does the Senator understand me distinctly? If not, I will repeat it again.

Mr. CONKLING. I think I do, and I have thought so all the time. I understand my honorable friend. Now, I affirm that this section means that materials—I leave out supplies, to simplify it,—materials at any time on hand and not needed for the repairs of vessels in the Navy may be made use of in the construction of new vessels. Does he not say so? If I have been so unfortunate as not to say so myself, it certainly convicts one of astonishing stupidity. I have endeavored to say that the meaning of the section is that in addition to the money which is used in constructing new vessels materials on hand may also be used, thus increasing indefinitely the amount practically which is to be expended in this regard. Then the Senator says he does not agree with me and corrects me, and then he states it himself; and although he states it more clearly than I can, he states exactly in effect what I have been two or three times trying to affirm.

Now, Mr. President, I submit that all this ought not to be put in any bill touching any Department, and I leave the subject for the moment by asking Senators to observe that should the words be stricken out which I have proposed to strike out, they do not disarrange any other part of the bill, or render ineffective any provision of the bill or require any other amendment. They simply take out a very exceptional provision standing by itself, under which if adopted this fund would continue indefinitely to run and to assert itself against all statutes covering any unexpended balances, and to do that whether doubled or quadrupled by the sale of vessels, or whether it remained only a fund of some such dimensions as are indicated by the bill. Therefore I ask that we may by unanimous consent have the vote reconsidered by which this bill was ordered to a third reading, so that the sense of the Senate may be taken upon this one isolated question.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President, before addressing myself to the amendment of the Senator from New York, I wish to call attention to one or two objections which have been made to the bill by other Senators, and I wish especially to call attention to the objection made by the honorable Senator from Kentucky, whom I do not see in his seat. That Senator made a long speech upon this point, that under this proposed bill the Secretary of the Navy could sell the iron-clad vessels which were now being constructed in private ship-yards of the country. I asked the Senator to read section 2 of the bill, and repeated twice my invitation to him to read that section. Notwithstanding that, he went on with a long dissertation inveighing against that section of the bill which permitted the Secretary of the Navy to sell the iron-clads now under construction. Let me call the attention of the Senator to that section of the bill and see how well that is guarded. I refer first to lines 9 and 10:

Or if the same are unfinished in any navy-yard.

The four iron-clads of which the Senator spoke are not in any navy-yard of the United States. It simply refers to vessels now in the navy-yards, some upon the stocks. For instance, in the New York navy-yard we have the old New York and the Java upon the stocks, and they have been there since the war, completely rotted down, in the way. We have old hulks lying at the dock unfit and unworthy of repair. Mr. HARRIS, a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs in the House, says in his report that some fifty-odd vessels are now borne on the Navy Register which are unworthy of repair and unfit for use. It is well known to every member of the Senate that thousands upon thousands of dollars in money are every year appropriated for the purpose of the care of these old hulks. Now I wish to ask Senators, how are we going to arrive at the condition of the Navy unless it be done by a commission of competent officers? I suppose the honorable Senator from New York will not insist upon knowing more about the value of this property than a competent board of officers whom the Secretary of the Navy may select. For my part, I profess to have no knowledge——

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. ROLLINS in the chair.) The morning hour has expired. The bill goes over under the rule, and the unfinished business——

Mr. McPHERSON. I hope permission will be granted to continue the bill.

Mr. CONKLING. I hope the honorable Senator will be allowed at least to conclude his own observations. I think nobody will object to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the Senator from New Jersey will be allowed to continue his remarks.

Mr. HOAR. What is the effect of voting to lay aside all pending orders and proceed to the consideration of a bill? Does that confine that bill still to the morning hour?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands it confines the bill to the morning hour, and on the expiration of the morning hour the unfinished business comes up for consideration. The Senator from New Jersey asks permission to continue his remarks. Is there objection?

Mr. PENDLETON. I ask that the unfinished business be laid before the Senate, and then I will hear any suggestion the Senator from New Jersey desires to make in reference to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. The unfinished business is the bill (S. No. 1441) for the relief of the captain, owners, officers, and crew of the late United States private-armed brig General Armstrong, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to giving the Senator from New Jersey leave to continue his remarks? The Chair hears none, and House bill No. 3983 continues before the Senate.

Mr. McPHERSON. I do not think it will take more than fifteen minutes to reach a vote on the naval construction fund bill, and I will suspend my remarks in order that the Senate may take the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator continuing his remarks?

Mr. TELLER. There is objection to doing anything except allowing the Senator to finish his remarks. I do not object to that, but I object to any further discussion of this bill except by the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey will proceed.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. PENDLETON. I consent that the unfinished business may be laid aside informally.

Mr. McPHERSON. It will not take more than fifteen minutes for me to finish my remarks and have a vote on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business will be laid aside informally in order that the Senator from New Jersey may finish his remarks.

Mr. PENDLETON. Subject to my call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Subject to the call of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. McPHERSON. No man in the Senate would be more unwilling to confer unnecessary power, much less extraordinary power, upon any Secretary of the Navy than myself. For one, I must say that our experience during several years of our national life in this particular has not been at all flattering to our pride; but we find ourselves confronted by a peculiar condition of circumstances; we find this old dilapidated material in the Navy, which is of no use whatever to the Navy, and we desire to dispose of it; and I can conceive of no mode in which the power could be better guarded than in this bill. We give the Secretary of the Navy the power to sell old material on the report of a board of naval officers. The money derived from the sale is covered into the Treasury, but placed to the credit of a permanent construction fund. It is to be drawn out by appropriations made by Congress, with the exception of $1,000,000, which the Secretary of the Navy is qualified at any time to use.

I do not know that it is necessary for me to say more. It is so well guarded as this, that if we sell the old material we convert it into new.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Is not the sum of money which is annually paid at the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy for the purpose of repairs of ships just as liable to abuse as this fund? Nearly a million dollars annually under the general appropriation bills is placed at his disposal to be used as he may think proper in the repairs of vessels of the Navy.

Mr. McPHERSON. This bill confers less power than he now has.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. But the Secretary has to make his estimates and tell Congress what he wants the money for and what he proposes to do with it.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators will allow the Chair to state the pending question. The Senator from New York asks that the vote ordering this bill to a third reading be reconsidered. Is there objection to that request? The Chair hears no objection, and the vote ordering the bill to a third reading is reconsidered.

Mr. INGALLS. I have heard no reason during this debate yet given for conferring the extraordinary powers of this bill upon the Secretary of the Navy, when similar powers are denied to every other executive officer of the Government. The provisions of the bill are directly in conflict with every theory of executive administration. If this bill prevails and we are to allow the Secretary of the Navy to sell all the vessels of the Navy that may be condemned by a board, finished and unfinished, and all the stores and material, at any sum that such a board may see fit to affix, and place the amount of money in the Treasury as a permanent construction fund for the Navy, I am at a loss to understand why we may not abandon legislative control over every other branch of the Government, why we may not authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to sell every custom-house, why we may not authorize the Secretary of War to sell every arsenal, every garrison, every fort, every cantonment in the country, and have the funds arising from the sales placed in the Treasury subject to the disposition of the head of the Department without the control of Congress; and why we may not by statute authorize the Secretary of the Interior to dispose of all the Indian reservations and all the public lands of the country, and have the funds so derived placed in the Treasury subject to his control, because it is idle to say that legislative control is not removed by the provisions of this bill. In pursuance of the argument made by the Senator from New York, and as a further suggestion as to the extraordinary provisions of this measure, I call attention to the first part of section 6 of the bill:

Not more than $1,000,000 shall be expended or authorized to be expended out of the permanent construction fund of the Navy during any one fiscal year without authority of Congress.

Although that is expressed in the negative, yet it is an express conferrence of power upon the Secretary of the Navy to expend $1,000,000 annually from this fund without authority of Congress, vesting the disposition of this sum entirely at his discretion.

Mr. EATON. Permit me to ask my friend, for it is in his own line of thought, could not the Secretary of the Navy commence the construction of one, two, three, or a dozen vessels so that it came within the amount of $1,000,000?

Mr. INGALLS. Any number. There is no limitation whatever upon the power of the Secretary of the Navy to expend the $1,000,000 in any way that he sees fit. I should like the Senator from New Jersey, or any other Senator who proposes to support this bill, to answer me under what constitutional provision this power is vested? The Constitution says that "no money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law."

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. Will the Senator allow me a minute in the line of his thought?

Mr. INGALLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. It will be recollected that the Senate at the last session passed a bill providing that hereafter all appropriations should be made direct each year, and in addition to that the bill repealed all permanent appropriations such as this would be.

Mr. INGALLS. Certainly, and that ought to be so. Congress, which is the purse-holding and the law-making power of this Government, never ought to relinquish its absolute control over the revenues of the country.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the Senator yield to me a moment?

Mr. INGALLS. Certainly.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the Senator show me by what nice line of demarkation a distinction is made between an appropriation made in this way and one made by law?

Mr. INGALLS. The Senator from New Jersey knows that the term "appropriations made by law" has a distinct and technical signification. It will not do to say that this is an appropriation made by law.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the Senator yield to me again a moment?

Mr. INGALLS. Yes, sir.

Mr. McPHERSON. Does the Senator not know that every year we make appropriations of money for the purpose of repairs to vessels in the Navy amounting to several million dollars? We give that money to the Secretary of the Navy upon his request. He sends to Congress an item of appropriation that he wishes Congress to pass. We confer upon him the right and power to expend say $3,000,000. Do we know to what vessels he is to apply it? Do we know to what use he is to apply it? We have no more knowledge of that than we have of what would become of this appropriation of $1,000,000.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. The Senator will recollect that the Book of Estimates every year states the objects for which appropriations are desired.

Mr. INGALLS. Yes; and I know beyond all that that the Secretary of the Navy goes before the Committee on Naval Affairs and tells them what he wants to do with the money, and that they never recommend the appropriation of millions of money out of the public revenues to be disbursed by him until he has told the committee what he wants to do with it. There could be no more vicious departure from a wholesome and salutary policy than to allow not only an executive officer of this Government to spend money without congressional supervision, but to provide the fund out of which the money may be so spent. I am satisfied that upon more mature consideration the committee would not be willing to leave the bill in its present shape, and I therefore move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. CONKLING. May I inquire, has the vote ordering the bill to a third reading been reconsidered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The vote has been reconsidered by unanimous consent.

Mr. CONKLING. Then I should like to have my amendment pending. I now move to amend the bill, if my friend will allow me before making his motion to recommit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kansas withdraw the motion to recommit?

Mr. CONKLING. Only for a moment.

Mr. INGALLS. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. CONKLING. I move to amend by striking out the words that I indicated before in section 3 from line 10 to 13, "no unexpended balances," &c.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 10, after the word "purpose," it is proposed to strike out the words:

> No unexpended balances of said construction fund shall hereafter be covered into the Treasury or be made available for any purpose not provided by this act, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. INGALLS. I also want to offer an amendment——

Mr. McPHERSON. I wish to make a statement before the Senator from Kansas goes on, if he will yield to me. I did not understand that there was to be any motion to amend submitted to the Senate, or I certainly should not have agreed to a reconsideration of the vote. I did not hear the Chair put any such motion to the Senate as that the Chair now declares, that the vote had been reconsidered by unanimous consent for the purpose of entertaining the amendment of the Senator from New York. I never heard it.

Mr. CONKLING. Will the honorable Senator allow me a moment? Suppose it had not been done; if a bill had been formally ordered to a third reading without attracting the attention of the Senate, would the Senator insist upon that and object to its being undone in order that the sense of the Senate might be taken upon an important amendment?

Mr. McPHERSON. I should object to this proposition. The Senator from New York had already announced the manner in which he wished to amend the bill. Not consenting to the amendment, and having in some measure charge of the bill, I should object to a reconsideration of the vote for the purpose of emasculating the entire bill.

Mr. CONKLING. My honorable friend will pardon me. I want to differ with him there. He has not had an opportunity of reflecting a moment. If I had charge of the bill and it had been ordered to a third reading, and the Senator should rise and say he was taken by surprise and had an amendment to offer, if the Senator will reflect a moment he knows that I would not insist upon cutting him out; and by as much as I would not do it I am quite sure the honorable Senator from New Jersey would not do it. I was amazed when I heard that the bill had been ordered to a third reading. I was attending to it, but some Senator addressed me by my side here, and turning to talk to him a moment, while I was thus talking the bill was ordered to a third reading it seems, which I did not hear at all.

Mr. McPHERSON. Under those circumstances I shall withdraw my objection.

Mr. CONKLING. I knew it. I knew my friend from New Jersey would be the last man in the Senate to insist upon such a course, and he does not insist upon it.

Mr. McPHERSON. I did not understand the circumstances, and therefore withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question was submitted to the Senate as distinctly as the Chair could state it.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no question about that.

Mr. INGALLS. I also desire before making a motion to recommit the bill to suggest an amendment for the consideration of the committee in case the bill should be recommitted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is one amendment now pending.

Mr. INGALLS. I understand that. I suggest as an amendment that I shall move if the bill is not recommitted to strike out in the first line of section 6 the words "not more than $1,000,000" and insert the words "no money," and in lines 3 and 4, after "Navy," to strike out the words "during any one fiscal year;" so as to read:

> No money shall be expended or authorized to be expended out of the permanent construction fund of the Navy without authority of Congress.

I now move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. McPHERSON. I wish to say one word in this connection. If the Senate are disposed to amend the bill in any particular, it seems to me as though it would be impossible at this late day in the session to have the amendments concurred in by the House. It does seem to me that the amendments proposed by both the Senator from New York and the Senator from Kansas are of no vital force or consequence. Therefore I hope that the bill will not be recommitted, and I hope that the amendments will not be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] to recommit the bill to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. McPHERSON. I call for the yeas and nays. We may as well have them taken first as last.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 28, nays 22; as follows:

YEAS—28.

Allison,	Davis of Illinois,	Ingalls,	Morrill,
Beck,	Davis of W. Va.,	Jonas,	Plumb,
Blair,	Eaton,	Kirkwood,	Slater,
Booth,	Garland,	Logan,	Teller,
Cockrell,	Hamlin,	McDonald,	Vest,
Coke,	Harris,	Maxey,	Wallace,
Conkling,	Hereford,	Morgan,	Williams.

NAYS—22.

Anthony,	Butler,	Kernan,	Rollins,
Bailey,	Call,	McPherson,	Vance,
Bayard,	Cameron of Pa.,	Pendleton,	Voorhees,
Brown,	Dawes,	Platt,	Withers.
Bruce,	Hampton,	Pugh,
Burnside,	Jones of Florida,	Randolph,

ABSENT—25.

Baldwin,	Grover,	Lamar,	Thurman,
Blaine,	Hill of Colorado,	McMillan,	Walker,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hill of Georgia,	Paddock,	Whyte,
Edmunds,	Hoar,	Ransom,	Windom.
Farley,	Johnston,	Saulsbury,
Ferry,	Jones of Nevada,	Saunders,
Groome,	Kellogg,	Sharon,

So the motion to recommit was agreed to.

SUNDRY CIVIL BILL.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. F. KING, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS, of West Virginia. I ask that that bill be referred at once.

The bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. HARRIS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on the Revision of the Laws, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the Committee on the Library, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also, from the same committee, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MAXEY and Mr. WITHERS submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BALDWIN, Mr. BOOTH, Mr. BURNSIDE, Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. FARLEY, Mr. GARLAND, Mr. McPHERSON, Mr. MORRILL, Mr. SAUNDERS, Mr. VEST, Mr. VOORHEES, Mr. WITHERS, and Mr. WHYTE submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THE BRIG GENERAL ARMSTRONG.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate resumes the consideration of its unfinished business.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. No. 1441) for the relief of the captain, owners, officers, and crew of the late United States private-armed brig General Armstrong, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. PENDLETON. I wish to offer an amendment to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator from Ohio that an amendment is not now in order. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. PENDLETON. Has the bill passed beyond the stage at which amendments are in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is so informed.

Mr. PENDLETON. I then ask unanimous consent of the Senate to make two verbal amendments, and I offer them in pursuance of a consultation that I have had with the Senator from Massachusetts, [Mr. HOAR,] who objected to the words, for which I propose to substitute others. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to offer the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may be done by a reconsideration of the vote by which the bill was ordered to a third reading.

Mr. PENDLETON. I ask that that vote be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection, and the vote is reconsidered. The question now is on ordering the bill to be engrossed for a third reading.

Mr. PENDLETON. In line 4 I move to strike out "claims" and insert "losses;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to examine and adjust the losses of the captain, owners, officers, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PENDLETON. In line 12 I move to strike out the words "the said claimants" and insert "them;" so as to read:

And that he be, and is hereby, further authorized and requested to pay to said claimants, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, the amount which may be found due to them, not exceeding $70,739.

The amendment was agreed to.

PUBLIC LANDS IN OHIO.

Mr. McDONALD. I request the Senator from Ohio to yield to me for a moment that I may ask the consent of the Senate to take up and consider Senate bill No. 1825, a bill reported from the Committee on Public Lands, and it will not take any longer to pass it than to read it. If it is not passed now it is not possible for it to be passed at this Congress.

Mr. PENDLETON. If the bill will not consume any time, and if the pending bill shall not be displaced, I yield for a moment.

Mr. McDONALD. If there is any objection after the nature of the bill is understood, I shall not press it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana that the pending bill be informally laid aside, and that the Senate consider the bill to which he has referred? The Chair hears no objection and the pending bill is informally laid aside.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask the Senate to consider the bill (S. No. 1825) to provide for the survey of certain public lands in the State of Ohio.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that the marsh lands of the United States lying in Lucas and Ottawa Counties, Ohio, between Cedar Point and Crane Creek, shall be surveyed and laid off in the manner prescribed by law; and it authorizes the Commissioner of the General Land Office to sell them at public or private sale, according to law, but no sale of them shall be made at a less price than fifty cents per acre.

Mr. INGALLS. What bill is this? I thought we were considering the General Armstrong bill.

Mr. McDONALD. It is a bill to authorize the survey and sale of a little strip of land in Lucas and Ottawa Counties, Ohio, on the lake margin. That is all there is of it. It is recommended by the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there are no amendments in Committee of the Whole the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. CONKLING. I am inclined to think the bill had better be reported to the Senate at length. It is a very short bill. Suppose we hear it read.

The bill was read at length, and reported to the Senate.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RETIREMENT OF CHIEFS OF NAVAL BUREAUS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate now resumes the consideration of its unfinished business, which is Senate bill No. 1441.

Mr. VOORHEES. I appeal to the Senator from Ohio to allow me to have passed a bill reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs. It will not take three minutes, and I will help the General Armstrong matter all the time. May I ask the Senator to do that much?

Mr. PENDLETON. Yes, sir, if it can be done without displacing the Armstrong bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana asks that the bill now under consideration be informally laid aside in order that he may ask the Senate to take up the bill which he has indicated.

Mr. VOORHEES. And which has the approval of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and my course in regard to which has the approbation of the chairman of that committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. INGALLS. Let us hear the bill reported, subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the bill (S. No. 1025) fixing the relative rank and pay of certain officers on the retired list of the Navy.

Mr. CONKLING. Is that an amendment to the Armstrong bill?

Mr. VOORHEES. No, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the proposition. The Senator from Indiana asks the Senate to lay aside the bill now under consideration, the Armstrong bill, that he may move to proceed to the consideration of the bill which has just been reported. Is there objection?

Mr. CONKLING. Not if we are to have a fair understanding all around. If the Armstrong bill being up, is to be the occasion when all of us may take up and consider all the other bills, I am for the Armstrong bill, certainly as long as that arrangement lasts. I have one or two bills that I am afraid I cannot get up without that, and if I can just slide them in as riders to the Armstrong bill I am for it; but I submit that if the Armstrong bill is before the Senate it ought to be acted upon.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am for the Armstrong bill all the time, both while this is going on and subsequently. I have acted upon a usage of courtesy in the Senate in asking the Senator from Ohio to allow me to have a bill passed which has been considered and reported favorably by the Committee on Naval Affairs; and in the course I am pursuing I have the approbation of the chairman of that committee and other members of the committee with whom I have consulted. I can only say that of course the Senator from New York can rule this out, but we have served here some time, and if he can find wherever I made an obstruction to any business that he wanted to perform here, I think then he ought to undertake the course he is taking now. If he cannot recall any such circumstance I hope he will let the bill pass.

Mr. CONKLING. I am sorry that my usually amiable friend acts a little as if his plumage was ruffled this morning.

Mr. VOORHEES. The Senator means "unusually amiable."

Mr. CONKLING. Unusually and usually both. I did not intend to interfere with the honrable Senator from Indiana. If his ways were not near so winning and irresistible as they are, I should never put myself across his track. I did not even know that he asked to have the bill taken up; and now that I do know it, the last thing in the world that I want to do is to object to the honorable Senator, and especially at a time when he has a little feeling about it, which seems to be this time.

Mr. VOORHEES. I was sure the Senator would not object when he knew the circumstances.

Mr. CONKLING. So that I wish the Senator would consider the fact that I not only withdraw my remark but the gesture that accompanied it, "if any," as we said in the electoral bill.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 1025) fixing the relative rank and pay of certain officers on the retired list of the Navy.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment in line 4, after the word "bureau," to insert "and whose name has been borne on the Navy Register thirty years;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, &c., That any medical, pay, or engineer officer who has served, or may hereafter serve, a full term as chief of bureau, and whose name has been borne on the Navy Register thirty years, shall, when retired, have the relative rank and pay of commodore on the retired list.

Mr. CONKLING. May I now inquire of my friend, since the bill is up, in respect of the merits, how many persons will the bill put on the retired list now?

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not know that it would put on anybody now. If so, it may be three or four persons. It will provide for some old officers who will be retired within a short time, and very few of them. It is a very harmless bill and a very just one, and has, as I understand, the entire approbation of the committee. The chairman of the committee had this matter submitted to him before I made the motion to take it up, and it was also submitted to the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ANTHONY] who is not now in his seat; so I think it is safe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. VOORHEES. In line 4 I move to strike out "full" before "term;" so as to read:

That any medical, pay, or engineer officer who has served, or may hereafter serve, a term as chief of bureau.

Mr. WITHERS. I should like to ask what would be the effect of that amendment? As I understand it, it would simply give the increased rank of commodore to any man who has ever served temporarily, if only for a day, as the chief of a bureau.

Mr. VOORHEES. No; this amendment was submitted to the committee, and it is with the approval of the committee——

Mr. WITHERS. I understand that, but I want to know the effect of it.

Mr. ALLISON. I suggest to make the term four years; that is the term.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will withdraw the amendment, and let the bill apply to the full term, whatever that is.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I rise to morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will receive it.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I present a memorial of the Philadelphia Board of Trade in favor of the appointment of a commission to prepare such legislation as is necessary to regulate interstate commerce in a manner which, without injustice to vested rights, will clearly define and protect the interests of produce shippers and transporters.

It will be remembered that I had the honor of introducing a joint resolution at the last session having in view the appointment of a commission such as is recommended by the Philadelphia Board of Trade. I endeavored upon several occasions at the last session to have the Senate pass upon it, but was unsuccessful. As it is a subject in which the whole country is deeply interested, I should feel it my duty to make another attempt now to bring it before the Senate were it not for the fact that there are only a few days of the present session remaining, and I know how futile it would be, even though I should be so successful as to have the Senate pass it, to expect it to receive the final action of the other branch of Congress. I give notice, however, Mr. President, that I shall avail myself of the first opportunity at the next session to reintroduce the joint resolution on the subject of interstate commerce, and shall do my utmost to press it to final action at that time.

I now ask that the memorial which I send to the desk be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The memorial will be read if there be no objection.

The memorial was read, and referred to the Committee on Commerce, as follows:

THE PHILADELPHIA BOARD OF TRADE.

PHILADELPHIA, February 24, 1881.

To the honorable the Senate and
House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The following memorial respectfully showeth that the Philadelphia Board of Trade on February 21, instant, adopted the preamble and resolutions herewith set forth, namely:

Whereas House bill No. 4748 (commonly known as the Reagan bill) proposes to regulate interstate commerce; and

Whereas in our opinion the aforesaid bill is very defective in its construction and calculated to work great injustice to a very large class of the citizens of the United States; and

Whereas we believe that Congress has power to enact such legislation as is necessary to regulate interstate commerce in a manner which, without injustice to vested rights, will clearly define and protect the rights of all transporters: Therefore,

We earnestly pray your honorable body to appoint a commission, consisting of parties practically familiar with the interests of produce shippers and transporters, who shall be charged with the duty of preparing such a bill as will protect the interests of all and do no injustice to the vested rights of any; and that, pending the report of such commission, all legislation of the kind proposed, including House bill No. 4748, shall lie upon the table.

And your orators will ever pray, &c.

FRED. FRALEY, Vice-President.
GEO. L. BUZBY, Secretary.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in the reports of the committees of conference on the following bills:

A bill (H. R. No. 3788) granting an increase of pension to William Hamill;

A bill (H. R. No. 6730) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6972) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WALLACE submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6972) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 5.

Amendment numbered 1: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said Senate amendment, insert the following: "And hereafter the Postmaster-General shall cause advertisements of all general mail lettings of each State and Territory to be conspicuously posted up in each post-office in the State and Territory embraced in said advertisements, for at least sixty days before the time of such general letting, and no other advertisement of such lettings shall be required; but this provision shall not apply to any other than general mail lettings. And whenever it shall become necessary to employ temporary service on any mail route it shall be the duty of the Postmaster-General to advertise for bids or proposals for such service by posting notices in the post-offices at the termini of such route, and upon a bulletin board in a public place in the Post-Office Department building, at Washington, in the District of Columbia, for at least ten days prior to such letting;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the last proviso of said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following: "And provided further, That the annual rental of such building or buildings shall not exceed the sum of $5,000, and the cost of the furniture for the same shall not exceed $10,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof "twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof "twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 10: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$7,900,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words proposed to be inserted by said Senate amendment and insert in lieu thereof "one hundred and fifty-two;" and the Senate agree to the same.

WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
JAS. B BECK,
N. BOOTH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
JAMES H. BLOUNT,
J. G. CANNON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WALLACE submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6730) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 31.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same.

WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
JAS. B. BECK,
WILLIAM WINDOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
ERASTUS WELLS,
J. D. C. ATKINS,
JAY A. HUBBELL,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. TELLER. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to state what amendments numbered 30 and 31 are?

Mr. WALLACE. They relate simply to the Indian commission. The House and Senate disagreed. The House repealed the act creating the commission. The Senate struck out the section repealing the act, and appropriated $10,000, the money necessary to continue it for the coming year. The conferees of the House and Senate discussed that question at length and compromised finally by the Senate conferees receding from its provision which appropriated the money and the House conferees receding from the provisions which struck out the clause creating the commission, allowing the law to stand without appropriating any money for the continuation of the commission.

Mr. DAWES. Has anything been added to the bill since it left the Senate?

Mr. WALLACE. Nothing has been added to the bill whatever. It is precisely in the form I have stated. The law stands creating the commission, but no money has been appropriated for its continuance during the coming year.

Mr. DAWES. The bill as it went from the Senate is shorn of the appropriation for the commission? Is that all?

Mr. WALLACE. That is all there is of it, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report.

The report was concurred in.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, transmitting, in answer to a resolution of the 20th ultimo, a communication from the Secretary of State containing copies of correspondence in relation to the landing of foreign convicts, paupers, and insane persons on our shores, which has not heretofore been printed; which, on motion of Mr. KERNAN, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in answer to resolutions of the 8th and 14th instant, a communication from the collector of customs at New York relative to appointments, salaries, and promotions in the New York custom-house between January 1, 1880, and December 1, 1880, together with names of all persons so employed and the workings of the civil-service rules in that office; which, on motion of Mr. CONKLING, was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

CIVIL-SERVICE RULES IN NEW YORK.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a copy of a letter addressed to the chairman of the civil-service commission on the 3d of December last, requesting to be furnished with a report upon the results in the post-office and custom-house in the city of New York of the application of the civil-service rules requiring open competitive examinations for appointments and promotions, together with the report of Hon. Dorman B. Eaton, the chairman of the commission, in response.

The report presents a very gratifying statement of the results of the application of the rules referred to in the two largest and most important local offices in the civil service of the Government. The subject is one of great importance to the people of the whole country.

I commend the suggestions and recommendations of the chairman of the commission to the careful consideration of Congress.

R. B. HAYES.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 28, 1881.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the message lie on the table, and be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

THE BRIG GENERAL ARMSTRONG.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. ROLLINS in the chair.) The Senate resumes the consideration of its unfinished business, being the bill (S. No. 1441) for the relief of the captain, owners, officers, and crew of the late United States private-armed brig General Armstrong, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns. The question is on ordering the bill to be engrossed for a third reading.

Mr. MORRILL. There is no amendment now pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no amendment now pending.

Mr. MORRILL. I then move to amend the bill.

Mr. HOAR. What became of the amendments proposed by the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. PENDLETON. They have both been adopted.

Mr. MORRILL. In line 13 I move to strike out "seventy" and insert "sixty;" so as to read, "not exceeding $60,739," instead of "not exceeding $70,739."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. MORRILL. I do not know that this bill ought to pass. I do know that it is a very old customer and has been before Congress for some fifty or sixty years. It has never received the favor of either House so far as I know, while it may have received the favor of two Committees on Foreign Relations, one of the House and one of the Senate. In the first place, it was submitted to the arbitration of Napoleon the Third, and by him was decided against. It was then submitted to the Court of Claims, and by the Court of Claims an adverse report was made. I do not understand that it has ever been claimed that there should be more than $60,000 paid to these parties, for the reason that they received $10,000 of prize-money; so that the report made by one committee of the Senate, by Mr. Mason, of Virginia, struck out $10,000 of the amount and left it at $60,000 instead of $70,000.

I should be glad to hear from the Senator in charge of the bill the reasons why it should pass at all, and at all events I think he will not contend that the amendment proposed by me is not a proper one.

Mr. PENDLETON. I was in hopes that the bill would pass without the necessity of my saying a word on the subject, and I shall be relieved if at any moment the Senate will indicate its disposition to pass the bill even while I am still in the midst of the explanation of its merits that I intend to make.

The Senator from Vermont says that this is an old claim. Unfortunately that is true. It is an old claim; very old. It has become hoary with age. It is sixty-seven years old; but its age is not due to any laches on the part of these claimants in prosecuting their demands; nor yet to a refusal on the part of the Government or of any Department or officer to recognize its justice and take measure for its payment. Of the sixty-seven years which have elapsed forty years were consumed in an effort to secure its payment by Portugal. Six Secretaries of State, beginning with Mr. Adams, have in every form of diplomatic language asserted its justice and required satisfaction by that power. President Taylor, under the advice of Mr. Clayton, of Delaware, made a peremptory demand for its payment, and when an evasive response was made, broke off diplomatic relations and brought off the minister in a man-of-war.

Afterward Mr. Fillmore accepted the payment of other claims on the condition that this claim should be submitted to arbitration, and the terms of the submission were so defective that our Government refused to permit the claimants to make argument or offer proof, and withheld all the diplomatic correspondence which had taken place while the court of Portugal was established at Rio Janeiro.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator state the ground of the decision of the arbitrator?

Mr. PENDLETON. The ground of the decision was that there was an invasion of the neutrality of Portugal by the American brig.

Mr. HOAR. I had this claim referred to me once as a member of a committee of this body, though I did not report upon it. As I understand, Louis Napoleon decided against us on the ground that the evidence left it doubtful whether this little brig did not begin the attack upon the three British men-of-war. That was the only point.

Mr. PENDLETON. That is true.

Mr. INGALLS. I can read for the information of the Senate the paragraph from the decision of the arbitrator which expressed the ground of the rejection, if the Senator would like to hear it.

Mr. PENDLETON. I shall be glad if the Senator will read it.

Mr. INGALLS. It is as follows:

Considering, in this state of things, that Captain Reid, not having applied from the beginning for the intervention of the neutral sovereign, and having had recourse to arms, in order to repel an unjust aggression of which he pretended to be the object, has thus failed to respect the neutrality of the territory of the foreign sovereign, and released that sovereign of the obligation in which he was to afford him protection by any other means than that of a pacific intervention.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. From what does the Senator read?

Mr. INGALLS. The arbitration rendered by Louis Napoleon, President of the French Republic, on the 30th day of November, 1852.

Mr. PENDLETON. After the decision had been made by the arbitrator under the circumstances to which I have alluded the claimants came to the United States courts. The claim has been once before the Court of Claims, and judgment was rendered in favor of claimants. On a rehearing the judgment was reversed, on technical ground, but the equity of the claim was fully established. Favorable bills have several times passed the Senate, and twice passed the House; every department of the Government—the executive, the legislative, and the judicial—has acted favorably to this claim and appropriated money for its payment, and yet the concurrent action of these two Houses and the other departments could never be obtained to make their decisions effective. The facts attending the effort to secure payment have been as remarkable as was the transaction out of which the claim grew. I beg no Senator will content himself with turning his back and saying this is an old claim; I beg each Senator to listen to me for two minutes and he will hear a story of the event out of which these losses grew, its incidents and consequences, which is the very romance of history.

The event which occasioned these losses was one of the most heroic and brilliant exploits in all the annals of naval warfare. It reflected great luster on the American arms; it exerted great influence on the American interests. It was an engagement between the American private-armed brig General Armstrong and the British naval forces cruising in the waters of the Azores. It occurred on the night of the 26th September, 1814, in the neutral port of Fayal, a possession of Portugal, which had maintained its neutrality in the then pending war with Great Britain.

The brig had an equipment of seven guns and ninety men. The British squadron consisted of a man-of-war ship of the line of seventy-four guns, a frigate of forty-four guns, and a brig of eighteen guns. Its entire armament was one hundred and thirty-six guns and more than two thousand fighting men.

In the afternoon, after an eventful and exciting day, the Armstrong ran into the harbor. The British commander determined to seize her. At nine o'clock he sent four large boats, manned with forty men each, to cut her out. Silently, in the gray of a moonlight night, they came swiftly on, and neglecting to answer the hail of the watch they reached almost boarding distance. The brig opened fire, and with such effect that the boats after delivering one shot retired with many of their crew killed or wounded. Exasperated by this ill success, the British renewed the attack at midnight. Fourteen boats, with four hundred picked men, commanded by the best officers, moved steadily on to the assault. When the order to grapple and board was given every gun of the brig was fired, every man was at his post, and so determined was the resistance that many boats were disabled, some were sunk, and the remainder, filled with the dead and dying, pulled away from the floating wreck and the drowning men.

In the morning the British brig, with eighteen guns, ran into the harbor and poured two broadsides into the American, but her undaunted crew fought her, all injured as she was, so gallantly that the enemy, with hull pierced and mast fallen and rigging destroyed, was driven to retire.

The commander of the Armstrong, seeing that further resistance would be fruitless, then scuttled his ship and took his wearied crew to land. The British demanded their surrender by the authorities of Fayal, and when this was refused prepared a force to seize them. The Americans retired to an old convent, barricaded and fortified it as well as they could, and awaited the attack. It was never made.

The immediate result of this engagement was that the Americans had two killed and seven wounded, and the British had more than one hundred and twenty killed and ninety wounded. The ultimate result was more extraordinary still. The squadron was detained at Fayal more than ten days in repairing damages and burying their dead. Two sloops which had joined it the day after the fight were sent back to England with their wounded.

This squadron formed part of a secret expedition then concentrating at Jamaica for the capture and conquest of New Orleans. That city was unprepared for defense and ignorant of this intended attack. Celerity and secrecy were essential to success. Admiral Cochrane sailed from the Chesapeake, united with the transports and troop ships of Pakenham at Jamaica, and there awaited the re-enforcement of this squadron. The delay of ten days and its shattered condition caused a still further delay of a week in the sailing of the fleet, and, as a consequence, it reached the entrance of Lake Borgne just four days after General Jackson with his troops entered New Orleans. If the British had arrived even a week earlier New Orleans would probably have fallen, and the story of the war would have been greatly changed.

An eye-witness of the engagement, an Englishman, writing to London, October 15, 1814, gives this graphic description:

The authorities all considered the American privateer perfectly secure, and that His Majesty's officers were too well acquainted with the respect due to a neutral port to molest her; but, to the great surprise of every one, about nine in the evening, four boats were dispatched, armed and manned, from His Majesty's ships, for the purpose of cutting her out. It being about full moon, the night perfectly clear and calm, we could see every movement made. The boats approached with rapidity toward her, when, it appears, the captain of the privateer hailed them and told them to keep off several times. They, notwithstanding, pushed on, and were in the act of boarding before any defense was made by the privateer. A warm contest ensued on both sides. The boats were finally repulsed with great loss.

After the first attack all the inhabitants were gathered about the walls, expecting a renewal of the fight. At midnight fourteen launches were discovered to be coming in rotation for the purpose. When they got within gunshot, a tremendous and effectual discharge was made from the privateer, which threw the boats into confusion. They now returned a spirited fire, but the privateer kept up so continual a discharge it was almost impossible for the boats to make any progress. They finally succeeded, after immense loss, to get alongside of her, and attempted to board at every quarter, cheered by the officers with a shout of "No quarter," which we could distinctly hear, as well as their shrieks and cries. The termination was near about a total massacre. Three of the boats were sunk, and but one poor solitary officer escaped death in a boat that contained fifty souls. He was wounded. The Americans fought with great firmness. Some of the boats were left without a single man to row them; others with three and four. The most that any one returned with was about ten. Several boats floated ashore full of dead bodies. With great reluctance I state that they were manned with picked men, and commanded by the first, second, third, and fourth lieutenants of the Plantagenet; first, second, third, and fourth ditto of the frigate and the first officer of the brig, together with a great number of midshipmen. Our whole force exceeded four hundred men. But three officers escaped, two of whom were wounded. This bloody and unfortunate contest lasted about forty minutes. Nothing more was attempted until daylight next morning, when the Carnation hauled in alongside and engaged her. The privateer still continued to make a most gallant defense. These veterans reminded me of Lawrence's dying words of the Chesapeake, "Don't give up the ship." The Carnation lost one of her topmasts and her yards were shot away. She was much cut up in her rigging and received several shots in her hull. This obliged her to haul off to repair and to cease firing. The Americans now finding their principal gun (Long Tom) and several others dismounted, deemed it folly to think of saving her against so superior a force. They therefore scuttled her and went ashore. Two boats' crews were soon after dispatched from our vessels, which went on board, took out some provisions, and set her on fire.

For three days after we were employed in burying the dead that washed on shore in the surf. The number of British killed exceeds one hundred and twenty, and ninety wounded. The enemy, to the surprise of mankind, lost but two killed, and seven wounded. We may well say "God deliver us from our enemies," if this is the way the Americans fight.

After burning the privateer, Commodore Lloyd made a demand on the governor to deliver up the Americans as his prisoners, which the governor refused. He threatened to send five hundred men on shore and take them by force. The Americans immediately retired with their arms to an old Gothic convent, knocked away the adjoining draw-bridge, and determined to defend themselves to the last. The commodore, however, thought better than to send his men.

I desire now that the Secretary shall read the report which was made by the Committee on Foreign Relations upon this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. PENDLETON, March 9, 1880:

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the memorial of Sam. C. Reid, on behalf of the captain, owners, officers, and crew of the late United States private-armed brig General Armstrong, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, report:

That the claim set forth in this memorial has been before the Government, in one form or another, for sixty-five years. It has been the subject of much diplomatic correspondence with the government of Portugal. Its validity against that government has been asserted by Messrs. Monroe, Adams, Forsyth, Webster, Upshur, and Clayton, Secretaries of State under the administrations of Presidents Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, and Fillmore. It has received the sanction of the Committees on Foreign Relations of the Senate and House of Representatives in the Thirty-third and the Thirty-fifth Congresses. It has received the favorable adjudication by a majority of the judges of the Court of Claims; and, although the decision was reversed on a rehearing, the reversal was also by a divided court on a question of technical legal right. It is now presented by the Secretary of State with the recommendation that an appropriation be made for its payment.

The event out of which the claim arose is most creditable to the valor and skill of American seamen, and in its remoter influences probably secured victory to the American arms at New Orleans. The accompanying papers will give the narrative, which in romantic incidents almost equals the tale of the imagination.

The history of the event and of the prosecution of the claim to which it gave rise is to be found in the diplomatic correspondence, the reports of the committees, the reports of the testimony and opinions in the Court of Claims, and the letter of the present Secretary of State.

From a thorough examination of these very voluminous documents, the committee find the following facts:

First. That in September, 1814, the private-armed brig General Armstrong was destroyed by the boats of three British men-of-war in the port of Fayal, belonging to the neutral power of Portugal.

Second. That such destruction was in breach of the neutrality of Portugal.

Third. That the local authorities of the Azore Islands, as well as the government of Portugal, then residing at Rio Janeiro, admitted to the American minister, immediately on the happening of the event, that there had been a breach of its neutrality, and, asserting that fact to the British Government, demanded satisfaction therefor in the most peremptory terms.

Fourth. That, after fruitless negotiations for many years, President Taylor, in 1850, made a peremptory demand upon the government of Portugal for the settlement of "incontrovertible claims of American citizens upon that government," among which was the claim for the loss of the brig General Armstrong. The government of Portugal, not admitting their validity, but pro bono pacis, offered to pay all the claims except this, which it proposed should be referred to the arbitration of a third power. President Taylor declined this proposal, insisted on immediate settlement of all the claims; and on an evasive answer being given, required the American minister to demand his passports and to leave Portugal in an American man-of-war which had been sent for him.

Fifth. A subsequent Administration accepted the offer of the Portuguese Government, received payment of the other claims, and submitted this claim to the arbitration of Louis Napoleon, then president of the French Republic. This submission was made without the knowledge of the claimants, and provided only "that copies of all correspondence which has passed between the two governments in reference to the said claim shall be laid before the arbiter."

Sixth. The interpretation put on this article by the State Department excluded all proofs and all arguments except those contained in the correspondence. And in point of fact, not only were the claimants prevented by the Government from making such proofs and arguments, but the correspondence of the Fayal authorities and of the Portuguese Government while at Rio Janeiro, admitting the breach of neutrality, was not laid before the arbiter.

Seventh. Louis Napoleon, in 1853, forty years after the event, decided against the validity of the claim on the ground of a doubt as to whether the British forces or the brig commenced the hostilities.

Eighth. Subsequently the committees of both Houses of Congress reported favorably on the claim and referred it to the Court of Claims. The court reversed its opinion on a rehearing and decided that these above-recited facts constituted no legal claim against the Government of the United States; and thereupon the Senate passed a bill for the relief of the claimants, which received a very large majority of those voting in the House of Representatives; but by reason of the failure of a quorum did not become a law.

On these facts this committee concurs with its predecessors of the Thirty-third and Thirty-fifth Congresses in holding that these claimants have good title against the Government to be reimbursed for their loss, and accordingly report a bill authorizing the payment of the amount proven before the Court of Claims, to wit, $70,739.

The committee does not doubt the power of the Government to submit this claim, or any other claim, however just it may be, to arbitration, or even to surrender it, for reasons of State policy or public interest, or question the finality of the arbitrament; but it maintains with entire confidence and on grounds of the simplest justice, which is the highest expediency, that if the Government, either to secure a peace or other advantage to itself, or to obtain the payment of other claims, or to subserve any public or private interest, surrenders the claim of any individual, or if for any such inducement it refers to arbitration any just claim, limiting the proof or the argument which might be made in its behalf, or refusing or neglecting to produce the proofs which are within its knowledge and control, the Government is bound ex æquo et bono to compensate his loss to that individual.

In this case the Government did submit this just claim to arbitration, in order to secure the payment of other claims, did limit unduly the proofs and arguments to the diplomatic correspondence, and did neglect to lay before the arbitrator a part of the correspondence which was entirely within its control.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senator from Ohio to assent to the amendment proposed by me. He will see by the report embodied in the report that he made himself in relation to this case, on page 23, that all that has ever been claimed as being due these parties was $60,000, and that was the amount reported once, and not acted upon, from the Committee on Foreign Relations. I have moved to strike out "seventy" and insert "sixty," which would leave the amount $60,739.

Mr. PENDLETON. I can hardly consent to that amendment being made. I do not see that the amount paid as prize-money to the officers and crew grew in anywise out of this transaction, or that it modified in any degree the losses that were sustained by reason of it. That seems to have been prize-money paid for other prizes and in connection with other engagements and actions than this.

Mr. MORRILL. I read from the report:

On the whole, the committee, on further examination, again concur in their report, before adverted to, of March 10, 1854, in favor of this claim, and make the same a part of this report; and on the proofs as to the amount due, established before the Court of Claims, and set forth in its report, pages 149 and 150, report a bill for the relief of the claimants.

The proofs before the Court of Claims show:

The value of the vessel at	$43,000
Loss of officers and men	27,739
	70,739
From which is deducted—
Amount paid heretofore as prize money to officers and men	10,000
	60,739

Mr. JONES, of Florida. That is from Mr. Mason's report.

Mr. MORRILL. It is Mr. Mason's report. It is conclusive on the point of the amount that is due. There is no question about that.

Mr. PENDLETON. I have no disposition to delay the Senate by further argument on this case. I will submit it to the Senate; and if the amendment is agreed to, then we can take the vote upon the bill as it shall stand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. MORRILL.]

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I wish to say a word on the amendment. I think this is a subject on which there ought to be no littleness. I think we ought to give full compensation or nothing. When I say "littleness," I use the expression in no offensive sense to the Senator from Vermont. I do not propose to vote for this bill on any nice calculation about money. I propose to support it on higher and broader ground. I do not intend to enter into any minute calculation about injuries or anything of that kind.

Mr. MORRILL. But the Senator would not propose as a mere gift the small sum of $10,000. When it appears from the examination that has been made and given to the subject by a previous committee of Congress and by the Court of Claims that $60,000 is the sum, I do not see why it should be disputed.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator hear me through? The Senator has during the past session exhibited a very commendable spirit for the erection of public monuments to departed heroes, looking to the commemoration of the deeds of the many great men who have figured in the past. When a proposition comes here to commemorate them the Senator takes high ground, as I well remember. I have appreciated it, and I have felt in me the spirit of happiness and pride whenever I have heard the Senator speak in support of those measures.

I say that if ever an occasion presented itself to the American mind calculated to excite just sentiments and feelings of patriotism it is the case which is now before the Senate. The Court of Claims went into a valuation of this property, it is stated, and upon that the Senate committee, headed by Mr. Mason, in 1854, proposed to make a deduction of $10,000, the amount of prize-money which was previously paid to these meritorious claimants. If they were entitled to $60,000 in 1854, I ask the Senator from Vermont if they are not entitled to $70,000 now? The Senate in 1854 passed a bill providing for the payment of the claim as recommended by Mr. Mason. It passed also the House of Representatives, and failed to become a law only on account of the absence of two members of that body. So the Senator from Vermont was not exactly correct when he said that this claim had never received the sanction of Congress. It did receive the sanction of both Houses of Congress, and but for the want of two members to constitute a quorum in the other body it would have become a law. Thirty years ago these claimants, after having followed this thing up session after session, day after day, were declared entitled to the sum named by the Senator from Vermont; and justice having been withheld from them so long, is it proper now for the Senator from Vermont to come in and say that we will cut it down by the amount of $10,000 as proposed by Mr. Mason in 1854?

Now, sir, one word with respect to the merits of this claim while I am on my feet, for I have no disposition to make two speeches. It is my fortune to know one of the most meritorious of the survivors of this gallant affair, my personal friend, the surgeon of this ship, and I take an interest beyond what I would ordinarily feel in the measure. It is not altogether a question of property, not altogether a question of dollars and cents; but I am sure I cannot but feel, as I said a while ago, that exalted sentiment which animates us all, including the Senator from Vermont, when a question presents itself which is calculated to awaken patriotic feeling.

This vessel was commissioned by the Government of the United States to make reprisals upon the commerce of Great Britain; and I would say to the Senator, coming as he does from New England, that if there is any portion of this country that ought to feel a greater interest than another in maintaining that very important arm of our public defense, the privateer system, it is New England. New England's commerce, New England's sailors furnish in times of emergency the means with which to defend this Government; and I say it is all important, with a view to its future security, that an example shall be shown not only to our own people but to the world that we never intend to abandon a crew or a master that made the heroic sacrifices that these men did. I do not care for the value of the ship; I care for the example, and I want it to go out to Great Britain, as it will, that we do not intend in any emergency, to abandon the privateer system, which is all essential to the protection of our commercial marine, especially in the present state of our Navy.

These people were commissioned to do what? To roam the high seas and to make prizes of the commerce of Great Britain. They were not especially commissioned to fight the battles of the United States. No privateer is. It is true that such vessels are usually armed for self-defense, but they are not strictly speaking vessels of war. For the purpose of securing early peace they are empowered to make war upon the commerce of the adversary. This vessel was commissioned for that purpose. She was lying under the guns of a neutral port when she was assailed by an overwhelming force of the enemy. The men had it in their power to surrender or to defend the flag that floated over them; they could have made terms with the enemy and possibly have secured the little remnant of their property if they had been animated by any narrow spirit; but they preferred to risk their lives in defense of their flag. They said the ship might go; and while they were not entirely commissioned to carry on war, as I said, especially against an overwhelming force like that which was brought against them, animated by a just pride and a national spirit they sacrificed everything to the honor of the flag, and I am not going into any little narrow calculation now respecting the value of their vessel.

As a distinguished Senator said on the floor of the Senate when this question was discussed here before, pointing to examples verified in the history of Britain herself, when one of the gallant commodores had defeated a Spanish fleet off Cape Saint Vincent, how did they reward him? They brought him home in triumph; they made him an earl, and gave him an income of $25,000 a year; and still the number of lives which were lost on the part of the British in that fleet, with nearly equal numbers opposed to them, did not exceed the number that they lost in the conflict with this little brig.

I say, sir, there are some things that are worthy of example, and it is the duty of this Government to protect above everything else the interest which it has in the maintenance of our privateer system, and never let it go forth to Great Britain or to any power that we mean to abandon it.

When this question was referred to the Prince President of France, it was supposed that there was a little republican sympathy there, and that we might expect some justice from the Republic of France at that day; but, unfortunately, before the decision was rendered he became an Emperor, and breathing the fell spirit of the rotten monarchies around him, I suppose, he felt that he had to render a judgment that would be agreeable to them. When the proposition was made to submit this question to the King of Sweden, our republican Secretary of State said, "No, we cannot afford to confide republican interests to the decision of monarchs;" but they selected a republican president, the president of a republic only in name, and before the time came for the rendition of the judgment the republic transformed itself into an empire, and we had to submit to a decision on the part of Napoleon III, Emperor of France, and there it stands to remain a perpetual disgrace as long as the principles of justice are respected by honest men. I say it after having read the history of this case, and I never intend that that shall stand between me and the duty of giving justice to these honest men. It never was invoked here by but one man in his day, and that was Mr. Benjamin, of Louisiana; but I shall never follow his example in this vote. I think these claimants are entitled to the full measure of relief provided in this bill.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, I very innocently supposed it would be proper to correct this bill where there had evidently been a mistake made as to the sum appropriated. I do not understand that this is a bill to build a monument to the captain and crew of the brig General Armstrong, but it is to pay the heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns of the captain and crew of that vessel for the amount of their claim found to be due. If it appears by the very report made in this case that a mistake has been made of $10,000 in the bill, it seems to me proper that it should be corrected. If we are going to vote money for a monument or as a gratuity to any heroes, I have not been advised of it. It is merely to pay a claim due to the heirs in consequence of the destruction of this vessel, and therefore I think the sum should be correctly named.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not understand that this sum of $10,000 was to be deducted from the debt due to these heirs. Mr. Mason, in a former report in determining what gratuity, if you call it gratuity, at any rate what sum should be paid over to the owners and officers and crew of this brig on account of this gallant exploit and on account of the failure of the Government by its own omission to recover from Portugal what it was clearly proper for Portugal to pay, recommended the deduction of a sum which had been paid as prize-money. It was not on the ground that that sum was fairly applicable to this debt as a payment on account of it, but it was on the ground that in making an equitable adjustment of the whole matter it was reasonable and perhaps it was thought it would commend it more to the favor of Congress to have the deduction made.

It seems to me that in dealing with the amendment of the Senator from Vermont the Senate ought to consider that these men have been waiting sixty-six years. It is true we cannot introduce the principle of paying interest to claimants against the Government; we never have done it; we do not propose to do it; but it is also true that in dealing with equitable deductions from claims the fact that by reason of the lapse of time, without their fault, this vast period of time has transpired so that the interest on the claim would be many times its principal, it is reasonable that we should look with great strictness on attempts to make deduction from a claim by reason of fancied or real equities. I hope the amendment will not prevail.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President, I shall not vote for the amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont. I do not know that any argument is necessary to be made for this most just and righteous bill; but whenever the argument that an old claim is brought here is presented, I cannot refrain from saying a word. I wish to live to see the hour when the argument against a claim that it is old shall cease to be uttered in this Chamber and be scouted whenever it is uttered. If Senators would rise here and say, "This is an unjust claim," I should listen to them with patience; but whenever the argument is urged that we have been successful in avoiding the payment of a claim, however just it may be, for years and years, and that that is a reason why we should not pay it at all, I shall not sit idly by and listen to such an argument. I know of claims of absolute justice that grew to be nearly one hundred years old before they were paid, and at last were paid by the common consent of mankind as to their justice and righteousness. Now, here is a claim that had the indorsement of Daniel Webster in his day, of John Forsyth, of James Monroe, of John Quincy Adams, tolerably fair authority, of Mr. Upshur, when Secretary of State, of John M. Clayton, and when it was up on a former period before this body it received the votes of the two Senators then from Vermont, Mr. Collamer and Mr. Foot. I believe it to be quite as safe to follow in the line of such precedents as to commence caviling now about cutting down this old claim. It would not have been so old if Congress had long since done what is right.

I am always reminded when this argument is injected into this

Chamber of some fellow who had been successful in some of those States which have statutes of limitation in avoiding the payment of a just debt until six years had run against the claim, and then when his creditor came to him to ask for his dues, says "It is an old claim barred by the statute of limitations." I have just exactly as much respect for the argument in one case as in the other. This claim is sixty-six years of age, as the Senator from Ohio has said. I have often before in my service in Congress, particularly in the other branch, been impressed with the weak, timid, I will not say cowardly, for it is not cowardly, foreign policy on the part of this Government. The truth is, we are so accustomed to look only to ourselves and have such small and feeble neighbors around us on our own continent, that we have never felt the necessity of having a foreign policy to make this nation felt. The result is that the insignificant Government of Portugal allowed the brig General Armstrong to be destroyed in neutral waters, shot to pieces, and burned to the water's edge and her crew driven from her deck and obliged to seek refuge in an old castle on the shore. Years passed on, and this Government never brought that government to its duty to pay for the losses; but at last, in a moment of lassitude and weariness on the part of this Government, we were pleased to arbitrate it before that perfidious prince, Napoleon, and when it went before him—I have the record—the American minister was not even instructed to follow it up. Mr. Rives had no official instructions to present and try our side of the case, and Louis Napoleon, we being neighbors farther away than Portugal, he having more interest to conciliate Portugal than us, gave judgment against us by default in the arbitration. Then this question came back before Congress and I should like to commend the Senator from Vermont in his spasm of economy to a sentence from Mr. Seward on this subject. On the 2d of February, 1855, in a debate on this question, Mr. Seward said in reply to an argument made by Mr. Benjamin, of Louisiana, against the claim:

> The same defense which the Senator has made for the Government of the United States against this claim would have been a good defense for the people of the United States against the claim in favor of General La Fayette, who was allowed the sum of $200,000 for his services in the Revolution. The same defense would be equally good against the allowing of a single one of the thousands or tens of thousands of grants of bounty lands, and against the whole pension system of the United States.

Mr. Benjamin had spoken of the impolicy of placing this claim on the ground of gratitude for a gallant action. Mr. Seward continues:

> The dangers which Captain Reid incurred and the losses which he sustained were incurred in the service and in the defense of our country; and it is always right if the Government is able, and can do it in justice to other citizens, to acknowledge and discharge the duty of gratitude which the honorable Senator admits. * * * If all these circumstances shall occur again, I think this precedent will be one of the most valuable in our history; but we have no reason to apprehend that this will be extended into a precedent for any future claims of this kind. On the other hand, the precedents which, of all others, I least like to see on our statute-books are the precedents of refusing a just indemnity to citizens of the United States whose property has been lost and whose lives have been periled in the defense of the liberties and independence of the country.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. GARLAND] cites to me a passage from the report of a committee upon this question, a committee composed of Senator Mason, of Virginia; Judge Douglas, of Illinois; Mr. Slidell, of Louisiana; Mr. Clayton, of Delaware; Colonel Weller, of California; and Mr. Norris, of New Hampshire. The committee say:

> Under all the peculiar circumstances of the case, the committee are of opinion that the claimants are justly entitled to relief on strict legal principles; and even were their convictions on the subject less decided than they are, they would find in the heroic conduct of Captain Reid and his gallant crew strong inducements to give them the benefit of their doubts.

I confess, sir, I habitually and constitutionally sympathize with such views. Were there any legal doubts in my mind, the conduct of Captain Reid and his crew in that memorable and most brilliant exploit of arms solves all such doubts in their favor.

> There are two points—

Continues this report—> of general interest involved in this matter, which should not be without their influence on the action of the Senate. The effect to be produced on our own citizens by according indemnity in stimulating them to emulate the noble example of Captain Reid; for there can be no doubt that if he had suffered himself to be captured without resistance, full pecuniary satisfaction would long since have been accorded by Portugal to the claimants. Shall we refuse it because he has added to our naval history one of its most brilliant pages? Again: If we act upon the avowed principle that our citizens are always to be compensated for any injuries they may suffer from the violation by belligerents of the law of nations, other countries will be more earnest in maintaining the inviolability of their territory.

I can add but little to that, Mr. President. I wish, however, to cite the opinion of one of the most able men of our recent history. John M. Clayton, speaking upon this subject in the same debate with Mr. Seward, said:

> Sir, I know that these men are not all to whom this Government is bound to look when acting upon this matter. Sailors in future wars will regard the precedent established, and the course of action of their Government in relation to this privateer, with anxious attention. They will see, if the bill passes, that this Government is determined to maintain their rights in neutral ports; that if, by means of an error, those rights have been sacrificed, the Government will make the acknowledgment of the error and pay them. I hold that it is a great principle which is involved in this bill, so far as relates to our naval marine. No case more brilliant than this can ever occur again. Ay, sir, I say now, as I have said before, that I do not think this will be exactly a precedent for anything else, for I do not believe there will ever occur again an instance equal to this, exhibiting the courage, patriotism, perseverance of American sailors under the most desperate circumstances. Surrounded by a British squadron containing thousands of troops, transports, one or more line-of-battle ships, frigates, sloops of war, closing up the harbor, most men, seeing the force about to be opposed to them was overwhelming, would have abandoned the flag and gone ashore; but what did they? Sir, with a perfect knowledge that the odds against them were as twenty to one, they resolved to stand by the flag while they had life. Shall we desert them now, and ignore their claim for the property lost in our defense?

To the many instances of almost if not quite national disgrace in not recompensing those who have periled their lives and fortunes for us in time of war, this ought not to be added any longer. We have it in our power to rectify this injustice, even late as it is, and I hope that it will be done and done thoroughly, and in no grudging spirit, for, as the Senator from Massachusetts has said, it must be remembered that the men who are entitled to this recompense to-day were entitled to it sixty-six years ago. These years have rolled over and passed by; men and women and children were denied what they were entitled to each day that passed by, and instead of voting for the amendment, but for the fact that it would be setting an unsafe precedent, I would rather give them an increased amount than cut them down a single dollar.

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President, I do not wish to take the floor for the purpose of the remarks that I suggested if there can be a vote within a little while on this bill. Is there any probability of it?

Mr. PENDLETON. Oh, yes.

Mr. WINDOM. Then I will postpone my remarks a few minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. EATON in the chair.) The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. MORRILL.]

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Shall the bill pass?

Mr. PLATT. I do not rise, Mr. President, to make a speech in respect to this bill; but I want to say that having given the matter some considerable attention, I cannot believe that this claim is founded either in law or in equity or in justice, and if it be put upon the sole ground of gratitude it cannot be distinguished from one of many heroic acts performed in the war of 1812. I therefore desire that upon the passage of this bill I at least may have an opportunity of recording my vote against it, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WALLACE, (when his name was called.) I am paired with the Senator from Michigan, [Mr. FERRY.]

The roll-call was concluded, and the result announced—yeas 42, nays 9; as follows:

YEAS—42.

Bailey,	Garland.	Jones of Nevada,	Slater,
Bayard,	Groome,	Kellogg,	Teller,
Brown,	Grover,	Kernan,	Vance,
Bruce,	Hamlin,	Lamar,	Vest,
Burnside,	Hampton,	McPherson,	Voorhees,
Butler,	Hill of Georgia,	Maxey,	Walker,
Call,	Hoar,	Morgan,	Whyte,
Cockrell,	Ingalls,	Paddock,	Williams,
Coke,	Johnston,	Pendleton,	Windom.
Dawes,	Jonas,	Pugh,
Eaton,	Jones of Florida,	Randolph,

NAYS—9.

Baldwin,	McMillan,	Platt,	Saunders,
Davis of Illinois,	Morrill,	Rollins,	Thurman.
Logan,

ABSENT—24.

Allison,	Cameron of Pa.,	Ferry,	Plumb,
Anthony,	Cameron of Wis.,	Harris,	Ransom,
Beck,	Conkling,	Hereford,	Saulsbury,
Blaine,	Davis of W. Va.,	Hill of Colorado,	Sharon,
Blair,	Edmunds,	Kirkwood,	Wallace,
Booth,	Farley,	McDonald,	Withers.

So the bill was passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I call for the Calendar.

Mr. EATON. I am very anxious that the Senate should proceed to the consideration of a bill that I do not think will take long—I certainly shall not occupy more than a moment upon it. It is the Japanese indemnity bill. Really the whole country demands that that bill should be acted upon. I only want to get the bill up, if I can, and then I will give way to my friend from Minnesota, [Mr. WINDOM.]

Mr. COCKRELL. I wish to reply to my good friend from Connecticut I did not want to obstruct any business. We had an example this morning of violating the rules of the Senate; we spent two hours and a half, and then recommitted the bill to the committee. Now, there is but one way of disposing of business that is before us that can be disposed of, and that is to go to the Calendar and dispose of the cases which have passed the House of Representatives and been favorably reported by the committees of the Senate, act upon them, and then, after that, we can act upon other cases. We have now a larger Calendar than we have ever had. In the House of Representatives there is a Calendar of over one hundred pages, and the records of the Forty-sixth Congress will show that we have passed fewer bills than have ever been passed by any other Congress; and in addition to that we have done more committee work—there have been more reports made from committees of the House and committees of the Senate, and more bills placed upon the Calendar than ever have been reported in any one Congress—and yet we have passed fewer bills. It is because we have not observed any rules of business and regular proceeding. Now, we are upon the Calendar of cases that have passed the House, come to the Senate, and been favorably reported by Senate committees, and we can soon dispose of them, and that will end those cases. Now, my good friend from Connecticut wants the Japanese indemnity-fund bill up. It has not passed the House. If we pass it through the Senate there are nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand that it will not get through the House.

Mr. EATON. Let us give that one chance to save the honor of the country.

Mr. COCKRELL. The honor of the country I do not think is in such peril.

Mr. EATON. I do.

Mr. COCKRELL. It has been a long time since that fund was received; and if the honor of the country has been tarnished, a delay of eight or nine or ten months will not make it any darker or more prominent.

Mr. EATON. I differ with the Senator. I propose to ask the Senate to postpone the regular order for the purpose of my making a motion to take up this bill. I move to postpone all prior and other orders.

Mr. TELLER. What is the prior order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. ROLLINS in the chair.) The Calendar. The Senator from Connecticut moves that the present and all prior orders be postponed for the purpose of taking up the bill indicated by him.

Mr. VOORHEES. I desire to say that I presume there is nobody more attached to the work of his own hands than I am, and I have a great many bills on this Calendar; but I am going to vote with the Senator from Connecticut, because I believe that our honor as a great and powerful Government toward the weak government whose money we have demands at our hands to settle that Japanese indemnity fund, and do it at once. Therefore I shall vote for the motion.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to ask a parliamentary question. What is the order of business? No business has been laid before the Senate since we disposed of the Armstrong bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has submitted a motion to the Senate. The Calendar would be in order.

Mr. HOAR. My question is this: It is past the morning hour and past half past one. What is the order which the Senator from Connecticut moves to lay aside? I suppose it is in order for the Senator to move to take up his bill without any other motion.

Mr. EATON. I supposed the Calendar was before the Senate.

Mr. HOAR. No.

Mr. EATON. I move then to take up the bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund.

Mr. TELLER. Is not the Calendar the first thing in order unless we take this up? Do we not go to the Calendar unless we do take this up?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be so during the morning hour, but the morning hour has expired.

Mr. TELLER. I understand that; but when we get through with a bill before us we go to the Calendar as a matter of course, no matter what the hour, and the Calendar is now to be displaced by this bill. That is all there is in it. I do not know much about the Japanese indemnity fund. It has been here a long time; it is like the old case just passed, it is stale; but I do know that there are a great number of cases on the Calendar that ought to be taken up, and if Senators would only agree to give us a sitting here one evening or two evenings we could dispose of them. I am opposed to taking anything up out of order until we get through the Calendar. There are things on the Calendar of great importance to individuals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. THURMAN. If we take up the Calendar now, we do not take it up under the Anthony rule, and there may be unlimited debate on any bill that comes up, and my friend will find perhaps that he will not get as many bills passed as he wishes to have passed. I hope the motion of the Senator from Connecticut will prevail. This Japanese indemnity fund bill need not take much time; it has been fully discussed again and again, and there has always been a majority of this body for the bill. More than six years ago it was fully discussed in the Senate, and if ever there was a proper thing to be done, it is to pass this bill. I do not think it need take much time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Connecticut.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund.

Mr. WINDOM. I now ask unanimous consent of the Senate that the bill may be informally laid aside that I may call up the resolution reported by the Senator from Connecticut from the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota asks that the bill be informally laid aside.

Mr. EATON. Without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without prejudice to the bill now before the Senate. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. EATON. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD] desires a moment.

Mr. BAYARD. I understand that the honorable Senator from Minnesota desires to address the Senate on the matter he has just called up. I do not propose to antagonize him. I have been waiting only to say that I should like to pass a measure of great importance in less time than it will take for gentlemen to explain their objection to having bills considered. Over and over again where a bill is not open to objection gentlemen rise and explain at such great length their reasons for objecting to the hearing of any bill at all that nothing is accomplished.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. F. KING, one of its clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and had appointed Mr. JOHN H. REAGAN of Texas, Mr. JOHN E. KENNA of West Virginia, and Mr. JOSEPH R. HAWLEY of Connecticut, managers at the conference on its part.

The Senate proceeded to consider the action of the House on its amendments to the said bill disagreed to by the House.

On motion of Mr. RANSOM, it was

Resolved, That the Senate insist upon its amendments to the said bill disagreed to by the House, and agree to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

By unanimous consent, it was Ordered, That the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed by the Presiding Officer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER appointed Mr. RANSOM, Mr. FARLEY, and Mr. MCMILLAN.

ISTHMUS SHIP-CANALS.

Mr. WINDOM. Mr. President, I ask for the reading of the resolution.

The Chief Clerk read the following resolution, reported by Mr. EATON from the Committee on Foreign Relations February 16, 1881:

Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring.) That the interests of the people of the United States of America and the welfare and security of their Government are so involved in the subject of the construction of ship-canals and other ways for the transportation of sea-going vessels across the isthmus connecting North and South America that the Government of the United States, with the frankness which is due to all other peoples and governments, hereby asserts that it will insist that its consent is a necessary condition-precedent to the execution of any such project; and also as to the rules and regulations under which other nations shall participate in the use of such canals or other ways, either in peace or in war.

Mr. HOAR. I desire when the resolution comes up for consideration to offer an amendment to it by way of addition, and perhaps it would be convenient to the Senator from Minnesota to have me offer the amendment now, that it may be pending before the Senate. I propose to amend the resolution by adding these words:

Resolved, That the commercial and other interests of the people of the United States require the provisions of one or more such ways, without further delay, and that it is the duty of this Government to take immediate steps for securing the same.

Mr. WINDOM. It is not my purpose, Mr. President, at this time to discuss the abstract principle enunciated by this resolution, nor shall I now consider the question whether the Monroe doctrine is applicable to the proposed work at Panama. I stand upon the broader ground and assert the American doctrine, that under no circumstances shall a foreign government, or a company chartered by a foreign government, have control over an isthmian highway. Who does not know that an investment of foreign capital is entitled to, and will receive, the protection of foreign power? I am unwilling to enter into any argument on this point. It is enough to know that the security of our country requires that we should not only prevent foreign encroachments, but that we should do all we can to prevent the motive for such encroachments.

Our national dignity, as well as our highest interests, demand that some such declaration shall be made before the close of this Congress; but we cannot content ouselves with the mere verbal assertion of this policy. We must go further. If we deny to the rest of the world the right to break down this isthmian barrier between the two great oceans, we must be prepared to remove it ourselves. I am obliged to the honorable Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] for the amendment he has just proposed. It does not comport with our honor or our national traditions to stand stubbornly blocking the world's progress. Our mission is to lead, not to obstruct.

Mr. President, let me for a moment invite your attention to a map of the world. Starting from a point near the extreme southern boundary of Mexico, there is a narrow neck of land, extending southeasterly more than fifteen hundred miles, washed upon the one side by the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea, and upon the other by the Pacific Ocean. Bordering upon the Gulf on the north lie the great States of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida. North of these lies that mighty empire drained by the Mississippi River, while to the east are the Atlantic States, stretching from Florida to Maine. On the Pacific are the States of California and Oregon, and Washington Territory; and from the Atlantic to the Pacific stretches a domain whose magnificence is the pride of every American. Obstructing, embarrassing, and burdening the commerce, between these great sections of the Union, lies this narrow strip of land, at some points not over forty-five miles in width.

To avoid it, the twelve hundred thousand tons of wheat, raised in California and Oregon last year, are compelled to seek a European market by a costly and tedious voyage of fourteen thousand miles around Cape Horn. Even the exchange of products between our own Atlantic and Pacific States must be made by the same circuitous, expensive, and dangerous route, or else submit to the heavy burdens imposed for railway transportation across the continent. The commerce of all the leading nations is in like manner obstructed and burdened.

The time has come when this barrier is about to be removed. The wonder is that it has been permitted to remain so long. If we do not remove it somebody else will. It is now too late to discuss the question as to whether there shall be a ship-transit way across the Isthmus. The necessities of commerce as well as the spirit of progress have decreed it; and powerful as we may be, we cannot resist that decree. Already a company has been organized, in France, for the purpose of constructing a tide-level canal at Panama, and subscriptions amounting to $60,000,000 have been obtained, a large part of which has already been paid in, and another payment is about to be made.

Nor is this French project by any means a new one. For nearly two years the newspapers have been full of it. At the last session of Congress M. De Lesseps appeared in person before a committee of the House of Representatives, and boldly asserted his determination to construct the work. On two different occasions, since that time, the President of the United States has by special message called the attention of Congress to the importance of asserting the doctrine that under no circumstances would our Government consent to the control, by a foreign government, of a highway across the Isthmus. The press of the country expressing, as I believe, an undivided public sentiment, has over and over again sounded the note of warning and called upon Congress to act promptly and intelligently in the matter; but all warnings, all solicitations, have been unheeded. We have found time enough to consider matters of minor importance, but this great question, so vitally affecting our commercial interests and our national honor, has been almost wholly ignored.

I submit that this session should not close without some vigorous and decisive action on this subject. The work under foreign auspices will go on during the vacation, and having by our silence permitted the heavy expenditure to be made, we cannot object to it next year with the same force and propriety as now.

But, it may be asked, "How shall we prevent the M. De Lesseps Company from going on with the work?" I answer, by aiding an American company to construct a transit-way which shall be under our own direction and control. Resolutions, to have any effect, should declare in plain terms that the Government of the United States will not permit the construction of the canal, and if the work be afterwards commenced, it should be promptly stopped. Who can doubt, however, that such a course, unless accompanied by something more, would be both unwise and undignified.

Should the United States attempt to stop this work, and yet offer no relief from the obstructions and burdens which this barrier imposes upon the commerce of the world, we would merit respect neither at home nor abroad. When we declare to the nations of Europe that we will not consent to their control of or interference with an isthmian highway, we must also be prepared to declare that we are ready to strike down this barrier ourselves and give to the commerce of the world those facilities which it demands and to which it is entitled. Then, and then only, will we speak with a voice potential and in a way to command the attention of the nations of the earth. Inasmuch, then, as a transit-way must and will be constructed either under foreign auspices or those of our own Government, it will at once be conceded that such transit should be located at that point on the Isthmus which offers the greatest advantages to our own country.

SEVERAL ADVANTAGES OF TEHUANTEPEC ROUTE.

The several advantages of this route are well expressed by Commodore Shufeldt, of the United States Navy, in a very able report made by him to Congress in 1871, in which he says:

Each isthmus rises into importance as it lies nearer to the center of American political and social influence, and the intrinsic value of this eminently national work ought to be based on the inverse ratio of the distance from the center. * * * A canal at this point becomes a part of our own internal water communication as well as affording a channel for the external commerce of ourselves and the world. * * A canal through the Isthmus of Tehuantepec is an extension of the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean. It converts the Gulf of Mexico into an American lake. * * As a matter of political economy, as well as commercial necessity, a canal here assumes the grandest proportions.

The value of Tehuantepec as a commercial highway has always been recognized by our Government. In 1847, during the negotiations for the treaty of Guadalupe Hildalgo the United States commissioner was authorized to offer Mexico $15,000,000 for the right of way across the Isthmus, but Mexico was precluded by reason of the existence of a previous grant from accepting the offer.

In 1850 Mr. Webster, Secretary of State, in a letter to our minister to Mexico, said:

The American public at large has a great and obvious interest in the Tehuantepec passage.

Again in 1851 Mr. Wesbster, in a letter to the same officer, said:

All know that a communication from ocean to ocean across the Isthmus in this direction for many years has been a matter of anxious consideration.

Mr. Fillmore, in his annual message, December 2, 1851, says:

In investigating upon this important subject this Government has had in view one, and only one, object. That object has been, and is, the construction or attainment of a passage from ocean to ocean, the shortest and the best for travelers and merchandise, and equally open to all the world.

Again, in 1852, in a letter addressed to the President of Mexico, Mr. Fillmore said:

Your enlarged and enlightened views must enable you fully to appreciate the importance of opening an interoceanic communication between the Atlantic and Pacific, across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

Hon. C. M. Conrad, Acting-Secretary of State, in October, 1852, in a letter addressed to Hon. Alfred Conkling, United States minister to Mexico, said:

A communication affording a cheap and rapid means of transporting passengers and merchandise across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec has long been considered an object of great importance to the commercial world. To the United States, in particular, it is difficult to estimate the value of such a communication.

In 1857, Hon. Lewis Cass, Secretary of State, in a letter said:

The proximity of the Isthmus to our shores, the salubrity of the climate, the adaptation of the ground for the construction of a railroad, and the great diminution of distance, in comparison with more southern routes between our Atlantic and Pacific possessions, all conspire to point it out as far preferable to any other route outside of our own territory.

In December, 1866, Hon. Caleb Cushing said:

The construction of a railroad and line of telegraph for interoceanic communication by the way of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, with suitable harbor improvements at Coatzacoalcos and La Ventosa, including light-houses, is an object of great and manifest utility to the whole commercial world but primarily to the United States and the Mexican Republic. It has at all times been thus regarded by the public authorities and the people of both countries.

Expressions of this character might be extended indefinitely. For a half century or more far-seeing statesmen have looked with longing eyes upon this natural and most desirable pathway of commerce.

SPECIFIC ADVANTAGES OF THIS ROUTE OVER ALL OTHERS.

It will be apparent, by a glance at the map, that Tehuantepec is in every sense the American route, but I desire to indicate briefly some of its peculiar and specific advantages to our own country over all other routes.

First. It is much shorter and hence will afford cheaper transportation.

Second. It will require far less time and money for its construction, and hence will afford much earlier relief, and cheaper transit.

Third. It will be peculiarly adapted to the use of sailing-vessels.

Fourth. For the above reasons, and others, it will prove a far better and more effectual regulation of railway charges.

Fifth. Its military advantages are incomparably superior to any other route.

Sixth. It will establish intimate commercial relations between the United States and Mexico, while the other routes would not.

Seventh. It will prove the most effectual method of rebuilding our commercial marine, and restoring our lost supremacy on the ocean.

Mr. President, let me briefly invite your attention to each of these specific advantages:

I. THE COMPARATIVE DISTANCE BY WAY OF TEHUANTEPEC.

A vessel leaving the mouth of the Mississippi River for California, Oregon, China, or Japan, first crossing the Gulf of Mexico and passing through the Yucatan channel into the Caribbean Sea, must sail southeasterly along the coast for more than a thousand miles before she reaches Panama. Crossing here she must reverse her course, and steering northwesterly, sail about twelve hundred miles along the coast on the Pacific side, before she reaches a point directly opposite that from which she started on her voyage. In other words, she must pass Tehuantepec on the Gulf side and sail twenty-two hundred miles before she reaches it on the Pacific side. If the transit were at Panama, the course of a vessel leaving New York for our Pacific possessions, or for the Orient, would be southwardly until she reached Hayti and then westwardly through what is known as the "windward passage" into the Caribbean Sea, and then southwardly again to Panama. From the time she left New York until she crossed at Panama her head would not once be turned in the direction of the port to which she was bound. If the transit were at Tehuantepec, however, she would enter from the Atlantic Ocean the Florida channel, from thence to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the time she left the Atlantic her head would be turned in the general direction of her destination.

The great saving in distance by the Tehuantepec over the Panama route is apparent when we examine the following table, taken from Stuckle's work on interoceanic canals:

New Orleans to San Francisco, via Tehuantepec:	Miles.
New Orleans to Isthmus	918
Across Isthmus	162
Isthmus to San Francisco	2,304
Total	3,384
New Orleans to San Francisco, via Panama	5,718
Difference in favor of Tehuantepec (one way)	2,334
Difference in favor of Tehuantepec (round trip)	4,668
New York to San Francisco, via Tehuantepec:
New York to Isthmus	2,275
Across Isthmus	162
Isthmus to San Francisco	2,304
Total	4,741
Difference in favor of Tehuantepec (one way)	1,477
Difference in favor of Tehuantepec (round trip)	2,954

So, too, there is a great saving of distance by Tehuantepec over Nicaragua. A vessel making a voyage from New Orleans to San Francisco and return, and crossing the Isthmus at Nicaragua, would be required to sail a distance of 2,500 miles further than she would if she crossed at Tehuantepec. In a voyage from New York to San Francisco and return there would be a saving in distance in favor of Tehuantepec over Nicaragua of more than 1,500 miles.

An ordinary steamship will average about two hundred and fifty miles every twenty-four hours. As she would save in the round trip between New Orleans and San Francisco, via Tehuantepec, over Panama, 4,668 miles, she would save in time about nineteen days, or more than 40 per cent. of the entire time required. In a voyage from New York to San Francisco and return she would save about twelve days. The saving in time by Tehuantepec over Nicaragua would be ten days in a round trip between New Orleans and San Francisco, and six days in a round trip between New York and San Francisco. This saving, in time and distance, means a saving in the expense of fuel, wages, and insurance, and necessarily involves decreased freight charges and a corresponding benefit to both producer and consumer.

II. COST OF RESPECTIVE ROUTES AND TIME REQUIRED FOR CONSTRUCTION.

The total cost of the ship railway and appurtenances is estimated at $75,000,000, on $50,000,000 of which the Government is asked to guarantee 6 per cent. dividends for fifteen years. The time required for its completion will probably not exceed four years, and possibly it may be done in less time.

A congress of distinguished engineers, from all parts of the world, assembled in Paris in 1878 at the instance of M. De Lesseps, estimated the cost of a sea-level canal at Panama at 1,200,000,000 francs, or about two hundred and forty million dollars. Subsequently more careful estimates reduced the amount to $168,000,000. As has been truly said by a distinguished engineer, "In a locality where for six months in the year the rain-fall is incessant and enormous, it is not probable that such a work can be completed in less than twenty years. But if we assume that it can be done in ten, the interest at 5 per cent. during this time would add $84,000,000 to this estimate, making a grand total of $252,000,000." I am not advised as to the probable cost of the Nicaragua canal, but it will probably fall but little below one hundred million dollars.

Therefore, the construction of either of these canals will postpone the desired relief from ten to fifteen years longer, and in order to pay interest on the investment must, in the end, impose an annual tax on commerce very much greater than would the proposed ship-railway at Tehuantepec.

I need not enlarge upon this point. The mere statement of facts is the strongest possible argument.

III. THE TEHUANTEPEC ROUTE OFFERS PECULIAR ADVANTAGES TO SAILING-VESSELS.

I understand that certain ship-builders and ship-owners object to any transit-way being constructed across the Isthmus, on the ground that the effect of such a work would be to give all the carrying trade to steamers and drive their sailing-vessels from the seas. Have those gentlemen considered whether their condition would be more tolerable if there were a canal at Panama or Nicaragua, instead of a transit-way at Tehuantepec? It would be wise for those representing these interests to think over this carefully before committing themselves against Tehuantepec. I have been reliably informed that at Panama calms prevail to such an extent as to render a transit-way at that point useless to sailing-vessels, and that the same conditions, although to a less extent, prevail at Nicaragua; while at Tehuantepec winds always prevail, and calms are unknown. At Tehuantepec, on the Pacific side, is the "Bay of Ventosa," meaning the "Bay of Winds." It is claimed by those familiar with such subjects that more sailing-vessels would use the passage-way at Tehuantepec than steamers, and in view of the many favorable conditions, this prediction may indeed be verified.

Captain Silas Bent, a former naval officer of the United States and a gentleman of great experience and information, in a recent speech, made before the Merchants' Exchange in Saint Louis, said:

> The northeast trade-winds, which extend across the Atlantic, are so broken and interrupted when they encounter the West India Islands that they never penetrate the Caribbean Sea; but the northwest portion of them, however, does extend into the Gulf of Mexico, and often so far down as to reach well toward Tehuantepec; so that while in the Gulf winds are always found, yet the Caribbean Sea remains a region of almost relentless calms.
>
> Nor is this all; for the mountain range extending the length of the Isthmus of Panama and through Central America offers a still more formidable barrier to the passage of these winds, thus throwing them still higher into the upper regions of the atmosphere, and extending these calms far out into the Pacific Ocean on the parallel of Panama, and which extend, with lessening width, for fifteen or eighteen hundred miles, to the northwest, along the coast of Central America.
>
> This whole region of calms, both in the Caribbean Sea and in the Pacific Ocean, is so well known to navigators that sailing-vessels always shun it if possible, though they may have to run a thousand miles out of their way to do so.
>
> This absence of wind of course leaves this vast area exposed to the unmitigated heat of a torrid sun except when relieved momentarily by harassing squalls in the dry season and by the deluging rainfalls of the wet season. * * * Let us start two sailing-ships of equal tonnage and equal speed from the mouth of the Mississippi, with cargoes for China, one to go by way of Panama and the other by way of Tehuantepec, and I venture to affirm that by the time the Panama vessel has cleared the canal and floats in the waters of the Pacific, the Tehuantepec vessel will have scaled that isthmus and be well on to the meridian of the Sandwich Islands, and that before the other vessel can worry through the fifteen or more hundred miles of windless ocean before her to reach the trade-winds to the westward of Tehuantepec, the latter will have sped five thousand miles on her way across the Pacific, and be full thirty days ahead of her adversary. For it is a fact worth mentioning here that the strength of the northeast trade-winds in the Pacific, as well as the maximum strength of the northern portion of the great equatorial current in that ocean, are both found on or near the parallel of latitude of Tehuantepec, the former blowing with an impelling force to the westward of ten or twelve miles an hour, and the latter with a following strength of three or four miles per hour.

These facts are submitted for the careful consideration of those who are interested in sailing-vessels, and to demonstrate the great superiority of this route for cheap transportation. It is well known that no cheaper method of transport has ever been devised than by large sailing-vessels on the open ocean.

IV. THE TEHUANTEPEC ROUTE WILL PROVE A FAR BETTER AND MORE EFFECTIVE REGULATOR OF RAILWAY CHARGES THAN ANY OTHER.

This is apparent from the facts and reasons just stated. The great question in the near future is to be, "How shall we best control and regulate the colossal railway corporations of this country?" I cannot enter upon that question now further than to say that wherever, and whenever, it can be done by the competitive power of lines of transportation which shall be beyond the power of corporate combination and monopoly, we shall have provided the safest, surest, and best possible regulator. I do not know of any place in the world, nor of any plan ever presented which, for the money required, offers so great advantages for the attainment of this end as does the proposed ship-railway at Tehuantepec.

We have expended over one hundred millions in money to build one line of railway to the Pacific Ocean, and that done we have appropriated untold millions of acres of the public domain to provide competition for the first line. The result will probably be, when all are completed, that a grand combination will be made by which the earnings of all will be pooled, and competition be wholly defeated. True, laws may be passed forbidding such combinations, and to some extent securing the objects for which these princely donations were made; but such laws will encounter many difficulties and embarrassments, and will be subject to the changes of public opinion. Give us a direct and cheap ocean line from all parts of the Atlantic, to all parts of the Pacific coast, and you will have provided a competitor which will be beyond the power of combination, and which will need no law, but the law of human nature, to maintain its vigor and unceasing activity. Such a line, if constructed at the right place, and at reasonable cost, and subject to the right of the Government to fix tolls, will regulate every line of railroad that shall ever do business between the two oceans.

I have already indicated the superiority of the ship-railway at Tehuantepec over all other routes and methods for this purpose, namely: That it will be from 1,400 to 2,400 miles shorter; will be available from ten to fifteen years earlier; will require many millions less of annual tolls, and will afford far better facilities for sailing-vessels. The distance from all our Atlantic to all our Pacific ports, via Tehuantepec, will average only about one thousand miles greater, by this ocean route, than the distance by rail across the continent. The effect of all these advantages, in cheapening the cost of transportation, and in regulating railway charges, can hardly be overestimated. And yet I am entirely satisfied that the immense increase of travel and of business, demanding quick transit, which would result from the more rapid development of the distant West, through the agency of cheap transportation produced by the proposed work, would ultimately prove a great benefit to the railroads themselves.

V. ITS MILITARY ADVANTAGES ARE INCOMPARABLY SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER ROUTE.

It is, of course, of the utmost importance that a point should be selected which can be most easily and effectually defended in case of war. In this respect Tehuantepec offers special advantages over any other point upon the Isthmus. Commodore Shufeldt says that it "is the only route which our Government can control." We could not (with our present Navy) successfully defend a work constructed either at Panama or Nicaragua against the attack of any of the great naval powers of Europe, but it would be otherwise with a work at Tehuantepec. A few iron-clads and torpedoes, placed in the Yucatan and Florida channels, would entirely close the Gulf of Mexico, making an entrance into it almost impossible. Nor would there be any difficulty, should it become necessary, in conveying overland and concentrating at Tehuantepec an army of 200,000 men. There are now two lines of railway extending into Mexico in course of construction: one from New Mexico and the other from Texas. When these are finished the transportation of troops to the Isthmus will be an easy thing. To transport such an army to Nicaragua or Panama, however, would be most difficult and its maintenance there, far removed as it would be from its base of supplies, would be well-nigh impossible. Mexico, whose interest would be joint with ours, could render us much more efficient aid in the protection of such a work than we could hope to receive from the smaller and much less powerful republics of Central America.

VI. IT WILL ESTABLISH INTIMATE COMMERCIAL RELATIONS WITH MEXICO, which the other routes would not.

The question how we shall best establish commercial relations with Mexico that will open her markets to our products, has long been a most important problem with American business men and statesmen. She abounds in all the natural resources that are needed to make a nation rich and powerful. Her soil is unsurpassed in fertility. Her mountains contain mines of fabulous wealth. Her climate is salubrious and delightful. She produces many things which we need, and her people require innumerable articles which our manufacturers and farmers can supply. Though this republic, fashioned after the plan of our own, and in full sympathy with us, stands at our very doors, yet the United States to-day enjoys, as I am informed, but about 5 per cent. of her trade. This should not be.

During the year 1874–'75, there were coined in the mints of Mexico—

Silver	$19,886,958 50
Gold	762,619 00
Copper	21,712 33
Total	20,671,289 83

The whole coinage of the country up to 1875 is estimated to have been $2,985,488,165.55, and her local interior trade is estimated to have amounted in the year 1876 to upwards of $400,000,000. It must be remembered also that the mineral and agricultural developments of Mexico are yet in their infancy. Struggling with internal revolution and foreign invasion, her advancement and development have been greatly impeded. We have every reason to believe that her present government is a stable one, and that a new era of prosperity has dawned upon her people.

General Grant in speaking upon this subject said:

> They have thirteen years really of growth, and considering that they have been impoverished by wars, foreign and domestic, I think they have done remarkably well, and I am perfectly satisfied that with the building of railroads and of telegraphs there need be no more apprehension for the safety of capital invested in Mexico than in our own country.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> I look for a brighter and prosperous future for Mexico, and it must result in a very large commerce with some part of the world. If we take advantage of the time it will accrue to the benefit of the United States more than to that of any other country except Mexico. * * * As I have said, I have no doubt that with the building of railroads they will be able to export $200,000,000, not a dollar of which will be bullion.

We have long desired this trade. The time has now come when we can do much to secure it. Mexico herself has taken the initiative. She says to us "we have done our part; now do yours by aiding the construction of this great work, and by joining us unite the two great republics by the strongest ties of interest and sympathy." She has given a concession which will enable the company, to be formed under it, to discriminate as to tolls in favor of the United States. She has made a most generous contribution to the work. Here is our opportunity. What shall be our reply?

The commercial advantages of this work are by no means confined to Mexico. The following table, taken from official records exhibiting the commerce with the various nations therein named, shows our present commercial relations with the countries most readily reached by this route:

British India	423,000,000
Australia	375,819,000
China	198,000,000
Hong-Kong	112,000,000
Peru	75,000,000
New Zealand	71 718,000
Chili	58,000,000
Japan	55,230,000
Phillipine Islands	34,763,000
Tasmanico	14,835,000
Hawaiian Islands	7,524,000
Total	1,425,953,000

Of this trade the United States now enjoys only about 4 per cent.

VII.—IT WILL PROVE ONE OF THE MOST EFFECTUAL METHODS OF REBUILDING OUR COMMERCIAL MARINE AND OF RESTORING OUR SUPREMACY ON THE OCEAN.

The right conceded by Mexico to discriminate in favor of American commerce will do more to rebuild our shipping interests than would the expenditure of many millions in any other way. I regard this concession as of very great value. Suppose we reject this proposition and Great Britain, wiser than we, shall accept it. What will be the effect upon our commerce? In my judgment it could hardly receive a more fatal blow. This concession will enable any other government that shall aid the enterprise to enjoy the advantages now offered to us. Mr. Eads is patriotic, and hence comes first to his own country, and offers her the great advantages he has secured. If we spurn that offer and refuse to avail ourselves of its benefits, can he be blamed for submitting it to some other government that will better appreciate its advantages? It may be said in reply, that no other nation shall be permitted to control this isthmian highway. That sounds well. It is brave talk; but I repeat that in this last quarter of the nineteenth century we cannot afford to stand in the way of the world's progress, refusing to open this highway of commerce ourselves or to permit any other nation to do it. Have we counted the possible cost of enforcing such a dog-in-the-manger policy? May it not cost us vastly more thus to obstruct the commerce of the world than to accept the proposition of Mexico and avail ourselves of its immense advantages? Should we decline this proposal, we could not object to the acceptance of it by England for the same reasons which justify us in stopping the work of De Lesseps; for such acceptance by England would not be the chartering of an English company under a Mexican concession to build the ship-railway. It would simply be an agreement between England and a Mexican company, by which the commerce of England would secure immense and exclusive benefits for ninety-nine years, in consideration of certain aid advanced by England to the company in its infancy, and which by the concession it is authorized to receive from England or from any other government.

It has been urged that we would get no right to take possession of the road in the event of the ship-railway company failing to keep its engagements with us; that in such case our only recourse would be through the courts of Mexico. The absurdity of such objection is seen at once if we reverse the position of affairs and suppose that Mexico or any other foreign government desired, for any cause whatever, to take possession of any railroad or other public work in this country. We should only give to such government, or to its citizens, the right to go into our courts for redress, and that Mexico gives to any government that aids this work. We have no right to ask, or to expect from her, what we would not concede if our positions were reversed.

SUBSIDY.

I am aware that the cry of "subsidy" may be raised against this proposition. I deny that it is in any sense a subsidy; but if it were, that would not deter me from supporting a measure so essential to the development of our commerce, and so advantageous to the whole country. Mexico has granted a million acres of land, and made concessions of far greater value, in aid of this work. Can we do less than give a guarantee, which in effect is but a loan of credit, with a moral certainty that every dollar will eventually be repaid?

All that our Government is asked to do is to give a guarantee which will enable Mr. Eads to raise the enormous sum of money necessary to construct the work. The total cost of the railway, as I have said, is estimated at $75,000,000, and the Government is asked, not to advance any portion of this sum, but simply to guarantee the payment for fifteen years of a dividend of 6 per cent. per annum on $50,000,000 of the stock. For the repayment of whatever may be advanced under this guarantee, one-half the net receipts is pledged, and to avoid any question as to what are net receipts, it is provided by the bill that one-half the gross receipts shall pay all operating and extraordinary expenses, repairs, &c., so that when the total receipts shall reach $6,000,000 the obligations of the United States shall cease. In no event shall such annual obligation exceed the amount by which one-half the gross receipts falls short of the sum of $3,000,000.

It is estimated by M. De Lesseps that the revenues of a canal at Panama would amount to $20,000,000 per annum, and on this estimate $60,000,000 of private capital has already been subscribed. The prospectus of the Nicaragua route estimates that its revenues would amount to $12,000,000. If the gross receipts at Tehuantepec reach $6,000,000, the Government will have nothing to pay under its guarantee. Nor is this Government aid sought as a gift. On the contrary, it is proposed upon the basis of a good and sufficient consideration to be given in return. This consideration is, first, the transportation of all Government vessels, troops, and mails, and the transmission of all Government telegrams free of charge; second, the right upon the part of the Government of the United States to regulate the tolls upon the railway, increasing or reducing them at pleasure; and, third, the right to discriminate in favor of American commerce. Not only are these rights reserved to continue for ninety-nine years, but the most ample provision is made for the repayment by the company to the United States of the amount it may be called upon to advance under its guarantee.

I do not hesitate to declare that I am in favor of wise and judicious expenditures to develop our magnificent resources, expand our foreign trade, and restore our lost ocean commerce.

IS THE PROPOSED SHIP-RAILWAY PRACTICABLE?

This seems to me the only question in connection with this work that will bear discussion. If it be practicable, I do not see how any American can doubt his obligations to give it a hearty support. I confess my inability to discuss it from an engineering or mechanical standpoint, for the reason that I have but little knowledge on such matters. I will not, however, as many do, make my ignorance of the subject the reason for denouncing it. The King of Siam, when told that in some countries water became hard enough to walk upon, at once pronounced it false, because it contradicted all his experience. The fact was that his experience was somewhat limited.

The profound scientist, De Lardner, delivered a lecture in New York, in which he demonstrated to his own satisfaction at least, and doubtless to that of many intelligent listeners, that it was simply impossible for a steamship to cross the ocean because she could not carry coals enough for the voyage; yet the same number of the New York Herald, which published his lecture, announced the arrival of the steamship Great Western from Liverpool, to the utter confusion of the learned lecturer.

De Witt Clinton was considered almost a lunatic when he proposed to connect the waters of the lake and the Hudson River by a canal. Nevertheless he did it.

When it was first proposed to build a railroad, on which coaches should run at the rate of fifteen miles per hour, the idea was scouted as utterly impracticable and visionary, and the wise ones demonstrated that such a road would require for its bed a solid stone wall, perfectly level and perfectly straight.

When Captain Eads proposed to erect the present bridge over the Mississippi River, at Saint Louis, it was said by many to be impossible, but, undaunted by the croakings of skeptics, he went on with his work, and the magnificent structure stands to-day a fitting monument to his genius and energy.

Seven years ago, as chairman of the Senate Committee on Transportation Routes to the Seaboard, it became my duty to consider the very important problem of how to relieve the suffering commerce of the Mississippi River. The mouth of that mighty river was closed to any vessel drawing more than eighteen feet of water, and the uncertain and dangerous passage of even these was only secured by an expensive system of dredging. For half a century the nation had struggled in vain with this problem. Numerous plans of improvement were proposed to the committee; but one by one they were rejected, until at last the committee seemed forced to the conclusion that nothing but a canal would accomplish the desired end. The House of Representatives had appropriated $8,000,000 to construct a canal which would have cost from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 before completed.

It was at this juncture that James B. Eads, having just completed the Saint Louis bridge, came forward with his proposition to deepen the mouth of the river by means of jetties. Wearied with propositions possessing no merit, I confess that I approached the consideration of the jetty project with a prejudice against it; but when Mr. Eads explained to me his whole plan, and when I saw his unfaltering faith, amounting almost to inspiration, I became convinced that here at last was the solution of the problem. He undertook the work under circumstances and conditions most inauspicious and onerous. Not a dollar of public money could he receive until he had demonstrated the success of the work by securing twenty feet of water where there were then but eight feet, and all payments thereafter were to be conditioned upon the depth of channel secured. From the beginning I felt sure he would succeed, and during the darkest days of the enterprise my faith never faltered.

To-day, at a cost of only five and a quarter millions, the problem has been solved; and the largest ocean vessels may float upon an unobstructed channel to the Gulf, and every great commercial interest of the Mississippi Valley, springing into new life, rejoices in the accomplishment of this wonderful work. This same quiet, earnest, and energetic man comes to us to-day and says, "Give me your aid and I will realize for you the cherished dreams of centuries, by striking down this isthmian barrier and giving to commerce an unobstructed highway between the two great oceans." I for one have faith in Mr. Eads. I most firmly believe he will accomplish all he promises. But if there are doubters, I ask them to look at his proposition. Again, he shows his perfect confidence in his project by insisting that under no circumstances shall the Government guarantee attach, or have any force or effect, until he has demonstrated by the severest tests the entire practicability of the ship-railway. Nor does he stand alone in his assertion that the work is practicable and will accomplish all that he claims for it. His proposition has the indorsement and support of many of the most distinguished civil engineers and naval constructors both in Europe and America, and so far as I know the practicability of the plan is denied by none. Let me read a few brief extracts from some of the many indorsements it has received.

Hon. E. J. Reed, member of Parliament, and formerly chief constructor of the British navy, in a letter on Mr. Eads's plan of a ship railway, published in the London Times, says:

I have for some time past had under consideration a similar scheme of my own for conveying ships across the north of the great peninsula of Florida, and although I have not had the leisure to develop it sufficiently to justify me in putting it in detail before the public, I have gone a long way toward satisfying myself that it is a feasible plan and highly economical in comparison with a ship-canal.

He adds:

I am satisfied that ships can be conveyed across intervening land much less expensively than by canal where the distance to be traversed is great.

Captain Edward Hart, naval constructor United States Navy, says in a letter to Mr. Eads:

With a substantial road-bed for your railway, on the easy grades across the Tehuantepec, which I understand do not exceed one or two feet in a hundred, there can be no mechanical difficulty in the way of transporting loaded ships by railroad with entire safety to the vessel, whether she be built of wood or iron. The speed with which you can move the vessel will depend entirely upon the size and number of your locomotives.

Mr. F. L. Fernald, another constructor in the United States Navy, in a letter addressed to Mr. Eads, says:

Having carefully examined the plans and papers pertaining to your proposed ship-railway across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, I do not hesitate to say that in my judgment there will be no difficulty whatever in transporting in the manner you propose any properly-built vessel with absolute safety. Your railway will possess one quite important advantage over an ordinary canal, and that is that a vessel's bottom, propeller, &c., can be examined and, if necessary, cleaned in transit.

It should be remembered that these three gentlemen have received a scientific education, and have been fitted by long practice and a thorough knowledge of the subject to speak intelligently upon it. They are all recognized as high authority in ship-building.

General Q. A. Gilmore, of the United States Engineers, declares in a letter to Mr. Eads:

In my judgment the construction of the ship-railway across the Isthmus in general accordance with your plan is not only feasible as an engineering problem, but the successful maintenance and operation of such a road is entirely practicable as a business enterprise.

Major Charles R. Suter, also of the United States Engineers, says:

The project has great and obvious advantages to recommend it, and from an engineering point of view it is, in my opinion, perfectly practicable.

Professor E. A. Fuertes, dean of the department of civil engineering in Cornell University, was the chief engineer of Commodore Shufeldt's survey of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. He says:

I have made computations which proved conclusively to my mind that the Great Eastern could be carried safely overland upon rails with less strain to her timbers than in any of her sea voyages.

Again he says:

I am perfectly familiar with every possible point through which the railway or canal could be located at Tehuantepec, and I am sure it is easy to prove that all routes outside of the Gulf of Mexico will be detrimental to the most vital interests of the United States and the source of great danger to our national stability.

He says further:

I can assure you upon knowledge of every inch of the ground, that you will find no difficulty about curves, grades, or bridges. The ascent of the Atlantic slope will offer no more difficulties than the Hudson River Railroad; and on the Pacific side, either of the three passes in the neighborhood of Tarifa or Chivela will allow of no steeper grades than twenty-five to thirty-five feet per mile to bring you down to the Pacific plains.

Colonel Henry Flad, a distinguished civil engineer, president of the board of public works in Saint Louis, says in a published letter:

Ships can be transported on such a railroad with absolute safety and with the same dispatch as through a canal; and that although the cost of transferring ships by railroad will exceed that of passing them through a ship-canal, the difference will be insignificant compared with the saving of interest on the first cost.

Mr. O. Chaunte, an accomplished civil engineer, and superintendent of the Erie Railway, says of the ship-railway:

I gave some attention to the subject myself nearly a year ago, and reached conclusions almost identical with yours as to the feasibility and general features of the project. I see no reason why the railway should not be worked at ten miles per hour.

General Beauregard, formerly of the United States Engineer Corps, says:

I feel no hesitation in saying that I see no great difficulty in constructing a railway strong enough to carry out the object referred to.

He says further:

The ship-railway has other important advantages over a canal, such as the facility with which the number of tracks could be increased to accommodate the demands of commerce, the rapidity of transit, and the greater number of vessels per day that could be transported, the ability of building a railway where a canal would be impossible, and the ability of estimating correctly first cost, &c.

Colonel C. Shaler Smith, a civil engineer of the highest standing, says:

The engineering problems involved have all been solved on a smaller scale in the construction of various works in this country and in Europe during the last thirty years, and the adaptation of these tried and proved principles in mechanical designs to the case in hand is not by any means difficult.

Mr. Dempster, city engineer of Pittsburgh, says:

I heartily indorse the project of a ship-railway across the cord of the continents in preference to a canal.

He says further:

The facilities of transportation can be much more readily, cheaply, and advantageously increased on the railway than on the canal, and the leviathans of the merchant-marine can be transported more easily and with as much safety on a railway as through a canal, and without any break of cargo or any injury to the vessel.

Mr. H. D. Whitcomb, civil engineer, in charge of the works of improvement on the James River, who was sent by the United States Government with others to Europe to investigate the merits of the jetty system in 1874, says of the ship-railway:

The idea is worthy of the age, and to make it a success you have simply to improve and expand the details of the old marine railway and make it more perfect. I have the greatest confidence in your ability in this particular and hope you will have the opportunity to demonstrate it.

Mr. Thomas C. Clarke, vice-president of the American Society of Civil Engineers and one of the most eminent civil engineers in the United States, says:

I am desirous that my opinion should be put on record that your ship-railway is practicable to construct, and can be maintained as easily as any other railway bearing as large a tonnage, and that vessels of 4,000 tons can be carried across without injury to themselves or their cargoes.

Mr. J. J. Williams, a civil engineer who has made several surveys of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, says:

Having carefully examined the details of your plans for accomplishing this object, I desire to express to you my full conviction of their entire practicability on the Isthmus.

Mr. E. L. Corthell, a gentleman who has had large experience in railroad engineering, and who was resident engineer of the jetties, declares his full faith in the merits of the ship-railway.

Major B. N. Harrod, civil engineer, and member of the Mississippi River commission, has written to Mr. Eads to the same effect.

In regard to the popular error that loaded ships cannot be taken out of water in safety, Mr. Eads has received a letter from William F. Buckley, president of the New York Balance Dock, (February 14,) in which he gives the names of five large sailing-ships and six large steamers which have been taken out upon that dock, with their cargoes, and he adds:

We do not refuse any class of ships or steamers, even with their cargoes and coals on board, whose length does not exceed that of the dock. In any case in which we have taken up steamers with cargoes it has been done without the least strain or injury to the vessels. As the rule is to make a charge for raising cargo in the vessel, they usually come to us without cargo.

Among the naval officers who look with decided favor upon the ship-railway plan may be named Commodore Shufeldt, Commander Farquhar, and Captain Silas Bent.

These eminent authorities, in connection with the fact that the guarantee is to attach only as the work is practically demonstrated to be a success, ought to be enough for even the most skeptical. I will only say, in conclusion, that confident of the practicability of this great work, of its incalculable benefit to the whole country, and of its incomparable superiority over all other plans proposed, I should feel that I do not fairly represent the State which has so long honored me with a seat in this body, nor express the sentiment of the American people, were I not to speak and vote in favor of our Government grasping the outstretched hand of Mexico and joining her in an enterprise promising so much of benefit to both republics and to the world.

Mr. EATON. I ask the Senate to proceed with the consideration of the bill which I called up.

BALTIMORE AND POTOMAC RAILROAD.

Mr. WHYTE. There is a bill to authorize the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company to reorganize after there shall be a sale of the road of the company under the mortgages to secure the bonded debt. It is absolutely necessary. I ask that the pending order may be laid aside informally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland? The Chair hears no objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 2064) to reorganize and incorporate anew the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, at the end of section 2 to add:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as in any way to impair the right of the United States to require at any time the removal of the tracks now laid on Sixth street southwest, or on any of the streets entering the city of Washington whereon tracks of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company are now laid, or as in any way to prevent the United States from taking, at a reasonable compensation to said company, the depot building at the corner of B street and the said Sixth street southwest, and requiring the said railroad company to remove therefrom.

SEC. 3. That this act may be altered, amended, or repealed at any time by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the amendment. It does not go far enough to suit me. I think, at the present time, if we are to recharter this corporation, we should take this as the most opportune moment to have the present railroad track removed from Sixth street. We all know that it is a great nuisance as it is now. Certainly it seems to me that we could have no better time than when they ask for new favors of us, and that we should seek the present occasion to have that track removed. I am perfectly willing that there should be a provision by which we should pay the appraised value of it, or perhaps the original cost of the building, for I suppose that we really need it, or might make use of it to a good purpose for the Pension Bureau or some department of the District government.

Mr. WHYTE. I beg to say, in reply to the Senator from Vermont, that a bill has already passed both Houses of Congress authorizing the District commissioners to select a site for a union depot, providing for the change of this depot hereafter. I have put an amendment in the bill which reserves all our rights to do that whenever we are ready, and I really think nothing more stringent than that ought to be put in the bill.

Mr. MORRILL. The bill to which the Senator refers may become a law and it may not, probably not; and if it should, there is no certainty that it would be accepted by the different companies, so that the object I have in view would be accomplished for years and years. I trust that the Senator from Maryland will agree to so amend this provision as to provide that this shall be done within the coming year. I presume we could alter the third section so as to effect that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to—ayes 27, noes not counted.

Mr. CONKLING. I have no doubt about the fact, but I rise to ask a question that it may appear on the record if it has not appeared. The bill as I understand it has no effect save only to authorize the railway company in question to reorganize as it is organized now, after certain foreclosure proceedings are consummated?

Mr. WHYTE. Precisely.

Mr. CONKLING. And it imparts no right to change the route or to occupy any ground in the District, but leaves all that in statu quo?

Mr. WHYTE. Precisely; and with an amendment reserving any question in regard to the depot hereafter, so that there can be no implication the other way.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. MORRILL. The third section has not yet been adopted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The two clauses were treated as one amendment.

Mr. WHYTE. It is but one amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. I desire to make two or three formal amendments that the Committee on the District of Columbia, after the bill was reported, considered and agreed upon. The Senator from Maryland forgot them at the moment, but the Senator from Maryland and myself understand the exact object and purpose of the amendments. While they do not materially affect the principle of the bill, it is better that they should be inserted in it. I will hand the amendments that I propose to incorporate in the bill to the Secretary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments proposed by the Senator from Tennessee will be reported in their order.

The CHIEF CLERK. In section 2, line 23, it is proposed to strike out "the" and insert "any existing;" in line 27 to strike out "as in any way to prevent" and insert "any existing right;" in line 28, after "United States," to strike out "from taking" and insert "to take;" and in lines 30 and 31 to strike out "requiring" and insert "to require;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as in any way to impair any existing right of the United States to require at any time the removal of the tracks now laid on Sixth street, southwest, or on any of the streets entering the city of Washington whereon tracks of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company are now laid, or any existing right of the United States to take, at a reasonable compensation to said company, the depot building at the corner of B street and the said Sixth street, southwest, and to require the said railroad company to remove therefrom.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. F. KING, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7101) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. R. No. 373) relative to printing the Agricultural Report for the year 1880.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. No. 346) for the relief of William H. Thompson;

A bill (H. R. No. 375) for the relief of Philemon B. Hawkins;

A bill (H. R. No. 1197) for the relief of settlers upon the absentee Shawnee lands of Kansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 1996) for the relief of W. A. Reid;

A bill (H. R. No. 2098) for the relief of the heirs of Edward B. Clark;

A bill (H. R. No. 2844) for the relief of James E. Montell;

A bill (H. R. No. 3788) granting an increase of pension to William Hamill;

A bill (H. R. No. 4002) for the relief of the estate of J. M. Micou, deceased;

A bill (H. R. No. 4646) for the relief of the heirs of Cornelius Boyle;

A bill (H. R. No. 6023) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to change the name of vessels under certain circumstances;

A bill (H. R. No. 6545) to amend section 2524 of the Revised Statutes, so as to authorize a charge for melting or refining bullion when at or above standard;

A bill (H. R. No. 6717) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department;

A bill (H. R. No. 6972) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 401) in relation to the barge W. J. Spicer.

PHILADELPHIA AND READING RAILROAD.

Mr. CONKLING. There is on the Calendar a bill reported by the Committee on the Judiciary relating to trade-marks——

Mr. EATON. If my friend will permit me, I have a bill before the Senate, but promised my friend from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD] that I would give way to him, and then made a further promise to my friend from Indiana, [Mr. MCDONALD.]

Mr. CONKLING. I will put up my prayer when I get an opportunity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate resumes the consideration of the Japanese indemnity bill.

Mr. EATON. Let it be laid over informally without prejudice.

Mr. BAYARD. With the assent of my friend from Connecticut I ask that the pending order be laid aside informally for the purpose of considering Senate joint resolution No. 157.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the pending order is laid aside informally. The Senator from Delaware asks the Senate to consider the joint resolution he has named.

Mr. INGALLS. Let us hear it reported subject to objection.

The Chief Clerk read the joint resolution (S. R. No. 157) for the relief of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company.

Mr. INGALLS. Is there any report in that case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no report.

Mr. BAYARD. The joint resolution is unanimously reported; I will explain it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware asks for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It releases the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company from the payment of the taxes assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue upon the interest-bearing promissory notes heretofore issued by it to its employés, commonly known as wages certificates. But the company is to pay the actual costs and expenses incurred in the proceedings taken to enforce the payment of the taxes.

Mr. BAYARD. I will state that under the act of Congress of the 8th of February, 1875, it was provided:

> That every person, firm, association, other than national-bank association, and every corporation, State bank, or State banking association, shall pay a tax of 10 per cent. on the amount of their own notes used for circulation and paid out by them. (18 Stat. at L., part 3, page 311.)

In 1878 and 1879 the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, which had no banking powers whatever, found itself exceedingly embarrassed; eleven thousand of its men were wholly without the means of support; and the company was too embarrassed to raise money to pay them the wages then due. They issued to these men their promissory notes, promising to pay the money one year after date and bearing interest.

Mr. INGALLS. What was the aggregate amount?

Mr. BAYARD. The aggregate amount so issued was nearly five million dollars, $4,837,000. They issued these notes to their men and relieved their immediate wants. I may say that they were not in the form of bank notes. They were promissory notes payable one year after date with interest from date, and as was expressly stated upon their face were issued for wages, and would be received either before or at maturity for the amount thereof in freight and tolls of the company.

Mr. HOAR. When was that? What was the date?

Mr. BAYARD. In 1879 these notes were issued. I may say they never were issued, they never were pretended to be issued as banking circulation, but they were taxed to an amount of 10 per cent. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue invited the company to go into court and test the tax. To do so in the condition of the company would simply have been ruinous. On the face of the paper and according to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States there can be no pretense to call such instruments as were issued by them bank notes, nor were they circulating notes.

Mr. DAWES. Of what denominations were they?

Mr. BAYARD. The denomination was ten dollars for all.

Mr. DAWES. No odd cents?

Mr. BAYARD. They were all of the same denomination; and I merely say they were not issued and reissued as bank notes. It was nothing in the world but the legitimate and ordinary use of credit at a time when the debtor was unable to meet his payment in money.

Mr. DAWES. This payment was for wages?

Mr. BAYARD. Yes, sir.

Mr. DAWES. Did it appear before the committee that everybody who worked for the railroad company worked just ten dollars' worth?

Mr. BAYARD. No, nothing of that kind was proposed. The certificates were issued and given to the employés. I do not suppose the hands were paid in full, but it was simply the case of an employer unable to meet his debt who to prevent his hands from absolute distress and starvation issued a deferred promise to pay, bearing interest. There is, I may say, none of the legal definitions of a bank note attached to these certificates at all.

Mr. INGALLS. But the Commissioner of Internal Revenue held that they were liable to excise?

Mr. BAYARD. He taxed them, and he invited the company to go into court to contest the tax.

Mr. INGALLS. Did they take any appeal from him to the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. BAYARD. They have not paid the tax, but their property was levied upon and will be sold, when to sell the property of the company for this tax would be exceedingly ruinous to them.

Mr. INGALLS. But it was not necessary to litigate every note that was emitted. Why could not a test case have been made up on one and the principle established, so that we might have had a judicial determination whether the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was right or wrong?

Mr. BAYARD. The certificates were not issued serially; they were issued at once to relieve from starvation 11,000 men. It was not a case where you could make a test case. It was not the case of a continued or a serial emission of notes. They were issued at one time and only at one time, and the tax is unanimously admitted by the committees of both Houses not to be within the law.

Mr. INGALLS. Does not the law permit an appeal from a decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to the Secretary of the Treasury or to some other officer of the Government?

Mr. BAYARD. No, sir, it does not; nor can you enjoin the collection of a tax under the present law, no matter how palpably erroneous it may be on its face.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no written report in this case, and I should like to ask whether $5,000 or $500,000 are involved?

Mr. BAYARD. I will state the amount.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will put one or two questions to the Senator so that he may understand me. In the first place, what amount of this circulating medium was issued by the railroad company? Was it issued to pay off the employés month by month, week by week, and issued in amounts corresponding with the amounts the company owed the employés? or was it a circulating medium, a promissory note, issued and paid out like money? Then, did not these parties have a legal remedy, a perfect right to go into the courts of the State, or of the United States, and test whether the assessment made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue was legal and valid or not?

Mr. McDONALD. Not without paying the tax.

Mr. COCKRELL. I know they would have had to pay it. What is the amount that Congress would give to the railroad company by the passage of this joint resolution?

Mr. BAYARD. Congress does not give one dollar.

Mr. COCKRELL. How much would it take?

Mr. BAYARD. In the first place, there was not one cent of circulating medium. That is precisely the point. There was no such thing as circulation attached to it. The company owed these men $4,837,000. They were indebted to 11,000 workingmen to that amount at the time their embarrassments accrued. They were unable to pay those men. They were unable to borrow money in the ordinary method by reason of the heavy mortgages upon their property, which had been foreclosed and the road virtually placed in the hands of receivers. For the sake of preventing the human distress that would follow such a debt they issued $4,837,000 in these wages certificates, which were in the shape of promissory notes payable one year after date with interest, and stating expressly upon their face that they were for wages and were to be redeemed at maturity with interest, or could be paid for tolls due the company.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BAYARD. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. What is the principle, the general rule of public policy, on which the Committee on Finance, if that is the committee which recommends this measure, act in prescribing the limits within which Congress is to act as a court to revise the decisions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and outside of which it is not to act, but leave the citizen to his remedy at law?

Mr. BAYARD. It is a case palpably of erroneous assessment. The only means by which that can be remedied in the courts of law is by a payment of the tax under protest and a suit to recover it back. In this case you are dealing with a corporation entirely distressed, and if subjected to the payment of this large amount, which is $487,000, great and ruinous loss will come to them before the case can be decided.

Taking the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States we find that they have exonerated similar certificates where they were not bank notes in any of the legal definitions of that term. Therefore taking the case upon its facts, there being the concurrent agreement of the committees in each House that this was not the circulation contemplated by law and according to the definition of the Supreme Court of the United States, they said that rather than send these parties to the courts with the long delay, probably three years, before a decision could be reached, and which only can be reached by the payment of the tax under protest and an appeal, they would grant the relief which they are satisfied in law and in equity ought to be granted now. If this money is to be paid and recovered back three years hence infinite damage will be done which this measure is intended to relieve these parties from.

The Senate will see that these wages certificates were nothing more than the legitimate issues of an impoverished debtor obtaining credit for the cash which it was unable at that time to pay. Therefore the committee recommend that relief should be given to the parties who palpably have been assessed under an erroneous construction of the law. It is not circulation, it is not bank notes; it is the promissory notes of a company for wages due, payable after date with interest. It lacks all the definition of a bank note.

Mr. HOAR. Did the committee hear the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the Secretary of the Treasury in support of the ground taken by the officers of the Government?

Mr. BAYARD. This assessment has been made. The Senator knows no doubt that under existing law you cannot enjoin the collection of any tax, however unlawful or erroneous, by process either of State or Federal courts. Your only remedy is to pay the debt under protest, and then bring your suit against the officer; but the payment of this sum by this company at this time, by both committees of Congress and by the Commissioner himself would be admitted to be absolutely ruinous.

Mr. HOAR. Let me repeat my question. I do not now exactly understand what are the limits. It seems to me it is a very serious assumption of jurisdiction for Congress to undertake to reverse, without the action of any court, the opinion in favor of the Government of the Treasury officials. I understand that it may be very inconvenient to the citizen to pay his taxes. A wealthy citizen who is taxed a large sum finds it more inconvenient, so far as the difficulty is estimated by amount, than the ordinary citizen who pays a smaller sum. But what I desire to ask the Senator is, whether the committee who undertook to overrule and reverse the action of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue have given any hearing to the Government on the question? The committee think that this tax was erroneously assessed. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, whose business it was to assess it, thinks it was properly assessed. It does not seem to me that this off-hand way is the way to reverse the opinion of this high officer of the Government, without, at any rate, a very clear and plain case.

Mr. BAYARD. The title to this joint resolution clearly expresses its intent. It is a joint resolution for the relief of this company. It is certainly within the power of Congress to grant this relief, and where the special circumstances——

Mr. HOAR. I am afraid I did not make my question heard. My question was, Did the committee give the Government a hearing? We are assuming or asked to assume the judicial duty of deciding against a public officer whose duties are quasi-judicial, and who is the highest officer of the Department except the Secretary of the Treasury. I do not know whether an appeal in any instance lies to him in the assessment of taxes. Now, did the committee hear the argument of the Government by which this Commissioner was convinced——

Mr. BAYARD. The committee did not hear any argument from the Government, because they had the practice before them undisputed by the Department. There was no doubt about the fact that the Commissioner had given a construction to the act. Under it he had levied this tax of 10 per cent., and under it this company's property was seized and put under execution.

The Senate of the United States have several times within my experience interfered to relieve against just such ruinous assessments, which if they were carried out would necessarily crush the party and make it idle to attempt to relieve after all the injury had been done. I remember very well about five years ago in the Lake Superior mining regions the mining and smelting companies had issued notes in small denominations, fives, tens and twenty dollars in the form of drafts upon their Boston house, which never went forward for acceptance but which remained in the community in which they were issued, and were used as paper money. They were used and reused, issued and reissued; which is not the case with the certificates now before the Senate. Under the Sanborn contracts——

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator another question? Were these ten-dollar notes payable to bearer?

Mr. BAYARD. They were payable to bearer. I have one of them here.

Mr. DAWES. The Reading notes?

Mr. HOAR. The Reading notes.

Mr. BAYARD. They were payable to bearer with interest from date. I well remember the then Senator from Michigan, Mr. Chandler, coming to me as a sub-committee and showing me that taxes to the amount of $1,500,000 had been assessed upon a number of miners and smelters of common ores in that region. To them the payment of such a tax was irresistible; the courts could not enjoin; the law expressly declared that no injunction should be issued. The remedy was to pay the tax and then take an appeal and sue for it. In the first place the payment was impossible to those men in such sums, and ruin awaited them in case the payment had been enforced. They came to Congress and a bill was passed promptly for their relief by declaring that the tax should not be levied upon those notes, and they found that relief.

Their case I wish to say was much more plainly within the act of Congress, or rather it was not so plainly outside the meaning of the act of Congress, as the case now before the Senate. To say to a man, "you shall pay the sum which ruins you and breaks up your business, and then take your appeal," is no relief; the relief comes too late. The object of this appeal to Congress, which has met the approval of the committee of the other House as it has of the Committee on Finance of this body, is if you mean to stay this palpable injustice you must do so now in the form of law.

By what right do you levy this 10 per cent. tax? The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has assessed it; he has put their property under execution. If the money is collected and paid upon the execution it will be ruinous to the property of these people. They are, as the Senator knows, and as the public well know, embarrassed. Their road I think to-day is in the hands of receivers, and to put this load upon them and compel the sale of their property to pay this tax, would be utterly ruinous to them.

Therefore the Senate now will have to judge, and they may be informed much or little by the action and judgment of the two committees, whether a note issued in this form, a promissory note payable after date, with interest, fluctuating in value from day to day because of the increase of that interest, issued as a wages certificate and receivable in payment of the tolls of the company, is the circulation taxable under the law of 1875. If the Senate shall not consider it circulation, if upon looking at the law and looking at the instrument you do not consider it the species of paper that was intended to be taxed, then you will grant the relief; but you certainly will not compel these people to wait until the relief would be a mockery, and when the forms of law from which they may emerge with a legal judgment would leave them broken and damnified beyond remedy.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask the Senator to read the section of the statutes under which the assessment was made.

Mr. BAYARD. The act approved the 8th of February, 1875, is as follows:

> That every person, firm, association, other than national-bank association, and every corporation, State bank, or State banking association, shall pay a tax of 10 per cent. on the amount of their own notes used for circulation and paid out by them.—18 Statutes at Large, part 3, page 311.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, we shall all, I think, agree that no kind of legislation is more vicious than that which proceeds from partiality or the activity of particular claimants. I know this case, and I shall speak of it only as it belongs to the class of which this instance is one.

The notes which have been referred to were or were not issued and used as circulation. If they were, as much as any other notes they were liable to this tax. If they were not, they were not liable.

The internal-revenue law, speaking to and of this claimant and all others alike, provides three modes of relief in the case of a contested tax, which are hard alike or equitable alike for all alleged sufferers. One is to pay the tax under protest and demand its restitution. Another is to refuse to pay it and allow distraint to be made, and bring an action of trespass against the officer who makes the distraint. The third is to present the equities which are supposed to bear in favor of the tax-payer to the executive branch of the Government, and if the Secretary of the Treasury, the Attorney-General, and a third officer, as I remember the statute, think that rebate or deduction should be made, an offer, which I believe is denominated in the statute a compromise, is accepted and the party acquitted.

Subject to these provisions of the law, it has occurred several times in my own State that firms and corporations have done some such thing as seems to have been done here, although I am bound to say never so broadly as it seems to me was the mode adopted in this instance. All remember, for example, that the New York Central and Hudson River Railway Company issued to its stockholders certain certificates. It was affirmed, on the one hand, that that was a script dividend; on the other, it was stoutly denied. The officers of the Treasury, with somewhat more of energy than would appear in this case, insisted upon the tax. They made distraint of the rolling-stock of the company and sold a great quantity of it. Thereupon the railway company went into the courts of the State of New York as it had a right to do, as this company has a right to go into the courts of the State of Pennsylvania. I hear a Senator say that the company paid the tax; and as that reaches my ears I beg to restate the case to which I refer. They did not pay it; they refused to pay it. They said it was a bald and naked trespass; the Government had no more right to the tax than it had to so much money belonging to them under any other guise. Thereupon the collector of internal revenue issued his warrant prescribed by the statute, and by that warrant the rolling-stock of the railway company was taken and in large quantities sold, so as to amount to the sum total of the tax; whereupon in the courts of New York they brought trespass against the collector, and I was about to say they tried their cause. They did not, because the United States by its district attorney appeared and moved to transfer the case into the national courts. It was transferred, and was tried in the district court, and came up to the Supreme Court, where a new trial was ordered, and they went back and subsequently, as I understand, some proposition that they made was accepted in the way that I indicated before, in which a proposition may be accepted under the statute.

Mr. THURMAN. If the Senator from New York will yield to me for a few moments, I shall be obliged to him.

Mr. CONKLING. Certainly I will.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, I have tried for a good many years in the Senate to do what I thought the national honor, the principles of equity and good policy, if such a thing could be brought into this consideration, required the American Government to do. There have been very many things in the history of this world that no morality could justify; and among those things that no morality could justify is the extortion that the American Government and other governments exacted of the Government of Japan—a government and a people who are attached to America, who are friendly to America, and whose commerce is in the waters of America. Among the exactions enforced by superior power there are few that are less defensible than that by which we extorted from the Japanese Government that contribution which the bill of the Committee on Foreign Relations proposes to return. We claim that this is a government of morality; we claim to be a government of justice; and if we are, how can we defend the retention of this money which no man who ever investigates the subject can say we were justified in taking?

Mr. President, I have argued this question over and over again during the time I have sat in the Senate, and I never have found a majority of the Senate opposed to the view which I entertained. I am very glad that the Committee on Foreign Relations has again reported, as every committee has reported, in favor of doing an act that would shed renown and glory upon the American Republic—the restitution of this money to Japan.

I am admonished that that is not the subject that is before the Senate; yet it is the subject that is before the Senate, because I understand that that bill is laid aside informally in order that some little bill about a tax on some company's checks or some individual's checks shall be remitted. Great God! what is that compared with the question of whether the great American Republic shall be an example to the world of justice? We got this money; we got it when we were not entitled to it; and when the question is between the great American Republic and the rest of the world whether we shall set an example that shall be like a shining light in all the future history of the world, we see it put aside to consider whether Peter Jones shall be excused from a tax on his check or not.

Now, I am in favor of the bill of my friend from Delaware; I will vote for it, and I hope the Senate will pass it right away and let Peter Jones and all those companies on Lake Superior who wished to issue $6,000,000 in notes be exempted from taxation, for I do not think a man ought to be taxed because he drew a check for his debt. But, Mr. President, is it not time for us to consider the question of whether this great Republic shall set an example that the world has never yet set, an example that ought to be set? When a great government has found that it has an advantage over a weak government, shall it wait and hold on to its ill-gotten gain, or shall it make restitution? Oh, Mr. President, never in the history of this world of ours will there have been such an example set in favor of morality, in favor of honesty, in favor of what I believe to be the true policy, as we shall set when we say to the Government of Japan, "We obtained from you what we ought not to have obtained, and we return it."

It may be that there is no such thing as morality in government; it may be that the strongest may do what they can; but we in America have thought that with our system of government there was a higher standard of morality; we have thought it behooved the great Republic of the world to set an example of morality and virtue as well as an example of strength.

Sir, I wish to say this night, after having studied this question again and again for twelve years, that no such bright example in history in this world will have been exhibited as when we have restored to Japan the money we had no right to extort from her.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, whenever the distinguished leader of the democratic party takes ground in favor of doing what is right, I feel bound to join in following, and therefore I shall vote with the honorable Senator to refund this money in the interest which he has referred to so eloquently and so impressively. In the mean time, that we may be able to refund to Japan the money which the Senator says we ought not to have taken, I want to devote a moment to retaining, if I can, in the Treasury that which may be found necessary in the rendition of this very payment.

I had referred to an instance of a tax imposed in which the corporation at whom it was leveled went into court and obtained a verdict of a jury giving them back something more than a half million dollars on the ground that the tax was erroneously imposed. Manifestly, if we follow the report of the Committee on Finance, in place of resorting to the courts, that company should have come here and asked that by legislation interrupting and arresting not only existing proceedings but overthrowing a judgment of the Internal Revenue Bureau we should make immediate restitution to it.

I might put other cases which have fallen within my own observation in which this should have been done if it be right to do it in the instance now before the Senate. I think it was not right. It never occurred to me to advise any of the people who have been caught in instances of this sort that without going to the courts in either of the modes prescribed, without going to the three officers if they are three to whose discretion it is committed to accept compromises, they could come to Congress and by an act of legislation proceed to do such a thing. I said, and again I want to say, that this case, as I understand it, is not so clear as most of the other instances in behalf of the claimants. These notes, if I understand them, were notes issued and notes used as circulation——

Mr. BAYARD, and Mr. CAMERON of Pennsylvania. They were not.

Mr. CONKLING. Before either Senator corrects me, I beg him to loan me the form of the note, and before I read it I will say that it is not only a note issued by a corporation as circulation and used as circulation, but it is a note on its face a legal tender as between the person who used it and the person who received it.

Mr. COCKRELL. A legal-tender between the company and its employés?

Mr. CONKLING. If the Senator will be patient with me I will read the whole of it. I would not say what I have said unless I thought I knew what I am talking about. I say before reading it that it is not the instance of issuing to operatives an I O U or a certificate of indebtedness; on the contrary it is the emission of a volume of currency reaching nearly five million dollars, in denominations each note of $10, all alike, discarding all fractions, which on its face is irreconcilably repugnant to the idea that it was ever issued in the precise amount of accounts due for wages to different operatives. What was the form of this note?

Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company. Wages certificate No. —. Philadelphia, September 18, 1879.

The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company promises to pay to the bearer hereof the sum of $10 on the 21st day of February, 1880, with interest from date, without defalcation, for value received.

This note is for wages due from the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company and will be received, either before or at its maturity, for the amount due thereon in payment for freight and toll bills of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, for coal bills of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, or any other debts due to either of the said companies.

Is not that a legal tender by contract between these parties, to wit, the corporation that issues the notes and the bearer whoever the bearer may be, and in addition the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, a second corporation, which did not emit the note and which in some business arrangement stood in such privity with the corporation that did that the issuing corporation undertook to speak for it also and to say that the note should operate as a legal tender not only against the corporation which did issue it but against this other corporation as well?

Now, Mr. President, of this, four million eight hundred and odd thousand dollars in amount was issued, all in notes of $10 each alike, and all on their face and by their agreement performing every one of the functions of money between the parties and also between them and a third party. What does the statute say? That any corporation which issues notes which are used—not bank notes; not notes in the similitude or likeness of bank notes; but promissory notes which are used as circulation, shall pay a certain tax. That is the statute. A corporation emits nearly five million dollars in round numbers, not of notes in variety, not of notes to pay to any person the amount due to him, but notes all alike of $10 each, and says these notes are receivable for all debts whatsoever by the Reading Railway Company and also by the Reading Coal and Iron Company, another corporation, for freights, for tolls, for the carrying of coal, or for any other debt whatsoever.

It is not my business to express an opinion, and although the form of my statement may indicate it I do not intend to venture an opinion, whether the courts would decide that these notes are or are not exempt from taxation. That I conceive to be beside the purpose, for I can hardly think that the Senate on ex parte testimony and ex parte argument, or without any testimony, would take up and undertake judicially to pass upon a question of that sort. It is enough for me to know that here is a case presenting doubts so grave as this, and further to know that all other parties in any respect in like instance as far as I know, certainly those in my own State, have gone as they were compelled to go to the courts and litigated the question and had the courts decide whether they were liable to taxation or not. If they say they are not liable certainly there is a reasonable presumption that the court will decide the law as it is. Is there anything else that can be said? It is irksome to pay this tax; it is a hardship. Certainly it is. It is one of the hard features of the internal-revenue laws, not applicable to these parties more than to any other, but applicable to all parties alike; and now how can it be said that because a corporation or an individual has, in one House or the other House of Congress, somebody whose relations are such that they are able to get a hearing, which others might not be able to get, therefore this case shall be taken ex gregɔ, picked out of the flock, and all other persons remitted to the courts and these persons by a single act of legislation be exonerated?

I cannot see that any such thing ought to be done, and the more clear the matter is to this claimant, the more easy it is to go to the courts, the more easy it is to go to those officers who have the power to compromise if they want to pay a part; but I submit that unless other parties are to be treated in this way, it will hardly do, in presence of the fact that the Internal Revenue Department is insisting upon these things continually and the calendars of the courts illustrating the controversies to which they gave rise, for us just with the strong hand to assume this case and undertake to dismiss this tax without any opportunity, even if this was the proper place to do it, to investigate and understand its merits.

I have one other remark to make. My honorable friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON] says to me that the company did not treat this note as circulation. Who knows anything about that? I mean in the sense that any court must act upon it.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I know from statements of officers of the company that the notes when they came in were canceled.

Mr. CONKLING. My honorable friend discloses now that he means one thing and I mean another. Does the honorable Senator consider the notes of the Bank of England circulating notes?

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I believe their habit is to destroy them.

Mr. CONKLING. My honorable friend, acute as he always is, sees the point, and I do not want to say much about that. I say all the notes emitted by the greatest bank on this planet, whenever they once come back to the counter of that bank, never cross it again; but does anybody doubt that they are circulating notes?

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. That is a matter of protection.

Mr. CONKLING. And then on the matter of protection; my honorable friend refers me to an equivalent fact. He says that when these certificates came back and reached the till of this corporation and were paid they were not put out again. Very likely. In the mean time what did the notes do, the ten-dollar notes constituting a total of nearly five million dollars payable to bearer, put into everybody's hands as a legal tender to the corporation for every conceivable debt? Is not that a circulating medium? Is not that a symbol of value? Is not that of the very essence of the function of circulation? Why, Mr. President, suppose it were provided, as it has as to some of them, that whenever a legal-tender note of the United States after its long, sinuous pilgrimage through the pockets of the people, comes back to the Treasury it should not be reissued?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I ask the Senator if these notes were at all different from a promissory note which I give to my creditor who chooses to use it; a promissory note payable at some future time, drawing interest? Can it be distinguished at all from the promissory note of an individual, my own or any other individual's, payable at a future time, drawing interest, which may be used by the party to whom I give it in the payment of some debt which he owes? I want to know what is the difference between the character of this note and the character of an ordinary promissory note?

Mr. CONKLING. There is a radical difference. In the first place, the honorable Senator is not a corporation, and we are dealing with a statute which refers to corporations. The Senator is not a corporation; he is not two corporations. Here is an instance of a large corporation carrying on a varied business with many persons. It issues a note, not like the Senator's note for a specific and exact sum of money due, but it issues a great body of ten-dollar notes; it makes them payable to bearer, and it says in the body of the note, as the Senator being an individual, a natural person, could not say with practical effect, that all these notes are receivable for every manner of debt or obligation by the one corporation which issues them in all its agencies and extensions and also by another corporation engaged in a different and various business. Here is the section and I read the operative words leaving out banks:

> Every corporation shall pay a like tax of 10 per cent. on the amount of notes used for circulation and paid out by them.

These are the operative words "used for circulation and paid out by them." Here are these notes—480,000 individual notes of $10 each. That I submit to the honorable Senator from Delaware is not like his one note to me for $55.53, if that is what he happens to owe me, or his check for that sum; 480,000 different notes all of the same amount, all payable to bearer, and all saying to all the bearers in Christendom that in their hands they are good in all the activities and business and branches of two great corporations for any debt whatever. Is not that circulation? Is not that the act of circulating?

Mr. SAULSBURY. Would that be any more circulation than if a company of men associated together in the mercantile business should give their note to a party who takes to them his produce and sells it and they buy it payable in notes and receive the notes in payment for hardware, or any other article in their line sold by them? Such a note goes out, it passes from hand to hand. I ask if one of these notes was any more circulation than an order that is payable in a particular article which the party may be engaged in the sale of?

Mr. CONKLING. I will answer the Senator by another supposition, if he will allow me. Suppose a number of persons associated in the dry goods business; a familiar illustration would be A. T. Stewart & Co. Suppose they agree that they will issue checks of the denomination of $10, 480,000 of them in number, and put on those checks that they shall run for a certain time, and then say that until that time and after that time, for that is what this says, both before and after maturity, they should be receivable by that mercantile association for all and all manner of debts. Will the honorable Senator from Delaware tell me that $4,800,000 of these pieces of paper, put out to circulate, stated on their face so that they might circulate not only till their maturity but afterwards, is not a circulating medium?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should think the purpose for which they were issued had much to do with determining their character, whether they were a circulating medium or not.

Mr. CONKLING. If this mercantile association were in debt as is stated here, and they issued them to pay their debts in the first instance? Take that case.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Describing them as certificates given for indebtedness of the company?

Mr. CONKLING. Certainly.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not see that they fall under the clear, obvious meaning of that statute.

Mr. CONKLING. Will the Senator pardon me a moment?

Mr. SAULSBURY. The Senator will allow me.

Mr. CONKLING. But just at that point I am seeking light as the Senator seems to be. I shall get it, though he may fail. If the Senator writes in his check that it is given for an indebtedness, does he think that changes the nature of it? If he puts in his promissory note not only that this is for value received but that he has given it for an indebtedness, does he think that that changes the character of that piece of paper?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I think that has much to do with determining the character whether it was intended as a circulating medium or not. The object of that statute was to prevent any corporation from giving its obligations to be used as a circulating medium to pass from hand to hand in order to increase its own business; but I understand that these certificates of indebtedness were actually delivered to persons to whom the corporation was indebted. They were to pay that which the money in their coffers would not allow them to pay. Therefore their object in issuing the certificates was not to escape from any taxation properly attaching to their operations, but it was simply to discharge their debts to their operatives, and in the hands of their operatives these certificates were good to buy coal, to pay for freight, to buy anything which the company had to sell.

Mr. CONKLING. For all debts?

Mr. SAULSBURY. For all debts to the company.

Mr. CONKLING. Suppose these notes had recited that they were issued for borrowed money or issued to borrow money on, would that in the estimation of the Senator change their character?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I think it would, because that would be an operation by which the parties sought to obtain money for business purposes, in order that they might make money; but the object of these notes, as I understand, was simply to discharge the obligation which they owed to their employés. If they were in the hands of the employés, it is true they would enable their employés to buy such coal or iron or other things as the company had to dispose of, or to pay freight, or pay any indebtedness due to the company. I think the object had much to do in determining what their real character was.

Mr. CONKLING. The honorable Senator has made as clear no doubt as it can be made the distinction which he thinks he sees. I cannot see it. The only shadow of distinction that I see makes the other way in considering the immunities and privileges to which commercial paper is entitled. A case in which it is received for money paid at the time places it upon a higher footing than it has in the instance of being received in payment of a debt. The Senator reverses that and he says that if I, an individual, put out my checks in order to borrow money upon them, with which money I am going to take and pay my debts, that would be one thing; but if I say on their face that they are issued to pay my debts, then, although I do the same thing with them, that would be a different case.

I submit, Mr. President, that distinction is without a difference. The question all the time is whether a corporation issued these 480,000 pieces of paper to be used as circulation. If they did not intend them for that purpose, I think the phraseology is nonsensical; it was absurd to make payable to bearer and to provide expressly that they might be used if they did not intend that they should be. How the fact was we know nothing except that the Senator from Pennsylvania says that they were treated as every note of the Bank of England is treated without exception, namely, when they at last came back to the counter of the corporation that issued them, those notes went out no more, they were canceled. Unquestionably they never could have come back if they had not been used; they never could have found their way there if they had not been used.

But as I said before, it seems to me that is not the question before the Senate. The question is whether in the instance of existing proceedings Congress will interfere and set aside the pending adjudication of the Department, at least of the Internal Revenue Bureau; and I have heard—perhaps I ought not to say it in this debate—that the head of the Internal Revenue Bureau is not the only officer of the Government who has adjudicated this; I am told that this very question has been before the Law Department of the Government, and yet in spite of what is said, not referring it to the courts, not sending it where all other claimants are obliged to go, it is proposed that we take this up as an arbitrary act, because we have the power, and dismiss the whole thing.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Will the Senator from New York allow me to say a word?

Mr. CONKLING. Certainly.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. My attention was called to this claim of the Government against the Reading Railroad Company some time since. I called, with the attorney of the Reading Railroad Company, upon the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to ask the officials to take it into court. They declined to settle the matter in that way. They required the company first to pay the money assessed as a tax. That was the statement of the Department; first the company must pay the money, and then bring suit to recover it. The Senator knows more about the law than I do, of course; but I know something about the merits of this case. The Reading Railroad Company, as every Senator probably knows, met with great pecuniary embarrassment. It had ten or twelve thousand employés, with no money in its coffers to pay them. To enable them to get their daily pay, it took this mode of relieving these people from distress and from starvation. Having done that, it probably admits a technical violation of the law, and comes to Congress and asks for relief, having relieved these people. That is the whole case in a nutshell. It was a good act on the part of the Reading Railraad Company, and deserves recognition from Congress, in my judgment.

Mr. CONKLING. Mr. President, I agree with every word that the honorable Senator from Pennsylvania has said. He has put this case in the most persuasive way and has put it in a way that I suppose, if addressed as the statute permits it to be to the officers of the Government whose business it is to pass upon this, the Attorney-General, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue, it can hardly be possible on a state of facts like that that the Government as thus represented would stand upon a technical point. But when they come and ask us to adjudge that as matter of law, as has been argued here, this tax is not due and that we are going so to decide, that is a horse of a very different color. It is a decision that would fly in the face of other decisions made by courts and made by the Internal Revenue Department, and therefore I say that this bill in this form ought not to be adopted.

My honorable friend told us that he went, very properly and very kindly, with the representatives of this corporation and presented the question to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and although the Senator himself took the trouble to go there and although we know that his going secured the attention and the friendly attention of this officer, what did he say? That he, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, standing upon the law and sworn to execute it, could do nothing except to insist upon this tax, thereby affirming in the most solemn manner his judgment that the law covered the tax.

Now, change the argument. Present to the officers of the Government the meritorious and praiseworthy act to which the honorable Senator has referred; dismiss technicalities, and say "Conceding that technically the tax is due, we ask to adjust this upon fair principles, right between man and man, right on the part of officials who have a heart to feel and a head to think," and then if the officials refuse to do that and you come here with a bill not trampling the law under foot but proposing to accept a fair compromise, I will say to the honorable Senator in advance, without meaning to make any technical pledge, that he will find me by his side for doing a fair and liberal thing; but that is no reason why we should undertake to adjudge in this case that on facts like these the Government is technically wrong and that no tax is due.

Mr. BALDWIN. Will the Senator having this bill in charge kindly consent to lay it aside temporarily for a moment that the Senate may give present consideration to the bill that will take not more than a minute?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan asks consent of the Senate to lay this bill aside temporarily, in order to take up another indicated by him.

Mr. BALDWIN. It is a bill which will not take more than a minute. This is the first time during the session, I believe, that I have asked such a favor.

Mr. BAYARD. The joint resolution for the relief of the Reading Railroad Company is before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is before the Senate, and the Senator from Michigan asks that it be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. BAYARD. I hope not.

Mr. BALDWIN. The bill I ask to take up will excite no discussion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAYARD. Yes, sir, this resolution must go on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware objects to the request of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. KERNAN. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. HARRIS. Had we not better take a recess?

Mr. KERNAN. Allow me to make a statement? We have accepted the invitation of the House of Representatives to attend the services ordered this evening in commemoration of Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, and I presume we cannot properly sit here while they are going on. That is the reason why I must insist on the motion. If it were not for that I would yield for a recess.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York insist on his motion to adjourn?

Mr. KERNAN. I yield for a moment to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. EATON. I ask that the bill which was under consideration when I gave way temporarily to the Senator from Delaware be taken up so that it may be the order of the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has a right to call it up it having been informally laid aside subject to his call. The title of the bill will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund."

Mr. KERNAN. I renew my motion that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at six o'clock and eight minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 28, 1881.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by Rev. DAVID WILLS, chaplain United States Army.

The Journal of Saturday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, announced the passage of the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, with amendments, in which concurrence was requested.

It further announced the passage of the following bill and joint resolution, without amendment:

A bill (H. R. No. 6717) for allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department; and Joint resolution (H. R. No. 401) in relation to the barge W. J. Spicer.

DECADENCE OF AMERICAN COMMERCE.

Mr. REAGAN. I rise to a privileged question. On Saturday the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. RUSSELL,] by unanimous consent, presented the report of the sub-committee of the Committee on Commerce, authorized under House resolution of June 4, 1879, to inquire into the causes of the decadence of the merchant marine; which was ordered to be printed and recommitted. The Journal makes no statement of the fact that the minority of the committee had leave to print with the majority report the views of the minority. I do not know whether it is necessary that fact should appear upon the Journal; but I ask the question?

The SPEAKER. The RECORD and Journal are exactly in accord. There seems to have been no privilege given to the minority to present their views. The Chair will now ask, by unanimous consent, that the views of the minority may be allowed to be presented and printed in connection with the report of the committee.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The previous question prevailing, the yeas and nays have been ordered on an amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the following proviso in relation to the Columbian Institution for the Deaf and Dumb:

"Provided, Hereafter one-half of the expenses of this institution shall be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Speaker, I do not think the House understands the effect of that provision.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the recommendation of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, which is to strike out the proviso just read.

Mr. HUNTON. If there is an explanation desired of the effect of this proviso I will make it for the gentleman.

Mr. ATKINS. I do not suppose the gentleman wants us to vote in the dark upon it.

Mr. HUNTON. By no means.

Mr. ATKINS. Unless the effect of that amendment is clearly explained to the House I shall feel it my duty to decline to vote.

Mr. ROBESON. Mr. Speaker, those who vote "ay" vote to strike out the proviso; those who vote "no," to retain it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already so stated.

Mr. STEPHENS. Let the whole text be read as it will stand if that paragraph is stricken out.

The amendment was again reported.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 136, noes 106, not voting 48; as follows:

YEAS—136.

Aiken,	Deering,	Kenna,	Ryon, John W.
Aldrich, N. W.	Dick,	Ketcham,	Sapp,
Aldrich, William	Dunnell,	King,	Sawyer,
Bailey,	Dwight,	Lapham,	Scoville,
Ballou,	Ellis,	Lindsey,	Shelley,
Barber,	Errett,	Manning,	Sherwin,
Bayne,	Ferdon,	Martin, Benj. F.	Singleton, J. W.
Belford,	Fisher,	Martin, Edward L.	Slemons,
Beltzhoover,	Forsythe,	Mason,	Smith, A. Herr
Bicknell,	Frye,	McCook,	Smith, William H.
Bisbee,	Gibson,	McGowan,	Speer,
Blake,	Gillette,	McKinley,	Starin,
Bowman,	Goode,	McLane,	Stephens,
Boyd,	Hammond, John	Miles,	Stone,
Brigham,	Harmer,	Miller,	Talbott,
Browne,	Harris, Benj. W.	Money,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Buckner,	Harris, John T.	Monroe,	Thomas,
Butterworth,	Hawk,	Neal,	Thompson, W. G.
Calkins,	Hawley,	Newberry,	Townsend, Amos
Camp,	Hayes,	Norcross,	Tucker,
Carpenter,	Hazelton,	O'Neill,	Updegraff, J. T.
Caswell,	Heilman,	O'Reilly,	Urner,
Chalmers,	Henkle,	Orth,	Valentine,
Chittenden,	Hiscock,	Osmer,	Van Aernam,
Clardy,	Horr,	Overton,	Voorhis,
Conger.	Hubbell,	Pacheco,	Ward,
Cowgill,	Humphrey,	Page,	Washburn,
Crapo,	Hunton,	Price,	Wilber,
Crowley,	Johnston,	Ray,	Willits,
Daggett,	Jones,	Reed,	Wise,
Davidson,	Jorgensen,	Rice,	Wood,
Davis, George R.	Joyce,	Robertson,	Yocum,
Davis, Horace	Keifer,	Robeson,	Young, Casey
De La Matyr,	Kelley,	Robinson,	Young, Thomas L.

NAYS—106.

Acklen,	Bland,	Burrows,	Clements,
Anderson,	Blount,	Cabell,	Clymer,
Armfield,	Bouck,	Caldwell,	Cobb,
Atherton,	Bragg,	Cannon,	Coffroth,
Atkins,	Brewer,	Carlisle,	Colerick,
Berry,	Briggs,	Clark, Alvah A.	Converse,
Blackburn,	Bright,	Clark, John B.	Cook,

Cox,	Hill,	Phelps,	Thompson, P. B.
Cravens,	Hooker,	Philips,	Tillman,
Culberson,	Hostetler,	Phister,	Turner, Oscar
Davis, Lowndes H.	Hutchins,	Poehler,	Turner, Thomas
Deuster,	Kimmel,	Prescott,	Updegraff, Thomas
Dibrell,	Klotz,	Reagan,	Vance,
Dickey,	Knott,	Richardson, J. S.	Van Voorhis,
Dunn,	Ladd,	Richmond,	Weaver,
Elam,	Le Fevre,	Ross,	Wellborn,
Evins,	Lounsbery,	Rothwell,	Wells,
Felton,	Lowe,	Ryan, Thomas	White,
Forney,	McCoid,	Samford,	Whiteaker,
Frost,	McKenzie,	Scales,	Whitthorne,
Gunter,	McMahon,	Simonton,	Williams, Thomas
Hall,	McMillin,	Smith, Hezekiah B.	Willis,
Hammond, N. J.	Mills,	Sparks,	Wilson,
Haskell,	Morrison,	Springer,	Wright,
Hatch,	Muldrow,	Steele,	Yeates.
Herbert,	New,	Stevenson,
Herndon,	Nicholls,	Taylor, Robert L.

NOT VOTING—48.

Bachman,	Ford,	Loring,	Richardson, D. P.
Baker,	Fort,	Marsh,	Russell, Daniel L.
Barlow,	Geddes,	Mitchell,	Russell, Wm. A.
Beale,	Godshalk,	Morse,	Shallenberger,
Bingham,	Henderson,	Morton,	Singleton, O. R.
Bliss,	Henry,	Muller,	Townshend, R. W.
Claflin,	Houk,	Murch,	Tyler,
Covert,	House,	Myers,	Upson,
Davis, Joseph J.	Hurd,	O'Brien,	Waddill,
Einstein,	James,	O'Connor,	Wait,
Ewing,	Killinger,	Persons,	Warner,
Finley,	Kitchin,	Pound,	Williams, C. G.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask consent to record my vote.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not appear to have answered to his name on either call of the roll.

Mr. FORD. I was present in the House during the roll-call.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to ask unanimous consent if the gentleman failed to respond to his name when it was called.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. JAMES with Mr. O'BRIEN.

Mr. EINSTEIN, on all political questions, with Mr. MULLER.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi, with Mr. POUND.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Wisconsin, with Mr. GEDDES.

Mr. HENDERSON with Mr. TOWNSHEND of Illinois.

Mr. ORTH with Mr. MYERS.

Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, and Mr. UPSON, on this vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 1162 insert the following:

"To supply district judges and district attorneys, who have not already received the same, with the reports of the Supreme Court and Statutes at Large of the United States, and also to furnish complete sets of the same where there are none, at such points where United States courts are authorized to be held, and to supply broken sets where there are missing volumes, a sufficient sum of money is hereby appropriated."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole, as follows:

To enable the Attorney-General to provide for the preservation of the records of the United States courts at Frankfort, Kentucky, by rebinding, indexing, and arranging the same under his direction, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole, as follows:

After the amendment just reported insert the following:

"For the purpose of preparing and publishing the reports of the supreme court of the Territory of Wyoming during the March term, 1878 to 1881, $1,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole, as follows:

In line 1214, after the word "rejection," insert the following:

"Provided, That the commissioners on the part of the United States shall be instructed to agree to no adjustment which does not recognize silver coin as a part of the money system of the governments joining in such conference."

Mr. WARNER. I ask the attention of the House on that question. It is inconsistent with the rest of the provisions of that paragraph. If the House will allow me a moment to explain the reason of this objection——

Mr. BLOUNT. I object.

Mr. WARNER. I call for a division upon this proposition.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 55, noes 85.

Mr. BLAND. I demand tellers.

Tellers were not ordered, seventeen members only voting in favor thereof.

So the amendment as reported from the Committee of the Whole was disagreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay to the officers and employés of the House of Representatives borne on the annual roll on the 15th day of June, 1880, one month's extra pay at the compensation then paid them by law, which sum shall be immediately available.

Mr. KEIFER. I desire to ask unanimous consent of the House to strike out from the amendment of the Committee of the Whole the words "15th day of June" and insert in lieu thereof "the 1st day of July." My object in doing this is to include others who would be omitted under the provisions of the amendment as at present incorporated in the bill, and who are just as much entitled to the one month's extra pay as those who will receive it under the terms of the amendment as it stands.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman contemplate the insertion in this of the session employés as well?

Mr. KEIFER. No, sir; that is not the effect of it. It has no reference to the session employés.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. I propose to further perfect the text.

The SPEAKER. It can be done only by unanimous consent.

Mr. WHITE. Let the proposed modification be read. I reserve the right to object to it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman reserves the right to object.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. I wish to perfect the amendment further by adding after the change suggested by the gentleman from Ohio the words "and the 1st day of March, 1881."

The SPEAKER. It might perhaps be better to have the corrections made in the Senate.

Mr. BLOUNT. I hope the gentleman from Ohio will accept the modification of the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. WHITE. Let the amendment first be read as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] now proposes to amend it.

The Clerk read as follows:

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay to the officers and employés of the House of Representatives borne on the annual roll on the 1st day of July, 1880, one month's extra pay at the compensation then paid them by law, which sum shall be immediately available.

Mr. BLOUNT. I shall not object if the gentleman accepts the modification suggested by the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. KEIFER. Let this be agreed to first, and then I will make the request to add the words proposed by the gentleman from Delaware.

The SPEAKER. The proposition of the gentleman from Ohio is to strike out the words "the 15th day of June" and to insert in lieu thereof "the 1st day of July," the effect of which the Chair is unable to state.

Mr. KEIFER. The effect of this is to include those who were on the roll on the 1st of July and not before that time; those who went into the folding-room and worked all through the vacation.

Mr. ARMFIELD. I object to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio unless that of the gentleman from Delaware be also admitted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot entertain an objection qualified in that way. The gentleman has a right to object absolutely, and that would put an end to the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ARMFIELD. I do not insist on the objection.

Mr. KEIFER. If there be no objection to my proposition I will make the further request——

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the gentleman from Ohio being permitted to offer the amendment to strike out "the 15th day of June" and insert "the 1st day of July?"

There was no objection.

Mr. KEIFER. Now I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. MCMILLIN. I object to any further amendment.

Mr. KEIFER. I ask unanimous consent to add——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee objects to any further amendment.

Mr. KEIFER. He has not heard my proposition.

The SPEAKER. He objects, nevertheless.

Mr. KEIFER. He will not object to my making a proposition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair objects to that; because it is a needless taking up of time after objection has been made.

Mr. HATCH. I demand the regular order.

The question being taken on Mr. KEIFER'S amendment to the amendment, it was agreed to.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I withdraw my objection to the other proposition.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH] has demanded the regular order, which practically cuts off any further amendment.

Mr. HATCH. My object in demanding the regular order was that the matter should be stated and voted on without discussion. My objection was to any further waste of time.

Mr. KLOTZ. I ask unanimous consent to add the Capitol police.

Mr. VANCE. And the watchmen.

Mr. HAYES. I demand the regular order. I object to any further amendment. All this can be done in the Senate if necessary.

The question being taken on the amendment of the Committee of the Whole as amended, it was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

After the amendment just adopted, insert:

"That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Charles Diemar a sum equal to one month's pay at the date of his discharge from the disabled soldiers' roll."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

After line 1235 insert "to be made immediately available."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

After line 1238 insert "which amount shall be immediately available."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

After line 1242 insert "M. P. O'Connor, $2,000; E. W. M. Mackey, $2,000."

Mr. ATHERTON. I will require a separate vote on each of the amendments relating to contested-election cases unless I can have the consent of the House to have one vote taken upon them all. I think we can economize the time of the House and accomplish everything we desire by taking a yea-and-nay vote on all the amendments together that propose to increase the amounts in contested-election cases. If that cannot be agreed to, I will demand a separate vote on each amendment.

The SPEAKER. An amendment coming from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union cannot be divided; and the Chair does not know any way in which an aggregate of amendments can be voted on in the way suggested.

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for the regular order. We will get through more quickly by proceeding regularly.

Mr. WHITE. Just one moment. There are a number of amendments of the same character. I suggest we shall have two votes, one against all the amendments relating to expenses of contested-election cases inserted by the Committee of the Whole, and another separate yea-and-nay vote on all amendments which appropriate more than $2,000.

The SPEAKER. There is no way in which that can be done under the rule; an amendment coming from the Committee of the Whole must be voted on in its entirety.

Mr. WHITE. I have made the proposition in order to save time. Two yea-and-nay votes, I think, would settle the principle.

Mr. BLOUNT. I insist on the regular order.

Mr. WHITE. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

On the question of ordering the yeas and nays, there were—ayes 4; not a sufficient number.

So the yeas and nays were not ordered; and the amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

After line 1244, insert:
"To pay John J. Wilson, $750; J. C. Holmes, $750; James McCabe, $500."

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, there were—ayes 75, noes 77.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for tellers.

On the question of ordering tellers, there were ayes 26.

The SPEAKER. Tellers are not ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER. Let the other side be counted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman on the question of ordering tellers is not entitled to have the other side counted, because the rule requires one-fifth of a quorum, namely, thirty members, to order tellers. The gentleman can call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPRINGER. This is as good a case as any for a test, and I call for the yeas and nays.

On the question of ordering the yeas and nays there were—ayes 17; not a sufficient number.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for tellers on the yeas and nays.

Tellers on the yeas and nays were not ordered.

So the yeas and nays were not ordered; and the amendment was not agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read by the Clerk, as follows:

After line 1254 insert:
"E. Moody Boynton, $2,000.
"Godlove S. Orth, $500."

Mr. SPRINGER. Those are two separate amendments and should be voted upon separately.

Mr. HAYES. Do they not come from the Committee of the Whole as one amendment?

THE SPEAKER. The Clerk informs the Chair they were offered as separate amendments and adopted by separate votes. The question will be taken upon agreeing to the first amendment.

The first amendment was as follows:

E. Moody Boyton, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to upon a division—ayes 96, noes 18; no further count being called for.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was read, as follows:

Godlove S. Orth, $500.

Mr. SPARKS. The proposition to pay McCabe, the contestant, was voted down.

Mr. PHISTER. We either ought to give McCabe $500 or else not pay either.

Many MEMBERS. Regular order!

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

The question was taken upon agreeing to the amendment, and upon a division there were—ayes 91, noes 42.

Before the result of the vote was announced,

Mr. SPARKS called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPRINGER. I hope the yeas and nays will not be taken, but that we will agree to include—[cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, there being but 3 in the affirmative.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was as follows:

To pay Frank Galt, assistant to the journal clerk, his salary for December, 1880, and up to and including January 27, 1881, at $6 per day, the pay of a committee clerk, $318, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was to insert after line 1264 of the bill the following:

A. G. Curtin, $8,000; Seth H. Yocum, $8,000.

Mr. BLOUNT. Upon agreeing to that amendment I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, there being 49 in the affirmative; more than one-fifth of the last vote.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 124, nays 103, not voting 63; as follows:

YEAS—124.

Acklen,	Converse,	Keifer,	Ryon, John W.
Aldrich, William	Cowgill,	Kelley,	Sapp,
Anderson,	Crowley,	Kenna,	Sawyer,
Atkins,	Daggett,	Klotz,	Shallenberger,
Bachman,	Davidson,	Ladd,	Sherwin,
Bailey,	Davis, George R.	Lindsey,	Slemons,
Baker,	Davis, Horace	Lowe,	Speer,
Barber,	De La Matyr,	Manning,	Springer,
Bayne,	Dunnell,	Mason,	Starin,
Belford,	Dwight,	McCook,	Stephens,
Beltzhoover,	Errett,	McGowan,	Stevenson,
Bingham,	Ferdon,	McKinley,	Talbott,
Bisbee,	Finley,	Miller,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Blackburn,	Fisher,	Monroe,	Thompson, W. G.
Blake,	Ford,	Morton,	Townsend, Amos
Bliss,	Forsythe,	Muldrow,	Turner, Thomas
Boyd,	Gillette,	Norcross,	Tyler,
Brigham,	Goode,	O'Neill,	Updegraff, Thomas
Burrows,	Harmer,	O'Reilly,	Van Aernam,
Butterworth,	Haskell,	Osmer,	Vance,
Caldwell,	Hawk,	Overton,	Voorhis,
Calkins,	Hawley,	Pacheco,	Ward,
Camp,	Hazelton,	Page,	Weaver,
Cannon,	Heilman,	Phister,	Williams, C. G.
Carpenter,	Hiscock,	Ray,	Willits,
Caswell,	Horr,	Reed,	Wilson,
Claflin,	Hubbell,	Richardson, J. S.	Wise,
Clark, Alvah A.	Humphrey,	Richmond,	Wood,
Coffroth,	Hunton,	Robeson,	Wright,
Colerick,	Jones,	Rothwell,	Yeates,
Conger,	Jorgensen,	Ryan, Thomas	Young, Thomas L.

NAYS—103.

Aiken,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Le Fevre,	Scales,
Aldrich, N. W.	Deuster,	Lounsbery,	Scoville,
Armfield,	Dibrell,	Martin, Benj. F.	Shelley,
Atherton,	Dickey,	Martin, Edward L.	Simonton,
Beale,	Dunn,	McKenzie,	Smith, A. Herr
Berry,	Elam,	McLane,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bicknell,	Evins,	McMahon,	Smith, William E.
Bland,	Felton,	McMillin,	Sparks,
Blount,	Forney,	Miles,	Steele,
Bouck,	Geddes,	Mills,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bowman,	Gunter,	Morrison,	Thomas,
Bragg,	Hall,	Morse,	Thompson, P. B.
Briggs,	Hammond, N. J.	Myers,	Tillman,
Bright,	Harris, John T.	New,	Turner, Oscar
Buckner,	Hatch,	Nicholls,	Updegraff, J. T.
Cabell,	Herbert,	Persons,	Van Voorhis,
Chalmers,	Herndon,	Phelps,	Wait,
Chittenden,	Hill,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Clardy,	Hooker,	Poehler,	Wells,
Clark, John B.	Hostetler,	Prescott,	White,
Clements,	Johnston,	Reagan,	Whiteaker,
Cobb,	Joyce,	Rice,	Whitthorne,
Cook,	Ketcham,	Richardson, D. P.	Wilber,
Crapo,	Kimmel,	Robinson,	Williams, Thomas
Cravens,	King,	Ross,	Willis.
Culberson,	Lapham,	Samford,

NOT VOTING—63.

Ballou,	Frye,	Knott,	Russell, Daniel L.
Barlow,	Gibson,	Loring,	Russell, W. A.
Brewer,	Godshalk,	Marsh,	Singleton, J. W.
Browne,	Hammond, John	McCoid,	Singleton, O. R.
Carlisle,	Harris, Benj. W.	Mitchell,	Stone,
Clymer,	Hayes,	Money,	Townshend, R. W.
Covert,	Henderson,	Muller,	Tucker,
Cox,	Henkle,	Murch,	Upson,
Davis, Joseph J.	Henry,	Neal,	Urner,
Deering,	Houk,	Newberry,	Valentine,
Dick,	House,	O'Brien,	Waddill,
Einstein,	Hurd,	O'Connor,	Warner,
Ellis,	Hutchins,	Orth,	Washburn,
Ewing,	James,	Pound,	Yocum,
Fort,	Killinger,	Price,	Young, Casey.
Frost,	Kitchin,	Robertson,

So the amendment was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. ELLIS with Mr. MITCHELL, on this vote.

Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, with Mr. UPSON, on the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. MONEY with Mr. STARIN, for this day, on all questions except to make a quorum.

Mr. URNER with Mr. DICK, on this vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. KEIFER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. WEAVER. I ask consent to print in the RECORD some remarks on the amendment just adopted.

There was no objection. [See following.]

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit a few remarks touching the amendment to pay the expenses in the contested-election case of Curtin vs. Yocum. This was an extraordinary case. There were over twenty-four hundred witnesses examined and over ten thousand pages of printed matter submitted in this case to the consideration of the committee. The Election Committee concluded to recommend the allowance of $8,500 to each of these contestants, although the sworn vouchers on file with the committee establish the fact that Andrew G. Curtin expended in legitimate costs the sum of $14,842, and that Seth H. Yocum expended the sum of $13,213.01.

Now, this amendment only allows the parties about one-half of their actual legitimate expenses. It is a case of extreme hardship. The whole country is interested that no man shall retain his seat here who is not honestly elected, and we must all protect the purity of this body; and yet in this instance, even after paying the sum authorized in this amendment, we are protecting the interests of the whole people and the dignity of this House at the expense of these parties. The following tables will show the items of expenditure of both the contestant and contestee, though other items expended, not herein exhibited, would increase the amount several thousand dollars:

Hon. A. G. Curtin vs. Hon. S. H. Yocum. Contested-election case. Twentieth district of Pennsylvania.

Contestee's bill of expenses.

SUMMARY.

1. Centre County	$4,446 25
2. Clearfield County	3,953 58
3. Clinton County	1,814 41
4. Elk County	2,179 95
5. Mifflin County	513 25
6. Union County	305 57
	13,213 01

Incidental expenses for wagons, carriages, hotel bills, expenses at Washington, consisting of clerk hire, hotel bill, telegraphing, and other necessary expenses, but not included in above bills, about three thousand dollars.

CITY OF WASHINGTON,
District of Columbia, ss:

S. H. Yocum, the contestee within named, being duly sworn according to law, doth depose and say that the within bill of contest expenses, amounting to the sum of $13,213.01, is correct and true, so far as made by himself, and as to so much as is made by others he believes the same to be correct and true. And further saith not.

S. H. YOCUM.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 28th day of February, A. D. 1881.
[SEAL.] FRANK GALT, Notary Public.

Expenses in contest—Curtin vs. Yocum.

	Witness fees, voucher No. 1.	Commissioners' fees, voucher No. 4.	Miscellaneous expenses, voucher No. 2.	Voucher No. 3.	Clerking expenses, voucher No. 5.	Total.
Centre County	$1,478 22	$921 24	$1,535 31	.....	$625 65	$4,587 42
Clinton County	.....	345 00	.....	.....	.....	2,307 43
Clearfield County	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,511 79
Elk County	1,076 99	626 35	.....	.....	.....	1,703 34
Mifflin County	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	723 00
Union County	97 50	52 50	.....	.....	.....	150 00
Attorneys' fees	.....	.....	.....	$1,500 00	?	3,674 00
Attorneys' fees	.....	.....	.....	2,174 00	?
Total expenses	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	14,842 00

William H. Blair, attorney for A. G. Curtin, the above-named contestant, being duly sworn according to law, did depose and say that the above statement of disbursements for expenses necessary in carrying on said contest is correct; that he has actually paid the above amount of $14,842, (with the exception of $1,845 which is still due, contestant being liable therefor;) that he, the said deponent, had entire charge of the disbursements on part of contestant, and knows of his own personal knowledge that the above statement is correct and true.

WM. H. BLAIR.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 21st day of May, 1880.

CHAS. B. BEALL,
Notary Public.

The next amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole was to insert after the amendment just adopted the following:

That the sum of $1,500 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, in addition to the sums heretofore appropriated in this bill, respectively, to Noble A. Hull, Horatio Bisbee, jr., Ignatius Donnelly, and W. D. Washburn.

To Joseph Mason, $2,000.

To Jesse J. Yeates and J. J. Martin, $250 each, in addition to the amounts heretofore appropriated to them in this bill.

Mr. WHITE. I call for a division on that amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. MCMILLIN.) The amendment is reported from the Committee of the Whole as a single amendment, and under the rule cannot be divided.

Mr. WHITE. The chairman of the Committee of the Whole on Saturday, in answer to an inquiry, stated that the amendment could be divided. It certainly is susceptible of a division under the rule, and I ask for a division.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The amendment could have been divided in Committee of the Whole; but the Chair knows of no rule under which it can be divided in the House.

Mr. BURROWS. The amendment was an entirety, and so reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SPARKS. Does the Speaker rule that this amendment cannot be divided? The Chair will notice that four or five or six of these items are increases, while only one is an original proposition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that the amendment was reported to the House from the Committee of the Whole as one amendment, and being so reported there can now be no division of the amendment.

Mr. WHITE. Now, Mr. Speaker, I call attention to the sixth clause of Rule XVI:

On the demand of any member, before the question is put, a question shall be divided if it include propositions so distinct in substance that one being taken away a substantive proposition shall remain.

I submit that this amendment embraces several substantive and distinct propositions; and I know no rule which prohibits these being voted upon separately.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the rule which governs on this question.

The Clerk read as follows:

An amendment reported from the Committee of the Whole as an entire amendment is not divisable.

Mr. WHITE. From what does the Clerk read?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. From the Manual, page 204.

Mr. WHITE. The chairman of the Committee of the Whole on Saturday evening said, as the RECORD shows, that this amendment was divisable.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that if a division had been called for in the Committee of the Whole, the amendment would have been divided, but there having been no demand for a division in the Committee of the Whole, and the amendment having been reported to the House as a whole, it must now be acted on as an entirety.

Mr. WHITE. I gave notice in Committee of the Whole——

Mr. BLOUNT. I call for the regular order.

Mr. WHITE. I gave notice in Committee of the Whole that I would call for a distinct vote by yeas and nays on these separate items, and the RECORD so shows.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania can have a yea-and-nay vote in the House on the amendment, if the demand for the yeas and nays be sustained by one-fifth of the members present.

Mr. WHITE. But I gave notice in the Committee of the Whole that I would call for a separate vote in the House on each item of this amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. But the Chair would state to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that inasmuch as a division was not demanded in the Committee of the Whole——

Mr. WHITE. I say it was demanded. I gave notice that I would call for a separate vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. But no division of the question on the amendment was called for and taken in the Committee of the Whole, and the Chair cannot recognize any amendment except as reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SPARKS. Will the Chair allow me to make an inquiry?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman can make a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SPARKS. Did not Mr. Mason get $2,000 last year for the expenses of his contest?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SPARKS. I did not ask it as a parliamentary inquiry. I understand such is the fact.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment as just reported.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 77, noes 47.

Mr. WHITE. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 133, nays 83, not voting 64; as follows:

YEAS—133.

Acklen,	Bailey,	Blake,	Calkins,
Aiken,	Baker,	Bliss,	Camp,
Aldrich, William	Barber,	Boyd,	Cannon,
Anderson,	Bayne,	Brigham,	Carpenter,
Armfield,	Beltzhoover,	Burrows,	Caswell,
Bachman,	Bingham,	Butterworth,	Chittenden,

Claflin,	Hawk,	Morton,	Smith, William E.
Colerick,	Hawley,	Muldrow,	Speer,
Conger,	Hazelton,	Myers,	Starin,
Converse,	Heilman,	Nicholls,	Stephens,
Cook,	Herndon	Norcross,	Talbott,
Cowgill,	Hill,	O'Reilly,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Cravens,	Hiscock,	Osmer,	Taylor, Robert L.
Crowley,	Horr,	Overton,	Thomas,
Daggett,	Humphrey,	Page,	Thompson, W. G.
Davidson,	Jones,	Persons,	Townsend, Amos
Davis, George R.	Jorgensen,	Phister,	Tyler,
Davis, Horace	Keifer,	Poehler,	Updegraff, J. T.
De La Matyr,	Kelley,	Prescott,	Urner,
Deering,	Kenna,	Price,	Valentine,
Dickey,	Ketcham,	Ray,	Van Aernam,
Dunn,	King,	Reed,	Vance,
Dunnell,	Klotz,	Richardson, D. P.	Voorhis,
Dwight,	Ladd,	Richardson, J. S.	Ward,
Errett,	Lapham,	Richmond,	Willits,
Evins,	Loring,	Robeson,	Wilson,
Ferdon,	Manning,	Rothwell,	Wood,
Fisher,	McCoid,	Russell, Daniel L.	Wright,
Forsythe,	McCook,	Ryan, Thomas	Yocum,
Fort,	McGowan,	Ryon, John W.	Young, Casey
Frye,	McKinley	Sawyer,	Young, Thomas L.
Goode,	Miles,	Shallenberger,
Hammond, John	Miller,	Sherwin,
Harmer,	Monroe,	Slemons

NAYS—83.

Atherton,	Culberson,	Lowe,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Atkins,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Martin, Benj. F.	Sparks,
Beale,	Dibrell,	Martin, Edward L.	Steele,
Berry,	Elam,	McKenzie,	Stevenson,
Bicknell,	Felton,	McLane,	Thompson, P. B.
Blackburn,	Finley,	McMahon,	Tillman,
Bland,	Forney,	McMillin,	Turner, Oscar
Blount,	Geddes,	Morse,	Turner, Thomas
Bouck,	Godshalk,	New,	Van Voorhis,
Bragg,	Gunter,	Phelps,	Waddill,
Briggs,	Hammond, N. J.	Philips,	Wait,
Bright,	Harris, John T.	Reagan,	Warner,
Cabell,	Hatch,	Rice,	Wellborn,
Carlisle,	Henkle,	Robinson,	Wells,
Chalmers,	Herbert,	Ross,	White,
Clardy,	Hooker,	Samford,	Whiteaker,
Clark, John B.	Hostetler,	Scales,	Whitthorne,
Clements,	Hutchins,	Shelley,	Williams, Thomas
Cobb,	Johnston,	Simonton,	Willis,
Coffroth,	Joyce,	Singleton, J. W.	Wise.
Cox,	Lounsbery,	Smith, A. Herr

NOT VOTING—64.

Aldrich, N. W.	Ewing,	Kitchin,	Pound,
Ballou,	Ford,	Knott,	Robertson,
Barlow,	Frost,	Le Fevre,	Russell, William A.
Belford,	Gibson,	Lindsey,	Sapp,
Bisbee,	Gillette,	Marsh,	Scoville,
Bowman,	Hall,	Mason,	Singleton, O. R.
Brewer,	Harris, Benj. W.	Mills,	Springer,
Browne	Haskell,	Mitchell,	Stone,
Buckner,	Hayes,	Money,	Townshend, R. W.
Caldwell,	Henderson,	Morrison,	Tucker,
Clark, Alvah A.	Henry,	Muller,	Updegraff, Thomas
Clymer,	Houk,	Murch,	Upson,
Covert,	House,	Neal,	Washburn,
Crapo,	Hubbell,	Newberry,	Weaver,
Davis, Joseph J.	Hunton,	O'Brien,	Wilber,
Deuster,	Hurd,	O'Connor,	Williams, C. G.
Dick,	James,	O'Neill,	Yeates.
Einstein,	Killinger,	Orth,
Ellis,	Kimmel,	Pacheco,

So the amendment was adopted.

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. COVERT with Mr. MITCHELL, on this bill.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

The SPEAKER. The House has now acted on all the amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole. The question is on ordering the bill as amended to be engrossed and read the third time.

Mr. MARTIN, of Delaware. I ask unanimous consent to have an amendment added to the end of the bill. It is the unanimous report of the Committee on Accounts. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is called for, which is equivalent to an objection.

Mr. CONGER. I ask unanimous consent that where additions have been made by separate items to amounts previously appropriated in the bill for expenses of election contests, the Clerk be authorized to include the gross sum for each individual in one clause.

Several members objected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER. As required by the rule, the yeas and nays will now be taken on the passage of this bill.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 189, nays 38, not voting 63; as follows:

YEAS—189.

Acklen,	Bayne,	Boyd,	Caswell,
Aiken,	Belford,	Briggs,	Chalmers,
Aldrich, N. W.	Beltzhoover,	Brigham,	Claflin,
Aldrich, William	Berry,	Bright,	Clardy,
Atkins,	Bicknell,	Burrows,	Clark, Alvah A.
Bachman,	Blackburn,	Butterworth,	Clark, John B.
Bailey,	Blake,	Caldwell,	Cobb,
Baker,	Bland,	Camp,	Coffroth,
Ballou,	Bliss,	Cannon,	Colerick,
Barber,	Blount,	Carpenter,	Conger,
Converse,	Henkle,	Morton,	Starin,
Cowgill,	Herbert,	Muldrow,	Stevenson,
Crapo,	Herndon,	Myers,	Talbott,
Cravens,	Hooker,	New,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Crowley,	Horr,	Newberry,	Taylor, Robert L.
Daggett,	Hostetler,	Nicholls,	Thomas,
Davidson,	House,	Norcross,	Tillman,
Davis, George R.	Hubbell,	O'Neill,	Townsend, Amos
Davis, Horace	Humphrey,	O'Reilly,	Turner, Thomas
Deering,	Hunton,	Overton,	Tyler,
De La Matyr,	Johnston,	Pacheco,	Updegraff, J. T.
Dibrell,	Jones,	Persons,	Updegraff, Thomas
Dick,	Joyce,	Phister,	Urner,
Dickey,	Kelley,	Poehler,	Valentine,
Dunn,	Kenna,	Prescott,	Van Aernam,
Dunnell,	Ketcham,	Price,	Vance,
Dwight,	Kimmel,	Ray,	Van Voorhis,
Errett,	King,	Reagan,	Voorhis,
Evins,	Knott,	Reed,	Waddill,
Felton,	Ladd,	Richardson, D. P.	Wait,
Ferdon,	Lapham,	Richardson, J. S.	Weaver,
Finley,	Le Fevre,	Richmond,	Wellborn,
Fisher,	Lindsey,	Robertson,	Wells,
Forney,	Loring,	Robeson,	Whiteaker,
Forsythe,	Lounsbery,	Robinson,	Whitthorne,
Fort,	Manning,	Rothwell,	Wilber,
Frost,	Marsh,	Ryan, Thomas	Williams, C. G.
Frye,	Martin, Benj. F.	Ryon, John W.	Williams, Thomas
Gillette,	Mason,	Sapp,	Willis,
Godshalk,	McCoid,	Sawyer,	Willits,
Goode,	McCook,	Shallenberger,	Wilson,
Hall,	McGowan,	Shelley,	Wise,
Hammond, N. J.	McKenzie,	Sherwin,	Wood,
Harmer,	McKinley,	Slemons,	Yocum,
Haskell,	McLane,	Smith, A. Herr	Young, Thomas L.
Hawk,	Miles,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Hayes,	Miller,	Smith, William E.
Heilman,	Monroe,	Speer,

NAYS—38.

Armfield,	Elam,	Martin, Edward L.	Simonton,
Atherton,	Geddes,	McMillin,	Singleton, J. W.
Beale,	Gunter,	Mills,	Sparks,
Bouck,	Harris, John T.	Morse,	Springer,
Bragg,	Hatch,	Osmer,	Steele,
Cabell,	Hill,	Phelps,	Turner, Oscar
Clements,	Hutchins,	Philips,	Warner,
Cook,	Kitchin,	Ross,	White.
Culberson,	Klotz,	Samford,
Davis, Lowndes H.	Lowe,	Scales,

NOT VOTING—63.

Anderson,	Einstein,	Keifer,	Russell, W. A.
Barlow,	Ellis,	Killinger,	Scoville,
Bingham,	Ewing,	McMahon,	Singleton, O. R.
Bisbee,	Ford,	Mitchell,	Stephens,
Bowman,	Gibson,	Money,	Stone,
Brewer,	Hammond, John	Morrison,	Thompson, P. B.
Browne,	Harris, Benj. W.	Muller,	Thompson, W. G.
Buckner,	Hawley,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Calkins,	Hazelton,	Neal,	Tucker,
Carlisle,	Henderson,	O'Brien,	Upson,
Chittenden,	Henry,	O'Connor,	Ward,
Clymer,	Hiscock,	Orth,	Washburn,
Covert,	Houk,	Page,	Wright,
Cox,	Hurd,	Pound,	Yeates,
Davis, Joseph J.	James,	Rice,	Young, Casey.
Deuster,	Jorgensen,	Russell, Daniel L.

So the bill was passed.

During the roll-call,

Mr. YEATES said: Mr. Speaker, I was present on the roll-call upon this bill; but, as it contains an appropriation for my benefit, I did not vote at all on this or the preceding vote.

The following additional pairs were announced from the Clerk's desk:

Mr. CALKINS with Mr. THOMPSON of Kentucky, for this day.

Mr. LORING with Mr. YOUNG of Tennessee, for the day, on all political questions.

Mr. WARD. I failed to vote on the last roll-call, having been absent under the order of the House, attending to the duties of the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. BLOUNT moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, announced the adoption of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. No. 7101) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

It further announced the passage of the following bills without amendment:

A bill (H. R. No. 346) for the relief of William H. Thompson; and

A bill (H. R. No. 375) for the relief of Philemon B. Hawkins.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I rise for the purpose of submitting a report from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Post-Office appropriation bill and, after it is read, I shall move its adoption and demand the previous question.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6972) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 5.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said Senate amendment insert the following: "And hereafter the Postmaster-General shall cause the advertisements of all general mail-lettings of each State and Territory to be conspicuously posted up in each post-office in the State and Territory embraced in said advertisements for at least sixty days before the time of such general letting, and no other advertisements of such lettings shall be required; but this provision shall not refer to any other than general mail-lettings. And whenever it shall become necessary to employ temporary service on any mail-route, it shall be the duty of the Postmaster-General to advertise for bids or proposals for such service by posting notices in the post-offices at the termini of such route and upon a bulletin board in a public place in the Post-Office Department building at Washington, in the District of Columbia, for at least ten days prior to such letting;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the last proviso of said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following: "And provided further, That the annual rental of said building or buildings shall not exceed the sum of $5,000, and the cost of the furniture for the same shall not exceed $10,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof "twenty-five."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the word "fifty" and insert "twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$7,900,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words proposed to be inserted by said Senate amendment and insert in lieu thereof "152;" and the Senate agree to the same.

JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
JAMES H. BLOUNT,
J. G. CANNON,
Managers on the part of the House.
WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
JAMES G. BECK,
N. BOOTH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Let the statement accompanying the report of the committee on conference be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the Post-Office appropriation bill submit the following in explanation of the action recommended in the report submitted:

The effect of the action recommended by the committee on the Senate amendments will be, if ratified by the two Houses, as follows:

On amendment 1: to the following clause—which is already the law—"and hereafter the Postmaster-General shall cause advertisements of all general mail-lettings of each State and Territory to be conspicuously posted up in each post-office in the State and Territory embraced in said advertisements for at least sixty days before the time of such general letting; and no other advertisement of such lettings shall be required; but this provision shall not apply to any other than general mail-lettings"—is added the following: "And whenever it shall become necessary to employ temporary service on any mail-route it shall be the duty of the Postmaster-General to advertise for bids or proposals for such service by posting notices in the post-offices at the termini of such route and upon a bulletin-board in a public place in the Post-Office Department building at Washington, in the District of Columbia, for at least ten days prior to such letting."

On amendment 3: limits the cost of the rental of a building for use of the money-order service to $5,000 per annum, and for furnishing the same $10,000.

On amendment 5: makes the appropriation for "rent, light, and fuel" $425,000, instead of $450,000 as proposed.

On amendments 8 and 9: makes the appropriation for "necessary and special facilities on trunk lines" $425,000, instead of $450,000 as proposed; and for transportation on steamboat routes $925,000, instead of $950,000 as proposed.

On amendment 10: makes the appropriation for "transportation by star routes" $7,900,000, instead of $8,000,000 as proposed.

On amendment 13: makes the total of the appropriations out of the Treasury for the postal service conform to the action recommended on the amendments.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The statement accompanying the report of the committee of conference, if it has been listened to as read by the Clerk, is very full, and unless some gentleman desires to ask some question about the effect of this conference report, I will demand the previous question on its adoption.

The main question was ordered.

The report was then adopted.

Mr. BLACKBURN moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WELLS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The report will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House No. 6730, making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes for the year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after a full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 31.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 30, and agree to the same.

ERASTUS WELLS,
J. D. C. ATKINS,
JAY A. HUBBELL,
Managers on the part of the House.
WM. A. WALLACE,
JAMES B. BECK,
WM. WINDOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The effect of this report, if adopted, will be to strike from the bill as it passed the House the following clause:

"That all laws and parts of laws creating or authorizing the commission of ten citizens provided for in the act of April 10, 1869, be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

And also to strike out the following amendment of the Senate:

"Expenses of Indian commissioners: For the expenses of the commission of citizens, serving without compensation, appointed by the President under the provisions of the fourth section of the act of April 10, 1869, $10,000."

Mr. WELLS. I move the adoption of the conference report.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WELLS moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CLYMER. I demand the regular order.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. HAYES. I rise to make a privileged report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is recognized.

Mr. REAGAN. I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, move non-concurrence in the Senate amendments thereto, and ask the appointment of a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. WARNER. I give notice that I reserve all points of order. I make the point of order now that the amendments of the Senate must be considered first in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Tennessee. I ask to present a privileged report at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed.

WILLIAM HAMILL.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Tennessee. I desire to present a conference report on the pension claim of William Hamill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report of the conference committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 3788) granting an increase of pension to William Hamill having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses that the House recede from disagreement to the said amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same.

ROBT. L. TAYLOR,
GEO. R. DAVIS,
JAMES W. COVERT,
Managers on the part of the House.
ROBT. E. WITHERS,
S. J. KIRKWOOD,
DAVID DAVIS,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The effect of this report is to agree to the Senate amendment and pass the bill as amended.

Mr. TAYLOR. I ask the adoption of the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. TAYLOR moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CLYMER. I demand the regular order.

Mr. REAGAN. I wish to ask a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. REAGAN. Is it in order to move to suspend the rules at this time?

The SPEAKER. The regular order having been demanded, the Chair recognizes the regular order to be the call of States and Territories for bills and joint resolutions for reference.

Mr. ROBESON. Does not the motion to suspend the rules suspend the regular order of to-day?

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the call of the States and Territories be dispensed with to-day.

Mr. WARNER. I object.

Mr. KENNA. Mr. Speaker, I ask a response to the question raised by the gentleman from Texas, whether it would be in order to move to suspend the rules to dispense with the regular order to-day; which is stated by the Speaker to be the call of States and Territories?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it would be in order at the proper time to move to dispense with the regular order. But the first business in order under the rule is the call of States and Territories, which the Chair thinks had better be allowed to proceed.

Mr. BURROWS. Is it in order during the morning hour?

Mr. HUNTON. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HUNTON. Will it not be competent by a two-thirds vote to dispense with the call of States and Territories?

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that the rule is not clear or specific upon this point, and there is some doubt upon the subject.

Mr. HUNTON. I make the motion to dispense with the call of States and Territories to-day.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is better to order the call of States and Territories.

Mr. SPARKS. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the call of States and Territories.

Mr. WARNER. I object.

Mr. SPARKS. Then if it is in order, I move to dispense with the regular order, which is the call of States and Territories for bills, &c.

Mr. HASKELL. I ask for the regular order of business.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed, although he has not read the record himself, that the motion of the gentleman from Illinois has been allowed.

Mr. CONGER. I wish to ask the Chair if the question has been raised about the right to move a suspension of the rules to-day, and if so, what the decision of the Chair has been upon that question?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not ruled——

Mr. CONGER. The point, as I understand, was made as to the power of the Chair to rule upon the right to move a suspension of the rules to-day——

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not make any decision upon that point.

Mr. CONGER. Is that point pending now.

The SPEAKER. The point did not arise. The gentleman from Texas said he would not insist on his motion.

Mr. CONGER. As I understand, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROBESON] has made a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. REAGAN. If in order, I move to suspend the rules for the purpose of moving non-concurrence in the Senate amendments on the river and harbor bill, and asking a committee of conference.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that under the practice a motion to suspend the rules, so as to dispense with the call of States and Territories for bills and resolutions, has been admitted heretofore at this period of the session, and therefore would entertain the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPARKS.]

Mr. SPARKS. I make that motion.

The SPEAKER. That requires a two-thirds vote.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. SPARKS, there were—ayes 95, noes 54.

So (two-thirds not having voted in the affirmative) the rules were not suspended and the call of States and Territories was not dispensed with.

Several members called for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order being demanded, the Chair, as required by the rules, will now call the States and Territories in alphabetical order for the presentation of bills and joint resolutions for printing and reference. Under this call joint and concurrent resolutions and memorials of State and territorial Legislatures can be presented and appropriately referred; and resolutions of inquiry directed to heads of the Executive Departments are in order for reference to the appropriate committees, which latter resolutions are to be reported to the House within one week.

NATIONAL MINING EXPOSITION.

Mr. BELFORD introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7231) making an appropriation for the erection of a building for a national mining exposition; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CONGER. What has become of the call of committees?

The SPEAKER. This is the call of States and Territories for bills and joint resolutions, which is the first business in order on Monday. The Chair is proceeding under the rule.

Mr. CONGER. But there is a morning hour on Monday for reports from committees except on the first and third Mondays in each month.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not interfered with the morning hour, or said anything in relation to the same. The motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPARKS] was to suspend the rules and dispense with the call of States. That motion failed.

Mr. CONGER. When we reach the call of States that motion operates; but we have not reached it yet.

The SPEAKER. We are going on with it now, and four States, Alabama, Arkansas, California, and Colorado, have been called.

Mr. CONGER. But committees have not been called.

The SPEAKER. The call of committees is not in order yet; as the gentleman from Michigan will see if he will look at the rule.

Mr. CONGER. I look at the Calendar, and according to that the business in order is the call of committees for reports except on the first and third Mondays of the month, and this is not the third Monday.

The SPEAKER. The rule will be read, and the Chair thinks that will satisfy the gentleman.

The Clerk read clause 2, Rule XXIV, as follows:

On all days other than Monday as soon as the journal is read and approved, and on all Mondays (except the first and third in each month) after the call of States and Territories, there shall be a morning hour for reports from committees, which shall be appropriately referred and printed, and a copy thereof mailed by the Public Printer to each Member and Delegate; and the Speaker shall call upon each standing committee in regular order and then upon the select committees; and if the whole of the hour is not consumed by this call, then it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of other business; but if he shall not complete the call within the hour, he shall resume it in the succeeding morning hour where he left off.

TAXATION OF BANKS.

Mr. WAIT. I present resolutions of the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut, concerning the taxation of banks, &c., and ask that they be read.

The resolutions were read, and were referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. WAIT. At the proper time I shall ask, further, that these resolutions be printed in the RECORD.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries.

WABASH AND ERIE CANAL.

Mr. BICKNELL presented a joint resolution of the General Assembly of Indiana, in relation to the reconstruction by the Government of the Wabash and Erie Canal.

Mr. WILBER. Let the joint resolution be read.

The joint resolution was read, and was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

JOHN W. STOKES.

Mr. HOSTETLER introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7232) for the relief of John W. Stokes, of Harmony, Clay County, Indiana; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

LOAN OF CANNON, ETC., FOR SOLDIERS' REUNION IN IOWA.

Mr. McCOID introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 415) providing for cannon, tents, and other camp equipments for soldiers' reunions in Iowa; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. McCOID. That resolution is in the usual form. If there be no objection, I will ask unanimous consent that it be passed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot ask that in this hour.

The joint resolution was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

COLORED EMIGRANTS.

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7233) to extend an act for the relief of colored emigrants, approved March 5, 1880; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

SWAMP LANDS IN LOUISIANA.

Mr. ELLIS introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7234) to extend the provisions of the act of March 2, 1855, to lands selected as swamp lands by the State of Louisiana under the act of March 2, 1849; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELLIS also introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 416) authorizing the Secretary of War to transfer certain swamp and overflowed lands in Louisiana to the Interior Department as part of the public domain; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

FRENCH SPOLIATION CLAIMS.

Mr. LINDSEY presented resolutions of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Maine, relative to French spoliation claims; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

EAST RIVER BRIDGE, NEW YORK.

Mr. LADD presented a resolution of the Legislature of the State of Maine, relating to the East River bridge, New York; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

FIRST MINNESOTA MOUNTED RANGERS.

Mr. POEHLER presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, for the payment of bounty to the members of the First Minnesota Mounted Rangers.

Mr. PRICE. Let that be read.

The memorial was read, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PENSION LAWS.

Mr. POEHLER also presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, for a modification of the pension laws.

Mr. PRICE. Let that be read.

The memorial was read, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

ABRAHAM H. BURKEHOLDER.

Mr. ROTHWELL introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7235) granting a pension to Abraham H. Burkeholder; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

PENSIONS FOR SOLDIERS OF MEXICAN WAR.

Mr. DAGGETT presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, in favor of the enactment of a law pensioning soldiers and sailors in the Mexican war; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

OLD POST-OFFICE BUILDING IN NEW YORK CITY.

Mr. MORTON submitted the following resolution; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be requested to inform this House immediately whether, since the post-office in the city of New York was removed from the old church building in Nassau street in 1877, said building has remained vacant, and if any taxes, State or city, have been imposed upon it, or if any rental has been derived from it, and, if so, by whom paid and for what amounts, and who have been its occupants; and also if there be any good reason that this property should not now be sold, as it is no longer needed for governmental purposes.

GEORGE W. GRAHAM.

Mr. WILBER introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7236) correcting the pension granted to Lieutenant George W. Graham, One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment New York Volunteers, in accordance with his rank; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

TAX ON TOBACCO, SNUFF, AND BRANDIES.

Mr. SCALES presented a resolution of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, in favor of the repeal of the tax on tobacco, snuff, and brandies; which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

MONUMENT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Mr. KELLEY introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 417) to admit free of duty a monument to General Washington; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. WHITE introduced a joint resolution (H. R. No. 418) proposing an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting payment of claims for property injured or destroyed in the late war of the rebellion; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. WHITE. I ask that that resolution be read in full.

The joint resolution was read in full, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

WILLIAM K. PIPER.

Mr. COFFROTH introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7237) for the relief of William K. Piper; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

NORTON L. NEWBERRY.

Mr. OVERTON introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7238) for the relief of Norton L. Newberry; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON HARBOR.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Rhode Island, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7239) to establish a commission to prepare a plan of harbor and river improvement in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

REGIE CONTRACT SYSTEM.

Mr. SIMONTON presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Tennessee, praying relief from injuries to the tobacco trade from the regie contract system; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

E. P. M'GOLERIC.

Mr. McMILLIN introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7240) for the relief of E. P. McGoleric, of Sumner County, Tennessee; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and ordered to be printed.

GREEN PENN.

Mr. CABELL introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7241) for the relief of Green Penn, of Patrick County, Virginia; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Mr. MARTIN, of West Virginia, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of West Virginia, relating to interstate commerce and the regulation of freights and charges upon railroads; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

PUPLIC PROPERTY AT HARPER'S FERRY.

Mr. MARTIN, of West Virginia, also presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of West Virginia, asking the cession of the public property at Harper's Ferry to the State of West Virginia for school purposes; which was referred to the Committee on the Public Lands.

NEZ PERCÉ INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. AINSLIE presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Idaho, praying that the Nez Percés Indian reservation be thrown open to settlement by location under the general land laws; which, having been read at length upon the demand of Mr. CONGER, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

JUDGES IN IDAHO TERRITORY.

Mr. AINSLIE also presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Idaho, praying for an increase in the number of justices of the supreme court of the Territory, together with an increase of the salaries of such judges, and that the Legislative Assembly of the Territory be empowered to district the Territory and assign the justices; which was referred to the Committee on the Territories.

The SPEAKER. There are some gentlemen who were not present when their States or Territories were called, and who desire to introduce bills or joint resolutions. If there be no objection, they will now be recognized.

Mr. WARNER. If that is to lead to the reading of any more bills, I must object.

Mr. ROBESON. The gentleman cannot make a conditional objection.

SUITS AGAINST RAILROAD COMPANIES.

Mr. BELFORD, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue are hereby requested to inform this House what suits are now pending in the United States circuit and district courts for the southern district of New York against the New York and Harlem Railroad, the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, the New York Central Railroad, the New York and Erie Railway, the Central Pacific Railroad, and against any other railway corporations, together with a statement of the nature of such suits and the amounts involved in such litigations respectively.

HOMESTEAD AND PRE-EMPTION CLAIMS.

Mr. BENNETT. I ask unanimous consent to present two memorials of the Legislative Assembly of Dakota Territory, one to be laid on the table, the other referred, and both printed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A memorial of the Legislative Assembly of Dakota Territory favoring the passage of the bill repealing the act approved March 3, 1879, requiring the publication of notice of intention to prove up homestead and pre-emption claims.

Mr. ROBESON. Let that be read.

The SPEAKER. It cannot come in if the reading be called for. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WARNER] has objected.

Mr. ROBESON. He could not make a qualified objection.

The SPEAKER. Then he objects absolutely.

Mr. ROBESON. But it is too late to object after the paper is in. I have no objection to the presentation of this memorial; but I want to understand whether the Speaker recognizes the gentleman from Ohio as making a qualified objection.

The SPEAKER. He does not.

Mr. ROBESON. The memorial has been introduced and is now before the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. It can come in only by unanimous consent.

Mr. ROBESON. But it is in.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Dakota himself stated that he simply wanted to present two memorials and have them printed.

Mr. BENNETT. The bill to which this memorial relates has been reported to the House. I did not wish the memorial referred to a committee that has already disposed of the subject-matter of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Dakota [Mr. BENNETT] asks consent to present this memorial and have it printed.

Mr. BENNETT. I desire both printed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The memorial was laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

BRANCH MINT AT DEADWOOD, DAKOTA TERRITORY.

Mr. BENNETT, by unanimous consent, presented a memorial of the Legislative Assembly of Dakota Territory in relation to the establishment of a branch mint at Deadwood, Dakota Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, and ordered to be printed.

DEL RIO, TEXAS, A PORT OF ENTRY.

Mr. UPSON, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7242) making Del Rio, on the Rio Grande, in the State of Texas, a port of entry; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

STAMP-CANCELING MACHINES.

Mr. HERBERT, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. No. 7243) authorizing the Postmaster-General to procure, by purchase or otherwise, stamp-canceling machines.

Mr. CONGER. Let that bill be read.

Mr. WARNER. I object to any further introduction of bills if the reading of this bill is called for.

The bill was read a first and second time, (the first reading being in full,) referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WARNER. I object to the further introduction of bills. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is called for, which is the call of committees for reports.

Mr. REAGAN. I move to suspend the rules to take from the Speaker's table the river and harbor appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that the first motion in order, which would take precedence of the motion of the gentleman from Texas, is a motion to dispense with the call of committees for reports.

Mr. REAGAN. I make that motion.

Mr. CONGER. If that is to be the rule, then regular business may occupy the entire time until the last day of the session.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, where there is an order of business set down by the rules, as, for instance, to-day the call of States for the introduction of bills and joint resolutions, would recognize first the motion to suspend the rules to get rid of that order.

Mr. CONGER. Let it be done by a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is now the morning hour for reports of committees, which can, of course, be dispensed with by a two-thirds vote.

Mr. CONGER. Let the Chair recognize a motion to suspend the rules. He has the discretion to say whom he will recognize.

The SPEAKER. The recognition in such cases has been regulated by a report to this House accepted and confirmed by the House. The practice of the House has been uniform in relation to that, that the recognition of the motion to suspend the rules is within the discretion of the Chair. It is within the discretion of the Chair to say that he prefers this motion to suspend what is set down as the order of the business to be proceeded with. He will then come to the motion of the gentleman from Texas or any other motion, but the recognition for suspension is within the discretion of the Chair.

Mr. CONGER. That is as to the subject.

The SPEAKER. That is not as to the subject, because the Chair does not always inquire—indeed very seldom inquires, and never wants to inquire—in the recognition of a member, what the subject is. That would make him the judge of the subject, and not of the discretion of recognition.

Mr. CONGER. I understand the Chair will not recognize a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not said what he would or would not do, but the Chair now recognizes the motion, if made, to dispense by a two-thirds vote with the call of committees for reports.

Mr. ROBESON. That has not been made.

Mr. SPARKS. I make that motion, that the morning hour for reports from committees be dispensed with.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 85, noes 61.

So (two-thirds not having voted in the affirmative) the rules were not suspended and the morning hour was not dispensed with.

MORNING HOUR.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour begins at twenty-nine minutes past two o'clock, and committees will now be called in their regular order for reports.

Mr. REAGAN. Is it in order to introduce a resolution asking for information by instruction of the Committee on Commerce?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

MARINE HOSPITAL, MORGAN CITY, LOUISIANA.

Mr. ACKLEN, from the Committee on Commerce, reported as a substitute for House bill No. 6297 a bill (H. R. No. 7244) making an appropriation for the construction of a marine hospital at Morgan City, Louisiana; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. ACKLEN. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. FISHER. I ask for the reading of the bill and report.

Mr. ACKLEN. That is not in order, as I have merely reported the bill for reference to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be so referred.

Mr. FISHER. Why is it not in order to have the bill read?

The SPEAKER. It is not in order, as the bill is not reported for action at this time, but merely for reference to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. This is not a call of committees for reports for action, but a call of committees for reports for reference.

Mr. FISHER. But I ask that the bill be read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

On all days other than Monday as soon as the Journal is read and approved, and on all Mondays (except the first and third in each month) after the call of States and Territories, there shall be a morning hour for reports from committees, which shall be appropriately referred and printed, and a copy thereof mailed by the Public Printer to each Member and Delegate; and the Speaker shall call upon each standing committee in regular order and then upon the select committees; and if the whole of the hour is not consumed by this call, then it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of other business; but if he shall not complete the call within the hour, he shall resume it in the succeeding morning hour where he left off.

The SPEAKER. It says "they shall be appropriately referred and printed."

Mr. CONGER. The House could not tell what the appropriate reference was without its being read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana made a motion to refer to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and no one has proposed a contrary reference.

Mr. WHITE. My colleague from Pennsylvania moved for the reading of this bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overruled it. The rule says "they shall be appropriately referred and printed," which means immediately referred and printed, and such has been the practice of the House.

Mr. CONGER. We have a rule which decides what shall be read on a call and what shall not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will refer to it.

Mr. CONGER. On subjects on which action of the House is to be had.

The SPEAKER. There is no action here asked except that of reference, and that the gentleman has a right to make. A motion was not made to refer to any other committee than the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CONGER. The question of appropriate reference is raised under that rule.

The SPEAKER. The question of appropriate reference was not raised here, as the only motion made is to refer to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CONGER. The other rule, I think, decides what shall be read and what shall not.

The SPEAKER. The reading of papers is on questions upon which the House is called to give a final vote. There is no such disposition asked of the pending matter.

Mr. CONGER. When the reading of a paper other than the one on which the House is asked to give a final vote is demanded, and the same is objected to by any member, "it shall be determined without debate by a vote of the House." I take it that takes away from the Chair the arbitrary right to say what shall be read and what shall not.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not decided arbitrarily anything, but he has decided in strict conformity with the rule and the practice of the House.

Mr. CONGER. But the rule says it shall be submitted to the House without debate.

The SPEAKER. That is for reference. There is no question about the reference here.

Mr. CONGER. This is about the reading. The rule I have read refers to reading, and says nothing about reference. If the Chair will have that rule read I think there will be no difficulty about it.

Mr. CARLISLE. The gentleman from Michigan confounds the rule of the House which relates to the reference of bills to committees with the one which relates to bills reported from committees for reference to the various calendars of the House.

Mr. CONGER. I hope the gentleman from Kentucky will not make a blunder like that, for it is unusual with him. Let Rule XXXI be read.

Mr. CARLISLE. I should like to hear it.

Mr. CONGER. I hope my friend will not risk the high estimate we have of his judgment by taking such a position.

Mr. ROBESON. I understand it to be this: that when a paper is before the House upon which the House is called to take a final vote, the reading comes as a matter of course, but every other paper, if a gentleman objects to the reading, he may have a vote as to whether it shall be read or not. But in every case where the House is called upon to take a final vote it is the right of any member to demand the reading of a paper.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the rule governing the present condition of this question is very plain. The present condition applies to a report which is simply introduced by a committee for reference and printing only, and it does not require to be read for that purpose.

Mr. ROBESON. But, Mr. Speaker, how is it possible to know its proper reference unless it be read?

The SPEAKER. It is the duty of the Chair to examine the bill or report presented and make appropriate reference. For instance, if it makes an appropriation of money, it is the duty of the Chair to refer it to the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. The rule specifically provides for that.

Mr. CONGER. The thirty-first rule is general in its application that—

When the reading of a paper other than one upon which the House is called to give a final vote is demanded, and the same is objected to by any member, it shall be determined without debate by a vote of the House.

The SPEAKER. That is when it does not come in conflict with the specific rules of the House governing a particular class of business. The gentleman says very properly that is a general rule, but there are specific rules governing this case, and the very purpose of the incorporation of this provision into the new rules was to enable this hour to be used in these reports from committees. The old rules allowed consideration in this hour. As the gentleman from Michigan will remember, those rules provided that each committee when called upon for reports was allowed two hours in the consideration of the business so reported. That right no longer exists. These reports are simply presented in this hour for reference to appropriate calendars.

Mr. CONGER. But the right under the present rule is unlimited as to length of time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not. The rule applies simply to the introduction of these bills and reports for reference.

Mr. ROBESON. Will the Speaker pardon me a moment?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. ROBESON. Of course if the reading of a paper interfered with the other rule which requires its appropriate reference for printing, then it would be in order to sustain the view submitted by the Chair; but the Chair will not say or hold that the reading of a paper, called for as a right by a member of the House, interferes with its proper reference and printing. It may be read for the information of the House, and properly so, in order to determine the very question of its reference.

The SPEAKER. The Chair believes, in fact knows, that the judgment of the Committee on Rules in framing this rule was to enable this hour to be utilized, and that the purpose of it was to refer to appropriate committees without reading; and the Chair infers then from the very intent and spirit of the rule itself——

Mr. HASKELL. Is there any motion before the House?

The SPEAKER. There is not.

Mr. HASKELL. Then I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will repeat in this connection that the very object of the rule was to make a change in the old rule which occupied the greater part of the time in consideration of reports from committees. This rule was to enable all of the committees to have an opportunity of reporting business on which they had acted.

Mr. FRYE. I think the Speaker is entirely right in the construction which he places upon this rule. The object and design of the Committee on Rules in framing this rule was to enable the entire morning hour to be used with the reception and reference of reports from the committees.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that was unquestionably the object of the rule.

The Chair will ask in this connection to incorporate at this point, if the House will permit it, a portion of the report of the Committee on Rules which relates to this question of the morning hour, and which conforms to the view of the question taken by the Chair, as well as by the gentleman from Maine.

There was no objection.

The report is as follows:

In the revision submitted by the committee, it is proposed to have a daily call of all the committees, all business reported, save that to which no objection is made to its "present consideration," to go to the Committee of the Whole House, whether public or private, and to a House Calendar composed only of bills not making appropriations of money.

This plan secures two desirable objects, namely:

First. The printing of all bills and accompanying reports, thus giving time for their examination by members before consideration; and Second. Saves unnecessary waste of time in preventing, by what is known as "filibustering" in the morning hour, the consideration of a bill reported by a committee, thus blocking the way against reports from other committees to which little or no objection would be made.

Numerous instances might be cited, during the past few years, where the "morning hour" has been consumed by dilatory motions for days and even weeks, thus making it possible at the close of a session to defeat action on an important bill, which could only be reported by unanimous consent or by a suspension of the rules by a two-thirds vote, which vote might not be obtained.

DISEASES OF DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

Mr. HATCH, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 7159) in relation to pleuro-pneumonia and other contagious and infectious diseases of live stock; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. COFFROTH, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with favorable recommendation, bills of the following titles; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 7177) granting a pension to Mrs. Clara A. Thompson, with amendments;

A bill (H. R. No. 5859) granting a pension to Jonas B. Hoppes;

A bill (H. R. No. 3082) restoring the name of Elizabeth Albright to the pension-roll;

A bill (H. R. No. 4781) granting a pension to Agnes Cornmesser; and

A bill (H. R. No. 7207) authorizing a duplicate check in payment of pension to William A. Gardner, of Frederick County, Maryland, in lieu of one lost.

Mr. COFFROTH also, (in behalf of Mr. MASON,) from the same committee, reported back, with favorable recommendation, bills of the following titles; which were severally referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 4196) granting a pension to Edward Farr;

A bill (H. R. No. 4880) granting a pension to Maria Goodrich;

A bill (H. R. No. 1881) granting a pension to Elizabeth Vernon Henry;

A bill (H. R. No. 5842) granting a pension to George Quarrel;

A bill (H. R. No. 6267) increasing the pension of John N. Payne;

A bill (H. R. No. 5569) granting a pension to Richard L. Whitman; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6681) granting a pension to Caroline Lauffer.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, if there are any adverse reports in connection with these pension bills, I ask that the bills with an adverse recommendation be also referred to the Calendar, instead of being laid upon the table.

The SPEAKER. That is the gentleman's right, and the order will be so made.

Mr. COFFROTH, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported bills of the following titles; which were severally read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying reports, ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 7245) granting a pension to Verlinda Davis;

A bill (H. R. No. 7246) granting a pension to John Morley Hudson and

A bill (H. R. No. 7247) granting a pension to Mary Rose.

Mr. COFFROTH also, from the same committee, reported back, with adverse recommendations, the following bills and petitions; which were referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying reports ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 5303) granting a pension to John Cowan, chaplain, Sixth New York Heavy Artillery;

A bill (H. R. No. 169) granting a pension to Solomon Yewell;

A bill (H. R. No. 1819) granting a pension to Ann Easto;

The petition of James A. Lee;

The petition of George W. Wilson, for increase of pension; and

A bill (H. R. No. 118) granting a pension to Thomas Hall.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 2520) granting a pension to Patrick Droney; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOSTETLER, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported, as a substitute for House bill No. 3404, a bill (H. R. No. 7248) granting a pension to William Boone, late a private in Company F, Eighty-eighth Regiment Indiana Infantry Volunteers; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. HOSTETLER also, from the same committee, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 4703) granting a pension to Stephen Gupton; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. UPDEGRAFF, of Ohio, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with a favorable recommendation, the bill (H. R. No. 565) granting a pension to Stafford Palmer.

Mr. RAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with favorable recommendations, bills of the following titles; which were referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying reports, ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 2821) granting a pension to Mrs. Adeline A. Turner;

A bill (H. R. No. 7046) granting a pension to Alexander W. Rowell;

A bill (H. R. No. 5135) granting a pension to Reuben H. Fitts;

A bill (H. R. No. 6773) granting a pension to Edmund W. Whitney;

A bill (H. R. No. 5424) granting a pension to Freeman N. Hall; and

A bill (H. R. No. 3295) granting an increase of pension to Dennis Sullivan.

Mr. RAY also, from the same committee, reported a bill (H. R. No. 7249) granting an increase of pension to Elbridge G. Savage; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. HAZELTON, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back, with favorable recommendations, the following bills; which were read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompaning reports, ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. No. 6826) for the relief of Pliny Jewett; and

A bill (H. R. No. 7009) granting a pension to Adam Poertner.

CORONNA, TAUSSIG AND COMPANY ET. AL.

Mr. DAVIDSON, from the Committee on Claims, reported a bill (H. R. No. 7250) for the relief of Coronna, Taussig & Company and others; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. REAGAN. I rise to move a suspension of the rules so that the House may non-concur in the amendments of the Senate and ask for a committee of conference.

The SPEAKER. Before the gentleman from Texas makes that motion the Chair would like to recognize the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES] to make a privileged report touching the printing of the agricultural report.

Mr. REAGAN. Very well.

PRINTING OF AGRICULTURAL REPORT FOR 1880.

Mr. HAYES, from the Committee on Printing, reported back with a favorable recommendation the joint resolution (H. R. No. 373) relative to printing the agricultural report for 1880.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, &c., That there be printed 300,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, for the year 1880; 214,000 copies for the use of members of the House of Representatives; 56,000 copies for the use of members of the Senate, and 30,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HAYES moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO NORTH AMERICAN ETHNOLOGY.

Mr. WILSON, from the Committee on Printing, reported back with amendments the concurrent resolution to print volumes 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of Contributions to North American Ethnology.

The concurrent resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That there be printed at the Government Printing Office 6,000 copies each of volumes 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of the Contributions to North American Ethnology, uniform with the preceding volumes of the series, and with the necessary illustrations; 3,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House of Representatives; 1,000 for the use of the Senate, and 2,000 for distribution by the Bureau of Ethnology.

Mr. WHITE. Does that come from a committee?

Mr. WILSON. Yes; it is a unanimous report of the Committee on Printing. Let the amendments be read.

The amendments were read, as follows:

In line 6, strike out "3,000" and insert "3,030."
In line 8, strike out "2,000" and insert "1,970."

Mr. WILSON. The object of the amendments is to increase the number to each member of the House, giving each member ten copies.

Mr. WHITE. Of what Congress will the members be entitled to copies?

Mr. WILSON. Those who are members of Congress at the time the report is printed will be entitled to copies.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was adopted.

Mr. WILSON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC LANDS IN OHIO.

Mr. CONVERSE, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on the Public Lands, reported back with a favorable recommendation the bill (H. R. No. 5579) to provide for the survey of certain public lands in the State of Ohio; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. REAGAN. I move to suspend the rules so as to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, returned from the Senate with amendments, and to non-concur in the amendments of the Senate, and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. WARNER. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TUCKER. I desire to move to go to business on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] has been recognized by the Chair to submit the motion to suspend the rules for the purpose indicated by him. After that motion shall have been disposed of, the Chair will determine what business may next be done.

Mr. WARNER. After the motion of the gentleman from Texas shall prevail, will it be in order when the report comes in from the committee of conference to raise the point of order under Rule XX that the amendments of the Senate must be first considered in Committee of the Whole?

The SPEAKER. It would not be in order to raise that point on the conference report. The motion of the gentleman from Texas is to suspend all rules which would interfere with the purpose stated in the terms of the motion.

Mr. WARNER. I understand that would suspend the rules now, and therefore the point of order will not now apply. But upon the report of the conference committee would it be in order to raise that point?

The SPEAKER. It would not; because the very object of the motion of the gentleman from Texas is to get clear of that point of order. Of course should the motion prevail, the House having cleared that point of order out of the way, the bill and the amendments would not be subject again to that point of order. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. I call for a second on the motion to suspend the rules?

The SPEAKER. That is the gentleman's right.

Tellers were ordered; and Mr. REAGAN and Mr. VAN VOORHIS were appointed.

The House divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 129, noes 36.

So the motion to suspend the rules was seconded.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted to Mr. STEPHENS, on account of indisposition.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the following bill:

A bill (H. R. No. 6730) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the following bill:

A bill (H. R. No. 6972) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed and requested the concurrence of the House in bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. No. 1025) fixing the relative rank and pay of certain officers on the retired list of the Navy; and

A bill (S. No. 1825) to provide for the survey of certain public lands in the State of Ohio.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs upon the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] to suspend the rules so as to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, returned from the Senate with sundry amendments, to non-concur in the amendments of the Senate, and to request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon. The motion to suspend the rules has been seconded, and under the rules fifteen minutes for debate on each side is now in order. [After a pause.] No one claiming the floor, the question is upon the motion to suspend the rules for the purpose stated.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. On that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

The question was taken upon ordering the yeas and nays; and upon a division, there were—ayes 30, noes 132; not one-fifth voting in the affirmative.

Before the result of this vote was announced,

Mr. HAWLEY called for tellers on ordering the yeas and nays.

The question was taken upon ordering tellers; and there were 33 in the affirmative.

So (the affirmative being more than one-fifth of a quorum) tellers were ordered; and Mr. HAWLEY and Mr. REAGAN were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 53, noes 159.

So (more than one-fifth voting in the affirmative) the yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is now upon the motion to suspend the rules for the purpose stated, upon which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. ANDERSON. Can that motion be divided?

The SPEAKER. It cannot be.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 179, nays 67, not voting 44; as follows:

YEAS—179.

Acklen,	Culberson,	Jorgensen,	Russell, Daniel L.
Aiken,	Daggett,	Kenna,	Russell, W. A.
Aldrich, N. W.	Davidson,	Kimmel,	Samford,
Aldrich, William	Davis, George R.	King,	Sawyer,
Armfield,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Kitchin,	Scoville,
Atkins,	De La Matyr,	Loring,	Shallenberger,
Baker,	Deuster,	Lowe,	Shelley,
Ballou,	Dibrell,	Manning,	Sherwin,
Barber,	Dick,	Martin, Benj. F.	Simonton,
Bayne,	Dunn,	Martin, Edward L.	Singleton, J. W.
Beale,	Dunnell,	Mason,	Slemons,
Belford,	Elam,	McCoid,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Berry,	Ellis,	McGowan,	Smith, William E.
Bicknell,	Errett,	McKenzie,	Speer,
Bingham,	Evins,	McKinley,	Steele,
Bisbee,	Felton,	McMillin,	Stevenson,
Blake,	Fisher,	Miles,	Stone,
Bland,	Forney,	Miller,	Talbott,
Bliss,	Frost,	Mills,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Blount,	Gibson,	Monroe,	Taylor Robert L.
Bouck,	Goode,	Morse,	Tillman,
Boyd,	Gunter,	Morton,	Townsend, Amos
Bragg,	Hammond, John	Muldrow,	Tucker,
Brewer,	Hammond, N. J.	Myers,	Turner, Thomas
Brigham,	Harmer,	New,	Upson,
Bright,	Harris, Benj. W.	Newberry,	Van Aernam,
Buckner,	Hatch,	Nicholls,	Vance,
Burrows,	Hawk,	O'Neill,	Voorhis,
Butterworth,	Hayes,	O'Reilly,	Waddill,
Cabell,	Hazelton,	Orth,	Wait,
Caldwell,	Heilman,	Pacheco,	Ward,
Cannon,	Henkle,	Persons,	Washburn,
Carlisle,	Herbert,	Phelps,	Wellborn,
Carpenter,	Herndon,	Philips,	Wells,
Chalmers,	Hiscock,	Phister,	White,
Claflin,	Hooker,	Poehler,	Whiteaker,
Clardy,	Horr,	Price,	Williams, C. G.
Clark, John B.	Houk,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Clements,	House,	Reed,	Willis,
Conger,	Hubbell,	Richardson, J. S.	Willits,
Cook,	Humphrey,	Richmond,	Wilson,
Covert,	Hunton,	Robertson,	Wise,
Crapo,	Hurd,	Robeson,	Wood,
Cravens,	Johnston,	Ross,	Wright.
Crowley,	Jones,	Rothwell,

NAYS—67.

Anderson,	Finley,	Lounsbery,	Sparks,
Atherton,	Ford,	Marsh,	Springer,
Bachman,	Forsythe,	McCook,	Starin,
Bailey,	Fort,	Neal,	Thomas,
Beltzhoover,	Frye,	Norcross,	Thompson, W. G.
Briggs,	Geddes,	Osmer,	Turner, Oscar
Browne,	Godshalk,	Overton,	Tyler,
Camp,	Hall,	Prescott,	Updegraff, J. T.
Chittenden,	Haskell,	Ray,	Updegraff, Thomas
Clymer,	Hill,	Rice,	Valentine,
Coffroth,	Hostetler,	Richardson, D. P.	Van Voorhis,
Colerick,	Joyce,	Robinson,	Warner,
Cowgill,	Ketcham,	Ryan, Thomas	Whitthorne,
Cox,	Klotz,	Ryon, John W.	Wilber,
Davis, Horace	Ladd,	Sapp,	Yocum,
Deering,	Lapham,	Scales,	Young, Thomas L.
Ferdon,	Le Fevre,	Smith, A. Herr

NOT VOTING—44.

Barlow,	Einstein,	Killinger,	O'Connor,
Blackburn,	Ewing,	Knott,	Page,
Bowman,	Gillette,	Lindsey,	Pound,
Calkins,	Harris, John T.	McLane,	Singleton, O. R.
Caswell,	Hawley,	McMahon,	Stephens,
Clark, Alvah A.	Henderson,	Mitchell,	Thompson, P. B.
Cobb,	Henry,	Money,	Townshend, R. W.
Converse,	Hutchins,	Morrison,	Urner,
Davis, Joseph J.	James,	Muller,	Weaver,
Dickey,	Keifer,	Murch,	Yeates,
Dwight,	Kelley,	O'Brien,	Young, Casey.

So the motion of Mr. REAGAN was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. STEPHENS with Mr. DWIGHT. If Mr. STEPHENS were present, he would vote "ay" and Mr. DWIGHT "no."

Mr. O'CONNOR with Mr. HAWLEY, on the river and harbor bill. If Mr. O'CONNOR were present, Mr. HAWLEY would vote against the bill.

Mr. ROBESON, until further notice, with Mr. MCLANE.

Mr. ROBESON. I am paired to-day with the gentleman from Maryland, [Mr. MCLANE;] but knowing him to be in favor of this bill, and knowing that like myself he would be in favor of considering the funding bill without the pressure of the river and harbor bill behind it— [cries of "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. ROBESON. I am giving the reason for my vote. For the reason I have just stated, I have voted "ay."

Mr. BLACKBURN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. COBB] and myself have been absent from the House under its orders attending to our duties on a conference committee. I desire to vote on this question.

Mr. WHITE. It cannot be done.

The SPEAKER. The Chair promised to make an examination on this point, but has not had time to do so. He will state to the House that these gentlemen have been engaged on a conference committee by the direct order of the House.

Mr. CONGER. Does that make any difference about the right to vote?

Mr. COBB. It ought to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the question to the House. The question is, Whether a member of this House appointed upon a conference committee, and in the actual discharge of his duties by order of the House, shall have the right, as an exception to the general rule, to come in and vote after the second call of the roll.

Mr. CONGER. I make the point that the Chair cannot even entertain that request.

Mr. COVERT. I ask that these gentlemen have unanimous conrent to record their votes.

Mr. WARNER. Unanimous consent cannot give it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I hope I may be permitted to state that before we went to the meeting of the conference committee, which was held in the Senate wing of the Capitol, we left a request with the Chair and the clerks to be sent for. We were sent for, and broke up that conference to come here at once.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did send for the gentlemen.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I say so, and we came promptly.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the first clause of Rule XV.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, what is the pending question?

The SPEAKER. Whether the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. COBB] have the right to vote after the second roll-call, they having been absent by direction of the House in the actual discharge of their duties upon a conference committee?

Mr. CONGER. I make my point of order on the first clause of Rule XV. I ask that it may be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Upon every roll-call the names of the members shall be called alphabetically by surname, except when two or more have the same surname, then the whole name shall be called; and after the roll has been once called, the Clerk shall call in their alphabetical order the names of those not voting; and thereafter the Speaker shall not entertain a request to record a vote or announce a pair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the language of this rule is absolute, and that he has not the right to entertain a request of this kind. He is perfectly willing, if the House so desires, to submit the question to the House. [Cries of "Oh, no!"]

Mr. WARNER. Let the rule be changed first.

The SPEAKER. The remedy is a change of the rule; and the Chair thinks it ought to be changed.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is it not in order to move to suspend this rule for the remainder of the session as to members absent on conference committees?

Mr. CONVERSE. I desire to withdraw my vote and to have a pair announced.

The following pair was announced:

Mr. CONVERSE with Mr. BLACKBURN.

Mr. COX. Would it be in order to lay all this business on the table?

The SPEAKER. What business does the gentleman propose to lay on the table?

Mr. COX. This appropriation bill coming from the Senate with amendments.

The SPEAKER. The rules have been suspended. The gentleman makes his motion too late. The Chair will announce the result.

Mr. HASKELL. Before the result of the vote is announced I rise to a point of order. Rule XV, as I understand, is a harsh and abitrary rule under which the Speaker is obliged— [cries of "Order!" and "Announce the result!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair will announce the result——

Mr. HASKELL. I rise to a point of order previous to the announcement of the vote. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HASKELL. If members will permit me to state it, they will see that I am stating a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will permit the gentleman to state it, but asks him to be as brief as possible.

Mr. HASKELL. I say that Rule XV is a harsh and arbitrary rule, requiring the Speaker to rule precisely according to the wording of it. Now, the rule says that "the Clerk shall call in alphabetical order the names of those not voting, and thereafter the Speaker shall not entertain a request to record a vote." That roll of members not voting has not been called; and prior to its being called it is an open question whether or not this House cannot receive the vote of a member who has been by order of the House serving upon a conference committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state there was great complaint in the former practice of the House, in allowing members to come in after the roll had been called over and record their votes, and it was in consequence of that complaint this rule was adopted. The Chair has no discretion except to obey the mandate of the rule.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to ask whether it be in order to dispense with this rule in regard to voting for the remainder of the session. [Cries of "No!" "No!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the river and harbor appropriation bill Mr. REAGAN, Mr. KENNA, and Mr. O'NEILL.

Subsequently the Speaker stated that Mr. O'NEILL's business did not permit him to serve on the conference on the river and harbor appropriation bill, and he therefore appointed in his place Mr. HAWLEY.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.]

Mr. ATKINS. I rise for the purpose of submitting a conference report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7101) making appropriations for the expenses of the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 24, 28, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 41, 42, 56, 57, 66, 67, 70, 84, 85, 86, 91, 95, and 97.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 22, 23, 25, 26, 29, 30, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 68, 72, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 82, 87, 88, 90, 93, and 94; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out from the words proposed to be inserted by said amendment "eight thousand and nineteen" and insert in lieu thereof "seventy-seven hundred and thirty-one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out from said amendment the word "laborer" and insert in lieu thereof the word "assistant;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Insert after the word "clerk" the words "and stenographer;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the word "monthly" proposed to be inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out in line 15, after the word "thousand," at the end of line 14, page 15 of the bill, the words "two hundred and fifty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,975,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out therefrom the word "four," where it first occurs, and insert in lieu the word "two;" strike out the word "four," where it last occurs, and insert in lieu the word "six;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words proposed to be inserted by said Senate amendment and insert in lieu thereof "640;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words "four thousand" and insert in lieu thereof "three thousand six hundred;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$591,010;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Add after the word "dollars," at the end of the amended paragraph, the following: "And the provisions of section 5485 of the Revised Statutes shall be applicable to any person who shall violate the provisions of the act entitled 'An act relating to claim agents and attorneys in pension cases,' approved June 20, 1878;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 81, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$17,100;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 89, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$204,660;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 92, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$51,200;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 96, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "ten" and insert "twelve;" and the Senate agree to the same.

J. D. C. ATKINS,
HIESTER CLYMER,
JOHN H. BAKER,
Managers on the part of the House.

H. G. DAVIS,
WILLIAM A. WALLACE,
W. B. ALLISON,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The statement accompanying the report will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill submit the following detailed statement in explanation of the action recommended in the report submitted.

The effect of the action recommended by the committee on the Senate amendments will be, if ratified by the two Houses, as follows:

On amendment 1, corrects total of a clause.

On amendment 2, strikes out proposed increase in salaries of two messengers of the Senate from $1,296 each to $1,440 each.

On amendment 3, substitutes word "assistant" for that of "laborer" at $1,000 in Senate stationery-room.

On amendment 4, provides for a page in Secretary's office of the Senate at $912.50.

On amendments 5, 6, and 7, increases salary of clerk to Finance Committee of the Senate from $2,220 to $2,500, and provides for a clerk to the Joint Committee on the Library at $2,220, as in the law for 1881.

On amendments 8 and 9, corrects the clause providing for pages of the Senate.

On amendments 10 and 11, provides for a foreman in the Senate folding-room at $1,200.

On amendment 12, strikes out the following:

"And the following prices may be paid for folding books, pamphlets, speeches, and the daily RECORD, namely: For quarto volumes, not exceeding one cent per volume; for octavo volumes, not exceeding one-half cent each per volume; for the daily RECORD, not exceeding $2 per thousand; and for speeches, not exceeding $1 per thousand."

On amendments 13 and 14, makes a transposition of a clause.

On amendments 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, and 21 strikes out proposed increase in salaries of employés in the Library of Congress and leaves the same as now fixed by law.

On amendments 22 and 23, increases the salary of the superintendent of the Botanic Garden from $1,600 to $1,800.

On amendment 24, strikes out proposed increase of $500 for improvement, &c., of the Botanic Garden.

On amendments 25 and 26, increases the salary of the First Assistant Secretary of State from $3,500 to $4,500.

On amendments 27 and 28, makes an appropriation as follows:

"For printing and distributing the publications by the Department of State of the consular and other commercial reports, including circular letters to chambers of commerce, provided that such publications may be sold at such rates as may be fixed by said Department, and the proceeds of all sales to be paid into the Treasury, $7,000."

On amendments 29 and 30, increases the salary of the captain of the watch for the Treasury Department from $1,200 to $1,400.

On amendments 31 and 32, increases salary of chief clerk and assistant in office of Supervising Architect from $2,250 to $2,500, and decreases salary of the photographer in same office from $2,250 to $2,000.

On amendments 33, 34, and 35, strikes out proposed addition of one chief of division in the Second Comptroller's Office at $2 000.

On amendments 36 and 37, strikes out proposed increase in salary of Superintendent of Bureau of Statistics from $3,000 to $3,600.

On amendments 38 and 39, strikes out proposed increase of salary of deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue from $3,200 to $3,500.

On amendment 40, makes the appropriation for salaries and expenses of collectors and deputy collectors of internal revenue $1,975,000.

On amendment 42, makes the appropriation for legislative expenses of Utah, $25,500.

On amendments 43 and 44, provides for two messengers and six assistant messengers, in lieu of eight assistant messengers as heretofore, in the office of the Secretary of War.

On amendments 45, 46, 47, and 48, provides for twenty-five additional clerks at $1,000 each, and one assistant messenger for the balance of the current and the whole of the next fiscal year in the Adjutant-General's Office, to be employed exclusively in expediting pension cases; and also appropriates $1,500 for rent of building for their accommodation.

On amendments 49 and 50, increases the appropriation for contingent expenses in the Adjutant-General's Office from $12,000 to $14,500, and makes $1,750 of the same immediately available.

On amendments 51, 52, and 53, provides for forty clerks at $1,000 each; one assistant messenger, one watchman, and one laborer additional in the Surgeon-General's Office for the balance of the current and the whole of the next fiscal year, to be exclusively engaged in expediting settlement of pension cases.

On amendments 54 and 55, increases the appropriation for contingent expenses of the Surgeon-General's Office from $8,000 to $18,000, and makes $5,000 of the same immediately available.

On amendments 56 and 57, provides for a clerk of class 3 in lieu of one of class 4, as proposed, in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy.

On amendments 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, and 64, appropriates $20,000 in lieu of $24,000 for rent of building now occupied by Pension Bureau, and authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to rent any other fire-proof building in its stead.

On amendment 65, appropriates $8,000, $2,000 of which to be immediately available, to rent buildings for the additional force provided for in the Pension Bureau.

On amendments 66 and 67, strikes out proposed increase of salaries of three principal clerks in the General Land Office from $1,800 to $2,000 each.

On amendments 68, 69, 70, and 71, increases the salary of the Commissioner of Pensions from $4,000 to $5,000, provides for a "first deputy Commissioner of Pensions" at $3,600, and strikes out proposed increase of salary of deputy Commissioner of Pensions from $2,400 to $2,500.

On amendment 72, inserts the following:

"For the following additional clerical force in the Pension Office, namely, twenty examiners at $2,000 each; twenty clerks of class 4, twenty clerks of class 3, twenty clerks of class 2, fifty clerks of class 1, three assistant messengers, three watchmen, and five laborers; in all, $203,620; and for the like force for the balance of the current fiscal year, $50,905; the latter sum to be immediately available."

On amendment 73, strikes out the following clause:

"For actual and necessary expenses of clerks detailed to investigate suspected frauds and attempts at fraud, as provided by law, $40,000."

And inserts in lieu thereof the following:

"For actual and necessary expenses of clerks detailed to investigate pension cases, $125,000, and the provisions of section 5485 of the Revised Statutes shall be applicable to any person who shall violate the provisions of an act entitled 'An act relating to claim agents and attorneys in pension cases,' approved June 20, 1878."

On amendments 74 and 75, increases the appropriation for contingent expenses of the Pension Bureau from $26,000 to $51,000, and makes $15,000 of the same immediately available.

On amendments 76, 77, 78, 79, and 80, increases the force of the Patent Office as follows: "One principal examiner, at $2,400; one first assistant examiner, at $1,800; one second assistant examiner, at $1,600; one third assistant examiner, at $1,400."

On amendments 81, 82, and 83, fixes the salary of the Auditor of Railroad Accounts at $1,500, and the railroad engineer in his office at $2,500.

On amendment 84, strikes out proposed increase in salary of surveyor-general of Dakota from $2,000 to $2,500.

On amendments 85, 86, 87, 88, and 90, strikes out proposed increase of clerks of class 3 from eighteen to nineteen, and clerks of class 1 from thirty-seven to thirty-eight, and adds ten female clerks at $1,200 each in lieu of ten female clerks at $900 each, in the office of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

On amendments 90, 91, and 92, increases the clerks of class 4 from four to five, and strikes out proposed increase of laborers from three to four in the office of the superintendent of the money-order system.

On amendment 93, provides that the proceeds of the sale of waste paper in the Post-Office Department shall be paid into the Treasury and report thereof made to Congress.

On amendment 94, provides that salaries of territorial judges may be paid monthly.

On amendment 95, strikes out clause proposed to pay salary of the warden of the jail in the District of Columbia.

On amendment 96, appropriates $12,000 in lieu of $10,000, for rent of building occupied by the Department of Justice.

On amendment 97, provides as follows:

"For reporting the decisions of the court, clerical hire, labor in preparing and superintending the printing of the sixteenth volume of the reports of the Court of Claims, to be paid on the order of the court, $1,000; and said sum, as well as the appropriation for like services in the act of June 15, 1880, chapter 225, for the fifteenth volume, may be paid to the reporters of the court notwithstanding section 1765 of the Revised Statutes, or section 3 of the act of June 20, 1874, chapter 328."

JNO. D. C. ATKINS,
HIESTER CLYMER,
JOHN H. BAKER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Speaker, as the detailed statement which has just been read in the hearing of the House fully explains the conference report, and the results at which the conference committee have arrived, unless some gentleman desires to ask a question in regard to it, I shall move the previous question upon the adoption of the report.

The main question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. ATKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed a bill (S. No. 1441) for the relief of the captain, owners, officers, and crew of the late United States private-armed brig General Armstrong, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. I now renew the motion that the House proceed to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. ROBESON. Does the gentleman from Virginia move to suspend the rules to reach that business?

Mr. PRICE. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PRICE. I make the point of order that we cannot go to business on the Speaker's table until the unfinished business pending is disposed of, unless the rules be suspended by a two-thirds vote.

The SPEAKER. There is no unfinished business that has yet presented itself to interfere with the motion.

Mr. PRICE. Before the Chair decides the point of order, I want to read some of the decisions of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will be very glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. PRICE. On last Friday Mr. COX propounded an interrogatory to the Chair in reference to the apportionment bill. I will read from the RECORD. Mr. COX says:

I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX. I wish to know if the apportionment bill then loses the effect of the previous question which has been ordered upon it yesterday?

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to hear that read again?

Mr. PRICE. I will send it to the Clerk's desk and let the Clerk read it.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read as requested.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. COX. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX. I wish to know if the apportionment bill then loses the effect of the previous question which has been ordered upon it yesterday?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York was not pressing the motion to resume the consideration of the bill, and the Chair therefore recognized the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. The Chair did not recognize my question. I asked if the previous question was still operating upon the bill.

The SPEAKER. Of course it retains its force and effect.

Mr. PRICE. That is all.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that apportionment bill is not only the unfinished business, but it is business upon which the previous question has been ordered, and therefore it occupies the most important relation which can possibly be occupied by the unfinished business of the House; and unless that business is disposed of, either by laying it upon the table or withdrawing it, or disposing of it in some proper way under the rules, it intervenes between any motion made by the gentleman from Virginia and its own consideration except the rules be suspended.

I hold, therefore, that the gentleman from Virginia cannot reach the Speaker's table unless he makes a motion to suspend the rules and go to business upon the Speaker's table for a special or general purpose; and I want to read in this connection in support of what I say a rule of this House that is very plain, which bears upon this point. I read from the fourth paragraph of Rule XXIV. That rule provides that—

After the hour shall have been devoted to reports from committees—

That hour has already begun—

it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business in which the House may have been engaged at an adjournment—

Any adjournment; the indefinite article qualifies the word—and at the same time each day thereafter, other than the first and third Mondays, until disposed of; and it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of all other unfinished business whenever the class of business to which it belongs be in order.

Then the unfinished business being disposed of, the fifth paragraph of the same rule provides that—

It shall be in order to entertain a motion that the House do now proceed to the business on the Speaker's table, &c.

If the English language—and I call the special attention of the Chair to this—if the English language can convey any idea, and if this rule means anything, it means that until the unfinished business is disposed of you cannot go to the Speaker's table by any motion that does not previously suspend this rule. It can only be reached by a motion to suspend the rule.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the unfinished business has not been disposed of. It is not only the unfinished business to which I have referred, but there are two or three other items of unfinished business before the House which have been partly considered and not disposed of, and upon one of which, as I have shown, the previous question is ordered and still pending. It will be entirely in order for the gentleman from Virginia, under the rules of the House, to make a motion to suspend the rules to go to business on the Speaker's table. But I submit that it is not in order to make that motion by a majority vote, unless you ignore the rule to which I refer.

Mr. CARLISLE. Without entering upon a discussion of this question of order, I desire to say that if the Chair is of the opinion that the point of order made by the gentleman from Iowa is correct, then I raise the question of consideration against the apportionment bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will briefly refer to the facts. The apportionment bill is the unfinished business and the main question is ordered on it. But it cannot be held solely in the light of unfinished business in view of what has occurred in reference to that bill. By unanimous consent or by an agreement on both sides of the House, the place of that bill in reference to its character of unfinished business has been in a measure waived. That was an agreement arrived at by common consent, as the gentleman from Iowa will remember. Five gentlemen were appointed in accordance with that agreement. These gentlemen were appointed to consider that subject and in addition to this the gentleman in charge of the bill is not pressing it for consideration.

But the Chair, in view of the fact that the main question has been ordered, recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky to raise the question of consideration, supposing such bill to be in light of unfinished. As to the power in connection with recognitions by the Chair for motions, the Chair maintains that that is a discretion absolutely vested in him, and such allowance has been decided by the report of a committee of this House and accepted as such. The Chair will therefore not now decide that point.

Mr. CONGER. Will the Chair allow me one moment?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. CONGER. I wish to say in regard to whatever delay there may have been in regard to the apportionment bill pending an attempt at some arrangement that was being made by gentlemen appointed on either side of the House, those gentlemen have had their meeting, presented their views, and have failed entirely to come to any understanding and have instructed me to report so to the House. So that practically that matter is entirely finished and the committee is functus officio.

The SPEAKER. The Chair was not informed about that.

Mr. CONGER. I was chairman of the joint committee, and as such chairman make that report: Therefore the apportionment bill, notwithstanding that interruption, is just where it was left at the time that committee was appointed; and I demand that the apportionment bill be now taken up as the unfinished business.

Mr. CARLISLE. I raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky raises the question of consideration on the apportionment bill. The question is, Will the House now proceed to consider that bill as unfinished business?

Mr. PRICE. Will the Chair hear me a moment upon that?

The SPEAKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. PRICE. The gentleman from Kentucky has the right to raise the question of consideration, doubtless; but after he has raised that question and the House has voted on it, that does not by any possibility get rid of the previous question ordered on that bill.

The SPEAKER. The majority of the House can control its business; and if the majority of the House does not wish to consider the apportionment bill it need not.

Mr. PRICE rose.

Mr. CARLISLE. I make the point of order that debate is not in order on the order of business.

The SPEAKER. It is not.

Mr. KEIFER. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KEIFER. I submit the question of consideration cannot be raised upon a bill after the main question has been ordered on it.

The SPEAKER. By consent the consideration of this bill went over, and the question of consideration, in the opinion of the Chair, can be raised.

Mr. KEIFER. I wish to say a word as to the question of fact. It seems to be understood by the Chair that unanimous consent was given that the apportionment bill should stand aside. I do not understand the record will show anything of the kind. There was a recess taken, and some gentlemen were appointed to try to come to an amicable conclusion. But no amicable conclusion was reached.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no difficulty in brushing aside all that part of the discussion. A recognition by the Chair to test the sense of the House on consideration against any subject is the right of any member under the rules.

Mr. PRICE. But after the question of consideration is raised, and should the House refuse to consider the bill, does it necessarily follow that the House could go to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table without a suspension of the rules?

The SPEAKER. That the Chair will decide when the case arises. The Chair recognizes the right of the gentleman from Kentucky to raise the question of consideration in manner as demanded.

Mr. CONGER. I make the further point of order——

The SPEAKER. One point of order at a time. A vote should be immediately taken, and no debate is allowed on the question of consideration, being a question of priority of business.

Mr. KEIFER. Does the Speaker rule that always after the main question is ordered on a bill you can still raise the question of consideration?

The SPEAKER. The Chair rules that, in the condition of this question, the question of consideration can be raised, and he recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky to raise that question.

Mr. KEIFER. I appeal from the ruling of the Chair. I do not think that is allowable under the rules.

Mr. SPRINGER. This is not a ruling of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky to raise the question of consideration. The Chair doubts whether the gentleman from Ohio has the right to appeal against that recognition.

Mr. KEIFER. I have a right to appeal from the decision of the Chair on the point of order I made. When the Chair rules that after the main question is ordered on a bill the question of consideration can still be raised, I take an appeal from that ruling.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky to raise the question of consideration. Many days have elapsed since the main question was ordered, and other subjects considered.

Mr. KEIFER. Is not my appeal entertained?

Mr. ROBESON. I make the point of order that it is out of order for the gentleman from Kentucky to raise the question of consideration. Let the Chair decide that point of order.

The SPEAKER. There is really no power in the House itself to appeal from a recognition of the Chair. The right of recognition is just as absolute in the Chair as the judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States is absolute as to the interpretation of a law.

Mr. KEIFER. I agree to that. But I wish to say to the Chair, if he will hear me a moment, I do not appeal from the discretion of the Chair when exercised in recognizing the gentleman from Kentucky. It is not that. But I appeal from the decision of the Chair when he rules that after the Chair has recognized the gentleman from Kentucky that gentleman may raise the question of consideration against a bill pending before the House under the operation of the previous question. I understand the rule to be that that is not allowed and that there never has been a precedent for such a proceeding. That is my appeal. It is not an appeal from the exercise of the discretion of the Chair in making a recognition.

Mr. WILSON. Does the gentleman from Ohio make an appeal?

Mr. KEIFER. I am trying to make an appeal.

Mr. SPRINGER. The decision of the Chair, as I understand it, is not that a bill pending with the previous question ordered upon it can be antagonized by raising the question of consideration; that is not this case. This case is one of a bill which was pending on a previous day, on which day the previous question was ordered upon it, and the House adjourned before disposing of the question. It then became unfinished business, and took its place in the House in the order of unfinished business. The proposition is now to antagonize the unfinished business with a motion to proceed to business on the Speaker's table, and the previous question has nothing to do with it. If the unfinished business had been taken up, then the previous question would attach to that unfinished business. But there is now no previous question on unfinished business, which is the standing order of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair upon reflection is of opinion that a day having intervened the business referred to is in effect unfinished business, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] has the right to raise the question of consideration against that unfinished business.

Mr. KEIFER. And from that decision of the Chair I appeal.

Mr. WILSON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman cannot do that while the gentleman from Ohio is on the floor.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KEIFER. I would like to have the Clerk read Rule XVII in order that the House may understand just what may be done under the operation of the previous question.

The Clerk read as follows:

1. There shall be a motion for the previous question, which, being ordered by a majority of members present, if a quorum, shall have the effect to cut off all debate and bring the House to a direct vote upon the immediate question or questions on which it has been asked and ordered. The previous question may be asked and ordered upon a single motion, a series of motions allowable under the rules, or an amendment or amendments, or may be made to embrace all authorized motions or amendments and include the bill to its engrossment and third reading, and then, on renewal and second of said motion, to its passage or rejection. It shall be in order, pending the motion for or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain and submit a motion to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee; and a motion to lay upon the table shall be in order on the second and third reading of a bill.

2. A call of the House shall not be in order after the previous question is ordered, unless it shall appear upon an actual count by the Speaker that a quorum is not present.

3. All incidental questions of order arising after a motion is made for the previous question, and pending such motion, shall be decided, whether on appeal or otherwise, without debate.

Mr. CARLISLE. Will the gentleman allow me a moment?

Mr. KEIFER. Certainly.

Mr. CARLISLE. I desire to have read in connection with that rule the third clause of Rule XVI.

Mr. KEIFER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. CARLISLE. And I desire to say——

Mr. KEIFER. I do not yield for a speech; but I yield that the Clerk may read whatever the gentleman desires from the rules.

Mr. CARLISLE. Very well. I ask the Clerk to read clause 3 of Rule XVI.

The Clerk read as follows:

When any motion or proposition is made, the question, Will the House now consider it? shall not be put unless demanded by a member.

Mr. KEIFER. It will be noticed that by the rule which the Clerk has read the purpose of the previous question is to bring the House to a direct vote upon the immediate question or questions on which it has been asked and ordered; that is the purpose of it. If that purpose is to be carried out it is not within the power of the Speaker, under the rules at least, to permit the question of consideration to be raised against the proposition upon which the previous question is pending. The rule undertakes to specify what shall be in order after the previous question shall have been ordered:

It shall be in order, pending the motion for or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain and submit a motion to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee; and a motion to lay upon the table shall be in order on the second and third reading of a bill.

There is provision for a motion to adjourn; but all these things are specific. In the absence of a provision in the rule authorizing some action to be taken by the House, some motion to be entertained, it is not within the rules to entertain the question of consideration against a measure upon which the previous question has been ordered. The rule specifies what may be done under the operation of the previous question.

I am not of long experience here or in any other legislative body; but I do not believe any precedent can be found in the history of the Congress of the United States or anywhere else for entertaining at this time the question of consideration. Gentlemen will inform me if that be true.

The Chair says that a day has intervened. How does that help the matter? Does the rule provide for a suspension of the operation of the previous question after a day has intervened? If I understand the Speaker, he does not himself claim that that happens. If there be any such provision in our rule, or anything in the practice of the House, that destroys the operation of the previous question after the intervention of a day, I would like to know it. [After a pause.] There seems to be silence in response to that inquiry.

Then these things, to use the language of the Speaker, are all to be "brushed aside," and we come back to the real question at issue, which is, Can the question of consideration be raised against a pending measure under the operation of the previous question?

Some stress has been laid upon the condition of the apportionment bill as it was left after that long night session. After that wearisome, wearing-out session which we had, it is said that something was done which set aside that measure. We understand the Speaker to have decided, and to have decided rightly, that the previous question still operates upon that measure. Now, let us see what did take place at the very close of that long session ending on the morning of the 25th instant. I ask the Clerk to read from the RECORD of Saturday last, which I send to the desk, what I have marked, and which will show to the House (and I think to the Speaker, if he will) what did take place, and will show that it was not the purpose of the House then in session to set aside the previous question which was then operating.

The clerk read as follows:

Mr. HAWLEY. I beg leave to make a suggestion. It is that we should—informally, of course, for it would not appear as part of the record—have it understood between the two parties here that each should select five gentlemen, and that these ten should meet for a conference with the hope that they may agree upon same plan; and that in the mean time the House take a recess until half past ten o'clock, so that we may at once take up this business when we reassemble, and go on without being interrupted by the morning hour. I suggest this to gentlemen on both sides as affording some chance of a solution. We are not so far apart by any means as we were when the night began; and I think that if there be a conference of ten gentlemen, five from each side, they could probably suggest a plan under which we could proceed to vote.

Mr. BLACKBURN. That is all right. I hope the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] will agree to it.

Mr. COX. After a very hurried conference with my friends around me, I will say that if the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] has the consent of his side of the House to make that proposition, I think there will be no objection here.

Mr. CONGER (during the reading) said: Mr. Speaker, I ask the Clerk to suspend the reading for a moment. This goes to the point that the Chair has spoken of about the condition of the proposition before the House. I desire that the Speaker may hear it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has read it several times and will listen.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading.

Mr. KEIFER. Now, it will be observed, Mr. Speaker, that the whole proceeding was merely a proposition made on the one side and accepted on the other that we should try through an informal conference to agree upon some method of disposing of that bill. It was expressly understood that we were to take a recess for the purpose of preserving the rights of those who favored the bill and maintaining the operation of the previous question. All the time from that time to this any person might have insisted upon this bill coming up as the unfinished business; and that being done, I submit it is too late to undertake to raise a question of consideration against it. If we undertake to ingraft upon our practice under the previous question this new policy of raising a question of consideration, we largely, if not entirely, destroy the effect and operation of the previous question.

Mr. CARLISLE. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the third clause of Rule XVI, which has been read by the Clerk, recognizes to the broadest extent the right of a member on this floor to raise the question of consideration when any motion or proposition is made before the House; and that it makes no difference in that respect that the previous question has already been ordered upon the proposition or motion. It is time, as stated by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. KEIFER,] that when the motion or proposition upon which the previous question has been ordered has been taken up in the House, then it enjoys certain privileges, by reason of the operation of the previous question, which it would not have enjoyed otherwise. But that does not meet the question now presented. The bill to apportion representation in this House is not now before the House for its action, but there is merely pending before the House a motion to take it up.

Now, I ask, what operation has the previous question upon that motion? If the bill were in fact up and under consideration, then under the rule which the gentleman from Ohio has caused to be read at the Clerk's desk, certain motions only could be made. But, sir, if this bill enjoys as to this motion any privilege by reason of the previous question having been ordered which it would not enjoy otherwise, then I submit to the gentleman that such privilege was the privilege to have it taken up as the sundry civil appropriation bill was taken up this morning before the call of States and Territories, and before the call of committees for their reports. Why was it that the sundry civil appropriation bill upon which the previous question was operating was taken up this morning before the morning hour, before the call of the States and Territories, and immediately after the reading of the Journal? It was the fact that the previous question was operating upon it that gave it that privilege, if it gave it any. But no one asked that this bill be taken up before the morning hour; and if therefore it ever had any such privilege as the gentleman contends for, it was a privilege which belonged to it at that stage of the proceedings and does not belong to it now.

Mr. HASKELL. On this question I desire to read from the Digest, page 254:

When any motion or proposition is made the question, Will the House now consider it? shall not be put unless demanded by a member. Rule XVI, clause 3. And it is competent for a member to raise the question of consideration upon a report, even though a question of privilege is involved in the report.

That is all clear.

But after a question has been stated and its discussion commenced, it is too late to raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. There is no controversy about that.

Mr. HASKELL. Now, I read further in regard to "unfinished business:"

The question of consideration is not precluded by any affirmative vote on a motion to adjourn. The "unfinished business" pending at the time of adjournment is still subject to the question of "consideration."

Of course; but mark the language which follows:

The motion to adjourn precluding it on the previous day.

That is to say, if you have the right to raise the question of consideration and some member moves to adjourn, the adjournment does not preclude the question of consideration on a subsequent day. But the question of consideration is not raised here under such circumstances.

Now stop and think for a moment. You never raise the question of consideration except on the threshold of the transaction of business; you never raise it except when you have new business coming before the House. But here you come in after the question has been before the House, when you have lost your right to raise the question of consideration. You have discussed the bill; the main question has been ordered; you have adjourned pending the order of the House that you shall vote when you act again upon the question.

Clause 3 of Rule XVI which the gentleman from Kentucky had read is simply a proposition relating to the very introduction of business; but when the previous question has been ordered, it is the solemn verdict of this House that you shall vote on the question without debate. Certainly no man upon this floor, if he will think a moment, will assert the proposition that when in the regular order of business unfinished business has come up, unfinished business upon which this House has ordered a vote, you can raise the question of consideration without a reconsideration of the vote ordering the main question or without a suspension of the rules.

Here to-day we have reached by successive stages under the regular order of business that point when the unfinished business comes up. If you want to get rid of it, suspend the rules; otherwise you are held to it. If you are held to it, then you meet the next order of the House which says that you shall vote upon it. If you suspend the rules to get the unfinished business out of the way, then your rule says that—

Unfinished business having been disposed of, it shall be in order to entertain a motion that the House do now proceed to the business on the Speaker's table.

The proposition is just as logical, just as clear as any proposition in the book. You came here to-day; you read the Journal; you had the morning hour, (a motion to suspend that order having failed;) you have now come up to the unfinished business; and you must suspend the rules to get rid of the unfinished business, otherwise it comes up; and if it comes up, it comes up under the operation of the previous question.

And will the gentleman from Kentucky argue upon this floor under a rule made to govern the introduction of business that a question of consideration at the threshold is superior to the solemn verdict of this House under the previous question?

Mr. CARLISLE. Will the gentleman answer me——

Mr. HASKELL. The gentleman from Kentucky will find that decision rising to plague him for many a day hereafter, and so, I fear, will the Chair if he holds to reasoning which is absolutely inadmissible under any body of parliamentary law ever practiced in the world.

Mr. CARLISLE. Does the gentleman from Kansas mean to say that after business has been once introduced into this House that the question of consideration can never thereafter be raised against it?

Mr. HASKELL. I did not say that.

Mr. PRICE. I will answer the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. HASKELL. I will read from page 254, and you can construe it.

Mr. PRICE. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. HASKELL. Let the House construe this language—I only read it:

But after a question has been stated and its discussion commenced, it is too late to raise the question of consideration.

There is your Journal, there is your Digest, there is your law. You construe it.

Mr. PRICE. In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, I wish to call attention to this language contained in Rule XVII, and I think it will settle it in the mind of every gentleman who will look at it fairly:

It shall be in order, pending the motion for or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage—

What shall be in order?

It shall be in order * * * for the Speaker to entertain and submit a motion to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee; and a motion to lay upon the table shall be in order on the second and third reading of a bill.

If that language means anything it means it shall not be in order for the Speaker even to entertain any motion except the motions which are specified. If it does not mean that, then the English language does not mean anything. I appeal to the Committee on Rules, who made the rules, whether it does not mean that. It shall be in order after the question is called to submit two questions; it follows as a consequence that it shall not be in order to submit any other than the two specified.

In reference to the Speaker's declaration that a day had intervened, I put his own language to him in that respect, because a good many days had intervened when the gentleman from New York put that question to the Speaker to know whether the previous question had lost its power. The Speaker replied by saying that of course it retains its force and effect.

Strong and nervous language. So that if a day or week or month had intervened the Speaker was then of opinion the previous question had not lost its force and effect.

Mr. ROBESON obtained the floor.

Mr. KEIFER. I hope the gentleman will yield to me to read a paragraph.

Mr. ROBESON. Certainly.

Mr. KEIFER. I find by looking on page 324 of the Digest this proposition is laid down: After the previous question has been seconded on the pending proposition it is not then in order to entertain a motion to go into the Committee of the Whole. Now, if the question of consideration can be raised against the bill after the previous question has been ordered, then we could go into the Committee of the Whole afterward if we voted not to take up the measure. We must execute the order of the House, in my judgment.

Mr. ROBESON. I understand that for the purpose of this discussion my friend from Kentucky treats this as unfinished business; that he has raised this question of consideration, admitting the apportionment bill is unfinished business, and not raising that question at all. Now, then, if it be unfinished, it comes over to be taken up under the rules when unfinished business is in order. When is unfinished business in order? "After an hour shall have been devoted to reports from committees"—that is now—"it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of unfinished business in which this House may have been engaged at the time of adjournment; and it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of all other unfinished business whenever the class of business to which it belongs is in order," that is, whenever public unfinished business is in order. Now, if this comes up as unfinished business under that rule—and it must come up as unfinished business under that rule unless that rule is suspended, and that rule cannot be suspended without a motion to suspend it and a two-thirds vote—if it comes up as unfinished how does it come up? It comes up in exactly the position in which we left it unfinished.

Mr. CARLISLE. It does not come up. It is the rule which he has read which says it shall be in order to move to proceed to it, and when he moves to proceed to it that raises the question of consideration.

Mr. ROBESON. The gentleman says it comes up as unfinished business. It comes up in order. How does it come up in order? It comes up in order in just that condition in relation to the rules as we left it when we left it unfinished. What was the condition we left it in when we left it unfinished? We left it with the previous question ordered. Now, then, the rule says after the previous question is ordered he can raise the question of consideration, because, by the third clause of the sixteenth rule, when any motion or proposition is made, the question, Will the House consider it? may be raised. I say that it cannot be; for the House has already settled that question by determining by the previous question that it would now consider it. What is Rule XVII?

There shall be a motion for the previous question, which, being ordered by a majority of the members present, if a quorum, shall have the effect—

What effect?

to cut off all debate and—

What?

And bring the House to a direct vote upon the immediate question.

Is a question of consideration then—after the House has decided that, including the question of consideration with everything else—is that in order, or has it been decided already? How can it be raised under these circumstances? It is subject of course to certain dilatory motions, provided in the rule, and to this, and this only, is it subject.

Now, gentlemen, we are considering these rules without regard to any particular question or any particular policy for either side of the House, and I ask any fair man if he can escape from the inexorable logic of that position.

Mr. CONVERSE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make an inquiry of the Chair. I understand the apportionment bill came here on Saturday morning as unfinished business; that we left it on Friday night as untransacted business, and in that condition it remained all day Saturday. That day, after the expiration of the morning hour, when a motion could have been made to proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business, it could have been brought up. But that time was passed, as it was passed this morning, and a motion was made to take up the river and harbor bill instead. Action was had upon that bill after the expiration of the morning hour, and after the unfinished business could have been brought up. Now, the inquiry I desire to make is whether it is not too late to make the question of unfinished business as being now in order to the exclusion of the motion presented by the gentleman from Virginia, having already passed the point to-day as we did on Saturday in which the question of unfinished business could have been presented?

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state in response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Ohio that it is the inherent right in every legislative body that the majority shall regulate its course of proceeding in reference to the transaction of business.

Mr. ROBESON. According to rule.

The SPEAKER. And every rule of every legislative body, so far as the Chair is advised, conforms to that feature as illustrative of the power of the majority to control its proceedings.

Now, in reference to this case the Chair recognizes, and it is not disputed, that it has the semblance of unfinished business and that the main question was ordered upon it. The binding feature of the previous question should have operated immediately upon reassembling after the adjournment. But at any time the motion is in order to test whether the House will proceed to consider the unfinished business; and the Chair recognizes that as the substance of the effort made by the gentleman from Kentucky.

There cannot be a doubt but that the House in its inherent right, and the right under the very rules that govern it, has power to say whether it will consider unfinished business. And that right of consideration cannot be interfered with or interrupted.

The Chair begs to read from the Manual:

The question of consideration is not precluded by an affirmative vote on a motion to adjourn. The "unfinished business" pending at the time of adjournment is still subject to the question of consideration, the motion to adjourn precluding it on the previous day.

That is a decision of the House in the second session, Forty-fourth Congress.

Mr. REED. Will the Speaker allow me to read the subject-matter or actual authority out of which that question arose, and which differs from the interpretation of the Speaker?

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to know if the Chair has decided the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided the question and an appeal has been taken from it.

Mr. COX. I move to lay the appeal upon the table.

The SPEAKER. That motion has already been made by the gentleman from West Virginia, [Mr. WILSON.]

Mr. REED. I want to ask a question in this connection, and I desire to read the decision to which the Speaker has referred.

It seems that on the 17th day of January, 1877, a certain proposition was made to the House for consideration. As soon as it was read, a motion to adjourn prevailed. The next day the same proposition came up, and Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, stated that he had intended the day before to raise the question of consideration, but being precluded on that day by the adjournment he raised it on the 18th, and that is the authority for this decision and all the authority that exists.

The SPEAKER. That is in many particulars the same as the present case on which the question of consideration is raised.

Mr. REED. Not at all; there had been no discussion at all upon that proposition on the 17th.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say further, that any other decision than the one made and the interpretation given would prevent the consideration of any business that reached the Speaker's table; such business, for instance as appropriation bills when returned from the Senate by which the Government is sustained from year to year. And it would lead to consequences, serious perhaps, so serious oftentimes that they might involve the needless calling of an extra session of Congress.

Mr. FRYE. But what is the previous question for if it is not to bring a thing to a vote? It cuts off all amendments; it cuts off all discussion; how it can stand in the way of business I fail to see.

Mr. WARNER. That is what it is for—to cut off debate and amendments.

Mr. FRYE. And to bring the House to a vote.

Mr. WARNER. Not necessarily.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. COX. The motion to lay on the table is already pending, having been made by the gentleman from West Virginia, [Mr. WILSON.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair has allowed discussion on the appeal.

Mr. COX. I renewed it; and I object to time being wasted.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. ROBESON. We have been discussing an appeal from the Speaker's decision, and the Speaker himself has done us the honor to participate in that discussion. Now, he said——

Mr. COX. That is no parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ROBESON. I had risen to a parliamentary question. The Speaker stated in that discussion that the majority of this House controlled its proceedings. Now, I desire to ask him whether a majority of this House controls the proceedings of the House against its rules?

The SPEAKER. On the contrary, the Chair said that the rules of the House conformed thereto. The gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON] moves to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair. Upon that question the Chair will appoint tellers, as it is not his desire to count. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] and the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. KEIFER.]

Mr. FRYE. We may as well save the trouble of voting by tellers and have the yeas and nays. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, more than sixty members voting therefor.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate insisted on its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked for by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. RANSOM, Mr. FARLEY, and Mr. MCMILLAN, as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Iowa, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 4002) for the relief of the estate of J. M. Micou, deceased;

A bill (H. R. No. 4646) for the relief of the heirs of Cornelius Boyle;

A bill (H. R. No. 6023) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to change the names of vessels under certain circumstances;

A bill (H. R. No. 6545) to amend section 3524 of the Revised Statutes so as to authorize a charge for melting or refining bullion when at or above standard;

A bill (H. R. No. 1197) for the relief of settlers upon the absentee Shawnee lands in Kansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 1996) for the relief of W. A. Reid;

A bill (H. R. No. 2098) for the relief of the heirs of Edward B. Clark;

A bill (H. R. No. 2844) for the relief of James E. Montell; and

Joint resolution (H. R. No. 401) in relation to the barge W. J. Spicer.

Mr. WARD, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 346) for the relief of W. H. Thompson;

A bill (H. R. No. 375) for the relief of Philemon B. Hawkins; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6717) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Illinois, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 3788) granting an increase of pension to William Hamill; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6972) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The question was taken on the motion to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair; and there were—yeas 121, nays 93, not voting 76; as follows:

YEAS—121.

Acklen,	Clements,	Ford,	Kenna,
Armfield,	Clymer,	Forney,	Kimmel,
Atherton,	Cobb,	Frost,	Kitchin,
Atkins,	Coffroth,	Geddes,	Klotz,
Bachman,	Colerick,	Gibson,	Knott,
Beltzhoover,	Converse,	Gillette,	Ladd,
Berry,	Cook,	Goode,	Le Fevre,
Bicknell,	Cox,	Hammond, N. J.	Lowe,
Blackburn,	Cravens,	Harris, John T.	Manning,
Blount,	Culberson,	Hatch,	Martin, Benj. F.
Bouck,	Davidson,	Henkle,	McKenzie,
Bragg,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Herbert,	McMahon,
Briggs,	De La Matyr,	Herndon,	McMillin,
Buckner,	Deuster,	Hill,	Mills,
Cabell,	Dibrell,	Hooker,	Morrison,
Caldwell,	Dickey,	Hostetler,	Muldrow,
Carlisle,	Dunn,	House,	Myers,
Chalmers,	Elam,	Hunton,	New,
Clardy,	Evins,	Hurd,	Nicholls,
Clark, Alvah A.	Felton,	Johnston,	Persons,
Clark, John B.	Finley,	Jones,	Philips,

Poehler,	Shelley,	Tillman,	Wells,
Reagan,	Simonton,	Tucker,	Whiteaker,
Richmond,	Singleton, J. W.	Turner, Oscar	Williams, Thomas
Robertson,	Smith, Hezekiah B.	Turner, Thomas	Willis,
Rothwell,	Smith, William E.	Upson,	Wise,
Russell, Daniel L.	Sparks,	Vance,	Wright,
Samford,	Speer,	Waddill,	Yocum.
Sawyer,	Springer,	Warner,
Scales,	Stevenson,	Weaver,
Scoville,	Taylor Robert L.	Wellborn,

NAYS—92.

Aldrich, N. W.	Crapo,	Joyce,	Sapp,
Aldrich, William	Crowley,	Keifer,	Shallenberger,
Anderson,	Davis, George R.	Kelley,	Sherwin,
Bailey,	Deering,	Ketcham,	Smith, A. Herr
Baker,	Dick,	Lapham,	Starin,
Ballou,	Dunnell,	Lindsey,	Thomas,
Barber,	Ellis,	Marsh,	Thompson, W. G.
Bayne,	Errett,	McCoid,	Townsend, Amos
Bingham,	Ferdon,	McCook,	Tyler,
Bisbee,	Fisher,	McKinley,	Updegraff, J. T.
Blake,	Frye,	Miles,	Updegraff, Thomas
Bowman,	Godshalk,	Morton,	Valentine,
Brewer	Hammond, John	Newberry,	Van Aernam,
Briggs,	Harris, Benj. W.	Norcross,	Voorhis,
Brigham,	Haskell,	O'Neill,	Ward,
Browne,	Hawk,	Osmer,	Washburn,
Burrows	Hawley,	Overton,	Wilber,
Butterworth,	Hazelton,	Page,	Williams, C. G.
Cannon,	Heilman,	Price,	Willits,
Carpenter,	Hiscock,	Ray,	Wood,
Caswell,	Horr,	Reed,	Young, Thomas L.
Claflin,	Hubbell,	Rice,
Conger,	Humphrey,	Richardson, D. P.
Cowgill,	Jorgensen,	Robinson,

NOT VOTING—76.

Aiken,	Gunter,	Money,	Ryan, Thomas
Barlow,	Hall,	Monroe,	Ryon, John W.
Beale,	Harmer,	Morse,	Singleton, O. R.
Belford,	Hayes,	Muller,	Slemons,
Bland,	Henderson,	Murch,	Steele,
Bliss,	Henry,	Neal,	Stephens,
Boyd,	Houk,	O'Brien,	Stone,
Calkins,	Hutchins,	O'Connor,	Talbott,
Camp,	James,	O'Reilly,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Chittenden,	Killinger,	Orth,	Thompson, P. B.
Covert,	King,	Pacheco,	Townshend, R. W.
Daggett,	Loring,	Phelps,	Urner,
Davis, Horace	Lounsbery,	Phister,	Van Voorhis,
Davis, Joseph J.	Martin, Edward L.	Pound,	Wait,
Dwight,	Mason,	Prescott,	White,
Einstein,	McGowan,	Richardson, J. S.	Whitthorne,
Ewing,	McLane,	Robeson,	Wilson,
Forsythe,	Miller,	Ross,	Yeates,
Fort,	Mitchell,	Russell, W. A.	Young, Casey.

So the appeal from the decision of the Chair was laid upon the table.

After the second roll-call,

Mr. WILSON said: I did not hear my name called on the second roll-call. I stood here waiting for it to be called. Mr. WILBER's name was called, but not mine.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot direct the gentleman's vote to be received. The Chair heard the gentleman's name called.

Mr. WILSON. On the first roll-call, but not on the second.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's name is sufficiently on the record, the vote being on his motion to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. TUCKER. I move to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. REED. I object.

The Clerk proceeded to read the names of those who had voted.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. STEPHENS with Mr. DWIGHT. If Mr. STEPHENS were present, Mr. DWIGHT would vote "no."

Mr. ROBESON with Mr. MCLANE, for this day.

Mr. PACHECO with Mr. YEATES, until to-morrow morning, each reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas, with Mr. SLEMONS, on all political questions, for this day.

Mr. WHITTHORNE with Mr. HARMER, until further notice.

Mr. BLAND with Mr. DAVIS, of California, on all questions, for the remainder of to-day's session.

Mr. FORSYTHE with Mr. RICHARDSON, of South Carolinia, on the funding bill, for the balance of this legislative day, Mr. RICHARDSON reserving the right to vote if it be necessary to make a quorum. If Mr. FORSYTHE were present, Mr. RICHARDSON would vote "ay."

Mr. BOYD with Mr. STEELE, for the balance of this day.

Mr. AIKEN with Mr. MCGOWAN, for the remainder of this day; Mr. AIKEN to be allowed to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. PHISTER with Mr. CAMP, for two hours; Mr. CAMP reserving the right to vote on all votes to call the yeas and nays, and to make a quorum.

Mr. BEALE with Mr. WAIT, upon all yea-and-nay votes after six o'clock to-day.

Mr. TALBOTT with Mr. URNER, on all political questions; Mr. TALBOTT reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. BLISS with Mr. BELFORD, for the rest of the day.

Mr. HAYES with Mr. KING, for the remainder of the day, but not to break a quorum.

Mr. RUSSELL of Massachusetts, with Mr. SPRINGER, on this vote.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

Mr. CONGER. I move that the House now take a recess until eight o'clock this evening, to meet for the memorial services of Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, late a member of this House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan moves that the House take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. TUCKER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. As I understand the question before the House prior to the motion of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] is, Shall the apportionment bill be considered? Is it not?

The SPEAKER. Pending that question, the gentleman from Michigan moves to take a recess.

Mr. TUCKER. The question of consideration is raised by the gentleman on the other side?

Mr. KEIFER. No, sir; by the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE.]

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman from Kentucky raised the point against the consideration, but the motion to consider comes from your side. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] and his friends are anxious now to consider the bill to prevent the consideration of which they filibustered a day and a night.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the regular order, which I believe is my motion.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. CONGER for a recess, there were—ayes 81, noes 92.

Mr. CONGER and Mr. WHITE called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CONGER. I want it to be understood the motion is that the House take a recess until eight o'clock, to meet then for the memorial services of Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, late a member of the House.

The SPEAKER. The form of the motion as recognized by the rules is for a recess. The gentleman can state for information what is his object.

Mr. CONGER. That is the object of my motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not repeat that part of the gentleman's statement, because it is not a part of the motion.

Mr. CONGER. I was afraid the proposition was not understood by gentlemen on the other side.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 81, nays 104, not voting 105; as follows:

YEAS—81.

Aldrich, N. W.	Crapo,	Jorgensen,	Russell, W. A.
Aldrich, William	Crowley,	Joyce,	Shallenberger,
Bailey,	Davis, George R.	Keifer,	Sherwin,
Baker,	De La Matyr,	Ketcham,	Smith, A. Herr
Ballou,	Dick,	Lapham,	Speer,
Bayne,	Dunnell,	McCoid,	Starin,
Bingham,	Felton,	McCook,	Thomas,
Bisbee,	Fisher,	Miles,	Thompson, W. G.
Blake,	Fort,	Miller,	Townsend, Amos
Bowman,	Godshalk,	Monroe,	Tyler,
Brewer,	Hall,	Morton,	Updegraff, J. T.
Browne,	Hammond, John	Newberry,	Updegraff, Thomas
Burrows,	Harris, Benj. W.	Norcross,	Van Aernam,
Butterworth,	Hawk,	O'Neill,	Voorhis,
Cannon,	Hawley,	Osmer,	Washburn,
Carpenter,	Hazelton,	Overton,	White,
Caswell,	Heilman,	Prescott,	Wilber,
Claflin,	Hiscock,	Price,	Wood.
Conger,	Horr,	Ray,
Covert,	Hubbell,	Reed,
Cowgill,	Humphrey,	Richardson, D. P.

NAYS—104.

Acklen,	Cravens,	Hunton,	Sawyer,
Armfield,	Culberson,	Hurd,	Scales,
Atkins,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Jones,	Scoville,
Bachman,	Deuster,	Kelley,	Shelley,
Beltzhoover,	Dibrell,	Kenna,	Simonton,
Berry,	Dunn,	Kimmel,	Singleton, J. W.
Blackburn,	Elam,	Kitchin,	Smith, William E.
Blount,	Ellis,	Klotz,	Sparks,
Bouck,	Evins,	Ladd,	Springer,
Bragg,	Forney,	Le Fevre,	Stevenson,
Bright,	Frost,	Lowe,	Taylor, Robert L.
Buckner,	Geddes,	Manning,	Tillman,
Cabell,	Gibson,	Martin, Benj. F.	Tucker,
Caldwell,	Gillette,	McKenzie,	Turner, Oscar
Carlisle,	Goode,	McMahon,	Upson,
Chalmers,	Gunter,	McMillin,	Vance,
Clardy,	Hammond, N. J.	Mills,	Waddill,
Clark, John B.	Harris, John T.	Morrison,	Warner,
Clements,	Hatch,	Muldrow,	Weaver,
Clymer,	Henkle,	New,	Wellborn,
Cobb,	Herbert,	Persons,	Wells,
Coffroth,	Herndon,	Poehler,	Whiteaker,
Colerick,	Hill,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Converse,	Hooker,	Richmond,	Willis,
Cook,	Hostetler,	Robertson,	Wilson,
Cox,	House,	Samford,	Wise.

NOT VOTING—105.

Aiken,	Brigham,	Einstein,	Henry,
Anderson,	Calkins,	Errett,	Houk,
Atherton,	Camp,	Ewing,	Hutchins,
Barber,	Chittenden,	Ferdon,	James,
Barlow,	Clark, Alvah A.	Finley,	Johnston,
Beale,	Daggett,	Ford,	Killinger,
Belford,	Davidson,	Forsythe,	King,
Bicknell,	Davis, Horace	Frye,	Knott,
Bland,	Davis, Joseph J.	Harmer,	Lindsey,
Bliss,	Deering,	Haskell,	Loring,
Boyd,	Dickey,	Hayes,	Lounsbery,
Briggs,	Dwight,	Henderson,	Marsh,

Martin, Edward L.	O'Reilly,	Ryan, Thomas	Valentine,
Mason,	Orth,	Ryon, John W.	Van Voorhis,
McGowan,	Pacheco,	Sapp,	Wait,
McKinley,	Page,	Singleton, O. R.	Ward,
McLane,	Phelps,	Slemons,	Whitthorne,
Mitchell,	Philips,	Smith, Hezekiah B.	Williams, C. G.
Money,	Phister,	Steele,	Willits,
Morse,	Pound,	Stephens,	Wright,
Muller,	Rice,	Stone,	Yeates,
Murch,	Richardson, J. S.	Talbott,	Yocum,
Myers,	Robeson,	Taylor, Ezra B.	Young, Casey
Neal,	Robinson,	Thompson, P. B.	Young, Thomas L.
Nicholls,	Ross,	Townshend, R. W.
O'Brien,	Rothwell,	Turner, Thomas
O'Connor,	Russell, Daniel L.	Urner,

So the motion of Mr. CONGER for a recess was not agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, with Mr. JOYCE, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. MARSH with Mr. DICKEY, for the remainder of this day.

Mr. KENNA with Mr. WARD, for the remainder of this day, except when necessary to make a quorum.

Mr. HASKELL with Mr. PHILIPS, on all questions until seven o'clock p. m. to-day.

Mr. JOHNSTON with Mr. ANDERSON, for to-day.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois, with Mr. MILES, until to-morrow.

Mr. ROSS with Mr. WILLIAMS, of Wisconsin.

Mr. ROBINSON with Mr. KNOTT, for the rest of the day.

Mr. RICE with Mr. NICHOLLS, until seven o'clock p. m.

Mr. DAVIDSON with Mr. BRIGGS, until Tuesday morning.

Mr. CRAPO with Mr. GIBSON, for this day, except to make a quorum.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

Mr. CONGER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to take a recess.

Mr. COOK, Mr. MILLS, and others. How did the gentleman vote?

Mr. CONGER. The names have not been read. The House does not know.

The SPEAKER. The record is here.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to raise a question as to whether a motion can be made to reconsider a vote on taking a recess.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read from Rule XVIII.

The Clerk read as follows:

RECONSIDERATION.

When a motion has been made and carried or lost it shall be in order for any member of the majority, on the same or succeeding day, to move for the reconsideration thereof, and such motion shall take precedence of all other questions except the consideration of a conference report, a motion to fix the day to which the House shall adjourn, to adjourn, or to take a recess, and shall not be withdrawn after the said succeeding day without the consent of the House, and therefore any member may call it up for consideration: Provided, That such motion if made during the last six days of a session shall be disposed of when made.

The SPEAKER. The Chair finds that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] did not vote on the prevailing side.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the reading of the record.

The SPEAKER. It has been read once.

Mr. CONGER. I understood that the record had been sent to the Printer, and could not be obtained.

The SPEAKER. The record is here.

Mr. CONGER. I withdraw my motion to reconsider, and move that the House do now adjourn. I make this motion because the House has refused to take a recess for the funeral obsequies of Mr. WOOD.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, there were—ayes 35, noes 61.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 12, nays 117, not voting 161; as follows:

YEAS—12.

Burrows,	Hall,	Horr,	Osmer,
Cox,	Hammond, John	Humphrey,	Russell, W. A.
Fisher,	Hiscock,	Ketcham,	White.

NAYS—117.

Acklen,	Cobb,	Herndon,	O'Neill,
Aldrich, William	Coffroth,	Hill,	Persons,
Armfield,	Colerick,	Hooker,	Philips,
Atherton,	Conger,	Hostetler,	Poehler,
Atkins,	Converse,	House,	Prescott,
Bailey,	Cook,	Hubbell,	Price,
Baker,	Crapo,	Hunton,	Ray,
Barber,	Cravens,	Jorgensen,	Reagan,
Beltzhoover,	Culberson,	Kelley,	Richardson, D. P.
Berry,	De La Matyr,	Kenna,	Richmond,
Bisbee,	Dibrell,	Kimmel,	Robertson,
Blackburn,	Elam,	Kitchin,	Ryon, John W.
Blake,	Ellis,	Lapham,	Samford,
Blount,	Ford,	Le Fevre,	Sawyer,
Bouck,	Forney,	Lounsbery,	Scales,
Bragg,	Frost,	Lowe,	Scoville,
Browne,	Frye,	Marsh,	Shallenberger,
Butterworth,	Geddes,	McCoid,	Shelley,
Cabell,	Goode,	McKinley,	Sherwin,
Cannon,	Gunter,	McMahon,	Simonton,
Carlisle,	Hammond, N. J.	McMillin,	Springer,
Carpenter,	Harris, John T.	Mills,	Stevenson,
Chalmers,	Hatch,	Morrison,	Thomas,
Claflin,	Hawk,	Morton,	Tillman,
Clardy,	Henkle,	New,	Townsend, Amos
Clymer,	Herbert,	Norcross,	Tucker,
Turner, Oscar	Vance,	Wilber,	Yocum.
Upson,	Waddill,	Williams, Thomas
Valentine,	Wellborn,	Willis,
Van Aernam,	Whiteaker,	Wilson,

NOT VOTING—161.

Aiken,	Dunn,	Martin, Edward L.	Slemons,
Aldrich, N. W.	Dunnell,	Mason,	Smith, A. Herr
Anderson,	Dwight,	McCook,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bachman,	Einstein,	McGowan,	Smith, William E.
Ballou,	Errett,	McKenzie,	Sparks,
Barlow,	Evins,	McLane,	Speer,
Bayne,	Ewing,	Miles,	Starin,
Beale,	Felton,	Miller,	Steele,
Belford,	Ferdon	Mitchell,	Stephens,
Bicknell,	Finley,	Money,	Stone,
Bingham,	Forsythe,	Monroe,	Talbott,
Bland,	Fort,	Morse,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Bliss,	Gibson,	Muldrow,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bowman,	Gillette,	Muller,	Thompson, P. B.
Boyd,	Godshalk,	Murch,	Thompson, W. G.
Brewer,	Harmer,	Myers,	Townshend, R. W.
Briggs,	Harris, Benj. W.	Neal,	Turner, Thomas
Brigham,	Haskell,	Newberry,	Tyler,
Bright,	Hawley,	Nicholls,	Updegraff, J. T.
Buckner,	Hayes,	O'Brien,	Updegraff, Thomas
Caldwell,	Hazelton,	O'Connor,	Urner,
Calkins,	Heilman,	O'Reilly,	Voorhis,
Camp,	Henderson,	Orth,	Van Voorhis,
Caswell,	Henry,	Overton,	Wait,
Chittenden,	Houk,	Pacheco,	Ward,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hurd,	Page,	Warner,
Clark, John B.	Hutchins,	Phelps,	Washburn,
Clements,	James,	Phister,	Weaver,
Covert,	Johnston,	Pound,	Wells,
Cowgill,	Jones,	Reed,	Whitthorne,
Crowley,	Joyce,	Rice,	Williams, C. G.
Daggett,	Keifer,	Richardson, J. S.	Willits,
Davidson,	Killinger,	Robeson,	Wise,
Davis, George R.	King,	Robinson,	Wood,
Davis, Horace	Klotz,	Ross,	Wright,
Davis, Joseph J.	Knott,	Rothwell,	Yeates,
Davis, Lowndes H.	Ladd,	Russell, Daniel L.	Young, Casey
Deering,	Lindsey,	Ryan, Thomas	Young, Thomas L.
Deuster,	Loring,	Sapp,
Dick,	Manning,	Singleton, J. W.
Dickey,	Martin, Benj. F.	Singleton, O. R.

So the motion to adjourn was not agreed to.

Before the result of the vote was announced,

Mr. WILSON moved to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. CONGER. I object to that, for I learn——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman objects; that is all that is necessary.

Mr. CONGER. I learn that the deficiency bill is ready to be reported soon, and I wish to keep this going until that bill comes in.

The names having been read, the result was announced as above stated.

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. REED with Mr. MCKENZIE, for the rest of to-day's session.

Mr. CASWELL with Mr. GEDDES, until ten o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

Mr. PAGE with Mr. MURCH, for the rest of the day.

Mr. EVINS with Mr. MCCOOK, on this vote. If Mr. MCCOOK were present, Mr. EVINS would vote "no."

Mr. WARNER with Mr. HARRIS, of Massachusetts, on this vote.

Mr. CLEMENTS with Mr. OVERTON.

Mr. DEUSTER with Mr. UPDEGRAFF, of Iowa, for the remainder of this legislative day, each party reserving the right to vote to make a quorum or to order the yeas and nays.

Mr. O'CONNOR with Mr. HAWLEY, for the remainder of this legislative day.

Mr. SPARKS with Mr. NEWBERRY, until eight o'clock p. m. to-day, either being at liberty to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. BUCKNER with Mr. BALLOU, for this day.

Mr. SAMFORD with Mr. STARIN.

The result of the vote was announced as above stated.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. WAIT. I now ask that the resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut——

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER,] pending which the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COOK] desires unanimous consent to submit a proposition relative to the use of the National Museum.

USE OF THE MUSEUM HALL.

Mr. COOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to present for consideration a resolution at this time to which I think there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, (the Senate concurring,) That permission is granted to the Washington Light Infantry Corps of the District of Columbia to use the Museum building on Monday evening, the 7th of March, 1881, provided that no expense shall be thereby incurred to the United States.

Mr. CONGER. Let that lie over a day.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that a committee of the company called upon him in respect to this matter. Their object is to give a public reception to the visiting military companies from abroad who are expected to be here at the inauguration. It is represented that there is no other place in the city large enough for the purpose of such a reception, and this request is made in consequence thereof.

Mr. CONGER. I withdraw the objection.

Mr. COOK. I move the adoption of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution.

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, by order of the House on Saturday last it was provided that at eight o'clock this evening the House would proceed to the consideration of the memorial addresses and resolutions in honor of the late Mr. WOOD. I therefore move that the House do now take a recess until eight o'clock in pursuance of that order.

The SPEAKER. Pending that motion the Chair desires to lay before the House certain requests of members.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. MURCH, indefinitely, on account of sickness;

To Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois, on motion of Mr. SPRINGER, during the remainder of the session, on account of serious illness;

To Mr. HUMPHREY, for one day;

To Mr. WILSON, of West Virginia, for this night session;

To Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, one day, on account of important business; and

To Mr. ROBESON, for one day, on account of important business.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

Leave to print remarks in the RECORD was granted as follows:

To Mr. ALDRICH, of Rhode Island, on the bill to fund the 8 per cent. certificates of the District of Columbia. [See Appendix.]

To Mr. HAWK, remarks and compilation upon the subject of the militia. [See Appendix.]

To Mr. HENKLE, on the proposed Maryland and Delaware ship-canal. [See Appendix.]

To Mr. WILBER, upon the funding bill. [See Appendix.]

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, leave to withdraw papers in the case of George Cloudt from the Committee on Claims was granted to Mr. UPSON, there being no adverse report.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the deficiency appropriation bill is about ready to be reported from the committee for printing and reference, and I will therefore modify, if permitted to do so, the motion for a recess, so as to make it until a quarter before eight instead of eight o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Virginia before doing so to allow the Chair to send a messenger to the room of the Committee on Appropriations to ascertain the fact.

Mr. TUCKER. I will say further, Mr. Speaker, in order that there may be no misapprehension, that at the close of the memorial services this evening there will be a motion to adjourn and no business will be pressed upon the consideration of the House.

I am requested by several gentlemen to yield to them before pressing the motion for a recess for the purpose of making some requests of the House.

Mr. CONGER. Before that question is decided I desire to have it distinctly understood that no other business shall be transacted after the memorial services are concluded; but that the House shall then adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would not be willing to allow any disrespect to the memory of the dead. On such occasions the invariable rule has been to adjourn. The Chair has never known an occasion when such a thing was permitted to be done as to take up and consider any other business.

Mr. CONGER. If that is the understanding, I shall be satisfied.

Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table and put upon its passage the bill (S. No. 1334) for the relief of Charles H. Frank. This bill has a unanimous recommendation from the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House, and there is no objection to it from any quarter.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

Mr. SIMONTON. While the clerks are finding the Senate bill to which the gentleman from New Hampshire refers, I would like to ask unanimous consent to pass the bill which I send to the desk. This bill is reported unanimously by the Committee on Claims to pay an old woman some pension money due her. The original certificate was lost, and this simply authorizes the issue of a new certificate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill referred to by the gentleman from New Hampshire.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. No. 1334) for the relief of Charles H. Frank.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. WARNER. What is this? How are we proceeding here?

The SPEAKER. By consent.

Mr. RAY. I will explain that this bill passed the Senate. It is unanimously recommended by the House Committee on Invalid Pensions. This man is a poor paralytic, and this bill is simply to allow an increase of his pension.

Mr. WARNER. Why is a special act necessary? Why cannot the pension be granted by the Department?

Mr. RAY. He has a small pension now; but it is recommended to be increased to $50 per month because of his condition.

Mr. WARNER. By whom?

Mr. RAY. By the House Committee on Invalid Pensions, and also by the Senate. I call for the reading of the report, which will explain the case, if my friend desires it.

Mr. WARNER. I think we had better proceed regularly in all these cases. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is on the motion for a recess until eight o'clock.

CONFEREES ON RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to state that the conferees on the river and harbor appropriation bill desired to have a meeting to-night at eight o'clock, but Mr. HAWLEY, one of the conferees on the part of the House, wishes to be excused from serving because of a previous engagement. I therefore request that the Chair appoint some one in his place.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint Mr. BROWNE to fill the vacancy.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. I now renew my motion that the House take a recess until eight o'clock p. m.

Mr. WAIT. The gentleman from Virginia said he would give me an opportunity to move to have the resolution I offered this morning printed in the RECORD. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia that the House take a recess until eight o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at six o'clock and thirty-five minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until eight o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session at eight p. m.

CEREMONIES IN MEMORY OF THE LATE HON. FERNANDO WOOD.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order. Rev. Dr. BULLOCK, Chaplain of the Senate, will offer prayer.

The Chaplain of the Senate, Rev. J. J. BULLOCK, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and ever living God, who art the maker of our bodies, the Father of our spirits, and the disposer of all events, we invoke Thy blessing to rest upon the services of this solemn occasion.

In Thine inscrutable Providence during the last days of this Congress it hath seemed good unto Thee to remove from this world by the hand of death two of the most distinguished members of this National Legislature. We pray that these solemn events may be deeply impressed upon the minds and hearts of all those who have been associated with them in guiding and directing the affairs of this great country. May they be led by these solemn dispensations of Thy Providence to consider their latter end and to see the importance of being prepared for their departure when it is Thy will to call them hence. For it is certainly true that it is appointed unto all men once to die, and after death the judgment; and that neither wealth, nor talent, nor high position can arrest the footsteps of death, the great destroyer of human hopes and human expectations.

And we pray that we all give heed to the solemn warning that comes from the vacant chairs clad in sackcloth that were recently filled by those who are now numbered among the dead. We do beseech Thee, Our Father, that, seeing that life is so short and so uncertain, and that death and judgment and eternity are certainly before us, we may so live that when the summons of death shall be put into our hands we shall be ready to die in peace and in the confident expectation of a glorious immortality.

We pray for the blessing of Almighty God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost to abide upon us, now and forever. Amen.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will cause the order of the House under which this evening's session is held to be now read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SATURDAY, February 26, 1881.

Mr. TUCKER, by unanimous consent, submitted the following order; which was read, considered, and agreed to:

"Ordered, That the ceremonies fixed for Sunday (to-morrow) at three p. m., in commemoration of the late Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, be postponed until Monday evening, at eight o'clock, and that the Senate be advised of the change."

Mr. COX. I am directed by the delegation of New York State to present the resolutions for our action this evening, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas the House of Representatives has heard with feelings of unaffected grief the announcement of the death of Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, a Representative in Congress from the ninth district of the State of New York:

Resolved, That in the loss of our late associate in legislative life we deplore one of the ablest counselors of our nation, whose long public service, beginning forty years ago, in municipal as well as in Federal life, were given with energy, intelligence, sagacity, and courage to what seemed to him the best interests of his great city, the Empire State, and the entire country; and for his supreme and undaunted devotion to duty, even to the end of his illustrious career, and his unswerving loyalty to his convictions and to the Constitution of our land, we desire to testify our unaffected condolence with his family, his constituents, his city, and his State.

Resolved, That the Clerk of this House be directed to present this public expression of the sorrow felt by this House in its loss to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect for the memory of the deceased, this House do now adjourn.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the Doorkeeper be directed to admit ladies and gentlemen to the floor of the House during these services, and that the House take a recess for five minutes while this order is being executed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the Doorkeeper be directed to admit to the floor ladies and gentlemen who are unable to find seats in the gallery. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The gentleman from Illinois also asks that the House take a recess for five minutes. The Chair hears no objection.

Accordingly (at eight o'clock and ten minutes p. m.) the House took a recess for five minutes.

The recess having expired, the House resumed its session at eight o'clock and fifteen minutes p. m.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, death has cast the shadow of his dread presence over both Legislative Chambers of the Capitol. He has taken from this House one who was oldest in public service, and distinguished for his ability and experience; and more recently has quenched the brilliant light of the gifted and eloquent Senator from Wisconsin.

To-night, we are met to pay a just tribute of respect to the memory of our late associate, Hon. FERNANDO WOOD, a Representative from the State of New York; for four years chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and for nearly forty years a conspicuous figure in American politics.

The broad, deep river which rolls its majestic waters to the sea, with scarcely a ripple on its bosom, tells but little of the movements of the mountain stream it once was, of the chasms it has leaped, of the precipices over which it has fallen, of the mountains through which it has cleft its way, of its devious course to avoid what it could not surmount, until in its well-defined channel it becomes the source of blessing to all within the range of its beneficent influence.

So is it often with "this pleasing, anxious being" of our common humanity. In its primary stages it is marked by vigorous, sometimes vehement, struggles to free or avoid the obstructions to progress and success. In the antagonisms of an early career criticisms just and unjust upon the motives to action generate hostilities which as life goes on are modified, alleged, or removed; and as we near the period when it shall empty itself into the eternal and infinite "life beyond life," we cease to strive and struggle, but with the momentum of an early, resistless force we may hope to achieve, with calm and self-contained power, the highest and noblest purposes of a pure and chastened ambition.

To trace the career of so sagacious a public man as Mr. WOOD to its early stages would be a matter of interest, as it always is to see how the germs of later success were laid in the experiences of youth, and thus to find how true it is that "the child is father to the man." My personal acquaintance with him, however, having begun in the Forty-fourth Congress, I have no materials from which to speak with accuracy of his previous life. I shall leave to some other member to do this more satisfactorily than in my ignorance of it I could hope to do.

FERNANDO WOOD was born on the 14th of June, 1812, just four days before the declaration of war against Great Britain. His infant slumbers in his quiet Quaker home in the City of Brotherly Love were broken by the sounds of war; and I can well imagine that in his childhood, from hearing of the battles and victories of our then young Union, he imbibed much of that patriotic pride and devotion to his own country for which he was remarkable in his later utterances.

In his boyhood tradition relates that when engaged in manual labor his employer predicted failure for him, because while at work with his hands his eye was fixed on a book kept open before him. This thirst for the information which reading affords indicated an early self-consciousness of fitness for higher work and for more important functions. Before his majority he went into the shipping business, and by his prudence, sagacity, and energy realized a fortune. In 1841 he first became a member of this House, being elected when the whirlwind of popular feeling swept Mr. Van Buren and the democratic party from power and placed the executive and legislative branches of this Government in the hands of the whig party. I was curious to see the position of Mr. WOOD upon the sharply drawn issues of that memorable period.

His first appearance was in offering a resolution of inquiry respecting the rights of American citizens, said to have been unlawfully imprisoned by British authority in Van Dieman's land, an inquiry indicative of his jealous regard for the liberty of his fellow-citizens.

He stood with the democratic party against the re-establishment of the Bank of the United States. He spoke with earnestness against the perpetuation of a national debt; opposing all the ideas indulged in then as now of a splendid Government as contrary to the simple and economic views of the fathers of our republican system.

His opposition to a tariff for protection was very decided, and his thoughts upon free trade were boldly expressed. They were obviously inspired by the probability of that great change in British policy which a few years later was carried by Sir Robert Peel in the overthrow of the corn laws forever.

Mr. WOOD said:

The spirit of the age is tending toward free trade. The nations of Europe have recently become anxious inquirers into its political and social advantages. The general assimilation of customs regulations, the mutual dependence of an unfettered intercourse, the beautiful and harmonious working of a system, beyond the control of ambition or avarice, would in time bind mankind in bonds of amity, good-will, and peace, driving war and famine forever from the world.

This was the language of a young statesman, not yet thirty years of age—and to the views thus expressed he consistently adhered to the end.

He served but one term at that time. He continued to co-operate with the democratic party, and after its schism in 1848, he refused to follow Mr. Van Buren in that presidential election as the candidate of the free-soil party.

As a southern man, I should do injustice to the dead if I did not here mention that during the whole period of sectional strife prior to the civil war, when the free-soil democracy and the newly-born republican party assailed what the South regarded as her constitutional rights, Mr. WOOD upheld the equal right of the South to participate in the settlement of the great domain for colonization by the old States which had been won by the equal contribution of the valor and treasure of the North and South.

He was three times elected mayor of the city of New York, serving as such in 1855-'56-'57 and in 1861-'62. In this position he exhibited rare executive ability and acquired great distinction.

He was elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress and subsequently, serving as a Representative in this House nearly eighteen years altogether, and was re-elected to the Forty-seventh Congress.

Mr. WOOD was a member of the Committee on Ways and Means in the Forty-fourth Congress, and led, upon reporting the bill from the committee, the friends of the measure for carrying into effect the Hawaiian treaty. Though I differed with him on that question, I take occasion to say he supported the measure with ability, and its success was largely due to his energy and activity.

He was chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means for the last four years. His name is associated with the tariff bill which was defeated in May, 1878. But more especially will his name be associated with the bill introduced by him and referred to the committee, and afterward in a modified form reported by him to the House in March, 1880, for refunding the public debt, and which with amendments passed this House in January last.

Whatever opinions may be entertained of that measure, no man in this House can ever forget the manly, almost heroic, persistence with which, though tortured by a painful disease, and even when the stamp of death was visible in his face, Mr. WOOD came and stood at his post day after day until the bill passed. It was touching to hear him speak of it and of his connection with it as a triumph for the public credit of our country.

Nor will any of us ever forget the earnestness with which the dying man on the 15th of January last uttered these patriotic words, almost the last he ever spoke in this Hall, seemingly prophetic of his end:

This nation stands to-day upon her imperial power. Her resources in the earth and above the earth, in the manly industry and energy of her people, are as ten to one compared with those of any other nation in the world. I for one, in the expiring hours of a public life of forty years, will never consent that this great country shall hawk its credit through the money markets of the world. [Applause.]

He went away with little hope ever to return. He felt his life-work was done. He died tranquilly, in peace, and without pain. We have committed his body to his mother earth; his spirit has returned to God, who gave it.

Mr. WOOD'S mind was active and vigorous. It was practical rather than philosophic, dealing more with the concrete than the abstract. His judgment and sagacity about men and things were marked qualities of his mental constitution. He had much general information, and while from lack of early training and the mental discipline which the higher education secures his mind was not as accurate and logical as it might otherwise have been, yet his strong common sense, his keen and clear knowledge of men, and his large information on subjects of business and politics made him a wise and sagacious actor in the affairs of his time.

He had courage, fortitude, and a persistent energy which was success for his projects, when men of more intellect without these moral qualities would have failed.

His presence was striking; his style in debate was impressive and dignified; his manners were courteous; and in the intercourse of the home they were genial and full of kindness. He was very decided in his opinions and strong in his convictions, and stout and brave in their assertion and maintenance.

His hospitality was generous and warm. In all the relations of his family, he was gentle, affectionate, and true.

It has been my duty thus to speak of Mr. WOOD in his public relations, as I have known him for six years as his associate in this House and on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Having filled the measure of his life, he has met its responsibilities and has passed away from these scenes of busy, active strife forever.

Brother Representatives, standing at the grave of our dead comrade, let us resolve that we will meet our life responsibilities (the more solemn when we look on death!) in the fear of God and for the best interests of our common country!

Let a pure love of country, our whole country, inspire that earnest and harmonious co-operation for the promotion of its real interests and its true glory without which all our labor will be in vain.

In the presence of this solemn event and under a deep sense of our responsibility to our country and to our God, may it teach us so to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom!

Mr. HUTCHINS. Mr. Speaker, the members of the Forty-sixth Congress have three times been called to pause and contemplate the reality of death. To-day another vacant seat, dressed with the emblems of mourning, reminds us that we are gathered for a similar purpose. It might seem that this event so common would be viewed by us all without emotion. But this is not so. The heart, the head, and the hand join in this solemn tribute of respect for the dead. When men who are pursuing the business of life with an earnestness that absorbs their whole being, and making haste to accomplish the purposes of ambition, stand on the threshold of the inexorable grave and acknowledge the fact that "all flesh is as grass," it is an event calculated to teach lessons of profit, if rightly considered.

The man dies, but his deeds live. The art of printing and the mighty elements of nature now impressed into the service of mankind give every action upon the stage of life the meed of immortality and hand down to posterity the good and the evil of each generation. Should not this fact prompt us to an exalted patriotism and to earnest efforts looking to the greatest good of the greatest number of our fellow-citizens?

The record of FERNANDO WOOD'S life, covering an important period of our country's history, is full of deep interest and instruction. He was born June 14, 1812, in the city of Philadelphia. The fact that his ancestors were Quakers conveys to us the idea that he began life with practical and solid notions of men and things. His parents took him to New York City in 1820, where were enacted the busy scenes of his earnest and eventful life. When fourteen years of age he became a merchant's clerk, afterward a skilled mechanic; and when twenty years old, we find him struggling to establish himself in mercantile business. He battled for the prize of success with varied results until 1840. When only twenty-eight years of age his ambition, after repeated efforts, was rewarded by his election to the Twenty-seventh Congress. This Congress enrolled among its members John Quincy Adams, Millard Fillmore, Caleb Cushing, Robert C. Winthrop, Henry A. Wise, R. M. T. Hunter, and others, afterward equally honored and eminent in the annals of the nation. The Senate at that time was also composed of many statesmen of great ability. Mr. WOOD not only enjoyed the acquaintance of these eminent men, but took part in their earnest debates when the great and far-reaching questions of that day were being settled by the master minds of the Republic. Such was the school in which our deceased colleague was trained, where he had the benefit of the ablest intellects, the wisest statesmen, and the profoundest thinkers of the day. No doubt his subsequent public career was largely influenced by the forces imparted to his mind and his principles at this epoch of his life.

During the session of this Congress Professor Morse made application for aid to perfect the magnetic telegraph of which he was the inventor; Mr. WOOD had a keen appreciation of its merits, and acting upon his own judgment rendered him such valuable aid that Professor Morse in after years, and in the day of his great triumph, was wont to say that he regarded his success as largely due to Mr. WOOD.

On the expiration of his congressional term Mr. WOOD re-entered mercantile life, in which he met with marked success. In 1850 he again entered into the arena of politics, when he was the democratic candidate for mayor of the city of New York, but was defeated. In 1854 he was again the candidate of his party and elected. During the term of his service he was the earnest advocate of establishing the Central Park, and initiated measures which resulted in its becoming a success. He invited Washington Irving, George C. Bancroft, William Cullen Bryant, and other distinguished citizens to consult with him in devising plans for this great breathing place for future millions of the metropolis. Thus was New York City and the Western World largely indebted to Mr. WOOD for this successful enterprise which is becoming the central school of natural history—of the liberal arts and the depository of relics of greatness and grandeur of ancient and modern times.

He was re-elected mayor in 1856 and again in 1859. During his term as chief magistrate of the city of New York he originated the uniforming the police, which innovation has since grown into a universal custom in the cities of our country. The great abuses which had become common in the municipal government from negligence, want of discipline, and executive incapacity were inquired into, and reformed by the assistance of his practical good sense. Evil-doers in their secret haunts were discovered by the enforcement of new police regulations and restraint, exposure, or punishment meted out to them. He determined to make his adopted city a model of good government and he succeeded in so doing by his persistent and energetic efforts. It may be said of our deceased friend that during his administration of the office of mayor no man was ever abused more unsparingly than he, but he did his duty so fearlessly, and to all appearances so conscientiously, as to win the praise of unprejudiced minds.

Mr. WOOD was returned to the Thirty-eighth Congress, and from that time until his death, excepting the Thirty-ninth Congress, was a continuous member of this body. His history for the twenty-one years of his congressional career is intimately interwoven with the history of the period of that service, and the student will find the record of his acts in harmony with the best interests of the financial management of the country, and on the vital questions of currency, tariff, and commerce were conservative and sound, as propounded by the best minds and the closest thinkers of his party. The last public measure which engaged his attention showed his devotion to views that he had adopted after mature consideration, and demonstrated also his intense earnestness in carrying them to a successful consummation. He came to this House at the beginning of the present session from a sick bed. Day after day he consulted with his colleagues and urged upon them his convictions. He faltered not, though feeble in body and his vital forces nearly worn out, until this, the last public measure which bears his name, was approved by us. When it had received our sanction, he remarked, with a presentiment of his near death, "This ends a period of forty years' public service." Then his physical nature yielded to the force of disease and in a last effort to recuperate he fell a victim to death.

When success runs through the warp and woof of a whole life-time the measure of a man's greatness is the result of his fidelity to popular interests. Such is the philosophy by which to form our judgment of public men. Judged by this rule, as a merchant, as the chief magistrate of the first city of the Union, as a representative in the United States Congress of a large and intelligent constituency, the life of our late distinguished associate may be regarded as a triumphant success.

In looking at the elements of Mr. WOOD'S character we find that he was self-reliant to a wonderful degree. He was active and energetic in the pursuit of every object that engaged his attention, and also in the discharge of all public duties. His life was a stormy one, and the reason is obvious when we realize that he was a man strong in his convictions and fearless in their expression. Hence he made enemies, and he seldom endeavored to conciliate them.

The courtly dignity of his carriage and the suavity of his manners was a noted characteristic of the man. His bearing upon this floor was always unexceptional, and we might profit by imitating its propriety and befitting manliness.

Thus having labored diligently in the public service for two-score years, and lived the allotted period of human life, he died with his armor on, a true type of the American citizen, ripe in deeds of public interest and full of honors.

Mr. LAPHAM. Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to dwell at length upon the topics naturally suggested by the occasion which has called us together or to pronounce an elaborate eulogy or take an extended biographical notice of the life and labors of our deceased colleague. The gentlemen who have preceded me have made it unnecessary for me to do so. The event is not one calculated to excite that intense grief we have felt at times when the destroyer has snatched from our midst those who were just entering upon a public career of honor and usefulness.

Mr. WOOD had nearly filled up the measure allotted to human life, and has fallen at last, as the ripened grain falls before the reaper's sickle. Such a passing away is a harvest, not a blight.

My acquaintance with him personally began with my entrance to the Forty-fourth Congress, in December, 1875. I thus met him as one of the leaders of the dominant party in this House, flushed by a great political victory just then achieved. I had known and heard of him as a most devoted partisan, and therefore watched his course and conduct as a Representative with more than ordinary care and interest. His example from that time till he left this Hall never to return was such that I can bear cheerful testimony how often he abjured partisanship and rose to the higher duties devolved upon him by the demands of statesmanship. Years had tempered the ardor of his zeal as a politician, and ripened his judgment for the discharge of the more dignified duties of a statesman. He was an earnest advocate of a measure when once espoused by him, but he brought to its advocacy that calmness and dignity which rendered his earnestness less offensive to those with whom he differed in opinion. Which one of all those who listened to him in one of his last efforts on this floor will ever forget the example in this respect which he has left for our imitation? The patient earnestness with which he pressed to a conclusion a measure which he had come to believe so deeply concerned the public welfare and which his impressive and eloquent words proved he was conscious would be the last and crowning act of a long and eventful public service here. He had convinced himself that a Government loan at 3 per cent. interest could be successfully floated, (a conclusion in which I then thought and still think he was in error.) His colleague, [Mr. HUTCHINS,] who has preceded me on this occasion, had taken issue with him upon the subject. "Such a loan (said he) as is here proposed has never been floated. I do not believe it can be." The closing sentences of Mr. WOOD'S reply, to which reference has already been made, were in these words:

This nation stands to-day upon her imperial power. Her resources in the earth and above the earth, in the manly industry and energy of her people are as ten to one compared with those of any other nation in the world. I, for one, in the expiring hours of a public life of forty years, will never consent that this great country shall hawk its credit through the money markets of the world.

This was on the 15th of January last. On the 19th the bill passed the House. His work was done. His labors as a Representative were ended. He left the theater in which he had so long been a prominent actor never to return. This was not to have been the close of his service had his life been spared. He had been honored by an election to the Forty-seventh Congress. His touching allusion to the "expiring hours" of his "public life" foreshadowed the end which so soon came.

A greater than any living writer has said:

> The sense of death is most in apprehension,
> And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
> In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
> As when a giant dies.

This sense our departed friend most clearly realized, and yet his resolute, manly, and almost perilous struggle with the great enemy in the weary journey he undertook—the effort thus made to > Hold death awhile at the arm's end—was characteristic of the energy manifested in his whole life, and of a determination to spare no effort to avert for a time his coming fate.

> At least we'll die with harness on our back—was the language of his example.

And so, dying in a distant State, his mortal remains were returned by loving hands and with official fidelity and care to the residence in this city where he had so many years dispensed a generous and almost princely hospitality, and where his obsequies were held, to be taken thence to the place he had selected for their burial.

Mr. WOOD'S services as a Representative (and it is of him in that respect that I speak) were of the most exalted character. He was industrious and punctual in the performance of every duty. He avoided no labor properly cast upon him. He was kind to all classes of applicants for favor in legislation who sought his aid and whose claims he believed just. He was also courteous to younger and less experienced members of the House. In the committee-room and on the floor he was a model Representative. We shall miss his manly presence among us; and it may be many years before, in these respects, we shall look upon his like again.

Mr. LOUNSBERY. Mr. Speaker, the voice of my colleague but lately sounded in this Hall. To-day it is forever hushed. His body lies sepulchered with the dead. The mournful duties of his associates connected with his obsequies close with the present hour. I shall not indulge in fulsome adulation; but I shall mingle with others in making a truthful portraiture of a life largely devoted to the public service, and ended while engaged in a most earnest and exhausting struggle in the interest of his country. I would render here the lesson of his life, bred of self-instruction and determined effort; projected among a people of which he was truly a part, and ended amid duties that had become congenial to his habits and nature.

FERNANDO WOOD was born in 1812, at Philadelphia, where his parents were temporarily residing. He was reared in New York City. At the age of thirteen years, on his own account but with the consent of his parents, he took employment in a book-store, and thenceforward supported himself and educated himself. Very young he took part in the local politics of his city, and at the age of twenty-eight was elected to Congress from one of the city districts, and served for two years in the same Congress with Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, and John C. Calhoun, forming an intimate acquaintance with the two latter.

He returned at the end of his term, with his business broken up by his political services and with the resolve never more to participate in politics, but to devote himself exclusively to building up a fortune. He adhered to this resolution until he had succeeded to his satisfaction. He had been successful in business. He had built up a shipping trade which with several fortunate ventures had made him in 1854 an accumulation of gains on which he felt justified in retiring from active business. He had had the sagacity when the gold discoveries made California a field for adventures to land several cargoes of goods at San Francisco and with the profits to purchase real estate there. He also bought real estate in New York City, and with the growing prosperity of the country he became a man of wealth as that word was used at that time. He then again felt able to indulge his old fondness for politics, and he was elected mayor of New York in 1854 and re-elected for two subsequent terms. In 1862 he was elected to a seat in Congress from the ninth New York district, and he has without break held this seat. It seemed to be the fixed determination of his constituents to continue him in Congress till his death. At the last election, though continuously confined to his house by sickness, and though his party was divided by rival factions, he was again elected to his tenth successive term. This term by reason of his death he has not been able to enter upon.

His congressional services connect the deceased with an eventful period of his country's history. He sat in this Hall while the Representatives of many of the States were absent from their seats by secession; while a war of the sections was in active progress; while reconstruction was emerging by conflicting propositions; while the waste of war was giving place to restoration; and while the credit of the country was being rebuilt. When his party came again to a majority in this House he was made chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He participated in the enactment of laws that tended to returning prosperity. He participated in the triumphs of a coin resumption by the Treasury. He saw the Government bonds appreciated in the markets of the world. His voice has hardly yet died along the walls of this Chamber in the eloquent expression of his confidence in the Government credit and in its ability to refund its redeemable indebtedness at the rate of 3 per cent.

I was one of many interested witnesses of his last and most earnest effort. His voice was already broken by approaching dissolution, but his mind was clear. He seemed determined to leave this act impressed upon the financial history of his country as a monument to his legislative career. Those who saw the dying statesman as he retired from the House after the result of the vote upon his bill had been announced were irresistibly reminded of the words of the dying Adams:

> This is the last of earth, and I am content.

This picture in outline is that of a successful career. Of eminence achieved as a legislator under such circumstances as make his case, though not exceptional, sufficiently rare to mark it as a notable event. Though educated to trade, he was not unsuccessful as an orator. Without the learning of the books he had become cultured in statecraft. He was the representative of a class of public men in his country who have succeeded by a positive purpose without the aid of erudition. He was peculiarly the child of his city, and was honored by it because he so fitly represented its growth and its practical habits and methods.

The deceased was magnificent without ostentation. When he was carrying on a shipping trade with immense profits his office was small and ill-furnished. His residence in New York, though princely in its extent and in its appointments, was plain and without ornament to attract the eye of the stranger. At his home in Washington, where he was beyond precedent liberal in his hospitality, he did nothing to attract observation. His funeral obsequies were conducted according to his wishes in such manner as to repel public demonstration to his memory.

The deceased had much store in his family and his fireside. He leaves a surviving family of eleven children, not spoiled by tenderness, but reared under the affectionate eye of a devoted father.

His will, drawn when he had reason to expect a speedy death, shows that his chief concern was to make ample provision for the care of his afflicted widow.

We have put away in his tomb our distinguished associate. A column has fallen not easily replaced. I mourn in him a lost friend. The country has no longer his wise and devoted counsels. His fireside is desolated of his care and protection. We have left only the recollection of a history rounded out to a ripe and complete fruition. We can rest alone in the remembrance of his achievements—

> For memory is the only friend
> That grief can call her own.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, I rise under a deep feeling of emotion. I have parted with a life-long friend. For the last forty years Mr. WOOD and myself have been connected with many of the political events which have successively excited this country; and in his departure I feel as though I was separated from a personal friend with whom I have been associated during that long period of time.

Mr. WOOD was my junior by some four years. The last conversation I had with him was in this Hall, and I inquired of him with regard to his age. He told me he was born on the day that the American Congress declared war against Great Britain in 1812. He was therefore four years my junior. According to the ordinary course of events I should have gone before him. But such is human destiny. We cannot tell what an hour will bring forth.

I am feeble to-night, but I will try to make a few remarks and make myself audible. They cannot be extended. If I were to give a general summary of the character of FERNANDO WOOD I would say he was a man of great industry, of strong will, and positive attributes; that his character for integrity was unquestioned. He filled all his high offices with dignity and purity. He was tenacious of his opinions. They were the result of labor and research as well as the result of honest convictions, convictions formed, not at random, but conclusions deduced from the power of educated and trained thought. Inferences from facts, from long experience in public and private affairs.

As a statesman his ideas were bold, yet conservative. He stood high in the estimation of his colleagues, and in the conflict of opinions his sincerity was never questioned. He was courteous in his manner, not offensive in debate, frank, open, manly, true, and reliable as a friend, and, better than all, he was a gentleman. That is my summary of the character of my colleague and my late distinguished friend.

That he was a man of industry and strong will is manifest by the manner in which he began the great battle of life. Born in my native State, which fact always attached me the more to him, born in humble circumstances, apprenticed in his boyhood, still having always that indomitable will as an element of his character, there was no power that could resist his onward march, and onward he did march; and he marched to conquest and victory, disregarding the ordinary obstacles in the pathway of life.

He entered into mercantile life, and in that he exhibited sagacity and showed that he knew how to manage and control his affairs; when he had accumulated a fortune he had the judgment and discretion to take care of it. That shows conclusively his great industry, his strong will, his positive attributes.

Let me stop here a moment to turn away from the ordinary chain of ceremonies of this kind and say that it is men of such character, men born in obscurity, with will and foresight, and power, who have laid the corner-stones of our great Government; and to their arms we are to intrust the safety and custody of it in all time to come. Mr. WOOD was a living example of what industry, temperance, and labor can accomplish.

Leaving Philadelphia, passing through his apprenticeship, accumulating a fortune as a merchant and showing that he knew how to take care of it, he entered into public life. He became the mayor of the great metropolis of this great country. No man to-day can raise his voice and say that FERNANDO WOOD, in the high office that he held as the mayor of New York, ever failed to discharge properly the duties of that office. He was always at his post, always maintaining the character and dignity of his position, and also maintaining the purity of his own life and conduct.

When he came into public life—I know the time well, because I had been in public life some years before him—when he came into public life there was a class of men from whom he received his earliest instructions such as never again will exist in this country. Why it should be so I do not know. I say nothing in derogation of the character of those who now occupy these two Chambers.

But there was a galaxy of power and learning, influence and integrity, especially in the Senate of the United States, when FERNANDO WOOD entered into public life that never before existed, and perhaps never will again.

There is but one way in which history can repeat itself with regard to the restoration in the Senate of men of the powers possessed by those who held seats in that body at that time. That was a time when men were selected by the States to represent them always with an eye solely to their ability and qualification. I stand here to-day at three-score-and-ten, and I can afford to say it, and I dare say it, that is not the rule now. There are, of course, exceptions. It was in the training of those men with whom Mr. WOOD associated that upon his mind were made those deep impressions of the honor and the integrity which characterized him as a man and statesman.

So far as he had anything to say in this Chamber during the debates of the last four years, you will find that there was no acrimony, no effort made to excite ill-will on the part of his adversaries. He followed strictly the line of his argument, and the position he maintained in carrying it out was sustained by dignity. You all know that who have seen the grand old form standing at his place here in this Chamber arguing questions of State. You all have felt impressed with the idea that he was a man who could talk to the point, talk sense and avoid all ideas and expressions which would produce acrimony, and which sometimes lead to very bad and serious results. In this particular Mr. WOOD enjoyed a proud and enviable position.

I said he was tenacious of his opinions; no man was more so. They were opinions that he had formed after deep research. He differed with me in regard to many questions of State policy, particularly in his ideas as to revenue. I thought nonetheless of him, though. He was manly; he did not conceal his opinions, he spoke them right out freely and without concealment.

As regards his standing, according to our idea and definition of statesmanship, we would not be justified perhaps in placing him in that higher circle. He was upon the plane below, but upon a plane where he could exercise his influence and his power and do as much good for the public as though he had occupied the plane that was above him.

He was tenacious of his opinions to a remarkable extent. Many a contest have I had with him in regard to those matters, especially during the last twenty years. I do not now speak as to political issues; they are out of place here to-night.

He was born in Pennsylvania but reared in New York—by birth a son of the great Keystone State; by adoption a son of the great Empire State. He was a true type of those two great States lying side by side, anchors of safety in revolution, and anchors of safety and indexes of public opinion in all time to come. He was a type of the character of those two great States lying in the center of the territory of this nation.

I have stated, in the general summary I have given of his character, that he was a courteous man. You all know that; it is needless for me to repeat it. Gentle in manner, kind in action, the last man on God's earth to offend, it never entered his mind to utter a word to hurt the feelings of his opponent, whether he was above him in the social or political scale or below him. He was courteous in his manner out of this Hall as well as in it. He was a model statesman, because his training had been such as a statesman should receive. Having been thus trained in early life, the impressions then made upon his mind were never thrown off. The mantle which he took upon himself in 1840 in the society of the men of those days was never changed, and was interred with him.

As I said when I arose, I feel under a deep sense of embarrassment, because I am reminded of an event which must happen to me in a very short time. I hear the knocking at the door. I feel as though a part of me had gone in my social and political life, as though the man who had been by my side in political issues for the past forty years had left me. I feel now that in the absence of an old friend and distinguished statesman from his seat in this body that, so far as I am concerned, it is a banquet hall deserted.

Mr. COFFROTH. Mr. Speaker, we are again called upon to mourn the loss of one of our number. Our deceased brother lived to nearly the period of time allotted to man. When we met here in December last we little thought that before the close of this session the seat of FERNANDO WOOD would be draped with the pall of mourning and decorated with white flowers—the emblem of the pure in death. He entered upon his duties with all the appearance of having many years of usefulness before him. His arduous labors as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and his unrelenting exertions during the pendency of the refunding bill, wore heavily upon his constitution, and it gave way faster than any of his friends anticipated. When in the discussion of the refunding bill, on the 16th of January last, he declared, "I for one, in the expiring hours of a public life of forty years, will never consent that this great country shall hawk its credit through the money markets of the world," none of us had the remotest idea that these were among the last words of a dying statesman who had for many years given his time, intellect, and energy to the good of his country.

He left this Hall after the passage of the refunding bill to seek rest and to restore his shattered health; but, alas! he will never return again. God, in His divine wisdom, has called him away, and

> How pale appear
> Those clay-cold cheeks where grace and vigor glowed!
> Oh, dismal spectacle! How humble now
> Lies that ambition which was late so proud!

I will not at any length recount the many positions held by FERNANDO WOOD. He was born in the city of Philadelphia on the 14th of June, 1812, and is of Quaker parentage. At nineteen years of age he commenced business as a shipping merchant in the city of New York, from which business he retired with an ample fortune in 1850. He was first elected to Congress in 1840, and was a member thereof in the years 1841, 1842, and 1843. He was three times elected mayor of the city of New York, serving as such during the years 1855, 1856, 1857, 1861, and 1862. He was then elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, being regularly in attendance at its sessions and gained great distinction by his course. He was again elected in 1866 to the Fortieth Congress, and has been a member from that time until the date of his death, which occurred at the Hot Springs, in Arkansas, on Sunday evening, the 20th of February instant.

It can be truly said of FERNANDO WOOD that his was an eventful life. He was an eloquent and captivating public speaker. The first public speech I heard him make was during the sitting of the democratic national convention, in 1860, at Charleston, South Carolina. His speeches in Congress have evinced rare ability, and have placed his name in the category of the great statesmen who have preceded him. He has forever gone from us, and his death will be mourned as a public loss, and in the private circles of life many loving hands will strew flowers over his grave, while others will shed tears over his demise, because he was the common benefactor of the poor and needy.

Mr. Speaker, death is a frequent visitor to these Halls, and we are appalled when the summons comes—

> Yet, tell me frighted senses; What is death?
> Blood only stopped, and interrupted breath;
> The utmost limit of a narrow span,
> And end of motion, which with life began.
> As smoke that rises from the kindling fires,
> Is seen this moment, and the next expires;
> As mighty clouds by rising winds are tost,
> Their fleeting forms scarce sooner found than lost.
> So vanishes our state, so pass our days,
> So life but opens now, and now decays;
> The cradle and the tomb, alas! so nigh,
> To live is scarce distinguished from to die.

Mr. Speaker, on the first Monday of December, 1863, after an absence of twenty years, FERNANDO WOOD reappeared as a member of the Thirty-eighth Congress. You and I made our first appearance as members at that time. Time has made sad and lamentable havoc with our then colleagues. We call the roll and ask, Where is Pennsylvania's "Old Commoner," Thaddeus Stevens? The answer comes—he is dead! Where is the warm and impetuous Meyer Strouse? The answer is—he is dead! Then we desire to know of that noble patriot, Philip Johnson; and the answer is—he is dead! Then we ask, Where is the pleasant and kind-hearted Charles Dennison? The answer comes—he is dead! We inquire next, Where is the eloquent and noble-hearted William H. Miller? and the answer again comes—he is dead! The inquiry is then made for the intelligent jurist, James T. Hale; and we are again answered—he is dead! We then call the name of the earnest and able advocate of the homestead law, John L. Dawson; and we are answered—he is dead! The inquiry then comes, Where is the distinguished Thomas Williams? The answer again is given—he is dead! And last, but not least, we call the name of that generous and noble man, Jesse Lazear; and the answer comes in mournful accents—he is dead!

Yes, these associates and colleagues of our first Congress have been taken from their families and their country by the hand of death. When we look over this Chamber we only see eight members now here who were members of the Thirty-eighth Congress—four from Pennsylvania, the Speaker of this House, Mr. WILLIAM D. KELLEY, Mr. CHARLES O'NEILL, and myself; one from Iowa, Mr. HIRAM PRICE; one now from New York, but then from Ohio, Mr. SAMUEL S. COX; one from Illinois, Mr. WILLIAM R. MORRISON; and one from Indiana, Mr. GODLOVE S. ORTH. These eight mourn the loss of their deceased brother not only because of their associations with him in this, but on account of their association with him commencing with the beginning of the Thirty-eighth Congress. Having been acquainted with him for so long a period of time, we learned to love him for his kind heart, his generous disposition, and his affable treatment of all his associates. He had no disposition to utter unkind words whereby a thorn might be left rankling in the bare nerves of the heart, but his every word and action had a tendency to draw men to him in bonds of friendship, and soothe every contending passion into serene contentment.

Mr. Speaker, death shadows our pathway on every side. Since the convening of the present Congress three Senators, Mr. Zachariah Chandler, of the State of Michigan; Mr. George S. Houston, of the State of Alabama, and Mr. MATTHEW H. CARPENTER, of the State of Wisconsin; and four members of the House, Mr. Rush Clark, of the State of Iowa; Mr. Alfred M. Lay, of the State of Missouri; Mr. Evarts W. Farr, of the State of New Hampshire, and our deceased brother for whom we now mourn, Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, of the State of New York, have been removed from the councils of the nation by the unerring archer, Death.

In view of these lessons of mortality, to each one of us comes the injunction—

So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach the grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Mr. COVERT. Mr. Speaker, sorrow finds fittest expression oftentimes in silence. It rules in a realm which is sacred, but its sway is disputed always by duty. I should stand mute to-night in my place in this Hall did not this joint ruler, duty, itself sad-eyed and sorrowful, beckon me to speak. It would be more grateful and perhaps more fitting if I remained mute of lip while the voice of the heart only responded to the kindly words others have spoken of him who, living, was my friend, and who, dead, I most sincerely mourn. And speaking, what shall I say of him whose name was familiar to the ears of thousands for nearly half a century? What shall I say of him whose presence was so familiar to us all in this Chamber? Of him who, after nearly twenty years of faithful service in this House has made his last appeal to us, has answered his last roll-call, and has passed out from this Chamber, never again to enter its portals?

You knew—who knew not Astrophel?
Alas! that I should say I knew,
And have not in possession still!
Things known permit me to renew.
Of him, you know his merit such
I cannot say—you hear—too much,

The life record of my late colleague has about it, in parts, the elements of romance, if we define romance to be that which is strange and out of the ordinary courses and conditions of events. He came from the ranks of the people, from an ancestry strong and sturdy and self-respecting. The elements of mental strength and self-respect thus inherited were through his whole life distinguishing traits of his character. When FERNANDO WOOD was born to the world he came as a born leader of men. Passing his earlier days in comparative obscurity, he even then nursed an ambition which he knew and felt would raise him above his surroundings. Even in his youthful days he was prince absolute among his associates, as in later years he ruled at seasons almost as king among men. It is related of him that even in these youthful days the methods by which he acquired dominion among the younger men with whom he affiliated were seemingly peculiar. In his association with them he was temperate in his habits; while affable, he was never unduly familiar, and there was nothing in his manner or methods that suggested any unbending to secure favor.

He preserved always around and about him a peculiar atmosphere of personal dignity which gained for him an equally peculiar quality of personal respect. His education had not been of a liberal character, and during all the time he was thus building up his leadership he was a hard and devoted student. He grew rapidly in the confidence and respect of the people by whom he was surrounded, and forty years ago he took his seat in Congress as its youngest member. As has been intimated by my distinguished friend from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER,] there were some illustrious names on the muster-roll of that Congress. Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Benton, Silas Wright, Rufus Choate, Quincy Adams, Buchanan, and Cushing were among his associates. The young New York member was becomingly modest, but at the same time becomingly self-reliant and self-respecting always in the presence and companionship of these distinguished statesmen. He was for months a silent student of political economy and of parliamentary practice. I am glad my colleague [Mr. HUTCHINS] has alluded to one fact in his early congressional career. It was not until Professor Morse had in vain solicited Congress to aid in the establishment of a short line of telegraph to prove the utility of his invention that the young member from New York attracted any public attention to his congressional work. The inventor had met with disappointment and rebuff everywhere. The older members of Congress, immersed in affairs of state, had treated him with coldness and indifference. Mr. WOOD advocated his measure, and with such success that Congress was led finally to authorize the experiment. The result was the triumph of the invention which has since "put a girdle round about the earth."

Science and scientists the wide world over owe to FERNANDO WOOD a deep debt of gratitude, and to his memory a peculiar measure of respect in this connection. The world at large has, I fear, never sufficiently appreciated the full value of the service he thus generously and bravely rendered. The act was characteristic of the man. In the face of ridicule and of prophecy of failure, he fearlessly stood as the champion of a project doomed, seemingly, to defeat, and fought the measure through to an assured and pronounced success. This peculiar element of boldness under seemingly adverse circumstances, thus early exhibited, was to the very day of his death always a distinguishing feature in the character of our late associate.

The period during which Mr. WOOD acted as mayor of New York City was crowded thick with stirring events. The circumstances which led to his election to the mayoralty and his administration of the affairs of his office formed fruitful themes for discussion not only in his municipality, but throughout the whole country more than a quarter of a century ago. I have not the time to discuss these matters in detail or even barely to allude to them save only to say that they, too, illustrated most forcibly the characteristic I have mentioned—the possession of the highest form of personal boldness and self-reliance under exciting and most difficult conditions. Many are living to-day who opposed the policy of Mr. WOOD as mayor of New York City; but there are few, I think, even of his then bitterest opponents, who will deny that his control of affairs was marked by great strength—by a regard for the city's interest from his stand-point, and by a very high order of administrative ability.

About twenty years ago Mr. WOOD was again sent to Congress, and ever since then, up to his death, he continuously held a seat in this House. He early distinguished himself here for the strength and individuality of his opinions. He stood at times with the minority of the political party to which he belonged. Not applause from the majority; not public clamor; not the solicitation of friends nor the taunts of enemies could make him retreat from a position once thoughtfully taken or surrender a judgment once finally formed.

While Mr. WOOD was regarded perhaps as a man of action rather than of words, he was yet always an effective and most forcible speaker. The records of this House will show that while his addresses were not always decked with the flowers of rhetoric, they were yet at all times direct, logical, and earnest. It is needless to add that he never spoke for display. The time of this House was always a sacred thing to him, and it was only when occasion demanded it that he rose to speak, and rising was always accorded that attention given to one personally respected and whose counsels were entitled to regard.

Those who have preceded me, his older associates on the floor, and those who were his colleagues on committees, gentlemen who have been for years closely associated with him in his congressional labors, have spoken fully of his public services, and have borne warm and eloquent and truthful testimony to their character and value. Reference has been made more than once to the last public act of his life—his advocacy of his refunding measure. I had especial opportunities to observe the loyalty and devotion with which he gave almost his last hours to the passage of this bill through the House. Feeble and suffering, with the cold touch of death almost upon him, against the advice of his physicians, in opposition to the entreaties of his family and friends, he attended day after day the sessions of this House until his bill was passed.

My friend from Kentucky [Mr. MCKENZIE] has said to me that at once upon the passage of the measure he passed over to Mr. WOOD'S seat and congratulated him upon the result; not only because of the success he had achieved, but because it would afford him an opportunity for the rest he so much needed. The pale cheek did not blanch, the eye quail, nor the voice falter, as Mr. WOOD replied:

Sir, I have but a few hours more to live, and I would die here in my place in this House if it were necessary I should remain.

This unswerving devotion to what he deemed his duty was only in continuation of what had been the usage of his whole public life. He was leal and loyal always to what he regarded as official obligation. He was brave and faithful always in the discharge of official duty.

One of the earliest of our public men, himself an exemplar of the best and sweetest human virtues, has written:

See that thou copy no man save in the matter of faithfulness.

If we who to-night mourn our dead associate, and who try by what expression we may to do reverence to his memory, seek earnestly to copy FERNANDO WOOD only in this one regard—faithfulness to official obligation—he will not have lived and labored, he will not have died in vain. But there were other elements in the character of our associate eminently worthy to stand as models for us to imitate and to emulate. There are many gentlemen in this Chamber to-night who have seen him in the midst of excited debate, when discussion upon the largest public measures had called forth the strongest passion of our natures. I doubt if he was ever known to so far forget himself as to wantonly say one word, even in these scenes of intense excitement, to wound the heart of any man, to needlessly use one expression that in his calmest moments might not have been appropriately uttered.

Dignified, as befitted his position here—and his was a graceful dignity that seemed inborn and natural to the man—he was in his public life, in all his intercourse with associates and friends, essentially a gentleman. I desire to emphasize what my venerable friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. WRIGHT] has too briefly said on this general point, not only because this characteristic was his to a large, even to a pronounced, degree, but because this was an element in his character that might be modeled after with profit by us all. It suggests a rule of conduct brought physically to our senses by the example of our dead friend more emphatically than Thackeray states it when he says:

Come wealth or want, come good or ill,
Let young and old accept their part;
And bow before the awful Will,
And bear it with an honest heart,
Who misses or who wins the prize.
Go, lose or conquer as you can;
But if you fail, or if you rise,
Be each, pray God, a gentleman.

I fear, Mr. Speaker, that what I have said may have seemed too like a cold analysis of what many regard as the leading traits in the character of one who since I have held a seat on this floor, up to the time of his death, honored me with his friendship, and who was more than kind to me always. I have spoken of Mr. WOOD more perhaps as the world saw him and had learned to regard him—able, ambitious, polished, courtly, and devoted to the demands of official station.

He had other traits, which the great world did not so fully understand. I know that I can speak for the whole junior membership of this House when I bear testimony to Mr. WOOD'S unvarying courtesy to them at all times and the kindness of heart which characterized his intercourse with them under all circumstances. He was ever ready to encourage right effort on their part, ever willing to give to them words of kindly counsel and suggestion. I hazard nothing in expressing the belief that he found greater pleasure in doing acts of courtesy and kindness to his younger associates on this floor—and that from the purest motives—than to those who had already made honored names and had established for themselves national reputations.

Perhaps I have no right to speak of my late colleague in his domestic relations. The home which has been saddened and the home ties which have been severed by his death seem too sacred almost for discussion here; but it was in his household that the true inner character of FERNANDO WOOD revealed itself. The ambitious leader, he who in his working hours was devoted to statecraft, at his home became the fond father and easily approached companion, the head of a domestic circle that looked up to and loved and reverenced him. This charmed circle is broken now and stricken by a grief which no words of ours can soothe. We have draped the desk of our late associate in mourning. At his broken home is a vacant place, around which his loved ones gather and where there is no need of visible token to tell them of their loss. It is present in his very absence; it is felt in the weary and unsatisfied longing

For the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still.

We can but show to those who are thus nearly and sorely stricken that this Congress has paused near the closing hours of its session to express to them and to the country its deep sense of the loss which they and the nation have alike sustained.

It seems difficult to realize that FERNANDO WOOD is dead; that the name so familiar to thousands will never again be voiced in the tone in which we call the name of the living. His name, honored in life, has now the added dignity which comes of death. Though he has passed from among us, he will live in the archives of the city whose chief magistrate he was, and in the records of the Federal Congress where for so many years he held distinguished place. He will yet live in the thoughts of those who were his associates, and in the minds of the many whose interests he protected and whom he most devotedly served.

It is a beautiful tradition—that which prevails with some of the people of Germany—that the spirit of one of their dead kings, who in his life was revered and honored, sometimes revisits the land of his love. When the moon sheds down its softest and its sweetest beams upon the earth, the spirit of the good king descends, and passing over the land blesses corn-field and meadow, and whispers low upon the night-wind words of wise counsel to his people.

Let us hope that when they who have been devoted to the public service are taken from us, their labors sharply stopped by the quick decree of death, the influence of their presence may still be felt in their accustomed places. Let us seek for the counsels they would utter could they but speak them. Let us listen for the responses they would make could they but reply to our questionings.

If these conditions may prevail, FERNANDO WOOD, though we mourn him dead, will yet remain to us, and will, far into the future, live and labor for the people whom he served so long, so faithfully, and so well.

The resolutions submitted by Mr. COX were then unanimously agreed to.

In pursuance of one of the resolutions just adopted (at nine o'clock and fifty-five minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

PETITIONS, ETC.

The following memorials, petitions, and other papers were laid on the Clerk's desk, under the rule, and referred as follows, viz:

By the SPEAKER: The petition of citizens of Wisconsin, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NELSON W. ALDRICH: Memorial of the Providence (Rhode Island) Board of Trade, against certain features of the funding bill—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BARBER: The petition of Tolman & King and others, druggists, of Chicago, Illinois, for the repeal of certain taxes—to the same committee.

By Mr. BERRY: Memorial of the Farmers' and Wheat-Growers' Association of California, in regard to an interoceanic canal—to the Select Committee on Interoceanic Ship Canal.

Also, resolutions of the Legislature of California, asking for the improvement of Eel River, in that State—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BLAND: The petition of J. F. Gifford, to be refunded certain moneys paid for public lands—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BURROWS: The petition of citizens of Michigan, for an income-tax law—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of citizens of Michigan, that the Commissioner of Agriculture be made a Cabinet officer—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, the petition of citizens of Michigan, for the passage of the interstate-commerce bill—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of citizens of Michigan, for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. COBB: Resolution of the General Assembly of Indiana, asking an appropriation to construct a canal connecting Lake Erie with the Wabash River—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. CRAPO: The petition of P. W. Kenney and others, of Harwich, Massachusetts, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CROWLEY: The petition of Charles N. Parker and 24 others, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. HORACE DAVIS: Memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, asking for the passage of Senate bill No. 2022 relative to the Japanese indemnity fund—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, resolutions of the Legislature of California, favoring the improvement of Eel River—to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. DUNNELL: The petition of Gustav Auger and 20 others, citizens of Minnesota, that salt be put on the free list—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HEILMAN: The petition of cigar makers and manufacturers of tobacco, for the amendment of the revenue laws—to the same committee.

By Mr. HOOKER: The petition of citizens of Mississippi, for legislation on the subject of interstate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of citizens of Mississippi, for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petition of citizens of Mississippi, that the Commissioner of Agriculture be made a Cabinet officer—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, the petition of citizens of Mississippi, for the imposition of an income tax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOUSE: Memorial of the Tobacco Board of Trade, of Nashville, Tennessee, asking an appropriation for locks and dams on Cumberland River—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, memorial of the Merchants' Exchange, of Nashville, Tennessee, of similar import—to the same committee.

By Mr. McGOWAN: The petition of D. Anthony and 52 others, citizens of Michigan, for legislation to regulate freight rates—to the same committee.

By Mr. NEW: Resolutions of the Legislature of Indiana, in regard to the reconstruction of the Wabash and Erie Canal—to the same committee.

By Mr. NICHOLLS: The petition of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance, of Georgia, for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia—to the Select Committee on the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. O'NEILL: Memorials of 1,760 merchants, mechanics, manufacturers, and others, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, for the repeal of the tax on bank deposits—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. THOMAS RYAN: Three petitions of Kansas soldiers, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OTHO R. SINGLETON: The petition of J. P. Harvey and others, that the Commissioner of Agriculture be made a Cabinet officer—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, the petition of the same parties, for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petition of the same parties, for the regulation of interstate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of the same parties, for an income tax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR: The petition of citizens of Ohio, for legislation regulating interstate commerce—to the Committee on Commerce.

Also, the petition of citizens of Ohio, for the amendment of the patent laws—to the Committee on Patents.

Also, the petition of citizens of Ohio, for an income tax—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, the petition of citizens of Ohio, that the Bureau of Agriculture be made a Department—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. VALENTINE: The petition of A. A. Crandall and 39 others, of George H. Chaffee and 22 others, and of E. Whitcomb and 59 others, of Nebraska, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VANCE: Resolutions of the General Assembly of North Carolina, in favor of reducing taxes on tobacco, brandy, and snuff—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WEAVER: The petition of E. R. Clarke and 28 others, of Burr Oak, Michigan, against the passage of Senate bill No. 496—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

IN SENATE.

TUESDAY, March 1, 1881.

The Senate met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. J. BULLOCK, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The joint resolution (H. R. No. 373) relative to printing the Agricultural Report for the year 1880 was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a communication from J. E. Peyton, superintendent of the Yorktown Centennial Association, recommending that there be an exhibition of arms, &c., at that celebration similar to that at the Philadelphia celebration in 1876; which was referred to the Joint Select Committee on the Yorktown Centennial Celebration.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a communication from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, recommending such legislation as will enable the accounting officers of the Treasury to settle the accounts of I. L. Mahan, late United States Indian agent at the La Pointe agency, Wisconsin; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. ANTHONY. I present the memorial of the Providence Board of Trade, an association representing the varied business interests of Rhode Island. The memorial enforces the importance of maintaining the Government securities at par; and petitions Congress to repeal the taxes upon the circulation, deposits, and capital stock of national banks in excess of the bonds held by the Government; and also respectfully remonstrates against the provision of the funding bill requiring banks intending to go out of business to present their own circulating notes to redeem the United States bonds deposited for security.

The memorial was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ANTHONY presented the petition of Deborah C. Sayles, of Rhode Island, widow of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Welcome B. Sayles, Seventh Rhode Island Volunteers, praying that she may be granted an increase of pension; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, presented resolutions of the Legislature of Nevada, in favor of the passage of the Reagan bill, prohibiting discrimination in fares and freights on interstate railroads; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution to the Congress of the United States in relation to discrimination in fares and freights by interstate railroad companies.

Whereas the people of the State of Nevada have long suffered, and do now suffer, under the impositions and exactions of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which, besides retarding enterprise, injures the business and prosperity of the people of this State, and amounts to the most enormous, unjust, and oppressive tax ever laid upon the industry of a people; the said railroad company exercises over the persons and property of others an almost absolute power, vicious and tyrannical, destructive of the rights of persons and of property, and opposed to common justice, as well as to every principle of civil and constitutional liberty known since the days of Magna Charta.

Whereas it is proper that the truth should be known concerning this corporation and its transactions, the following facts are herein stated: The people of Palisade, distant four hundred and thirty-five miles east from Sacramento, have to pay for freight on flour, (fourth class per published special-rate tariff of Central Pacific Railroad) per car-load, the sum of $282 from Sacramento; while the people of Toano, one hundred and twenty-nine miles further east, pay freight on flour per car-load, according to the printed special rate, the sum of $275 per car load; while the merchant having a contract for some so-called competitive point with this railroad company, pays freight on the same article, to wit: flour per car-load, only $200. The merchant at Toano having a special contract, pays $82 per car-load less freight than the merchant at Palisade, although as before mentioned the carriage is one hundred and twenty-nine miles more. The goods delivered at Palisade or Battle Mountain, distant respectively four hundred and thirty-five and three hundred and eighty-three miles from Sacramento, have a freight charge of $480 per car-load, while at Toano, the freight amounts to $275 per car-load to persons having special contract rates for so-called competitive points, the greater service being performed for the less amount. Persons shipping wool or other products from Palisade, Battle Mountain, Elko, or other points in this State to the Eastern States, have to pay local rates to Sacramento, thence freight at through rates back over the same road to the point of destination, the shipper being often compelled to pay freight at local rates for a distance of over five hundred miles; a service useless and unnecessary even if rendered. The same unjust discrimination is practiced by this railroad company against the people of this State in the rates of freight upon goods shipped from points east of this State. The freight on a box of eggs from Ogden to Toano costs one man $3.35 per box, and the same number of eggs, in the same sized box and of the same weight, costs another man sixty-five cents. A hundred pounds of squashes costs one man in freight $1.35, while it costs another fifty-five cents. Hams and case goods cost one man $2.04, while it costs another but fifty-five cents. The distance from Ogden to Toano is one hundred and eighty-three miles. The same unjust discrimination is also practiced by this railroad company in passenger fares. A ticket from Omaha to San Francisco costs $100, while a ticket from Omaha to Palisade, being six hundred miles nearer, costs $95. A person desiring to go east is charged within a fraction of the full fare (through) from San Francisco to the point he desires to reach, although he may ride over one-third or less of the line of the Central Pacific Railroad. More appalling examples of injustice than are shown by the above instances, selected from among a myriad of kindred transgressions, are hard to conceive. And

Whereas such pernicious practices should be no longer tolerated: Therefore,

Be it (by the senate and assembly conjointly) resolved, That the passage of the bill now before Congress, known as the Reagan bill, prohibiting discrimination in fares and freights on interstate railroads, will be hailed with joy by the people of this State as a measure of justice and relief.

Resolved, That our Senators in Congress be instructed and our Representative requested to vote for and use all honorable means in their power to secure the earliest passage of said Reagan bill.

Resolved, That his excellency the governor is hereby requested to transmit an engrossed copy of these resolutions, under the great seal of the State, at the earliest moment to each of our representatives in Congress.

STATE OF NEVADA,
Secretary's Office, ss:

I, Jasper Babcock, secretary of State of the State of Nevada, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true, full, and correct copy of the original joint resolution which passed the Nevada Legislature on February 10, 1881, on file in my office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of State. Done at office in Carson City, Nevada, this 16th day of February, A. D. 1881.

[SEAL.] JASPER BABCOCK,
Secretary of State.
By J. G. CHESLEY, Deputy.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, presented resolutions of the Legislature of Nevada, favoring an appropriation of $50,000 for the erection of a building in Carson City for the use of United States offices; which were referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. LAMAR. I am instructed by the Committee on Railroads, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6061) to incorporate the Cherokee and Arkansas River Railroad Company, to report it without amendment. I propose that it be substituted for the bill (S. No. 1553) to incorporate the Cherokee and Arkansas River Railroad Company, now upon the Calendar, and I ask that it be considered at this time.

Mr. TELLER. I think the Senator from Ohio [Mr. PENDLETON] desires to be here when the bill is considered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio is in the Chamber.

Mr. COCKRELL. I object to the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. TELLER. I did not object; but I said that I understood the Senator from Ohio wishes to be here when the bill is considered. I understand that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] objects.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri objects. It requires unanimous consent to consider the bill at this time, and it will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. BAYARD, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1650) for the relief of Edward T. Brownell, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 6034) for the relief of the personal representative of George W. Henderlite, deceased, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1159) for the relief of Jacquelin M. Wood, of Lynchburgh, Virginia, reported it with amendments.

Mr. CALL, from the Committee on Patents, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 1622) for the relief of Isaac E. Palmer, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon; which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. EATON. The Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom were referred a message from the President of the United States, sundry bills, resolutions, and recommendations of boards of trade in regard to the construction of an interoceanic canal or railway across the Isthmus, ask to be discharged from the further consideration of all these subjects, thinking that the time has not yet arrived when the Congress of the United States should express its opinion with regard to any particular route or any particular manner of crossing the Isthmus.

The report was agreed to; and the Committee on Foreign Relations were discharged from the further consideration of the following message of the President of the United States, memorial, bills, and joint resolution:

A message of the President of the United States in response to Senate resolution of February 11, 1880, covering the report of the Secretary of State, with accompanying documents, in relation to the proposed interoceanic canal between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans;

A resolution of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, in favor of Government aid to a ship-canal across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec;

A memorial of the Board of Trade of San Francisco, California, urging the construction of a ship-canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans;

Eighty petitions of citizens of Oregon, praying for the passage of an act authorizing the President to call an international convention to mature a plan for the construction of a free ship-canal across the Isthmus of Darien;

A bill (S. No. 1060) to incorporate the Interoceanic Transit Company, and for other purposes;

A bill (S. No. 2198) to incorporate the Interoceanic Ship Railway Company, and for other purposes;

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 43) in relation to the construction of a canal across the Isthmus of Darien by European powers; and

A joint resolution (S. R. No. 66) in relation to an interoceanic canal.

Mr. RANDOLPH, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. No. 166) authorizing the Secretary of War to loan certain tents, flags, &c., to the Masons at Louisville, Kentucky, reported it without amendment.

Mr. VOORHEES, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 688) for the relief of the sureties of Franklin Travis, reported it with an amendment.

EAST FLORIDA CLAIMS.

Mr. MORGAN. The Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the special message of the President relating to the unsettled claims of the Spanish inhabitants of East Florida during the years 1812 and 1813, have had the subject under consideration, and directed me to submit a report in writing, and ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

Mr. EATON. As it is a very important matter, I ask that the report be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read at length.

The report was read, and ordered to be printed. It is as follows:

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the message of the President relating to the claims against the United States, have had the same under consideration, and report as follows:

This subject has been considered in a variety of forms by the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the Government, but no negotiation has been entered into between Spain and the United States to remove the difference between them, if any exists, as to the true meaning of the treaty.

The discussion before the tribunals of the United States has engaged the attention of a number of the best-informed jurists and publicists of this country, and seems to have exhausted research into precedents and analogies. Nothing new remains to be said, it seems, on either side of the question presented, and it is time that a final decision was made and further controversy ended.

The precise question involved in this claim for relief is, whether the Government of the United States is bound by the treaty with Spain of the 22d of February, 1819, to pay interest on claims allowed in favor of Spanish inhabitants and officers under the last paragraph of the ninth article thereof, which is in the following language:

"And the high contracting parties respectively renounce all claims to indemnities for any of the recent events or transactions of their respective commanders in the Floridas.

"The United States will cause satisfaction to be made for the injuries, if any, which, by process of law, shall be established to have been suffered by Spanish officers and individual Spanish inhabitants by the late operations of the American Army in Florida."

The message of the President, with the accompanying correspondence between the Spanish minister and the diplomatic representatives of the United States relative to "the Florida claims," discloses a specific demand by the Government of Spain upon the Government of the United States for the payment of certain sums, as interest, on demands ascertained to be due to Spanish subjects under the ninth article of the treaty of February 22, 1819.

Spain asserts that the payment of said sums of interest is required to complete the duty of the United States in the execution of its treaty obligations.

The President places the matter before Congress without any recommendation, and without any distinct intimation that Congress is the proper department of the Government to interpret as well as to execute the treaty, to determine the rights of Spain under the treaty, and to provide for them. This is left to be inferred, if at all, from the silence of the President. In the opinion of the committee the President is the only functionary of the Government of the United States that has the constitutional right, acting through some diplomatic agent, to conduct a discussion with Spain on the subject of these claims. Congress cannot engage in such discussion. It cannot appoint an agent or commissioner for that purpose without the cooperation of the President. The reference of this question to Congress, therefore, can only be intended to indicate either that there is no question open between the two governments, as to the duty of the United States, which admits of discussion; or else that Congress must decide whatever question may remain unsettled, without further discussion with Spain. The Executive Department has neither expressed to Congress nor to Spain, in the correspondence sent to the committee, its opinion of the duty of Congress in the premises; and the treaty-making power, which has plenary and sole jurisdiction to make treaties or to reform them, has not been invoked to remove any misunderstanding, if any exists, as to the meaning of the treaty of February, 1819, between the United States and Spain.

Spain on its part has apparently assumed an attitude of indifference as to the means that the Government of the United States may choose to employ to meet its demands; and simply asserts its right under the treaty to have interest paid to the claimants on their claims. The treaty is part of the supreme law of the land, and until it is revoked by some direct proceeding or is abandoned, or is violated by Spain, it is binding on Congress; and Congress, in executing it, must obey it. Under such circumstances, if Congress has any duty to perform, no discretion can remain to it in respect of that duty, except merely as to the time and manner of performing it. It must observe the treaty so long as it is in force. It must accept Spain's construction of the treaty and execute it by appropriating the money to pay the demands made by that government; or it must, without a discussion with Spain as to the justice of its demands and of the construction of the treaty, refuse to accede to them.

In this attitude of this delicate question the committee feel that the action of Congress, if adverse to the claims of Spain, will not be received as a conclusive declaration of the Government of the United States that no further consideration of the demands of Spain is admissible; but will leave it open to Spain and the treaty-making power of the United States to expound or reform the treaty, and thus create the possibility of inharmonious action between the legislative department and the treaty-making power of this Government. It is the opinion of the committee that when the true construction of a treaty is in question between the United States and any other government, it is the duty of the Executive Department to use its full and untrammeled privileges and rights of discussion and negotiation in the effort to reach a satisfactory understanding with such government before Congress shall intervene to declare the true construction of the treaty. If Congress should differ in the construction of the treaty with the Executive or treaty-making power of the Government of the United States it can so declare when a proper occasion is presented, or it can revoke the treaty and free the Government from its obligation, but in doing this Congress would not be dealing directly with such foreign government. It would deal with and fix the policy of our own Government, which is its appropriate constitutional function. It is manifestly unwise, if not improper, for Congress to declare in advance of any definite action of the Executive or of the treaty-making power of the Government that the construction placed by Spain upon the ninth article of the treaty of February, 1819, is true or false. Such a policy, if adopted as a general rule of action, would withdraw every such question from the control of the authorities provided by the Constitution for their consideration, and would subject our treaty relations throughout the world to extreme embarrassment. No American minister could know how to construe any treaty until the opinion of Congress had been first ascertained, nor could he discuss with any freedom the questions that frequently and unavoidably arise in consequence of the difficulties of the translation of treaties into different languages and other questions of the construction of the language employed in treaties in connection with the laws of nations. Entertaining these opinions of the respective duties of the executive department and of the treaty-making power and of Congress, it would be improper, at the present, for the committee to state their own opinions of the merits of the demand of Spain which, according to the views of that government, involves an international, and not a merely domestic question. If Spain and the United States differ in the construction of the treaty in the particular which has been so long under discussion before committees of Congress and the executive officers of the Government and can settle that difference so as to impose further duties on Congress, it will doubtless be found willing to do all that is required by the interests and honor of the Government of the United States, and in keeping with the rights of Spain or of the claimants.

Until some such duty is made apparent, Congress should not interpose to discuss or decide questions which, for the present at least, should be open to the consideration of the executive department or of the treaty-making power without embarrassment from any quarter.

The committee ask, therefore, to be discharged from the further consideration of this subject.

The committee were discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

COMMITTEE ON CONTINGENT EXPENSES.

Mr. HILL, of Georgia. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to report the usual resolution, and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate be authorized to sit during the recess of Congress, and the necessary expenses thereof be paid out of the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate.

By unanimous consent, the resolution was read the second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The resolution was reported to the Senate, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT.

Mr. WHYTE. I am instructed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. R. No. 373) relative to printing the Agricultural Report for the year 1880, to report it with a favorable recommendation. If it were not for the fact that the agricultural interest is panting for this information, I should be inclined to let the joint resolution go upon the Calendar; but I ask for its immediate consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. PADDOCK. I should like to inquire if the joint resolution is reported exactly as it came from the House. Has it been amended by the committee?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No amendment is proposed by the committee.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, and ordered to a third reading.

Mr. PADDOCK. What is the aggregate number?

Mr. WHYTE. The resolution gives that information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, &c., That there be printed 300,000 copies of the Annual Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1880; 214,000 copies for the use of members of the House of Representatives, 56,000 copies for the use of members of the Senate, and 30,000 copies for the use of the Department of Agriculture.

The joint resolution was read the third time, and passed.

ANNUAL REPORT OF LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS.

Mr. VOORHEES. I present the annual report of the Librarian of Congress, exhibiting the condition and progress of the Library during the year 1880. I move that it be printed, and that 500 additional copies with covers be printed for distribution by the Librarian.

The motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there further business for the morning hour?

Mr. COCKRELL. I call for the regular order.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to take up Senate bill——

Mr. COCKRELL. I object.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. The Senator had better wait until he finds out what I wish to have considered before he objects. It will not take five minutes to pass the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I cannot help it, if it only takes a minute. I call for the regular order.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. The Senator consumes more time in objecting than it would take to pass the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded, which is the Calendar of General Orders for the consideration of House bills favorably reported. They will be reported in their order.

COURTS AT FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

The bill (H. R. No. 2384) amendatory of and supplementary to an act to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Fort Wayne, Indiana, approved June 18, 1878, was announced to be the first House bill in order upon the Calendar, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

Mr. McDONALD. The bill simply amends the law for holding courts at Fort Wayne so that there may be two terms each of the United States district and circuit courts for the district of Indiana held at that place, the terms to begin on the second Tuesday in June and December.

Mr. TELLER. Is the bill satisfactory to the Senator?

Mr. McDONALD. As amended by the committee. We report to strike out the third and fourth sections.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with amendments.

The first amendment was to strike out section 3, in the following words:

Said district and circuit courts at Fort Wayne shall have exclusive jurisdiction as to the counties of Steuben, La Grange, Elkhart, Porter, Stark, Marshall, Fulton, Kosciusko, Noble, Whitley, De Kalb, Allen, Adams, Wells, Huntington, Wabash, Miami, Cass, Blackford, Grant, and Jay; and said courts shall be limited in territorial jurisdiction to said counties: Provided, That if part of the defendants in any case or proceeding in said courts shall reside without said counties in said State, process issued from and returnable to said courts may be served on such persons by the marshal or any of his deputies.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out section 4 in the following words:

In all cases of removal of suits from courts of the State of Indiana, in counties above named, to the courts of the United States in the State of Indiana, such removal shall be to the United States courts held at Fort Wayne as aforesaid; and the time within which the removal shall be perfected, in so far as it refers to or is regulated by the terms of the United States courts, shall be deemed to refer to the terms of the United States courts held at said city of Fort Wayne.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

INDIAN LANDS IN OHIO.

The bill (H. R. No. 3132) to confirm the title to certain lands in the State of Ohio was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Private Land Claims with amendments: In line 3, after "relinquish," to insert "to whom it may concern;" in line 5, after "land," to insert "in the State of Ohio;" in line 8, after "described," to strike out the following:

As section 26, township 4, range 5, in the State of Ohio, containing six hundred and forty acres; and that the approval of the United States be, and the same is hereby, given to the sale heretofore made by the said children of Captain Logan to Marcus Heylin; and that the title to said tract of land be, and the same is hereby, confirmed to the following-named persons, who derived title through the said Marcus Heylin, as follows:

To Madison J. Bowsher, the west one-third part of said section; to Albert Bodkin, the center one-third part of said section; and to Francis M. Bowsher, the east one-third part of said section, as shown by their several deeds bearing date, respectively, August 4, 1868, January 5, 1870, and November 1, 1862, of record in the county of Auglaize, State of Ohio.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

In the patent issued therefor by the President, and bearing date the 18th day of April, 1821; and the United States waive and relinquish, for the benefit of whom it may concern, the provision of article 3 of the treaty of September 17, A. D. 1818, between the United States and the Wyandot, Seneca, Shawnee, and Ottawa tribes of Indians, so far only as it concerns the lands granted in the eighth article of the treaty referred to in said article 3, to the children of Captain Logan.

So as to make the bill read:

That the United States relinquish to whom it may concern all title, interest, and control in and to that certain parcel of land in the State of Ohio, ceded to the children of Captain Logan, a chief of the Shawnee tribe of Indians, by the eighth article of the treaty of September 29, 1817, and more fully described in the patent issued therefor by the President and bearing date the 18th day of April, 1821; and the United States waive and relinquish, for the benefit of whom it may concern, the provision of article 3 of the treaty of September 17, A. D. 1817, between the United States and the Wyandot, Seneca, Shawnee, and Ottawa tribes of Indians, so far only as it concerns the lands granted in the eighth article of the treaty referred to in said article 3, to the children of Captain Logan.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MRS. SALLY M. BUCHANAN.

Mr. WHYTE. The next House bill on the Calendar is the bill (H. R. No. 3292) granting a pension to Sally M. Buchanan, widow of General Robert C. Buchanan, United States Army. That bill passed the Senate unanimously two years ago, before the adjournment, at the close of the last Congress. It passed the House unanimously on a unanimous report early last year. It came to the Senate, and it has been adversely reported. It is a pension case, one of the most meritorious that has been acted upon during this Congress; and I ask the Senate to make an exception and allow that bill to be considered as one of the House bills favorably reported.

Mr. KERNAN. I appeal to my friend to let us go through with the House bills reported favorably, and then I will help him to get up this bill.

Mr. WHYTE. It is a pension bill.

Mr. KERNAN. But adversely reported.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Therefore it will create discussion.

Mr. KERNAN. Let it be passed over without prejudice.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the bill being passed over without prejudice? The Chair hears no objection, and it will be passed over without prejudice. The next House bill on the Calendar will be reported.

DAKOTA PENITENTIARY.

The bill (H. R. No. 3785) appropriating money for the erection of a penitentiary in the Territory of Dakota was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It appropriates $30,000 to erect a penitentiary building in Dakota upon such tract or parcel of land, at or near the village of Sioux Falls, in Minnehaha County, in that Territory, as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Interior.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM S. BURGESS AND OTHERS.

The next House bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 709) for the relief of William S. Burgess and others; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to William S. Burgess, William H. Willhite, and to Elizabeth Austin, administratrix of Nathaniel Austin, deceased, upon proper evidence of her administration, each the sum of $300, collected from them as special tax for distilling fruit.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

GEORGE W. BROWER.

The next House bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 3451) for the relief of George W. Brower; which was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to George W. Brower, late sheriff of Dodge County, Wisconsin, $1,443.05, in full for personal services rendered and expenses incurred in connection with the draft of 1862 in that county.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY B. EASTMAN.

The bill (H. R. No. 4261) for the relief of Henry B. Eastman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Henry B. Eastman, late second lieutenant of Company B, Third Regiment Wisconsin Cavalry in the war of the rebellion, the pay and allowances of a second lieutenant, mounted, from February 1, 1865, to March 20, 1865, less such pay as he may have received in any other grade for such period of time; and also to pay him three months' pay proper of a second lieutenant, mounted, under the provisions of section 4 of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending June 30, 1866, approved March 3, 1865," and the act approved July 13, 1866.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIFE-SAVING STATION AT LOUISVILLE.

The bill (H. R. No. 5532) establishing a life-saving station at Louisville, Kentucky, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I should be glad to hear something as to the necessity for a life-saving station at Louisville. I do not know anything about it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will state that the Secretary of the Treasury and General Kimball, the chief of the Life-Saving Department, have recommended it. General Kimball's statements were before the Committee on Commerce. The proof shows that more lives have been saved at the falls of the Ohio in the last four or five years than at any other station, even upon the coast.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. That will do.

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is asked for by the chief of the bureau.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI.

The bill (H. R. No. 6493) to provide for the construction of a public building at Jackson, in the State of Mississippi, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. REEVE.

House bill No. 1542 was announced as being the next in order upon the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. What is done with the bill (H. R. No. 2180) granting an increase of pension to James H. Reeve?

Mr. VOORHEES. I would rather not have that bill taken up now.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Has not the Clerk skipped several bills?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill to which the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] refers stands on a motion to reconsider.

Mr. HARRIS. I entered a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, at the request of the Senator from Virginia, [Mr. WITHERS.]

Mr. WITHERS. The motion was entered at my request. If the Senator from Indiana desires to have the bill passed I have no desire to prevent its consideration.

Mr. VOORHEES. I do not want to discuss the bill under the five-minute rule. It may consume half an hour, and I can get it up at some other time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The next House bill on the Calendar will be reported.

CHARLES CLINTON.

The bill (H. R. No. 1542) for the relief of Charles Clinton, of New Orleans, late assistant treasurer at New Orleans, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Charles Clinton, late assistant United States treasurer at New Orleans, Louisiana, $5,850, being the amount of public money stolen from his office on the 1st day of May, 1871, and refunded by him to the Government of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHIMES.

The bill (H. R. No. 4663) to admit free of duty one of the bells of St. Michael's chimes, Charleston, South Carolina, which has been sent to England to be recast, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OSAGE TRUST LANDS.

The bill (H. R. No. 5629) to graduate the price and dispose of the residue of the Osage Indian trust and diminished-reserve lands lying east of the sixth principal meridian in Kansas was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Lands with amendments.

Mr. PLUMB. I am authorized by the committee to withdraw the amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There are several amendments.

Mr. PLUMB. All the amendments reported by the committee are withdrawn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there is no objection the amendments may be withdrawn. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, and ordered to a third reading.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I observe that the price fixed for this land is lower than the ordinary price of public land. I should like to have some gentleman who is familiar with the matter explain the reason for that.

Mr. PLUMB. There is a body of land, about fifteen thousand acres perhaps of waste land, lying east of the sixth principal meridian, part of the Osage reservation, which has been open to settlement at a dollar and a quarter an acre for ten years. Then there are scattered tracts of the same kind of lands. These lands cannot be sold because they are not fit for settlement. It is the desire on the part of the Indians and on the part of the Department and of the people of the State living in that locality that these lands may be sold at such price as they will bring, the Indians themselves consenting to the sale and making arrangements for it.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MONTANA NEZ PERCÉS WAR.

The bill (H. R. No. 1320) for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés, and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. THURMAN. I should like to inquire of the Senator who reported the bill whether these volunteers have or have not had pay for their services?

Mr. BURNSIDE. There is a written report with the bill which is very short and explains the whole case.

Mr. THURMAN. I do not care about the report being read if the Senator is aware that they have received no pay.

Mr. BURNSIDE. They have received no pay.

Mr. THURMAN. Because the bill makes no deduction of any pay they may have received.

Mr. BURNSIDE. There were two bills, one introduced in the Senate and one in the House. They were identical. I had the Senate bill under my care and made a report on the case. Before I made that report to the committee as a sub-committee, this bill came over from the House and my report was made upon this bill.

Mr. WITHERS. Let us have the report read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. BURNSIDE February 2, 1880:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 1320) for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés, and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report:

This subject has been favorably considered by the Committees on Military Affairs of both Houses of Congress on several occasions.

A bill, similar in character to this one, passed the House of Representatives in the Forty-fifth Congress, and was also favorably reported by this committee in the same Congress, but failed to receive final action for want of time.

Your committee have adopted the report made by this committee at that time, which is as follows:

"The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 758) for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés, and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service, have had the same under consideration, and submit the following report:

"This bill is to place certain volunteer citizens of Montana Territory who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percé Indians on the same footing as if they had been regularly mustered into the service, and to have such rights accrue to the heirs of those citizens who were killed in action.

"The Secretary of War, upon being addressed for information, replies as follows, expressing the views of the General of the Army:

"WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON CITY, March 7, 1878.

"SIR: In reply to your letter of the 26th ultimo, asking to be informed as to the propriety of Senate bill No. 758, 'for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service,' I have the honor to subjoin hereto the views of the General of the Army on said bill, viz:

"'The danger in Montana was imminent. No law warranted the calling out of volunteers; but if the Government of the United States is expected to protect citizens in the possession of their property against hostile Indians, the obligation is none the less strong because unauthorized. I heartily approve the measures of the inclosed Senate bill No. 758.'

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"GEO. W. McCRARY,
"Secretary of War.

"Hon. GEORGE E. SPENCER,
"Chairman Committee on Military Affairs, United States Senate.

"The Secretary of War, by letter of subsequent date to his first communication, transmits the following from Colonel John Gibbon, commanding the military district of Montana, giving the names of the citizens who served in the said war, specifying those who were killed and wounded, and expressing the hope that some provision may be made for them:

"WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON CITY, March 15, 1878.

"SIR: In connection with my letter of the 7th instant, giving the views of the General of the Army on Senate bill 758, 'for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés, and for the relief of such as were killed in such service,' I have the honor to inclose copy of a letter from Colonel John Gibbon, commanding district of Montana, dated September 5, 1877, giving the names of the citizen volunteers who accompanied him in the expedition against the Nez Percé Indians.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"GEO. W. McCRARY,
"Secretary of War.

"Hon. GEO. E. SPENCER,
"Chairman Committee on Military Affairs, United States Senate."

—

"HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MONTANA,
"Fort Shaw, Montana Territory, September 5, 1877.

"SIR: I have the honor to report that the following-named citizens of Montana Territory accompanied me as volunteers in the late expedition against the Nez Percé Indians; most of them were in the battle on the 9th and remained faithfully with us till the last.

"Those who were killed and wounded are marked in the margin.

"I trust some provision may be made by law by which these parties may be placed on the same footing in regard to pay, allowances, pension, &c., as is now provided for soldiers duly mustered into the service of the United States:

"John Armstrong, (killed,) Jacob Baker, (wounded,) Anthony Chaffin, Oscar Clark, Samuel Dunham, William Edwards, Fred. Held, —— Hubbard, Otto Lifer, (wounded.) Amos Buck, J. B. Catlin, Samuel Chaffin, I. W. Davis, L. C. Elliott, (killed,) Charles Hart, Joseph Hull, Oscar Judd, Myron Lockwood, (wounded,) Almond Lockwood, (killed,) David Morrow, (killed,) Squire Madding, M. F. Sherrill, Barnett Wilkinson, Michael Wright, Eugene Lent, Campbell Mitchell, (killed,) William Ryan, (wounded,) Thomas Sherrill, George Waide, Jerry Wallace.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"JOHN GIBBON,
"Colonel Seventh Infantry, Commanding.

"To ADJUTANT-GENERAL UNITED STATES ARMY,
"(Through Headquarters Department of Dakota,)
"Washington, D. C.

"Your committee, in view of the favorable opinion expressed by the Secretary of War, the General of the Army, and Colonel Gibbon, recognize the equity and justice of affording a portion of the relief contemplated by the bill, and therefore recommend its passage as reported."

Mr. WITHERS. The only thing I see about it is that the recommendation is that they be placed on the same footing of the Army as to pay allowances and pensions. To that I have not the slightest objection; but I ask the Senator who reported the bill if there is any precedent for the amount of pay which is allowed to these volunteers—one dollar a day?

Mr. BURNSIDE. The claim was decided upon its own merits. We thought under the circumstances it was proper to recommend that these men be placed on the same footing as they would have been if they were soldiers at that period.

Mr. WITHERS. That is perfectly proper, and I have no objection to it.

Mr. BURNSIDE. None of them can receive pensions unless they were wounded, of course.

Mr. WITHERS. The amount of pay provided for them is much larger than that allowed to soldiers in the regular Army. I am perfectly willing that they should be placed on the same footing. I think they ought to be.

Mr. BURNSIDE. There is something beyond the mere pay, the question of commutation of clothing, &c.

Mr. TELLER. This pay includes commutation of clothing.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. S. A. WRIGHT.

The next House bill on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 2414) for the relief of Mrs. S. A. Wright.

Mr. LOGAN. I object to the consideration of that bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The consideration of the bill is objected to.

Mr. CALL. Does an objection carry the bill over?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. One objection takes a bill over.

Mr. CALL. I appeal to the Senator from Illinois to withdraw that objection. I think there will be no difficulty about passing the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am satisfied if the Senator from Illinois will read the report of the committee he will withdraw his objection and let the bill pass.

Mr. LOGAN. I would do anything in the world to accommodate Senators, but I am so clearly satisfied that the law is different from the bill that I shall object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. An objection is entered, and the bill goes over.

GROUND AT SIXTEENTH AND K STREETS.

The bill (H. R. No. 4590) to provide for the sale of certain property owned by the United States in the District of Columbia was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to authorize the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, in charge of public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, to sell and convey, by good and sufficient deed, to each of the owners of lot 1, square 184; lot 5, square 185; lots 5, 6, and 7, square 198; lot 12, square 199, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, such portion of the ground immediately adjoining the front of those lots, or either of them, as will make the angles at the four corners of Sixteenth and K streets, northwest, right angles, upon payment into the Treasury of the United States of an amount to be appraised by three disinterested freeholders resident of the city of Washington.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. What committee does that bill come from?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. From the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. WITHERS. The commissioners of the District recommend it; the Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds recommends it, and there is no opposition to it anywhere. The commissioners of the District thought it was a proper thing to do.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. What property is this?

Mr. WITHERS. It is situated at the intersection of K and Sixteenth streets; it was originally designed for making a circle, and in making the circle there were little triangular pieces cut off the lots situated at the four corners. Since that a park has been put there and rows of trees planted, so that it is now not designed to have a circle. The Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds recommends that these little pieces be sold to the private proprietors there; the commissioners of the District recommend it, and the committee recommends it.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Is the title vested in the Government?

Mr. WITHERS. Yes, sir.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I thought it was a proper measure to go to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; but I make no objection.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Does this cover the square which was known as "Corcoran Square" at one time?

Mr. WITHERS. Oh, no; it is in an entirely different part of the city.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RAILROADS IN THE TERRITORIES.

The bill (H. R. No. 4874) in relation to the Utah and Northern Railway Company, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McDONALD. I think I shall have to object to that bill.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I hope the Senator will not object to it. It is of very great importance that the bill shall be passed. I think some of the Senator's own constituents may be interested in it.

The bill provides simply for giving the right of way to railroads to build branches in the Territories. There are a great many mining camps that require railroads in order to transport the mineral taken out, and under the present law as I am told no branch can be built in the Territories, that is, they have no right of way over the public domain.

If it will make the matter any stronger to the Senator from Indiana, I will state that I have a letter from the Auditor of Railroad Accounts stating that unless a bill of this kind is passed he does not believe a mile of railroad can be built in the Territories within the next year or until Congress meets again. Almost every Senator here has constituents in the mining country who are interested in it. They are interested in it in Idaho, in Montano, in New Mexico, and in Arizona.

Mr. McDONALD. The bill may be read for information.

Mr. HOAR. I have information enough to assure me that I shall object to it when it is read.

Mr. McDONALD. Very well, I object now.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I am sure the bill ought to be passed for the benefit of the people of the Territories.

Mr. HOAR. It is a bill which gives any railroad company the right to build a railroad where it chooses through the Territories.

Mr. SAUNDERS. That is exactly what is done by our amendment. There were objections raised to giving it to certain railroads, and on that account it was made general that all railroads in the Territories might have the right of way in building branches to such points as they think proper.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Let us go on. This is objected to.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I hope it will go over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. DAWES in the chair.) Objection is made to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I ask that it go over without prejudice.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I cannot consent to its going over without prejudice.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. When a bill is objected to, it goes over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill goes over.

SAMUEL HARPER.

The bill (H. R. No. 5389) for the relief of Samuel Harper was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to direct the Secretary of the Treasury in the settlement of the accounts of Samuel Harper, agent of the Treasury Department for the sale of internal-revenue stamps at Houston, Texas, to allow him a credit for $2,510, the amount of internal-revenue stamps stolen from his office on the 20th of March, 1867.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. SAULSBURY. There ought to be some explanation of the propriety of granting this relief.

Mr. VOORHEES. There is a printed report.

Mr. SAULSBURY. Perhaps the Senator can state briefly the reasons. I do not desire to make any captious objection, but I wish to know the reason for the bill.

Mr. VOORHEES. I ask that the report be read. It is shorter than I can make the explanation.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. VOORHEES February 8, 1881:

The Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5389) for the relief of Samuel Harper, having considered the same, submit the following report:

In December, 1866, Samuel Harper, the postmaster at Houston, Texas, was made agent for the sale of internal-revenue stamps, and kept the stamps under lock and key in his office. A soldier belonging to a detachment of United States troops, stationed at Houston, was charged with theft of money from a citizen and deserted. As he had been a citizen of Houston when he enlisted, the commander had a letter placed in the post-office, and detailed a private named Coe to remain in the office and apprehend him should he come for it.

Coe remained in the office about a week, and could see the box containing the revenue stamps as the postmaster sold them to persons requiring them. Mr. Harper was notified by the commander, about a week after Coe was stationed in the office, that he, too, had deserted, and advised him to see if anything had been stolen. Thereupon an examination disclosed that revenue stamps amounting to $2,510 had been stolen within the preceding twenty-four hours. Steps were immediately taken to secure his arrest, but without success. It was ascertained that one of the banks and a firm in the city had purchased revenue stamps from him. The banker recognized the man as the soldier who had been on duty at the post-office, but he had not heard of the robbery when he purchased the stamps. The firm purchased the stamps from the soldier, who claimed they had been found on a railroad track.

The theft having been committed by a man placed in the post-office under military order, and not subject to the control of the postmaster, your committee feel satisfied that Mr. Harper should not be held responsible for the loss so occasioned, and report back the bill with a recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VACATION OF AN ALLEY IN WASHINGTON.

The bill (H. R. No. 5715) to vacate and close an alley in square 504, in Washington, District of Columbia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, after the word "to," in line 4, to strike out "vacate and close up the alley running north and south in square 504, between lots 8, 9, and 10, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia" and in lieu thereof to insert:

Sell and convey to the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company the ground occupied by the alley running north and south in square 504, between lots 8, 9, and 10, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and to vacate and close up said alley: Provided, That said ground shall not be sold at a price below the average assessed value of the lands in said square: And provided further, That the commissioners aforesaid shall deposit in the Treasury of the United States, to the credit of the general fund of the District of Columbia, the purchase-money paid by said Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I should like to know what this means.

Mr. ROLLINS. I can state in a moment.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Have the owners of the property abutting on this alley consented to its being closed?

Mr. ROLLINS. There is no objection on the part of anybody in the world. The bill merely provides that the District of Columbia shall get pay for an imaginary alley. There never was an alley there except upon paper. The bill merely provides that the District of Columbia shall get pay for the alley and close it up. There is no objection to it on the part of anybody.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should like to inquire how it is to affect the adjoining property.

Mr. ROLLINS. It does not affect private property at all. The alley opens upon the arsenal wall. There never was any alley there at all except upon the map. It is imaginary entirely. For sixty years it has been closed up, and the place where the alley is supposed to be is built over by two brick buildings, one three hundred feet long and the other two hundred and seventy-five.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JOHN H. W. RILEY.

The bill (H. R. No. 2503) for the relief of John H. W. Riley, of California, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the payment of $300 to John H. W. Riley, of San Francisco, California, in full compensation for services rendered the United States as phonographic reporter during the investigation into the claim of one Charles Murphy for extra compensation for excavating for dry-dock at the Mare Island navy-yard.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MONUMENT FOR BATTLE OF SARATOGA.

The bill (H. R. No. 4451) to provide for the erection of a monument at Schuylerville, New York, commemorative of the battle of Saratoga, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. LOGAN. I should like to inquire from the Senator reporting the bill whether he believes a monument of the dimensions described in the bill can be built for $30,000.

Mr. VOORHEES. Will the Senator from Illinois allow the amendment reported by the committee to be read? I think it will meet the inquiry he makes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the Library with an amendment, which was to add at the end of the bill the following proviso:

Provided, That before transferring said money, or any part thereof, to the Saratoga Monument Association, it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall so certify, that a sum of money has been raised by said association which, together with the sum hereby appropriated, shall be sufficient to complete the monument in accordance with the design specified in this act.

Mr. VOORHEES. That answers the question, I think.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I simply desire to place on record that I am opposed to this bill and all kindred legislation.

BATTLE OF GROTON HEIGHTS.

The bill (H. R. No. 5097) appropriating money toward the expense to be incurred in the centennial celebration of the battle on Groton Heights and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

The CHIEF CLERK. The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations is to strike out the first section.

Mr. PLATT. What is the first section which it is proposed to strike out?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The section will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

That the sum of $5,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by the centennial committee of the Groton Monument Association, under the direction of the Secretary of War, for the purpose of aiding to defray the expenses which will be incurred in celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the battle and massacre at Fort Griswold, or Groton Heights, and the burning of New London, on the 6th day of September, 1781, in such manner as shall befit the historical significance of that event, and be indicative of the present power, prosperity, and greatness of the United States as a nation.

The next amendment was stated to be in line 1, section 2, after the word "the" to strike out "further;" so as to read:

That the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. PLATT. It seems to me that Connecticut never having to my knowledge asked anything for the erection of monuments or celebrations of this sort, and this bill having unanimously passed the House of Representatives, it is better to pass it in the form in which it came from the House. I hope the amendments of the committee will not be agreed to. The State of Connecticut has appropriated $3,000 for this celebration; the citizens of Connecticut have subscribed a very large amount; and I do not know why the celebration of that battle, famous in the history of the country, is not entitled to some recognition as well as the celebration of other battles in other sections of the country.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not know much about the merit of the proposition; but it strikes me that the sum of $5,000 for the purpose of a celebration of a battle that occurred in the State of Connecticut, and the further sum of $5,000 to repair a monument erected by the State in commemoration of that battle, is rather a small matter for that State to ask of Congress. I am sure the patriotism of the State of Connecticut if appealed to would supply all the funds that might be necessary for that purpose. We are progressing rather rapidly. The State of New York has just succeeded in getting through a bill to commemorate a battle there. If we go on at this rate we shall have centennials and commemorations of battles in every section of this common country. Why, sir, during the revolutionary war one of the most distinguished soldiers of that war was from my State, a relative of the Senator from Iowa. Captain Kirkwood was engaged in thirty-three battles and fell at last in the thirty-third battle; and yet nobody has proposed to erect a monument to his memory at the national expense. I do not think myself that until the State of Delaware, which I represent, has done something to honor one of her own distinguished sons, we ought to come here and appeal to the National Government (though we might do it with as much propriety as some other things have been done) to erect a monument to the memory of one of her sons. I think we ought to pause a little before we proceed further in this direction. The appropriations may be small from the Treasury, but they may become a precedent for taking out of the Treasury ultimately a very large amount of money.

I make these remarks not because I have any objection to the celebration of the battle of Groton, in Connecticut. On the contrary, it was a very important affair; but I think we ought to pause before we make precedents which may come back to plague us.

Mr. EATON. Mr. President, my honorable friend from Delaware makes an objection, the force of which I think we should have appreciated at an earlier period than 1881. I might have voted with him at an earlier day; but this is the centennial celebration of an action that occurred very late in the revolutionary war. There can be no more centennials, I will say to my honorable friend. There may be a second centennial one hundred years hence; but there will be no more centennial celebrations of revolutionary actions after this commemoration and that at Yorktown.

In the Committee on Appropriations I did not urge the adoption of this bill, though a representative from Connecticut; but on the whole, on reflection, it seems to me we ought to give the sum of $5,000 for the purpose proposed in the first section. Connecticut has contributed very largely from her own funds; now let the United States come in and join with Connecticut in this matter. It will not be a precedent. There will be no more centennial celebrations of the glorious actions of our fathers in the revolutionary war, and therefore I hope the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations will not be adopted, but that the bill will be passed as it came from the House.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, if there were no precedents in Congress for such action, I think I should quite agree with what the Senator from Delaware has said in respect to the States providing for the expenses of such celebrations and for the erection of monuments, rather than to call upon the United States; but the precedent having been set, I can see no reason why a distinction should be made against Connecticut. I do not know that she is so much richer than Virginia or New York. If this course had not been adopted in Congress heretofore, I should not stand here to ask for it. I stand and ask rather that no distinction shall be made against the State of Connecticut in such matters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 1 of section 2 to strike out the word "further;" so as to read:

That the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, &c.

Mr. PLATT. That is connected with the other, and falls also.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, in line 6 of section 2, after the words "Groton Heights," to insert "in the State of Connecticut."

Mr. LOGAN. How much does this bill appropriate?

Mr. EATON. Ten thousand dollars.

Mr. LOGAN. I desire to say, in reply to what was said by the Senator from Delaware, that I vote for this bill not because I am in favor of all these measures, because I have heretofore voted against them, but because I do not desire an exception made. I think the country will recollect this Congress as being a Congress engaged in passing bills for the erection of monuments more than anything else. We have passed bills for the erection of monuments all over the country, $10,000 for the monument and $5,000 for the spree that comes off afterward. That is usually about the way it goes. Then there was $30,000 for Yorktown—$30,000, not for the monument, but for other purposes that can be imagined. These monuments are to be erected on every battle-field of the land, for the purpose of showing how we licked the British. According to my reading of history I do not think it will take many monuments to show how many times we did lick them; it will take but very few. The number that we are erecting I suppose will teach future generations, with the inscriptions thereon, "This is the place where the British ran;" when I do not think there is much truth in many of the statements.

I shall vote for this bill because we have passed such bills for everything else; but I do think that the action of this Congress in reference to erecting monuments is more of a humbug than anything else. I think it is spending money for no purpose whatever, except to show a kind of sentiment of patriotism that amounts to nothing.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, what I desire is that the bill should be passed in the same shape that it came from the House. The amendments, except striking out one section, are merely formal, and I hope the Senate will disagree to them all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment which has been read.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in section 3, line 4, after the word "the," to strike out "centennial services" and insert:

Purpose of celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the battle and massacre at Fort Griswold, or Groton Heights, and the burning of New London, on the 6th day of September, 1781.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a further amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations—to strike out the preamble to the bill.

Mr. EATON. Let the preamble be stricken out, if it does not endanger the bill.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I agree that preambles are generally false, and are not necessary; but striking this out will send the bill back to the House.

Mr. INGALLS. This preamble is a recitation of events and a representation of facts that I do not suppose any member of the Senate will desire to be committed to, particularly the statement in the last section of the preamble, that these acts of heroic valor were done to escape from "the brutality and lust" of the British invaders. We are going a great distance in this matter, Mr. President, and before the Senate agrees to adopt a preamble couched in such offensive and preposterous terms, I hope they will at least hear it read. It ought to be disagreed to and go out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The preamble will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the preamble, as follows:

Whereas the battle of Groton Heights was one of the closing events of the American Revolution, preceding the final surrender of the British forces at Yorktown, in Virginia, only one month and thirteen days, and is logically and historically connected with that great event; and

Whereas the State of Connecticut has already commenced preparations for the centennial celebration of this battle, the massacre attendant upon the capture of Fort Griswold, and the burning of New London, all scenes in the bloody drama of September 6, 1781; and

Whereas the people of the other States of the Union, proud of the part which their fathers took in achieving American Independence, and actuated by the feeling of a common brotherhood, must desire to unite with the people of Connecticut in paying a proper tribute to the patriotism, dauntless courage, and heroic sacrifice of the noble band of men who fought valiantly against superior numbers of British troops, and chose death rather than surrender their homes to the brutality and lust of the invaders: Therefore.

Mr. EATON. I will say to the Senator from Kansas that I would hardly have written the last sentence of this preamble; but it does not assert anything but what is true. A large British force attacked this fortification on Groton Heights. One hundred, or one hundred and twenty-five, of the very flower of Connecticut were there butchered. Colonel Ledyard offering his sword in surrender to the British commander—I mean the acting commander in the assault, for the infamous traitor, Arnold, a Connecticut-born man, was the commander of the expedition; but the British commander took the hilt of Ledyard's sword in his hand and ran him through the body with his own blade; and then New London was burned to the ground. If ever there was brutality, if ever there was lust, and if ever there was an outrageous exhibition of superior force, it was upon this occasion. While I say I would put the language in different terms, still the House have unanimously passed this, and I ask that we pass it here to-day. It recites nothing but truths in regard to that transaction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations to strike out the preamble.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Shall the preamble stand? [Putting the question.] It is decided in the affirmative, and the title stands as reported by the committee.

J. SCOTT PAYNE.

The bill (H. R. No. 4413) for the relief of J. Scott Payne was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that the services of J. Scott Payne, now a captain in the Fifth Regiment of United States Cavalry, shall be regarded as continuous, so far as his pay is concerned, from the date of his original commission as second lieutenant of the Fifth Cavalry. The Paymaster-General in computing the pay of Captain Payne for longevity pay is to compute the same from the date of his original commission as second lieutenant of Fifth Cavalry. Captain Payne is to be paid the difference between the amounts he would have received under the computation herein provided for and the amounts he has actually received, but is to receive no pay for the time he was actually out of the military service of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARK WALKER.

The bill (H. R. No. 249) for the relief of Mark Walker was announced as the next House bill in order on the Calendar.

Mr. BURNSIDE. That bill will lead to discussion that cannot be condensed within the five-minute rule. It had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made, and the bill goes over.

MARTHA BRIDGES.

The bill (H. R. No. 4434) for the relief of Mrs. Martha Bridges, of Bartow County, Georgia, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to appropriate $72.06 to pay Mrs. Martha Bridges, widow of Balaam A. Bridges, deceased, of Bartow County, for work done by him on the Western and Atlantic Railroad, Georgia, during the months of August, September, and October, 1864, while the railroad was in the hands of the United States military authorities.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LOUIS P. DI CESNOLA.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 1359) for the relief of Louis P. di Cesnola, late consul at Cyprus. It provides for the payment to Louis P. di Cesnola of $5,500, the amount paid by him for the official expenses of his consulate while consul at Cyprus.

Mr. BURNSIDE. Is there a report in that case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no report in the case.

Mr. EATON. I will send to the desk a report made by the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives. I did not have time to draw a report.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I do not ask for the reading of it. I withdraw the demand for the report.

Mr. EATON. The report is very short—shorter than a statement would be, and yet quite full.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. COX, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, February 11, 1880:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of General Louis P. di Cesnola, late consul at Cyprus, respectfully report:

The petition states that General Cesnola was appointed United States consul at Cyprus in the year 1865, and served until June, 1876, a period of eleven years; that during this time the duties of his office compelled him to employ an interpreter at the salary of $30 per month in gold and a consular guard at the salary of $12 per month in gold, which he regularly paid out of his own private funds, amounting to the total sum of over fifty-five hundred dollars, for which he prays to be reimbursed.

It appears that all the other consulates in Turkey receive $500 each per annum, as appropriated by Congress, for interpreter and guard hire, with the exception of Cyprus, and which was also allowed General Cesnola's predecessor, Mr. J. Judson Barclay, by Congress passing a special act for his relief.

The petition is accompanied by copies of duly authenticated vouchers, and certificates of payment by General Cesnola, on file in the Department of State, and also by a letter from Hon. William M. Evarts, Secretary of State, the Hon. Samuel J. Randall, Speaker of the House of Representatives, confirming the statements of General Cesnola, and recommending that the relief prayed for be granted accordingly, and which is made a part of this report.

The committee are of opinion that the petitioner's claim is not only just and equitable, but indisputable, and therefore report the accompanying bill and recommend its passage.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH CLYMER.

The bill (H. R. No. 2705) for the relief of Joseph Clymer, of Texas, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to appropriate $18,325 to pay Joseph Clymer, of Texas, the amount due him from the United States on a contract for transportation of Army stores made on the 18th of April, 1851.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PASSED ASSISTANT ENGINEER ABSALOM KIRBY.

The bill (H. R. No. 4607) for the relief of Passed Assistant Engineer Absalom Kirby, of the Navy, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to so construe the act of March 3, 1873, restoring Passed Assistant Engineer Absalom Kirby to the active-list of the Navy, as to allow him the pay of his present grade from the 11th of October, 1866, the date from which he takes rank.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to indefinitely postpone the joint resolution (S. R. No. 68) for the relief of Passed Assistant Engineer Absalom Kirby, of the Navy, the House bill for the same purpose having passed.

The motion was agreed to.

CALIFORNIA INDIAN WAR BONDS.

The bill (H. R. No. 1729) for the payment of certain Indian war bonds of the State of California was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of the unexpended balance of an appropriation of $924,259.65 made by the third section of the act of Congress approved August 5, 1854, the sum of $1,290.56, to the lawful holder of four California Indian war bonds issued by said State on the 18th day of May, 1856, under the provisions of the act of the Legislature thereof approved May 3, 1852, for the suppression of Indian hostilities therein, numbered respectively 164, 166, 167, and 168, each bond being for the sum of $250, and bearing interest from date of issue at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum; the amount herein appropriated being for the principal of said bonds, with interest thereon from date of issue until the 1st of July, 1860.

Mr. HOAR. Why does that amendment read that the money shall be paid out of the unexpended balance? I understand that unexpended balance must long since have gone back into the Treasury. Why not put the language in the ordinary form that payment shall be out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated?

Mr. SLATER. I think this is the usual form.

Mr. CONKLING. Year after year has elapsed and the money has been covered into the Treasury and become a part of the general funds of the Treasury. I should like to inquire why interest on the bond up to a day named in 1860 is allowed?

Mr. SLATER. I suggest that at the end of the committee's amendment we add "that the sum necessary is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. CONKLING. What is the reason for providing for the payment of interest and its payment up to a certain day in 1860?

Mr. SLATER. The act under which these bonds were originally provided to be paid was the act of June 23, 1860. A provision was made for these bonds and a large number of other bonds of a similar character to be paid; but these not being presented within the life of the appropriation were not paid, and it was thought they should not draw interest beyond the date of the passage of the act.

Mr. CONKLING. So that the Senator proposes to pay them now in the same measure in which they would have been paid if presented in time?

Mr. SLATER. Precisely in the same measure.

Mr. HOAR. My suggestion simply requires that the committee should modify the amendment where it reads "out of the unexpended balance of an appropriation," &c., by saying "to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. SLATER. If the Senator will suggest his amendment I will accept it.

Mr. HOAR. That correction can be made at the desk——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts proposes to amend the amendment.

Mr. HOAR. By striking out the provision as to payment from an unexpended balance and inserting "out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out "the unexpended balance of an appropriation of $924,259.65, made by the third section of the act of Congress approved August 5, 1854," and insert "out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,290.56 to the lawful holder of four California Indian war bonds.

Mr. INGALLS. This bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, and the difficulty we desired to avoid was the recognition by the terms of this bill of any obligation on the part of the United States Government to become responsible for anything above the amount of the original appropriation made in 1858, the fact being that it is not known how many more bonds have not been presented, and the further fact being that there is $170,000 of unpaid coupons which have not been presented that we desire to avoid establishing any precedent for the recognition or payment of. Therefore the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts is wrong and the bill was right as reported from the committee. It should read that this is to be paid out of that unexpended balance, which amount is hereby reappropriated, the purpose being what I have said.

There is a very considerable doubt about the present condition of the war debt of California which Congress agreed to liquidate and assume in 1854. I therefore hope the Senators from California will consent to have this bill pass as originally amended by the committee without regard to the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. CONKLING. Would not the Senator guard the purpose he suggests by a proviso restricting this to limits within the original appropriation?

Mr. HOAR. I have prepared a proviso.

Mr. INGALLS. I think that would undoubtedly be satisfactory and sufficient, but the facts are that this is the third bill in the same line which has been passed by Congress. In the first place we appropriated the entire amount, a little less than a million dollars, out of which a considerable amount was paid. Then it was discovered that there were some bonds outstanding that had not been paid when this original balance had lapsed into the Treasury. We provided for the payment of those bonds out of that amount, reappropriating whatever was sufficient for that purpose. And now these additional bonds having turned up after the lapse of many years, it is proposed in the line of precedents heretofore adopted that they shall be paid out of the unexpended balance, the amount necessary to pay them being reappropriated, the further purpose being by no act of ours to commit Congress to the payment of any larger amount than that originally specified in the act of 1854.

Mr. HOAR. The original proposition of the committee commanded an impossibility. There is no such thing as an unexpended balance of this appropriation. It has all been covered back into the Treasury, and does not exist. The appropriation must therefore be made out of moneys in the Treasury; but the suggestion of the Senator from Kansas will be satisfied by adding to the bill:

Provided, That so much of the original appropriation of $924,259.65 still remains unpaid.

Mr. INGALLS. I do not see why the object is not attained by the course that I suggest. It is undoubtedly true that the balance has been covered into the Treasury; but it still remains on the books as an unexpended balance of a specific appropriation. Now what we want to do is to pay these bonds out of that appropriation—so much of it as may be necessary for the purpose. By that means we carry out the original design of Congress, and by that means also we guard and protect the Treasury against any subsequent demands that may be made upon it in connection with the payment of these bonds or with the claim that may be made for the $170,000 of unpaid interest that we should be very careful not to establish a precedent for.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator from Kansas would put in his words, they would be just as well as "that the amount is hereby appropriated;" but that is not the amendment reported by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. HOAR. I will withdraw the amendment and let the Senator from Kansas put it in his own way, as he is on the committee.

Mr. INGALLS. I will suggest that the amendment of the committee be amended so as to read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $924,259.65 made by the third section of the act of Congress approved August 5, 1854, the sum of $1,290.56, which amount is hereby reappropriated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts withdraw his amendment?

Mr. HOAR. I withdraw mine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. INGALLS] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. THURMAN. It ought to be "which last-named amount."

Mr. INGALLS. That is what I mean, "which last-named amount is hereby reappropriated."

Mr. CONKLING. I venture to make this suggestion to the Senator from Kansas: no one knows when these bonds are to be presented; the holders seem from this amendment not to be known. Suppose when they come to be presented for payment, coupons which the Senator has referred to and other things have been paid so that the original appropriation is exhausted; then this appropriation takes hold and adds so much to it, which I understand to be the thing that the Senator means to avoid. Therefore I venture to suggest that if the bill is to be amended by adding a proviso at the end it should be to this general effect:

Provided, however, That no payment shall be made on said bonds unless the sum fall within the amount of the original appropriation—

Referring to it as the bill does, or employ other apt phrase that will leave no possible doubt about it; but if the Senator reappropriates this money, not knowing when the bonds or the last of them will be called for, for aught he knows the whole payment may be in excess of the original appropriation.

Mr. SLATER. If the Senators will look at the report they will see that the sum is in the Treasury as reported by the Treasury officers, so that there can be no doubt in regard to that, though I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to the amendment moved by the Senator from Kansas, in line 9, after the word "cents," to insert "which last-named amount is hereby reappropriated."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the amendment of the Committee on Indian Affairs as amended.

Mr. INGALLS. I suggest as a further amendment to the amendment, at the intimation of some Senators who have given the matter consideration, that in order to guard the subject completely against the difficulties that I have heretofore mentioned, the following proviso should be inserted at the close of the amendment.

Provided, That said bonds shall not be paid except out of any amount remaining unapplied of the original appropriation of $924,259.65 heretofore made.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

TITLE TO AN ISLAND IN THE MISSISSIPPI.

The bill (H. R. No. 936) relinquishing the right of the United States to an island therein named was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to all that island or body of land situated in the Mississippi River opposite Fort Chartres Island, in Randolph County, Illinois, the island or body of land hereby conveyed being commonly known as "Bruce's Island," and which may be further designated as being opposite the mouth of the Establishment Creek, and lands adjacent on the Missouri shore, in Sainte Genevieve County, Missouri, and between Establishment Creek's mouth and the adjacent lands in Missouri and Fort Chartres Island, shall be granted, relinquished, and conveyed by the United States, in fee simple and in full property, to John R. Boas, or his legal representatives. The provisions of the bill are not directly or indirectly to comprehend, include, extend to, grant, relinquish, or convey the whole or any part of any lot, tract, piece, or parcel of land which has heretofore been granted by the United States.

Mr. THURMAN. Seeing that the United States was about to give away an island, and the chairman of the Committee on Commerce not being here to tell me where the island was, I got the bill out of curiosity, and also the report. I find the locality of the island is pretty well described. It lies in the Mississippi River between Illinois and Missouri, and this bill proposes to relinquish all right of the United States in and to this island to John R. Boas or his legal representatives. The word "or" there is evidently a mistake, intended to be "and," it being a grant in fee simple. I was curious to know what was the reason for granting this island, and I find this to be the state of facts: this island has been formed since the erection of Illinois and Missouri into States. It is the product of gradual deposit, as the report made by the House committee, and which is adopted by our committee, says:

The evidence shows that this island lies in the middle of the Mississippi River, fifty miles below the city of Saint Louis, and is the product of gradual deposits by said river, first forming a sand-bar, and thence increasing with every recurring flood for the past fifteen or twenty years. The river flows with equal volume and breadth on both sides. It is known as "Bruce's Island," from a half-crazy man of that name who built a house upon the island, and died and was buried there some years ago. Other attempts have been made to inhabit it, but the overflows have prevented its permanent occupation.

Now comes the reason for passing this bill, and this strikes me as a little amusing; I hope Senators will weigh and ponder it.

Mr. MCMILLAN. The Senator from Ohio will permit me to say that this bill does not come from the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. THURMAN. I did not say that it did, but I always apply to that committee for geographical information. I did not say the bill came from that committee.

Mr. MCMILLAN. The report is from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. THURMAN. Certainly, I know it.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I understood the Senator to say the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. THURMAN. Now, for the reason why the United States should give this island to Boas:

Now, the Government is asked to pass this act in the interests of peace and good order, and as a guarantee to neighboring proprietors against intrusions from river pirates, outlaws, and nondescript vagabonds, who may make it their retreat and the abode of vice.

And therefore this island is to be given to Boas. How Boas is to keep off these river pirates, outlaws, and nondescript vagabonds, when it appears from the report itself that the island is uninhabitable and cannot be inhabited, because the river overflows it—how Boas is to achieve that the committee have not advised us, but undoubtedly Boas can do it, for the committee propose that without any guarantee in the wide world, without even a covenant on Boas's part to keep off bad characters, Boas shall have the island. I do think it is about the strangest piece of legislation I have seen.

This report that I read from was made by the House Committee on Private Land Claims. The bill when it came here was not sent to the Committee on Private Land Claims; if it had been, I dare say the chairman of that committee, our friend from Vermont, [Mr. EDMUNDS,] would never have reported it exactly as it is. I rather think the promoters of it have taken advantage of the good nature of my friend from Indiana [Mr. MCDONALD] to get this report from him; but what I want him to explain is, how Boas is to keep off these bad fellows that make this island their resort.

Mr. MCDONALD. I leave it to the Senator from Missouri, who understands the matter.

Mr. COCKRELL. The facetiousness of the very distinguished Senator from Ohio is remarkable, and has been on this occasion and one or two others. Now, in regard to the location of this island, I simply ask that the report be read entire. It is located as definitely and as distinctly as the city of Cincinnati is located in the State of Ohio.

Mr. THURMAN. No doubt about that.

Mr. COCKRELL. There is no question as to its location in the bill and in the report.

One word before the report is read. Mr. Boas has a deed from the owner of the land on the Illinois shore, and he has the ownership of the land on the Missouri shore; and as to this island being uninhabitable and so on, the Senator from Ohio has certainly forgotten that that great river rises from twenty to thirty feet, and there are seasons of the year when the land cannot be inhabited, but there is over half the year when persons go upon it and live upon it temporarily. The bill is simply to confirm to him what he already claims he has, what the highest courts of Kentucky claim that the United States have not. It is simply a relinquishment to confirm and perfect him in his title, and to do away with any doubt in regard to it; and there is no other claimant. The lands on the Illinois shore were conveyed to him. He owns the land on the Missouri shore. There might be a dispute if he were to go there and eject any person who might settle upon it; and all the bill does is to release to him the right of the United States, if there be any.

Mr. THURMAN. I did not set forth all the beauties of this report. There are other beauties in it of a very remarkable character to a lawyer. For instance, the report finds that the United States have no title at all to the island, and finds further that Missouri has no title to it, and Illinois has no title to it.

Several SENATORS. Who has?

Mr. THURMAN. Nobody but the river pirates, so far as I can see.

Mr. INGALLS. The committee also say "the island is a bastard."

Mr. THURMAN. To be sure.

Mr. INGALLS. "Some of our ablest legal minds are of opinion that the island is a bastard."

Mr. LOGAN. The Senator from Missouri says this man Boas has a claim to this island. I desire to inquire whether or not that claim arises in any other respect than from the fact that he claims the island on account of riparian rights or accretions or something of that kind? Is not that the claim?

Mr. COCKRELL. That is all; he has the title to both sides of the river.

Mr. LOGAN. The question by this bill presented is, first, that Illinois does not own the land; second, that Missouri does not own the land. If neither of them owns the land, then the title must be in the Government of the United States. If this man is entitled to it as the riparian owner or by virtue of right——

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read, and it will explain the whole matter.

Mr. LOGAN. I wanted to say this for the purpose of giving my reasons to the Senate for the course I shall take in reference to the bill. If the title is in the Government—and certainly there must be a suspicion that it is or this bill would not be before Congress asking that the right of the United States be ceded to this individual—if the Government has the right or title to this property, it is asked to cede it for no reason whatever except to gratify this man. If that be true, and the title is in the Government, the Government ought not to cede it for the reason that the Government may require it for some purpose hereafter; it may require it for a coaling station; it may require it for some other purpose; and unless there is a better reason given why the interest, if there is any, of the Government shall be ceded to this man, I shall object to the further consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. COCKRELL. The morning hour has expired. There is no objection to be made to the bill now. It will keep its place on the Calendar.

Mr. MCMILLAN. Objection has been made, and it goes over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the Senator from Illinois as objecting.

Mr. LOGAN. I do object to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill goes over.

Mr. COCKRELL. Can he object after the morning hour has expired?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator objected before the Chair announced the expiration of the morning hour.

Mr. LOGAN. I objected while the bill was before the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7035) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; further insisted upon its disagreement to certain other amendments of the Senate to the said bill; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. T. R. COBB of Indiana, Mr. JOSEPH C. S. BLACKBURN of Kentucky, and Mr. FRANK HISCOCK of New York, managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7099) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution granting permission to the Washington Light Infantry Corps of the District of Columbia to use the Museum building on Monday evening, the 7th of March, 1881.

The message also announced that the House had passed a resolution for the printing of 6,000 copies each of volumes 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, Contributions to North American Ethnology, uniform with the preceding volumes of the series and with the necessary illustrations.

The message further announced that the House insisted on its disagreement to the first, third, and fourth amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6529) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, insisted upon by the Senate, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. J. H. BAKER of Indiana, Mr. HIESTER CLYMER of Pennsylvania, and Mr. ERASTUS WELLS of Missouri, managers at the conference on the part of the House.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. WHYTE. I am instructed by the Committee on Printing to report back the amendment proposed by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. BURNSIDE] to the sundry civil appropriation bill in regard to the purchase of certain books, and to say that we have considered this subject before, and considered it as not properly belonging to that committee, but to the Committee on Appropriations. Therefore the committee ask to be discharged from the further consideration of the amendment, and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS, from the Select Committee to investigate and report the best means of preventing the introduction and spread of Epidemic Diseases, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PADDOCK, from the Committee on Agriculture, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BROWN, Mr. BUTLER, Mr. COKE, Mr. HAMPTON, Mr. HEREFORD, Mr. LAMAR, Mr. McDONALD, Mr. McMILLAN, Mr. MORGAN, Mr. ROLLINS, Mr. SAUNDERS, Mr. VANCE, Mr. VOORHEES, Mr. WITHERS, and Mr. WHYTE submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GARLAND, Mr. ROLLINS, Mr. VEST, and Mr. VOORHEES submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will lay before the Senate the regular order, being the bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund.

Mr. BALDWIN. I would ask my friend from Connecticut if he will not consent to lay aside this bill temporarily for a moment in order that the Senate may take up for consideration Senate bill No. 1836. It will take but a single moment. If it takes more than three minutes I will agree that it shall be withdrawn.

Mr. EATON. I cannot yield.

Mr. McPHERSON. I ask the Senator from Connecticut to yield to me for a moment for the purpose of taking up and considering a Senate bill——

Mr. EATON. I desire to say that in my good nature I yielded yesterday and lost an hour and a half or two hours. Now, I cannot yield to-day. If I could I would rather yield to my excellent friend from New York, who wants me to yield, for I told him yesterday I would.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. EATON. I cannot yield.

Mr. McPHERSON. I will simply say to the Senator from Connecticut——

Mr. FERRY. I want to make an appeal to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. PADDOCK. I want to appeal to the Senator from Connecticut that he yield one moment to the Senator from Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is appealed to. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. EATON. I yielded twice yesterday, and told my friend from New York that he might come in after my friend from Delaware; and I lost the whole afternoon, an hour and a half.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield?

Mr. EATON. I decline to yield.

Mr. McPHERSON. Does not the Senator from Connecticut now see——

Mr. EATON. Yes; I see.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut declines to yield.

Mr. FERRY. I want to make an appeal to the Senator from Connecticut. My colleague [Mr. BALDWIN] during the whole session has not asked for the consideration of a special case. He now has a bill that he wishes to have considered, and I hope the Senator from Connecticut will yield to him and allow the bill to be passed.

Mr. CONKLING. I am not going to appeal to the Senator from Connecticut. I wish, however, to make a remark to the Senate which I believe is in order. The Senator from Connecticut yesterday was kind enough to say to me, as the RECORD will show, that I might take up pending the bill which he has in charge the trade-mark bill. Seeing as I do how embarrassed he is I would not think of claiming his promise, and certainly no other Senator, I submit, can object to his declining to yield. I want to say, however, having had that assurance from the Senator, if when this bill is disposed of I am fortunate enough to get a performance of the promise in effect made yesterday, it will give me great pleasure to give that opportunity, if it be worth anything, to my honorable friend from Michigan, who, I think, makes a very moderate request, and I trust the whole Senate will listen to him.

MUSEUM BUILDING.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to ask unanimous consent that the resolution just sent over from the House relating to the use of a certain public building for the inauguration ceremonies may be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. LOGAN. With that reference I ask to have referred an amendment to strike out the words "Light Infantry of the District of Columbia" and insert "military organizations of the District of Columbia;" and I hope the committee will give it consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will lay before the Senate the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That permission is granted to the Washington Light Infantry Corps of the District of Columbia to use the Museum building on Monday evening, the 7th of March, 1881, provided that no expense shall be thereby incurred to the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts moves the reference of the resolution to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and the Senator from Illinois proposes an amendment which he asks to be referred with it. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO NORTH AMERICAN ETHNOLOGY.

The following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives was laid before the Senate and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That there be printed at the Government Printing Office 6,000 copies each of volumes 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of the Contributions to North American Ethnology, uniform with the preceding volumes of the series, and with the necessary illustrations; 3,030 copies of which shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 1,000 for the use of the Senate, and 1,970 for distribution by the Bureau of Ethnology.

DISTRICT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WITHERS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7035) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 5, 36, 37, 38, and 59.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 7, 8, 10, 21, 22, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 51, 52, 61, 64, and 65.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,940;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its amendment to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$20,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 40: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$96,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 62: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: On page 18 of the bill, at the end of line 10, after the word "Treasury," insert the following: "And with his action on the same, to be printed in the general Book of Estimates;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the committee have been unable to agree on the following amendments: numbered 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 49, 50, 60, 63, and 66.

R. E. WITHERS,
ISHAM G. HARRIS,
WILLIAM WINDOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
T. R. COBB,
JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
FRANK HISCOCK,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. INGALLS. What are the points at issue between the two committees?

Mr. WITHERS. The points at issue are four or five. There are four principal points of difference. One is in regard to the amount that shall be paid by the District of Columbia for the support of the insane in the asylum here. The Senate committee reported $40,000 and the House committee $80,000, I think. The second point of difference is in regard to the House amendment by which the office of treasurer was stricken out of the bill. It was restored by the Senate. The third is in regard to the credit to the District commissioners on account of drawback certificates in the settlement of taxes; and the fourth is the amount appropriated by the House for the expenses of a jail for the District of Columbia, which the Senate struck out of the bill. Those are the four principal points of difference. Another point of difference is the location of the high-school building, which was provided for by the House, the House proposing to locate it just on the market-house, and the Senate refusing to concur in that, and deciding to locate it upon another part of the same square, not on the market.

Mr. ROLLINS. But really locating it on the top of the other school-house.

Mr. WITHERS. It may as well be on the other school-house as on the market-house.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. WITHERS. I move that the Senate further insist upon its remaining amendments disagreed to by the House, and ask for another conference, the conferees to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and Mr. WITHERS, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. WINDOM were appointed as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. No. 6730) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; and

A bill (H. R. No. 7099) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. RANSOM submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 10, 25, 122, 130, 135, 138.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 131, 132, 133, 134, 136, 139; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "forty" and insert "thirty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "sixty-six" and insert "forty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Insert after the word "dollars" the following:

"Provided, That the Secretary of War is directed to expend of the money hereby appropriated a sum not exceeding $10,000 to extinguish any claim of right held by any company or corporation to take tolls or make charges for the navigation of so much of said river as is above described: And provided further, That said claim of right shall be extinguished and released on or before the 1st day of December, 1881, and no part of this appropriation shall be expended in the improvement of said river until such claim of right is wholly extinguished and released: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be taken or held as a waiver on the part of the United States to the exclusive control of the navigation of said river relieved from any charges or tolls imposed by any company or corporation."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Insert in the list of surveys the following: "Little Red River in Arkansas."

Amendment numbered 101: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 101, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "without," in the fifteenth line of the amendment, insert "actual," and strike out the last clause; so that the whole clause will read as follows:

"Such parts of the money appropriated by this act for any particular improvement requiring locks and dams as may be necessary in the prosecution of such improvement may be expended in the purchase, voluntary or by condemnation, as the case may be, of necessary sites: Provided, That such expenditure shall be under the direction of the Secretary of War: And provided further, That if the owners of such lands shall refuse to sell them at reasonable prices, then the prices to be paid shall be determined and the title and jurisdiction procured in the manner perscribed by the laws of the State in which such lands or sites are situated. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to apply the money herein appropriated for improvements, other than surveys and estimates, in carrying on the various works, as far as can be without actual detriment to the interest of the Government, by contract. Where such works cannot be done by contract without injury to the public interest, they may be prosecuted by hired labor. Where said works are done by contract, such contract shall be made after sufficient public advertisement for proposals, in such manner and form as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and such contracts shall be made with the lowest responsible bidders, accompanied by such securities as the Secretary of War shall require, conditioned for the faithful prosecution of the work according to such contract, and for the proper payment of all liabilities incurred in the prosecution thereof for labor and material."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 113: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "Newark" and insert "New York."

Amendment numbered 137: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 137, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: After the word "White Oak" insert "Meherrin and New;" and strike out "river" and insert "rivers."

M. W. RANSOM,
J. T. FARLEY,
S. J. R. MCMILLAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
JOHN H. REAGAN,
JNO. E. KENNA,
THOMAS M. BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

JAPANESE INDEMNITY FUND.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund.

Mr. EATON. Mr. President, I do not desire to take up the time of the Senate in an argument of this case. The whole country is acquainted with all the facts connected with the case. Yesterday I received a dispatch from the Board of Trade of San Francisco; the same from New York, from New Orleans, and from all over the country. No leading journal can be taken up but what there seems to be a universal demand that the Congress of the United States should do honor to the country and justice to Japan. Even yesterday, in an interview by a leading paper with the most eminent of living Americans, he said he would come here himself for the purpose that the country might do honor to itself and justice to Japan.

I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate; I simply ask that the report of the Committee on Foreign Relations be read. The report states the entire facts in the case, and states also what I shall ask the Senate to consider after they have considered this bill; it states also the necessity of passing another bill, which will not take one minute. I should like to have the report read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. HARRIS in the chair.) The Secretary will read the report called for by the Senator from Connecticut.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. EATON January 13, 1881:

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (S. 2021) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund, submit to the Senate the following report, and recommend the passage of the accompanying bill as a substitute for the original bill:

The Japanese indemnity fund is a sum of money, amounting on the 15th day of February, 1881, to the sum of $1,711,224, invested in United States securities, and under control of the State Department, never having been covered into the Treasury.

This sum is the proceeds and accretions of the sum of $785,000 in gold paid to the United States by the Government of Japan under the provisions of a convention made October 22, 1864, between the tycoon of Japan and the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, and the Netherlands, by which Japan agreed to pay the four powers $3,000,000, "this sum to include all claims, of whatever character, for past aggressions on the part of the Prince of Nagato, indemnity, ransom for Simonoseki, or expenses entailed by the operations of the allied squadrons."

One-fourth of this sum has been paid to the United States in gold, and constitutes the fund named.

"It is," as was stated by Mr. Secretary Seward, January 8, 1868, "in our hands without substantial equivalent."

The circumstances which led to the convention between the four powers and Japan are, briefly, as follows:

Prior to 1853 the ports of the Japanese Empire were closed to foreign trade. The policy of Japan was that of seclusion. For centuries she had been isolated from all communication with foreign powers, and the minds of her people were deeply imbued with the idea that commercial intercourse with foreigners was perilous to her best interests.

The rulers of the empire were the mikado, who was the titular and hereditary sovereign, but not, apparently, possessed of the governing power; the tycoon, also hereditary, who was the executive head, and, apparently, wielded the power of the empire; and the daimios, who were rulers in localities or provinces. Many of these were very rich and powerful, aiming at independence from the mikado and tycoon. Wars were very frequent between the daimios and the tycoon.

The daimio of Chosin or Nagato was one of the most powerful of this class. His territory lay at the southwestern part of the largest of the Japanese islands, and the strait of Simonoseki, which connects the inland sea of Japan with the ocean, is within it.

The advent of Commodore Perry, in 1853, and the events following it, opened certain ports of Japan to foreign trade, and in 1858 the treaty now in existence was concluded between the tycoon and the United States. The mikado was not a party to this treaty until 1865, and none of the ports opened by it were upon the inland sea of Japan. Many of the people were incensed at this action, and several of the great daimios, notably those of Satsuma and Nagato, opposed this policy of the tycoon with great bitterness. The prejudices and fanaticism of the natives were aroused and intensified, and while the tycoon did all in his power to carry out his treaty stipulations made with the foreign powers, it was practically impossible for him to do so in all parts of the empire.

The Prince of Nagato openly rebelled against the tycoon and his policy of opening the ports, and erected at the narrowest part of the strait of Simonoseki powerful batteries mounted with modern cannon, with the avowed purpose of closing the strait to foreign traffic. In June, 1863, the Pembroke, a small American steamer, loaded with merchandise, from Yokohama for Nagasaki, and carrying the flag of the United States, attempted to pass through the strait. She was fired upon by the shore batteries and by an armed brig belonging to the Prince of Nagato. She was not struck; no one was hurt; and she retraced her way and abandoned the voyage to Nagasaki. Demand was made by the American minister for redress for this insult to the American flag, and, by his direction, Commander McDougal, in the United States steamer Wyoming, proceeded, in July, to retaliate upon the daimio. He found at Simonoseki three vessels belonging to the prince lying at anchor near the shore. He attacked them, and, after a sharp conflict with them and the shore batteries, sank a brig and blew up a steamer, by which some forty persons were said to have been killed. The loss of the Wyoming was five killed and six wounded. A French steamer and a Dutch corvette had also been fired upon at these straits by this rebellious daimio. No English ship was attacked. A claim was at once made by Mr. Pruyn, our minister, for loss of time, freight, &c., sustained by the Pembroke, amounting to $10,000, which was fully and promptly paid by the Japanese Government. The insult to the flag had been fully redressed by Commander McDougal, and it would be supposed that here the matter was ended. On the 8th of August, 1864, our minister writes:

"The Japanese Government has arranged to my satisfaction the claims which I had been instructed by the President of the United States to make upon it."

On the 15th of the same month, we, with the representatives of Great Britain, Spain, and the Netherlands, signed a memorandum, agreeing to dispatch an armed expedition "with all consistent speed to open the strait at Simonoseki, destroying and disarming the batteries of the Prince of Chospin, and otherwise crippling him in all his means of attack, and that the political situation renders it desirable that there should be no considerable delay in the commencement of operations." This expedition, consisting of nine British, three French, and four Dutch vessels, and a chartered vessel called the Takiang, bearing the American flag, proceeded to the strait, and on the 1st of October, 1864, our minister again writes:

"A portion of the fleet has returned from the strait of Simonoseki, bringing the intelligence that on the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th days of September last the batteries of Chosin, commanding these straits, were entirely destroyed, the magazines blown up, shot and shell thrown into the sea, and the guns, to the number of nearly seventy, carried away. The prince made an unconditional surrender, and agreed to pay such sum as the ministers of the treaty powers might demand for the expenses of the expedition."

The cost of the hired steamer Takiang for one month was $9,500, and her coal cost $1,848. The Secretary of the Navy fixes the injury to and expenses of the Wyoming while in action at $10,169, making a total of $21,517. This is the maximum for which any claim for indemnity could justly have been made. Especially is this the case when it is remembered that the Wyoming had fully and adequately repaid the insult to our flag a year before, and every claim for loss by the Pembroke had been made and paid.

Yet, on the 22d of October, 1864, the convention between the four powers and the tycoon was executed, and by it the sum of $785,000 was obtained for our benefit from a weak and friendly power, and this sum still remains in our hands "without substantial equivalent."

The preliminary clause of this convention is in these words:

"The representatives of Great Britain, France, the United States, and the Netherlands, in view of the hostile acts of Mori Daizen, prince of Nagato and Suwo, which were assuming such formidable proportions as to make it difficult for the tycoon faithfully to observe the treaties, having been obliged to send their combined forces to the strait of Simonoseki, in order to destroy the batteries erected by that daimio for the destruction of foreign vessels and the stoppage of trade; and the government of the tycoon, on whom devolved the duty of chastising this rebellious prince, being held responsible for any damages resulting to the interests of the treaty powers, as well as the expenses occasioned by the expedition: Therefore," &c.

And the first article of the convention is as follows:

"The amount payable to the four powers is fixed at $3,000,000. This sum to include all claims of whatever nature for past aggressions on the part of the Prince of Nagato, whether indemnities, ransom for Simonoseki, or expenses entailed by the operations of the allied squadrons."

Your committee is of the opinion that, except in so far as it may be just and equitable to provide out of this fund for the relief of the families who suffered in the attack made by the Wyoming to avenge the insult to our flag and to those who personally suffered therein or to repay the gallantry displayed in so remarkable a degree by her officers and crew in the distribution of a reasonable sum to them as prize-money, the whole of the money should be returned to Japan.

In view of the present friendly relations between the United States and the government of Japan, your committee recommend that after deducting the sum of $140,000 and the interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent., amounting in all to the sum of $248,000, that the balance of the fund, amounting on the 15th day of February, 1881, to the sum of $1,463,224 in gold, be returned to the Government of Japan.

In making this recommendation it is not to be understood that your committee in the slightest degree attack the motives governing the authorities of France, Great Britain, or the Netherlands.

The expenditures of those governments were vastly larger than the expenditure of the United States, being in fact greater than the amount of money received by them from Japan, and thus they may be justified by every principle of public morality in retaining the full amount obtained by the convention between the powers. Yet, it is the judgment of your committee that the United States cannot in justice retain the amount allotted to it by the arrangement entered into by its representative with the representatives of the aforesaid governments.

The amount of $140,000 and the accrued interest in full remunerates the United States for its losses and expenses arising out of the unfortunate difficulties between Japan and the treaty powers, and to retain the balance would not be in harmony with the time-honored policy of the United States, to demand from foreign powers idemnity for actual losses only, and to exact no money indemnity for insults to its flag, but to accept just and suitable apology therefor.

Especially should this Government adhere to this policy in the case now under consideration, as the friendly relations between the United States and Japan, interrupted during the existence of serious internal troubles in the latter government have now been fully restored.

Your committee therefore say that the aforesaid sum of $1,463,224 should at once be returned to the authorities of Japan, and thus assure not only that government, but all the powers of the earth, that the United States demands but simple justice from other governments, and makes restitution whenever public justice and the principles of public morality demand such action.

Mr. MORGAN. Before proceeding with some remarks that I wish to submit on the bill, and in order to have Senate bill No. 2021 considered in connection with this measure, I will offer the provisions of that bill as section 2.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert the following additional section:

SEC. 2. That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the sum of $248,000 to be paid, out of the fund now under control of the Department of State known as the Japanese indemnity fund, to the officers and crew of the United States ship Wyoming, or to their legal representatives, for extraordinary, valuable, and specially meritorious and perilous services in the destruction of hostile vessels in the strait of Simonoseki, on the 16th day of July, 1863, and to the officers and crew of the steamer Takiang, who were detached from the United States ship Jamestown, or to their legal representatives, for similar services on the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th days of September, 1864; said sum to be distributed to the said officers and crews according to the laws of the United States governing the distribution of prize-money: Provided, That for the purpose of such distribution, the officers and crew, detached as aforesaid, who manned the Takiang, shall be regarded as a part of the forces of the Wyoming on the 16th day of July, 1863, and according to their rank and position on the 8th day of September, 1864: And provided further, That in such distribution no payment shall be made to the assignee of any mariner, but to the mariner himself only or to his duly authorized attorney, or, in case of his decease, to his legal representatives or their duly authorized attorney.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BAILEY. I move, in lieu of that, an amendment to the bill now under consideration. I move to strike out in lines 4 and 5 "$1,463,224" and insert "$1,688,707;" and I wish briefly to state my reasons for moving the amendment.

The report of the committee assumes that the Government of Japan was not in fault in its relations with the Government of the United States, but that one of the high dignitaries of the Empire of Japan, who was in a state of actual revolution with his government, had undertaken to block the passage-way to a certain strait to the vessels of foreign nations in contravention of treaty stipulations between the Governments of Japan and the United States.

The report further shows that the minister of the United States to China sent an American war vessel, the Wyoming, down into these straits; that an attack was made upon the vessels controlled and owned by this prince, who was in a state of rebellion against his government; that his vessels were destroyed, and that the Government of Japan made reparation to the Government of the United States, by paying to it the entire sum of money demanded as an indemnity for the injury done to this Government, which was $10,000.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Was the sum which was paid to the United States the result of the determination of the convention of the four powers, or was it paid to the United States before she entered into the convention?

Mr. BAILEY. The Government of the United States, as I understand, claimed nothing from the Government of Japan. On the contrary, the Government of Japan had made a satisfactory settlement with the Government of the United States, and had paid the sum of money that was demanded from it by the Government of the United States.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I understand that some $3,000,000 was paid to the four powers named, and that the sum of money received by the United States was allotted to this Government as its proportionate share of the entire award, but that no distinct claim had been made by the Government of the United States for any particular sum.

Mr. BAILEY. As I understand, no claim had been made by the Government of the United States other than for the $10,000 which was demanded as compensation to the master and owners of the ship Pembroke, whose voyage had been interrupted, and the Government of the United States made no claim whatever against the Government of Japan, and had no claim; and the report assumes that nothing was due from the Government of Japan to the Government of the United States, and therefore that it is proper and just that this money shall be refunded. But $248,000 of it is paid as prize-money to the officers and crew of the ship Wyoming, a ship of war that had been sent down there by our minister to China for the purpose of destroying the vessels that were under the command of this rebellious prince. I understand these to be the facts.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. There were lives lost?

Mr. BAILEY. There were five lives lost and six persons wounded, as the report states. It is conceded by the report that nothing is due by the Government of Japan to the Government of the United States, and that this money that she paid is money that the United States Government had no right to receive, and that in fact it has never been paid over to the Government but still is in the hands of the Secretary of State, under his control. If that be so, it seems to me that we ought to do entire and absolute justice to the Government of Japan, and that no part of this money should be retained as prize-money to the officers and crew of the ship Wyoming. They have no right to prize-money according to the laws of war. If the Government of the United States wishes to make compensation to its own officers and to its own citizens for extraordinary services that they have rendered, the compensation should be made out of the Treasury of the United States and not from money that does not belong to the United States, which they concede belongs to a friendly power, a power that was at peace with us at the time, and has so continued from that day to this. I cannot understand upon what principle it is proposed to take a part of this money and give it to citizens of the United States, it being money that our Government admits and this legislation agrees we are not entitled to at all. I ask the chairman of the committee to make some explanation on this point, for it seems to me that in the case of a great government like ours, dealing with a weaker government, such as is Japan, and a friendly power, where it undertakes to be generous, where it undertakes to be just, it should be absolutely just and should not retain for its own citizens any part of the money that it agrees it is not entitled to.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Before the Senator takes his seat I should like to ask him if the United States received this money jointly with other powers? I understand it to be the fact that there was a payment in gross of $3,000,000 to France, the United States, Great Britain, and the Netherlands, on the ground that indemnity was due to them in consequence of the infraction of treaties caused by one of the insurgent princes of Japan. The United States received seven hundred and odd thousand dollars of the $3,000,000 in conjunction with the other powers, under treaty stipulations, I suppose, because it was an entire act and they acted together. They made a common demand, and in response to that demand this payment was made. The question that suggests itself to my mind is, whether the Government, having thus accepted the money it ought, when it comes to refund a portion of this money, act without any concert or any communication or understanding with those governments in concert with which this Government obtained the money. Should not that be done in accordance with the justice and propriety that should always characterize great States when dealing with one another?

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I had the honor to serve on the subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations which reported both these bills, and, having devoted some attention to the subject, from the information I have gained in my investigation I hope to be able to enlighten the Senator from Tennessee and the Senator from Florida as to the particular facts of the transaction, so that their very just reasoning upon the hypothesis which they have stated will be found to be entirely without foundation in fact, and not to apply at all against the merits of the bill and the amendment which I have offered.

This is an old transaction, dating back to 1863. It occurred at the time of the war between the Northern and Southern States of this Union, and at that time attracted very little attention. Even on the part of the Government of the United States there might be said to have been some little remissness in understanding fully the facts and nature of the transaction at the time it occurred.

In order to understand why it is that $140,000 of this money ought to be applied to the Wyoming and the Takiang, two ships of war that were used in warlike expeditions in Japan, it will be necessary to advert somewhat to the history of the whole matter, for both the bills which I now propose to unite by the amendment that I have offered are so intimately related to each other that they constitute really but one subject of inquiry; and when that is understood by the Senate it will be found, I think, that there is no difficulty in the line of action which the committee have pursued in recommending the passage of both these measures. They both accord entirely with international law, with the duty and honor of the Government of the United States, and with the consent of both governments as expressed in the convention of 1864. I will here remark that we have the strongest assurances that the Government of Japan makes no objection whatever to our proposition to pay to the Wyoming and the Takiang the sum of $140,000, with the accumulated interest thereon, as a bounty for the services that were rendered by these ships really at the instance of the Government of Japan.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question right there?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the Government of Japan make any claim whatever? Is this proposed legislation in consequence of any demand or claim made by the Government of Japan, or is it supposed to be a free and voluntary act of a great government that wishes to do justice to a friendly and weaker power?

Mr. MORGAN. I will remark to the Senator from Tennessee, and I take great pleasure in saying to him, that the Government of Japan has not yet been long enough classified among the treaty powers of the earth to have acquired that sort of hardness of disposition and energy in making demands which older civilized governments have followed for a long while past. She has evinced on this subject a modesty which would be a fine example to be followed by other governments. I am not aware that Japan has sent to us in form any demand or request even for a return of this money, but I know that she has stood by with anxious expectation that we would redeem what she considers on our part a debt of honor due to her.

This has been a subject of consideration by the Japanese authorities, though perhaps not a subject of diplomatic intercourse between the two governments, but it is well understood that Japan recognizes her own obligation to the Takiang and the Wyoming as having been instruments used by her in bringing the rebellious princes of Japan to terms, so that the Government of Japan could fulfill toward the United States those treaty obligations which were imposed upon her by the convention of 1863 and previous treaties.

There is not one syllable in the bill or the amendment antagonistic either to the interests, the honor, the sentiment, or the feeling of duty on the part of Japan. I assure Senators that we shall be violating nothing whatever of the most delicate relationship with a foreign government if the bill and amendment are passed; but the passage of this measure will be as much welcomed on the part of Japan as an honest reward to the crews and officers of the Tokiang and Wyoming, as in reference to the interests that she has in the disposal of the fund.

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator from Alabama will permit me, I understand in a few words from the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations that on account of a communication not proper to speak of here I should withdraw the amendment.

Mr. MORGAN. I am much obliged to the honorable Senator for following the advice of the honorable chairman, for he understands the subject thoroughly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Tennessee is withdrawn.

Mr. MORGAN. I now ask the honorable chairman to accept the amendment I have offered.

Mr. EATON. I will. As my friend will remember, I said that the bill No. 2, precisely like this, might as well go with the bill now before the Senate.

Mr. MORGAN. The time of the Senate is so very precious now that I must forbear to enter into the discussion of this question as extensively as I would feel it my duty to do, a duty in part that I owe to Senators who since I have been here have not had the opportunity of hearing a discussion of this question, and who in the midst of their numerous engagements doubtless have not had the time to pursue the history of this transaction as thoroughly as they would like to do.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. If the Senator will permit me, let me ask him if he has examined the treaty or convention which these powers made with each other before the demand was made upon Japan for this money, and will he state the substance of it?

Mr. MORGAN. I have examined the treaty or convention, and I have it before me. I desire to say to the honorable Senator that there were four powers engaged in making that treaty or convention—Great Britain, Holland, France, the United States—and with Japan, making five parties to the treaty or convention; and not one of the governments of the four powers that made this demand upon Japan had authorized any such demand to be made; but on the contrary, the history of the negotiations shows that the ministers of these four powers who were then assembled in Japan entered into this convention with Japan, and made every demand that is covered by it, and put on foot the two military expeditions that went from Yeddo down to the strait of Simonoseki without the concurrence or consent of their governments. It is true that our Government ratified the convention, but our Government never so far carried it into effect as actually to receive into its possession as its own money the tribute which was exacted from Japan in consequence of that convention.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I understand the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BAILEY] to have withdrawn his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee has been withdrawn.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Before the Senator from Alabama proceeds further with his remarks, I should like to submit an amendment in the same direction, and he may perhaps direct his attention to it if he will allow me to offer it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield for the purpose indicated by the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Before the word "dollars" in the sixth line, I move to strike out the words "one million four hundred and sixty-three thousand two hundred and twenty-four" and insert "seven hundred and fifty thousand,"—$750,000 being the precise sum we received from Japan.

Mr. THURMAN. Has my friend overlooked the fact that this money has been kept as a separate fund invested by the State Department and has brought interest all the time?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. But it has brought interest from the United States all the time.

Mr. THURMAN. It has brought interest all the while. It has been loaned, and brought interest.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. That is, the Government of the United States has loaned it to itself, and paid the interest upon it.

Mr. THURMAN. Very well; it bought bonds with it.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I propose the amendment. I will discuss it after a while.

Mr. MORGAN. I will not now stop to discuss the amendment which the Senator from Iowa has just offered, but will pay some attention to it, perhaps, before I get through with my remarks. I will proceed with a narrative of some historical facts connected with this transaction, which are necessary to be understood in order to trace out the rights asserted in the bill as now amended, as I understand the real duties of the United States in this particular require to be upheld.

1. The ancient Japanese dynasty was based upon the religion of those people and the mikado, who was the religious head of the empire and its true sovereign, was regarded as being so sacred in his person that it was only on the most solemn occasions that he was ever seen by the people. He lived in his capital, at Tokio, retired from the seaboard, and was not only secluded in his palace from all contact with his people, but was seldom expected to take active part in the administration of public affairs. The daimios were princes, chiefly of the dynastic family, and were the feudal lords of provinces in which they ruled with almost absolute power.

The tycoon was inferior in rank and power to the mikado. He was the real commander of the army and navy, and had executive power that included the control of a large part of the revenues and the regulations of commerce.

As to the powers of the tycoon, I read from a high Japanese authority quoted by Adams in his history of Japan. This native writer says:

It is a painful fact that there are men who openly assert that the existing estates of the daimios are direct grants from, or are held on the condition of allegiance to, the shôgunate. When these men talk so they convict both the shôgun and their own lords of treason. It is asked how? "There is not a single foot of land that is not the territory of the sovereign; not a single individual who is not the subject of the sovereign." Further, this realm of the mikado was never handed over by any sovereign to the shôgunate.

In this arrangement of powers there was ample room for jealousy and conflict with the daimios and the mikado. The traditional policy of the Chinese and Japanese Empires was that of absolute non-intercourse with foreign nations.

It is not necessary to attempt to account for this policy. It had some reasonable foundation in their struggles with people of foreign countries to introduce among them a new religion of peace at the point of the sword. It most probably was this fact that gave to Japanese and Chinese sentiment as to the exclusion of foreigners all the intensity of a religious fanaticism.

In Japan it was considered sacrilegious to entertain the idea of intercourse with foreign people. It was like the imagination of the death of the king, a sort of misprision of treason, to contemplate foreign intercourse. When in 1853 Commodore Perry reached the coast of Japan with four ships of war, and sought to open negotiations with that government, the people of Japan were thrown into a state of alarm bordering on frenzy. I quote again from the history of Japan by Mr. Adams, (Adams, volume 1, pages 109–114:)

It was in the summer of 1853 that, as the author states, an individual named Perry, who called himself the envoy of the United States of America, suddenly arrived at Uraga, in the province of Sagami, with four ships of war, declaring that he brought a letter from his country to Japan, and that he wished to deliver it to the sovereign. The governor of the place, Toda Idzu no kami, much alarmed by this extraordinary event, hastened to the spot to inform himself of its meaning. The envoy stated, in reply to questions, that he desired to see a chief minister, in order to explain the object of his visit and to hand over to him the letter with which he was charged. The governor then dispatched a messenger on horseback with all haste to carry this information to the castle of Yeddo, where a great scene of confusion ensued on his arrival. Fresh messengers followed, and the Shôgun Iyéyoshi, on receiving them, was exceedingly troubled, and summoned all the officials to a council. At first the affair seemed so sudden and so formidable that they were too alarmed to open their mouths, but in the end orders were issued to the great clans to keep strict watch at various points on the shore, as it was possible that the "barbarian" vessels might proceed to commit acts of violence. A learned Chinese scholar was sent to Uraga, had an interview with the American envoy, and returned with the letter, which expressed the desire of the United States to establish friendship and intercourse with Japan, and said, according to this account, that if they met with a refusal they should commit hostilities.

Thereupon the shôgun was greatly distressed, and again summoned a council. He also asked the opinion of the daimios. "The assembled officials were exceedingly disturbed, and nearly broke their hearts over consultations which lasted all day and all night. The nobles and retired nobles in Yeddo were informed that they were at liberty to state any ideas they might have on the subject, and, although they all gave their opinions, the diversity of propositions was so great that no decision was arrived at. The military class had during a long peace neglected military arts; they had given themselves up to pleasure and luxury, and there were very few who had put on armor for many years. So that they were greatly alarmed at the prospect that war might break out at a moment's notice, and began to run hither and thither in search of arms. The city of Yeddo and the surrounding villages were in great tumult; in anticipation of the war which seemed imminent, the people carried off their valuables and furniture in all directions, in order to conceal them in the houses of friends living farther off, and there was such a state of confusion among all classes that the governors of the city were compelled to issue a notification to the people, and this in the end had the effect of quieting the general anxiety. But in the castle never was a decision further from being arrived at, and while time was being thus idly wasted, the envoy was constantly demanding an answer. So at last they decided that it would be best to arrange the affair quietly, to give the foreigners the articles they wanted, and to put off sending an answer to the letter; to tell the envoy that in an affair of such importance to the State no decision could be arrived at without mature consideration, and that he had better go away; that in a short time he should get a definite answer. The envoy agreed, and, after sending a message to say that he should return in the following spring for his answer, set sail from Uraga with his four ships."

* * * * * * *

Early in 1854 Commodore Perry returned, and the question of acceding to his demands was again hotly debated. The old Prince of Mito was opposed to it, and contended that the admission of foreigners into Japan would ruin it. "At first," said he, "they will give us philosophical instruments, machinery, and other curiosities; will take ignorant people in, and, trade being their chief object, they will manage, bit by bit, to impoverish the country; after which they will treat us just as they like, perhaps behave with the greatest rudeness and insult us, and end by swallowing up Japa. If we do not drive them away now we shall never have another opportunity. If we now resort to a dilatory method of proceeding we shall regret it afterwards when it will be of no use." The officials, however, argued otherwise, and said: "If we try to drive them away they will immediately commence hostilities, and then we shall be obliged to fight. If we once get into a dispute we shall have an enemy to fight who will not be easily disposed of. He does not care how long a time he will have to spend over it, but he will come with several myriads of men-of-war and surround our shore completely; he will capture our junks and blockade our ports, and deprive us of all hope of protecting our coasts. However large a number of ships we might destroy, he is so accustomed to that sort of thing that he would not care in the least. Even supposing that our troops were animated by patriotic zeal in the commencement of the war, after they had been fighting for several years their patriotic zeal would naturally become relaxed, the soldiers would become fatigued, and we should have to thank ourselves for this. Soldiers who have distinguished themselves are rewarded by grants of land, or else you attack and seize the enemy's territory, and that becomes your own property; so every man is encouraged to fight his best. But in a war with foreign countries a man may undergo hardships for years, may fight as if his life were worth nothing, and, as all the land in this country has already owners, there will be none to be given away as rewards; so we shall have to give rewards in words or money. In time the country would be put to an immense expense, and the people be plunged into misery. Rather than allow this, as we are not the equals of foreigners in the mechanical arts, let us have intercourse with foreign countries, learn their drill and tactics, and when we have made the nation as united as one family we shall be able to go abroad and give lands in foreign countries to those who have distinguished themselves in battle; the soldiers will vie with one another in displaying their intrepidity, and it will not be too late then to declare war. Now we shall have to defend ourselves against these foreign enemies, skilled in the use of mechanical appliances, with our soldiers, whose military skill has considerably diminished during a long peace of three hundred years, and we certainly could not feel sure of victory, especially in a naval war."

Commodore Perry found the tycoon in virtual charge of the government, and did not know or suspect that the mikado was the true emperor. Doubtless the tycoon concealed his true rank that he might save himself from a critical dilemma by making a false treaty that he supposed would cause the ships to be withdrawn, but would not bind the empire.

Perry had threatened him heavily, and he yielded to his fears. (Adams, volume 1, pages 115, 116.)

But when the emperor and his court heard of the arrival of foreigners and of the proceedings at Yeddo, they were greatly troubled, and the shôgun's officials, fearing the consequences of their acts, sent messengers to Kiôto to communicate what had happened. They said that affairs in Kuantô had reached such a condition that they had been obliged to grant a treaty whereby ports would be opened to foreigners, and that it was intended to open one near Konagawa, in the province of Musashi;* that they evidently desired that the emperor and the shôgun should come to a good understanding with each other; and, handing over the trading regulations and certain documents connected with the matter, they begged that His Majesty might be induced to give his approval to them.

Upon this the emperor was much disturbed, and called a council, which was attended by a number of princes of the blood and kugés, and much violent language was uttered. "Our country," they are reported to have said, "has from ancient times refused all intercourse with foreign nations. A myriad of sovereigns in one unbroken line have occupied its throne; and it is an independent empire. Shall we let these people pollute one inch of our territory? But the shôgun's officials by a willful error have given permission for friendly relations and commerce; worse than this, they have promised to open ports, acts which must excite the profoundest indignation." The unanimous opinion of all present was that the mikado's court could never for one moment give its consent to such action; and this opinion was accordingly committed to paper, signed, and sent up to the emperor, who concurred, and caused the messengers from Yeddo to be informed of the imperial decision that treaties with foreigners could not be recognized.

Other messengers who were sent subsequently met with equal ill-success, and much anxiety was felt in Yeddo. That the emperor should refuse to accede to this petition for admitting the foreigners was felt to be a blow which might seriously compromise the prestige of the shôgun. There was nothing for it but to appoint the ablest man at his command to the office of tairô or regent, and Ii Kamon no Kami, the lord of Hikoné, was accordingly chosen to fill it. The choice was well made; and this daimio, taking the reigns of government into his hands, virtually ruled in the name of the shôgun, and, in direct contravention to the imperial will, negotiated with foreign nations for the opening of ports for trade with them.

The tycoon did not, however, escape from his own people. Ii Kamon no Kami was assassinated because of his indulgence to foreigners. The murder of Mr. Henskin, the translator for the American legation in Yeddo, at night, and the murder of others connected with the British legation is an evidence of the intensity of feeling against foreigners in Japan.

A furious war broke out in Japan between the emperor and the daimios, in which this intrusion of the foreigners was the leading if not the sole cause. It raged in various principalities and around the palace at Tokio, and provoked the French and British Governments to severe measures of retaliation for the violence of the Japanese toward their people in several important parts. In the end—and it is a point to which I would like to call the attention of the Senate—in the end these wars cost many of the daimios their hereditary honors and estates and their reduction to the caste of ordinary citizenship. The shôgunate was ultimately abolished, the mikado assumed the direction of all public affairs, and a complete reformation of the government was affected. In all this the government was desperately opposed by many of the people. It could never have opened the ports of Japan but for the presence of the ships of other powerful governments.

These results, which have been so wonderfully beneficial to Japan, have followed the advent of Commodore Perry, and have in fact resulted from the support given by the great maritime powers to a movement which the tycoon consented to adopt in a moment of desperation at the request of Perry.

This brief review of this most interesting part of the history of the opening up of Japan is necessary to a proper understanding of the conduct of the Prince of Nagato, out of which has grown the question presented in the bill before the Senate.

This Prince of Nagato was the feudal lord of a province through which the narrow strait of Simonoseki connected the great seas and gave a safe and short line of navigation to reach China and Corea from some of the principal ports of Japan. He denied the power of the tycoon to make the treaty with Perry and with the other great powers, and resolved to forbid the passage of ships through his province. He engaged in rebellion against the tycoon, and later against the mikado in defence of this traditional policy of Japan.

It is doubtful if he did not enjoy far more of the favor of the mikado than did the tycoon; and it is almost certain that, if he could have maintained himself in war with the foreign powers, he would have locked up the empire again in its policy of total exclusion. He failed to sustain himself, and dragged nearly the entire order of daimios down with him. The shôgunnate also fell from the exhaustion of the struggle. They perished together, and so fertilized the soil of Japan that the growth of civilization has been more marvelous there than it has been in any country in the world in the short period of twenty-eight years. But this has been accomplished at a fearful cost to Japan. The Prince of Nagato, when preparing to defend his province, bought three ships of war, namely, the British brig Alert, clipper built, with twelve guns, for $45,000 Mexican money. The British iron steamer Lancefield, with a heavy armament, for $160,000; and the American bark Daniel Webster, with six or more guns, at a cost of $25,000. These ships were well appointed and officered, having on them in crews and marine corps more than twelve hundred men. That is the point to which I desire to call the attention of the Senate; the great number of men who were found upon the three ships of war which this Prince of Nagato had assembled at this town of Simonoseki in dread of the approach of some enemy.

* Yokohama, then a mere village.

This prince and his next neighbor also erected land batteries along both shores of the strait of Simonoseki, on which were mounted as many as sixty guns. The larger portion of the guns on the ships and batteries were 32-pounders.

The natural defenses of this narrow strait were very strong, and the ships and batteries were supported by a strong force of soldiery. Some, if not all these ships were purchased in the name of the Japanese Government by the Prince of Nagato, but not with the acquiescence of the tycoon, so far as information can be had.

In June, 1863, the Pembroke, an American merchant ship, was attempting to pass through the strait of Simonoseki and was fired upon by the batteries. This was done to warn her off, as she put back to the high seas and was not pursued. She sustained no damage, beyond a lengthened journey to the port of destination in China.

The Wyoming, Captain McDougal in command, was then at Yeddo, Japan, and by order of our minister, Mr. Pruyn, she went down to Simonoseki. In his orders to Captain McDougal Mr. Pruyn characterized the attitude of the Prince of Negato as that of a rebel and pirate. (Pamphlet A, pages 4 and 5:)

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
Yokohama, July 15, 1863.

* * * * * * *

I indulge the hope that by the time this reaches you their piratical vessels will have been destroyed or captured. If so, you may have been attacked by the batteries and have doubtless demolished them. Should their ships unfortunately have taken the alarm and escaped, I would recommend that you do not return without vindicating our flag and taking full satisfaction for the outrages upon it.

And I beg you to co-operate with Admiral Juaris in the destruction of the batteries and forts in the territories of the prince, thus giving a lesson which will not soon be forgotten, and which will put a stop to the acts of lawless violence which the hostile daimios, encouraged by the humane forbearance of the treaty powers, are so ready to commit.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,
ROBERT H. PRUYN,
Minister Resident in Japan.

Captain D. MCDOUGAL,
United States Steamer Wyoming, &c.

The following letter from Mr. Pruyn to Mr. Seward sets forth the grounds upon which he issued the order to Captain McDougal, and also a brief statement of the manner in which that excellent officer executed his orders:

1. Mr. Pruyn to Mr. Seward.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES IN JAPAN,
Yokohama, July 24, 1863.

SIR: It now becomes my painful duty to inform you that the hostility of the daimios which thus far has only ventured on day attacks, when surrounded by a thousand associates, on unarmed men and women, and more frequently sought the cover of night for their assaults, has culminated in separate attacks on vessels bearing the flags of the United States, Holland, and France. On the afternoon of the 25th ultimo, the Pembroke, a small merchant steamer owned by the American house of Russel & Co., in China, in charge of a government pilot, anchored near the straits of Simonoseki, which separate the islands of Kiushiu and Niphon at the western entrance of the Inland Sea, the state of the tide not permitting her then passing through the straits.

In the afternoon, while carrying the United States flag, she passed a Japanese armed bark, under the national flag, which bark, immediately after the steamer had come to anchor, passed her and also anchored near the eastern entrance of the straits. Shortly thereafter a signal gun was fired from a shore battery, which was repeated at several points along the coast.

At one a. m. of the next day the bark commenced firing into the Pembroke, and shortly after the brig Lanrick, of ten guns, passed the steamer, her crew shouting as she passed by, and anchoring near the bark, also opened with her guns on the Pembroke.

It was, fortunately, quite dark; the steamer having her fires banked speedily got up steam, and retracing her way a short distance, went to sea through the Bungo channel, which opens into the Pacific toward the south, abandoning her voyage to Nagasaki. I received intelligence of this on the evening of the 11th instant, through a governor for foreign affairs, dispatched from Yeddo, at which place it was said the steamer had been sunk. Whether the information was the result of willful misrepresentation, or given through mistake arising from the darkness of the night, I cannot say. The fact that the Pembroke was an American vessel was well known. Later in the evening, I received a letter from Russel & Co., accompanied by affidavits of the captain and other officers of the Pembroke, giving a pretty full statement of the affair.

I transmit Nos. 1 and 2, copies of Nos. 1 and 2, the affidavit and statement of the loss. Early the next day I sent for the governor and read the affidavit to him, and called his attention to the fact that these vessels carried the Japanese Government flag. I asked whether they were government vessels. He informed me that they belonged to Matsudaira, Prince of Mori and Nagato, and that I was correct in saying that a regulation was in existence requiring vessels owned by daimios to carry the prince's flag at the fore. I made known the claim which had been presented by Russel & Co. for damages, and said that the insult to our flag was a far more serious matter, for which ample satisfaction would be demanded.

I stated that I purposed visiting Nagasaki in the Wyoming, and on my return would expect to receive a communication from the Japanese Government in relation to this serious offense.

I had requested Commander McDougal, of the Wyoming, to be present at this interview. At its close we had a conference as to the proper course to pursue, and I was gratified to find he had decided to proceed instantly to the straits for the purpose of seizing, and, if needful, destroying the two vessels.

This course was one which I felt could not safely be avoided, and I was gratified to find such entire accordance in the views of Commander McDougal and myself.

* * * * * * *

On the morning of the 13th instant, the Wyoming proceeded to sea, bound for the strait of Simonoseki, about six hundred miles distant, in charge of two pilots furnished by the government.

On the 15th instant, intelligence was received by the French minister that His Imperial Majesty's steam gunboat Keinchang, of four guns, had been fired into by the same ships and by batteries on the shore, and had reached Nagasaki almost in a sinking condition.

Rear-Admiral Jaures, with the Semiramis steam frigate of ninety-five guns, and the Tancrede, of four guns, got under way on the morning of the 16th instant; fortunately, when just out of the harbor, speaking His Netherland Majesty's steamship Medusa, of sixteen guns, which had been fired into on the 11th instant in the same straits, and receiving from Captain de Casembroot charts showing the position of the vessels and batteries.

On the arrival of the Medusa we learned that she had left Nagasaki on the 10th instant with D. Degraeff van Polsbroeck, esq., the Netherlands acting consul-general on board, and had met the Keinchang, and learned of the attack on that vessel. Not supposing it possible that the Dutch flag, which had been so well known in Japan for two hundred and fifty years, would be fired on, the Medusa entered the straits from the westward, with her men, however, at quarters, and on approaching the large island at the entrance of the straits, heard a signal of two guns fired from a battery on the island, which was repeated by eight guns at different points. Immediately after leaving the cover of the island she was fired on by the two vessels which I have before described, and received the fire of six batteries while passing during a period of one and one-half hours. The Medusa can only steam six knots an hour, and as the tide was running out at five knots, her progress was slow.

She was hulled fourteen times and had four men killed and five wounded. Five of the shots were very near the water-line, and she had a very narrow escape from destruction. During this entire action the Japanese vessels showed no other flag than that of the prince. The Medusa returned the fire of the batteries and ships with promptitude and animation. The loss of life is supposed to have been heavy, although not positively known.

The existence of these formidable batteries, each of at least three guns, (12, 24, and 32 pounders,) lining the north side of the straits, cut out of the precipitous rock about seventy feet above the water, skillfully masked and most admirably served, made me feel very anxious for the safety of the Wyoming. Her mission was under any circumstances bold and daring. The naval officers of all nations now at this port expressed fears for her safety.

I had been quite glad that no offers of assistance had been made by the British or French admiral. It is unnecessary to say to you that I felt precluded from asking any. My anxiety was relieved by the return of the Wyoming early in the morning of the 20th instant. From a copy of the report of the Secretary of the Navy, with which I have been furnished by Commander McDougal, it appears that he entered the straits on the 16th instant from eastward, passing up Bungo Channel. When the Wyoming was seen approaching a signal-gun was fired from the first battery. As she rounded the point the steamer Lancefield, (of four guns,) the brig Lanrick, (of ten guns,) and a bark (of four guns) were seen anchored opposite the village of Simonoseki. All six of the batteries fired on the Wyoming as she steamed past them, carrying the national flag, after the first battery had fired, the Wyoming reserving fire until she reached the ships.

By skillfully avoiding the main channel on which the guns of the batteries were trained, and keeping close to the batteries, the shot and shell mostly passed over the vessel, only damaging the rigging. Approaching the vessels, against the remonstrances of the Japanese pilot, who declared he would run aground, Captain McDougal carried the Wyoming between the bark and brig on the one side and the steamer on the other, receiving from and delivering broadsides into each of the ships. It was at this point the Wyoming was most under fire. Putting the ship about, he put three eleven-inch shells into the Lancefield, the last of which exploded her boilers, and she was then run aground. The brig Lanrick was sinking as the Wyoming left and the bark badly injured. The Wyoming then returned through the straits, pouring shot and shell into the batteries. The steamer Lancefield had the Japanese flag at the peak, but quickly lowered it. The other vessels carried both the flag of Japan and that of the prince.

I regret to say that this success was attended with the loss of four seamen killed and seven wounded, one of whom has since died. The loss would have been much more severe had it not been for the skill and judgment shown by Captain McDougal in avoiding the usual route by the main channel. The guns on the batteries were depressed so as to strike the hull of passing ships at that point, and stakes were set up near the guns, giving the range, so that each gun could be fired as the foremast of the ship came in range with the stake at the gun.

The Lancefield was a fine steamer, of near six hundred tons, purchased of the English firm of Jardine, Matheson & Co., for the sum of $115,000; and the brig Lanrick, formerly in the opium trade, pierced for eighteen guns, though carrying only ten, was purchased of the same firm for $20,000. The bark was built by the Prince of Hizen, and sold by him to the Prince of Nagato.

The officers of the custom-house were overheard (as I am informed by the consul-general of the Netherlands) by one of his employés to say that when the boiler of the Lancefield exploded, forty men were killed, being scalded or suffocated.

This morning Admiral Jaures returned in the Semiramis. He reached the straits on the morning of the 20th instant, but as his frigate was very heavy, did not enter the straits. The Tancrede only reached a point opposite the first three batteries.

Apprised of their existence, the admiral anchored outside, and landing a force of one hundred and fifty men under the cover of his guns, seized and destroyed one of the batteries, blew up a powder magazine and daimio's residence near the entrance, and burned the small village of Amidagamune, in which several thousand horse and foot soldiers were stationed, who made but a feeble resistance.

In one of the batteries an European work was found, marked at a page giving directions for the management of a battery engaged with a steamship embarrassed by difficult currents.

The bark and steamer were not seen by the French, having probably been taken into some of the numerous inlets near, but the masts of the sunken brig were visible.

It was quite fortunate that in all these affairs no guns were fired from the southern shore in the territories of the other daimios. These straits can very easily be rendered impassable; and had these vessels been exposed to a severe cross-fire, escape would have been almost impossible.

It is greatly to be regretted that intelligence of these different outrages reached this port at different times, so as to lead to separate action. The punishment, though severe, is not so thorough as may be needed. It is thought by all representatives of the treaty powers that the promptitude with which it has been inflicted will have a favorable influence, and will tend to the preservation of peace.

If the tycoon is sincere in his professions of friendship to us, and if he is acting with duplicity only at Kioto, where he is under duress, he may have heart and courage to maintain his authority. But all we can now say is, we are groping in the dark.

* * * * * * *

I inclose Nos. 3 and 4, copies of letters addressed by me to the ministers, briefly detailing the operations of the Wyoming; also (No. 5) translation of a letter from the acting consul-general of the Netherlands in relation to the action of the Medusa.

2. Statement of Russel & Co.

Statement of loss sustained in consequence of a murderous assault made upon the steamer Pembroke, in the Inland Sea, on the 19th of June, by armed vessels flying the flag of the Government of Japan:

Loss of time by being obliged to go through an unknown and circuitous passage, to reach the open sea, five days, at $300	$1,500
Loss of freight and passengers through not being able to visit Nagasaki, whither she was bound	6,500
Consideration to be distributed among officers and crew, as recompense for the deadly peril to which they were subjected	2,000
Total	10,000

RUSSEL & CO.

SHANGHAI, July 4, 1863.

Up to this period the mikado had never ratified a treaty with any foreign power, and it is stated with apparent confidence, by some writers, that even his person was in the power of the Prince of Nagato, so that his acquiescence in the belligerency of that prince and other daimios was apparently coerced.

The United States on this occasion was not making war on the Government of Japan, but continued in technically friendly intercourse with the tycoon. The hostilities were conducted against the Prince of Nagato, who is styled by our minister as "a rebel" and "a pirate," to quell his rebellion and to punish him for piracy. The flags at the peak of the Japanese ships were those of the rebellious prince, and at the fore were the flags of the Empire of Japan.

Up to this point it is clear, beyond reasonable controversy, that the United States, for the protection of its own flag and the rights of its own citizens, was acting independently of every other power in waging warfare upon a hostile prince, and that the Government of Japan was not held responsible for the conduct of the Prince of Nagato in his assumption of authority to close the strait of Simonoseki.

It is also proper to be remarked here that the Government of Japan had no treaty engagement with any country in the world by which this strait of Simonoseki was to be kept open, and it was as strictly an inland sea as the Bosphorus or the Sea of Marmora. That was his rebellious act for which he was directly responsible, and not the act of the empire, for which we held it indirectly responsible.

It would be very difficult in this state of the case to find any ground upon which to base a demand for indemnity or reclamation to the Government of the United States from the Government of Japan. There was no alleged complicity of that government in the conduct of this rebellious prince. No such thing was alleged by the United States, nor was it true as matter of fact, so far as appears in any complaint made by our minister against Japan. The most that could be said was that which was said a year later by all the powers represented in Japan, in a memorandum signed by their ministers, that Japan in her trying ordeal of bringing her people to accept the demands of other powers to open her ports found herself too weak to control certain powerful daimios who were making war on their own account against the new foreign policy. In order to get this matter before the Senate more succinctly and clearly than anything of my own, I will read extracts set forth in the report of Mr. Cox, of New York, from the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, March 31, 1880, pages 5 and 6:

In 1864 the British minister invited the ministers of the treaty powers to participate in a joint expedition to forcibly open the strait of Simonoseki. No particular offense was then complained of, except a rumored threat that all foreigners were to be expelled. In a memorandum which was signed by the ministers of England, the United States, France, and the Netherlands, the reasons for their action and the object of the expedition were stated. We can best give them by taking a few extracts from their memorandums.

After stating that the tycoon and several princes were in favor of observing the treaties, but that the opposition had obtained influence with the mikado, they said:

"The political situation of Japan might, therefore, be resumed as follows:

"Weakness of the tycoon, and increasing powerlessness of that prince to resist the violent presence of a hostile majority,

"Existence of a party favorable to continued relations with foreigners, but at this moment incapable of giving effect to its opinions.

"Finally, armaments of every kind prepared, with the loudly-avowed intention of expelling all foreigners from the country.

"The position made for the representatives of foreign powers in the natural consequence of the situation and the tendencies which they have just pointed out."

They argued that inaction would make their position weaker, and—

"That by prolonging the passive and expectant policy, they would unavoidably bring about a denouement which, if there be nothing formidable in it now, owing to the imposing forces that the foreign powers have at their disposal in Japan, might come later when (these forces being called elsewhere) they would have to resist, without adequate means, an enemy fully prepared, and who would choose the hour he might judge most favorable.

"How and where the first blow must be struck is clearly determined by an examination of the present state of things."

The hostile position of the Prince of Nagato is then mentioned, and the impunity with which he had interfered with foreign and native commerce pointed out as encouraging the opposition.

"Foreign powers, therefore," continues the memorandum, "in chastising the Prince of Choshu, will meet the exigencies of their position, and best contribute to the security and well-being of their subjects who have been injured by this belligerent daimio."

"The removal of the obstructions to the free navigation in the Inland Sea, by destruction of the batteries whence the attack has come, will ruin the prestige of the aggressor, open the eyes of the daimios, deceived by our inaction, and show the inanity of their means and their impossibility of standing before the science and military resources of the treaty powers."

After the firing upon the Pembroke was redressed by the payment of $12,000 as damages, and after the Wyoming had sunk the ships of the Prince of Nagato, there was no fresh cause of offense either from the imperial government or from any of the daimios, as far as the United States were concerned.

The hostilities of 1864 by the united powers were in like manner waged against the Prince of Nagato and ostensibly to aid the tycoon in breaking down his power. The powers undertook to do what Japan was not able to do, and not what she professed to be unwilling to do.

The result proves this to be the fact, conclusively, for as soon as the prince was brought to subjection the mikado ratified all the existing treaties which the tycoon had made and went to work to destroy the power of many of the feudal lords and to confiscate their estates. The Prince of Nagato was made to suffer fearfully. The Government of Japan might have well afforded to pay $300,000 for such important aid in freeing itself from so rebellious and dangerous a power, but not as damages, indemnity, or ransom on account of any direct wrong or insult to other powers.

No claim for fines or indemnity was made except for the misconduct of this prince. The claim that was made was not because Japan was found to be sinning against other powers, but that she was sinned against by her own subjects, whom she was too weak to control, to the injury of other powers.

Government, and especially free government, would soon cease to exist under a rule that would require a State to pay damages to all treaty powers who might suffer loss on account of the rebellion of its own people against its own authority.

I now ask the Secretary to read from the modest report of Captain McDougal, commander of the Wyoming, what occurred on that occasion in the strait of Simonoseki.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES STEAMSHIP WYOMING,
Yokohama, July 23, 1863.

SIR:

* * * * * * *

On the evening of the 10th news was received through Japanese sources that an American steamer had been fired on by a bark and brig-of-war belonging to the Prince of Nagato, at the western outlet of the Inland Sea, and that she disappeared and perhaps sunk. A mail from Shanghai the same evening brought authentic information that the American steamer Pembroke, on her passage from this place to Shanghai through the Inland Sea, had been fired on by the above vessels, and had made her escape through the Bungo Passage. Inclosed is a copy of the statement of the affair by the captain of the Pembroke.

On the 13th we left this place for the scene of the outrage, and arrived off the inner entrance of the western outlet of the Inner Sea on the morning of the 16th. On the tide proving favorable we proceeded in the straits, and on opening the town of Simonoseki discovered a steamer, brig, and bark-of war at anchor off the town with Japanese colors at the peak, and the flag of the prince at the fore. We stood for the vessel, and on approaching were fired on as we got in range by six batteries, in different positions, mounting from two to four guns each. Passing between the brig and bark on the starboard hand and the steamer on the port, we received and returned their fire at pistol shot; rounding the bow of the steamer and getting in position, maintained the action for about one hour. During the affair the steamer got under way, but two well-directed shells exploded her boilers. The brig appeared to be settling by the stern and no doubt sunk. The amount of damage done the bark must have been serious, as well as great destruction on shore.

The straits opposite the city are about three-fourths of a mile wide, with strong currents, which made it very difficult to maneuver the ships properly. As I had no charts and my pilots completely paralyzed and apprehensive of getting on shore, (in fact did touch once,) I was induced to withdraw out of action.

The fire from the shore battery was extremely brisk, and continued so as long as we were in range. We were hulled eleven times, with considerable damage to the smoke-stack and rigging aloft, which was attributed to our passing within the range they were prepared for. I regret to state the loss of four killed and seven wounded, one of whom since dead. Inclosed is the surgeon's report. It affords me much pleasure to state that the conduct of officers and crew was all I could desire.

Lieutenant Barton, in charge of the first division, makes honorable mention of the conduct of Acting Master's Mate J. E. Sweeny, Peter King, seaman, captain of forward pivot-gun; Thomas Saddler, captain of the top, and Charles J. Murphy, seaman. I would also mention the cool conduct of Frank Wyatt, boatswain's mate, captain of the after pivot-gun, and Edward Penney, captain of the top and second captain of after gun.

The Prince of Nagato, it appears, has commenced this war on his own account, as he is one of the most powerful and influential princes of the empire, and bitterly opposed to foreigners, but the punishment inflicted and in store for him will, I trust, teach him a lesson that will not be soon forgotten.

On the 7th instant the French dispatch steamer Kien-Chang, passing through on her way to Shanghai, was fired on and considerably injured; and on the 11th His Netherland Majesty's ship Medusa was also fired on and sustained some damage and the loss of four men and seven wounded.

As soon as the outrage on the French steamer was known here the French admiral, Jaurez left with his flag-ship and a gunboat for Simonoseki, and no doubt will complete the punishment due for the wanton violation of existing treaties.

The Jamestown was at Woosung on the 16th, to sail immediately for this port via Nagasaki. I shall await her arrival. I inclose a proximate plan of the straits, the position of the vessels, shore batteries, course, &c. All of which is respectfully submitted by,

Your obedient servant,

J. McDOUGAL,
Commander.

Hon. GIDEON WELLES,
Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C.

Mr. MORGAN. This very brilliant action was lost sight of in the great commotion that occurred in this country at the time that it was being enacted in the waters of Japan; but I think it is safe to say that the history of naval warfare in the United States, or perhaps in the world, has furnished no more brilliant example of courage, skill, and ability than Commander McDougal and his command evinced on that occasion. That was the turning point in the restoration of Japan to free intercourse with the nations of the world, for if the Prince of Nagato, with his formidable armament of shore batteries, and his three ships of war, largely outnumbering in guns and also in men, the Wyoming under the command of Captain McDougal, had been able to drive him off or to sink him in the strait of Simonoseki, the empire of Japan to-day would be a sealed book to the nations of the earth, unless, indeed, we had invaded and conquered and subdued her. The civilized powers of the world owe to-day to Captain McDougal the opening of Japan to the intercourse which it now enjoys, so much to its own advantage and to the advantage of mankind. It would have required a war against a people brave and cruel even in warfare, who numbered 40,000,000 and who were not by any means unprepared for war, had it not been for the brilliant example of this commander who is now retired from the Navy, and who is almost unknown to the general history of this country, notwithstanding this gallant exploit.

The visit of the Wyoming was not completely effectual in opening the strait of Simonoseki. It had destroyed the naval power of the Prince of Nagato, but he still manned his land batteries and threatened to expel the foreigners from Japan. It was therefore necessary to put an end to his power. The joint expedition of 1864 had only this in view, as distinctly appears from the joint agreement of the powers. This expedition was intended to destroy all effectual opposition to the foreign policy of the tycoon by destroying the power of the Prince of Nagato; and it was fully understood and agreed between the powers that the expenses and losses attending it would be fully compensated if the expedition should result in opening up Japan to foreign trade. This purpose was as clearly understood before the expedition sailed as it was expressed, after it had proven successful, in the convention with Japan.

If Senators will give attention to the convention of Japan they will understand why it is that the Government of the United States has never been willing to cover into its Treasury money which was exacted from that government upon the termination of that war. I read the third article:

> Inasmuch as the receipt of money has never been the object of the said powers, but the establishment of better relations with Japan, and the desire to place these on a more satisfactory and mutually advantageous footing is still the leading object in view: therefore, if His Majesty the Tycoon, wishes to offer, in lieu of payment of the sum claimed, and as a material compensation for loss and injury sustained, the opening of Simonoseki, or some other eligible port in the inland sea, it shall be at the option of the said foreign governments to accept the same, or insist on the payment of the indemnity in money, under the conditions above stipulated.

The third article of this convention tells the whole story as to the objects of the expedition of the joint powers.

This $3,000,000 was paid by the Government of Japan in quarterly installments, and as each installment was due several of the powers, not the United States, however, would go to the Government of Japan and say to them, "Now make us some additional concessions in the way of tariff upon our goods and in the way of privileges to our people which shall be peculiar and exclusive, and we will release you from these money obligations." Japan, with a moral heroism that any nation in this world might feel proud to copy, declined to accept any condition of that character, but went on to pay money out of her treasury at a time when it cost her almost her existence to do it; but she kept in view the main objects of this treaty that she had made and which the mikado had not ratified until long after the tycoon had made it, that the ports of Japan should be opened, and now Simonoseki is as open to the commerce of the world as is Liverpool, and there is not a port on the coast of Japan that she has not freely thrown open to the commerce of the world.

After the recitals in that convention that we did not want the money of Japan, but that our only purpose was to have open and free commercial intercourse with her, and after Japan has opened her ports as freely as ours are opened to Japan, would it not be the worst of bad faith for us to retain this money? We have received the concessions that have been demanded, all that we have asked, and now with what degree of complacency can the people of the United States tolerate it that we should at the same time hold on to the money?

These remarks of course would apply to the entire fund, and make it an imperative duty on the part of the Congress of the United States to return the entire fund but for one consideration, to which I have partially alluded, that the Government of Japan owed to the Wyoming and afterward to the Takiang some measure of reward for the services that they rendered that government in bringing the rebellious Prince of Nagato to terms, to compel him to remove his obstructions to the policy of Japan. Japan owed to these ships and to these brave mariners of ours the accomplishment of that important result, and that government has never for a moment been ungrateful to them. While these men were engaged in warfare against their own people they were still engaged in the protection of the honor of Japan, and that government, recognizing the fact, has not the slightest disposition to deprive these brave men of the rewards which this Government should be only too proud to give them.

However, we are not taking this money out of Japan. I will explain to the Senate how it is that we are getting it from England and from France and from the Netherlands. It will be remembered that when the Pembroke first approached the strait of Simonoseki and was fired upon, there was $12,000 paid by the Government of Japan, for which there was no other consideration than the mere delay in her voyage. That sum was $2,000 more than the Pembroke herself put in a bill for. The Government of Japan paid the Pembroke $12,000 when she only demanded $10,000. Immediately after this affair with the Wyoming and with the Medusa, a vessel of the Netherlands, and with a French ship—I do not now recall the name—the tycoon sent to France a minister who entered into negotiations with that government for the purpose of clearing up the difficulty that had arisen between them in consequence of the firing upon the French vessel that was approaching the strait of Simonoseki. That was considered an insult to the French flag, and the Government of Japan instantly sent out her minister for the purpose of making all necessary apology for the insult, and to arrange for payment of damages.

The minister of Japan arranged a convention with the French Government by which $140,000 was stipulated as the amount of money that Japan was to pay France for this act of warfare upon one of her ships by the Prince of Nagato. The Japanese mission returned and found that the battle of Simonoseki had been fought by the four combined powers and that the treaty powers and Japan were then engaged in a new convention to cover the whole ground of difficulty between them. Consequently the convention that had been entered into with France was not ratified but was merged in this last convention that I have just read from and the $140,000 was not paid as a separate part of the indemnity but went into the $3,000,000 indemnity. We agreed upon $3,000,000, and how did we come to that agreement? Why, sir, after the four powers had concurred among themselves and agreed to $2,000,000 as the highest just sum that could be asked as indemnity, they agreed to put on another million, not because there was any just ground for it, but because they supposed the additional $1,000,000 would have the effect of putting a pressure upon Japan to that extent that she would open her ports; it being the purpose of each of the four powers to have the ports opened, and not to get money. That would have been the most wicked and unmanly transaction that ever disgraced a nation, the most disreputable transaction possible to be conceived of, if we had intended to have received the $3,000,000, and to keep it, after Japan has complied on her part with our real demand to open her ports. Four great powers like the Netherlands, and France, and Great Britain, and the United States treating with a half-civilized power, prostrate at their feet, their ministers coming together and agreeing in concert that they would not ask for more than $2,000,000, and then, upon the suggestion of one of them, that if they put on another million it might have the effect of causing Japan to open her ports, and then to put on another million, and when it did have the effect to open the ports, is Japan to be told that she has vainly trusted to the honor of these governments to get it back? That would be the most nefarious transaction conceivable.

When the four powers came to divide the $3,000,000, Great Britain, in a spirit, I suppose, of purely disinterested benevolence, or else for the purpose of making some other nations wear a badge that she was not willing to degrade herself with, said to the Governments of the United States and Netherlands and France, "Each of you have had ships fired on in the strait of Simonoseki," and we have seen that no insult was offered to our flag, and no shot fired at a ship of ours. We therefore insist that you shall each take out of this three million $140,000."

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. MORGAN. In a moment. "We insist that you shall take out of this three millions of money $140,000, and after you have withdrawn that sum then the balance that remains for division shall be divided, and we will take a fourth of that."

Mr. JONES, of Florida. How was this payment made? Was it made to Great Britain?

Mr. MORGAN. The payment was originally made to the British minister, and he invited the other powers in. It was paid to the British minister in the first place, or at least the first installment was.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I understood the Senator to say that the proportion of payment between the respective powers was not determined until after the whole sum had been paid by the Japanese Government.

Mr. MORGAN. Not at all.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. It was arranged between the powers, then.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes. They took the $140,000 which had been agreed upon between the Japanese minister and the French Government in a convention which Japan did not ratify, as being their estimate of the damages these governments had sustained—not the private people, but the governments—by the insults to the flag in consequence of their vessels having been fired upon. The Wyoming was the only single ship that entered the strait of Simonoseki that made a decent fight there.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Can the Senator give us any information as to how the decision was arrived at in respect to the measure of damages for an insult to the flag which is indemnified for in money?

Mr. MORGAN. I do not think I have any method of calculating it; but still our minister and the ministers of the four great powers, if they ever meant to take the money at all, arrived at that result in some way. But they observed a reticence on that subject, they put up a barrier behind which they could retreat for protection to the honor of their governments by saying to themselves and to Japan, too, "If you will open these ports we do not want any money." That was how they saved the honor of their countries. Indeed this was a mere compulsion; it was the strong man's language to the weak one: "Give me your purse, or I will take it; but if you do not choose to give me your purse, give me free ports and free trade, give me a right of way over your property, and I will accept that in place of the money." Japan was not animated on that occasion by a sentiment that any nation of the earth might not be proud to acknowledge, for she had entered into a treaty obligation with us and was willing to comply with it; but Japan was torn throughout her borders with a civil war which she was unable to manage, and the very gates of Tokio, where the mikado resided, were besieged by the feudal princes of that country, who had immense power. The poor, prostrate empire of Japan was struggling for existence against her own people, stemming a current of popular sentiment which few free governments ever had to meet. We were standing around her coasts with our ships of war, and demanding of her three millions of money, and making a pressure upon her that she should open her ports, and the very day she got the power, the very first moment she got the power which she had to wrest from her own people, sword in hand, she threw her ports open and complied with her honorable obligations. From that day to this, notwithstanding honor has characterized every step of her course, she has never even presented a demand to our Government. She has never recalled to us by argument or suggestion even, or by petition, the fact that we rested under an honorable obligation to return the fine if she should open her ports.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I would ask who prepared the various arguments we have had before us? I have heard it said that Japan never made any demand for the return of this money. Does the Senator know that she is represented by anybody in this business? I know that the question has been agitated, and I have received many well-written papers on this subject, written by I know not whom; whether by agents or attorneys of Japan I do not know; but they do not weigh a feather's weight with me. If we ought to return this money, it ought to be done without regard to other considerations.

Mr. MORGAN. If I understand the situation, it is this: every President from the day this money has been received down to this day has recommended its return, and every Secretary of State has concurred in the recommendation. The money has been kept as a trust fund, and kept on interest in the State Department, not covered into the Treasury, for the purpose of meeting the disposition to be made of it by Congress.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. One question more, and I shall not interrupt the Senator again. This money was obtained, as I understand, by the Government of the United States through the treaty-making power. The Constitution has vested that power in the Senate and in the President. Congress has nothing to do with it. The Constitution for its own wise ends has said that the power to make treaties shall reside with the President and the Senate. They made this treaty, and I suppose they are capable of making another. This money has been, I am told, in the hands of the Secretary of State, who has invested it in United States bonds; has not covered it into the Treasury; and if there has been so much injustice coupled with this transaction as has been intimated from time to time, while the matter was in fieri, or inchoate, as the lawyers term it, it does seem that the treaty-making power that obtained this fund had complete authority within itself to remedy whatever of injustice might have attended the original transaction without the action of Congress.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not know that I am able to give any case that is in point or in parallel so as to compare it with this as a precedent for the line of action proposed. The money was paid into the hands of the Government of the United States through its diplomatic agent; it was not paid into the Treasury of the United States; why, I am not prepared to say, except that the State Department has always considered, following the idea of the minister who made the convention and collected the money, that this was a fund the United States could not appropriate to its own use.

Mr. EATON. If my friend will permit me, it was not turned into the Treasury of the United States by the Secretary of State, and for this reason, as he said in his own letter over his own name: It was received by the United States without any substantial equivalent, and therefore it should be kept in the Department of State, and not covered into the Treasury.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Was it not received under the provisions of a treaty?

Mr. EATON. A convention.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. What is a treaty but a contract between States, whether you call it a convention or a treaty?

Mr. EATON. There were none of the proper terms of a treaty, none of the proper powers of a treaty. Our Government had not instructed its agent in Japan to go into a convention of this character at all. He acted upon his own responsibility.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Does not subsequent ratification amount to an original authority?

Mr. EATON. We have not quite yet ratified it. We are now trying to defeat ratification.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not know of any other fund that is in the same condition. At the same time, the Secretary of State would not venture to pay this money back to Japan upon the supposition that he was executing the treaty. All that is asked by this bill is that the Congress of the United States give its consent that he may do so. Where can be the harm in that? We remove his embarrassment by giving our consent to it, and that is one of the best reasons which can be suggested why we ought to act.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator from Alabama. Long ago, as a member of the Senate, I esteemed it an honor to have the privilege of voting to restore to Japan that of which she had wrongfully been deprived. The only difficulty which I have is that there is so much lobbying on every matter connected with legislation involving money, that I should be glad to adopt any means that would defeat the lobbies which have interested themselves to have a share of this money. I confess that I do not want to see any part of this fund, which we have taken wrongfully from Japan, repaid to Japan by the agency of men who hang around the legislation of this country, and seek to connect themselves with every project which has money in it. If, therefore, we could reach that result rather by the negotiations of a treaty as suggested by the Senator from Florida, so that every dollar of it would be refunded back to Japan, and no part of it given to a lobby, as is often done when matters pass the legislative department of the Government, I should be willing to agree to that.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I have no hesitation in saying that I think that would be the proper course.

Mr. MORGAN. The bill requires this money to be paid to Japan, and not to anybody else. Is there a Senator on this floor who has witnessed the conduct of the representatives of the Japanese Government at this capital who would suppose that they would not be able to take care of the interests and welfare of their own country, or who would suppose that that government would lend itself to the control of a lobby to work through a claim before the Congress of the United States? If there is a lobby about this business, I confess it is something that I had not discovered. Surely I am not working for the lobby; they never approach me, some way or other, and so I escape all apprehension on that subject when I remember that the bill itself requires the money to be paid to Japan and to the officers and mariners of the Wyoming and Takiang, or their representatives, and not to their agents or assigns.

I will pass by that view of the case with this single remark. The honorable Senator from Florida says he would prefer to have it returned by treaty. It would be a very embarrassing matter to the State Department that the fund should be held in the name and to the credit of the United States Government, and not to the credit of Japan in the State Department, and that the Secretary of State or the President should be directed by Congress to make a treaty by which that amount of money would be given up to Japan. It would be rather a summary way of increasing the rights of the treaty-making power of this country——

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Did the Secretary of State invest this money by authority of Congress in United States bonds?

Mr. MORGAN. I do not know what authority he had for it. I know he made the investment, and that from time to time quite a sum of money has accumulated, perhaps as much as $140,000 or $150,000, as premium on the bonds, which this bill does not dispose of, because the committee understood that it had complied with its full duty when it reported a bill to pay to Japan the money which we put in bonds as interest-bearing obligations of the Government of the United States. As to the balance of the money, which is about one hundred and forty thousand dollars or one hundred and fifty thousand dollars premium on the bonds, no provision is made in this bill. We can provide for covering it into the Treasury, to be disposed of in such manner as Congress may direct. We are not responsible in any way for the question whether the Secretary of State may have violated his duty. We know that the money is there, that it has always been subject to a quasi trust, as a fund obtained from Japan and which our Government had a right to pay out, but as a fund belonging to the United States Government, burdened with a trust which this Government ought to perform.

One word more in reference to the peculiar attitude of the Wyoming and the Takiang. It is very true that Captain McDougal in command of the Wyoming did fight, and did pretty much all that was done in the strait of Simonoseki to break down the power of the Prince of Nagato. In that fight he lost four men killed, and, I believe, six men wounded, and his ship sustained damage in the expenditure of ammunition and by having shots fired into her hull, which Mr. Robeson reported to Congress on one occasion as amounting to about twelve thousand five hundred dollars, as well as I recall the sum. There will be plenty of money in the Treasury arising out of the proceeds of these bonds when they are disposed of to cover that damage.

If the Wyoming at the time of her engagement in those straits had been fighting a power with whom the United States was at war, if you will consult section 4635 of the Revised Statutes you will find that the Wyoming would be entitled to $200 in the way of bounty from our own Government for every man who was on board the Japanese fleet at the time she sank those ships. How many were there? More than eleven hundred men upon those ships that she sent to the bottom of the sea. The men were not all destroyed, but very many of them were. There was one steamer of the United States encountering ships and batteries that mounted sixty guns, 32-pounders, while running through a narrow strait that was not a mile wide, passing in between a steamer heavily armed and with a strong crew, almost her equal in power, sunk it, and then turning to the other ships, and as she came out sank them, whipping the batteries as she passed along. That ship, if she had been engaged in open warfare under a declaration of war by the United States Government, would have been entitled to receive a bounty of $200 for every man on board those ships.

Having done this splendid fighting, won this success so important to Japan against a rebel prince, the Japanese Government felt under obligations to the Wyoming for her course, and never has there been one word of censure on the part of the Japanese Government as to the course of the Wyoming. Her services were accepted and adopted by the Japanese Government. They were successful in breaking down the power of the rebellious prince, and that government is only too willing that these brave men and their widows and orphans should be rewarded out of this $140,000, a proportion of which the other powers gave to us in addition to our quota of the $3,000,000.

The Takiang, a little ship, was hired in the port of Yeddo and a single gun was taken from the Jamestown and put on her, and she went along with the joint expedition of 1864, rather as a tender than anything else, merely to have our flag flying. And the people of the Wyoming have said to the people of the Takiang, "We are entirely willing you should receive a portion of this bounty-money; you were there in foreign seas with the American flag, and you did your duty as well as you could with the small amount of men and means at your command, and therefore we grudge nothing in reference to your participation in this fight."

I have said more on this subject than either my health would justify or my expectations would have justified when I set out to attract the attention of the Senate to its consideration; but Senators seemed to be in doubt about it, seemed not to have a very intimate knowledge of the history of this transaction, because it is rather an obscure and involved history; but the committee have worked it out with considerable labor, and I am quite sure that there is no influence operating upon any member of the committee, or upon any person connected with the effort to return this money, either in behalf of the Wyoming or the Takiang, or in behalf of Japan, that is not proper, and placed upon the highest possible ground. Senators need not be alarmed as to lobbies in this case. Every provision of law has been made that it is possible to put into the form of an enactment to protect the Government of the United States and these parties against any improper division of this money.

Japan has proceeded with good faith and energy to open her ports to our people and commerce, until Simonoseki is free to our ships and merchants. This change of policy has cost Japan immense sums of money, much loss of life in protracted civil wars, and has entailed upon her a great and increasing national debt.

It is doubtful if her treasury will in a half century recover from the great drain it has cost Japan to adopt the institutions, customs, and enterprises of our civilization. Her efforts and sacrifices in these changes of a system which has its foundation in the national religion and was supported by the traditional policy of those people for more than twenty centuries are deserving of our sympathy and respect.

No nation has ever made more rapid progress in civilization than has Japan in twenty-five years, but there is still a strong reactionary party there. They point to the increased taxation caused by adopting the customs, institutions, and methods of government of more civilized nations, and deny the advantages of the new system which has been so costly.

Under pressure like this we should uphold the Japanese Government in its liberal policy, and should justify it in the minds of their own people, who are nearly as numerous as the people of the United States, and the masses of whom must be still ignorant of the advantages of the new system.

In all our recent dealings with Japan we have been conspicuous for our liberality toward her, and in consequence we have gained their confidence, and are each year rapidly increasing our trade with the Japanese. Our latest convention with Japan was designed to relieve that government from the harsh restrictions of the former treaties upon her power to raise revenues by duties on imports. Japan has appreciated this manifestation of good will, and her people are to an unusual degree evincing their confidence in our Government and people. Our trade with Japan is increasing steadily, and gives promise of being most advantageous to our merchants and people. An act of generous and graceful justice toward that government would be accepted by the people of Japan as the best argument on which to encourage further and more liberal intercourse with us, and would confirm them in a confidence that is not now well sustained, that American civilization is based on justice and honor.

We can never honorably take lower ground on this subject than our minister took when this matter was under discussion. It is not necessary to say that the exaction was wrong when made in order to find a strong and honorable inducement for declining now to hold to its fruits. When we so charily accepted this fine or tribute from a prostrate power, we eagerly signified our assent to the proposition of Japan that we would accept free ports and open markets as an equivalent for the money they were to pay.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations I with some hesitation agreed with the majority of that committee that this money should not have been received from Japan, and therefore consented, so far as that would go, to the return of it. The amendment I have offered, however, proposes to pay back to Japan only the sum we received without interest. When I submitted my amendment I made the sum $750,000, that being one-fourth part of the $3,000,000 received by the four powers of which we were one; but it appears that in some way which I do not exactly understand we received more than one-fourth part. Instead of receiving $750,000 we received $785,000, $35,000 more than our equal share. How this money comes to be in the condition it is I do not understand. I was not one of the sub-committee to whom the matter was referred, and am not as familiar as members of that sub committee must be with the details; but in some way it remains in the State Department in the shape of United States bonds. Whether it assumed that shape by authority of Congress; whether it remains there by the authority of the Secretary of State for the time being; whether it assumed that shape by the authority of the Secretary of State for the time being, I do not know; perhaps the chairman can inform me.

Mr. EATON. I do not know whether it was a resolution passed by Congress or not.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I have two or three remarks to make on the general subject. While I believe it would be perhaps a graceful and proper thing for this Government to do to return to the government of Japan the amount of money we received upon the ground that after having given the matter fair and candid consideration we think we ought not to have received; while I am willing to concede that, I do not think we have been occupying the position of a trustee or a savings-bank in this particular, but we should stand upon the precise ground that just so soon as the proper authorities of the Government of the United States became satisfied that it was the proper thing to do to return this money, we should return it just as we received it; no more, no less.

Mr. EATON. May I ask my friend a question? Has he arrived at the conclusion that it is proper to return this money to Japan?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I am willing to consent to that.

Mr. EATON. I only asked if my friend had arrived at that point.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Gentlemen who are more familiar with this matter than I, and perhaps more able to judge of such matters than I, are unwilling to do that much; but I am willing under the circumstances of this case to consent to the return of the principal sum.

This thing of allowing interest by the Government is assuming formidable proportions and those proportions are growing year by year, and my judgment is that if those proportions continue to grow it will not be very long until we shall have to do one of two things: either to cease paying honest claimants what we owe them, or to provide for an amount of interest that would almost if not quite equal the interest on our public debt. Every session of Congress we are passing bills paying to persons who are honest claimants large sums of money that should have been paid to them years and years and years ago. We do it often very grudgingly; we often fail to do it when we should do it, and when we do it we pay without interest.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Let me ask the Senator one question. I am disposed to agree with the Senator in the matter of interest, because that is in the shape of a penalty for the withholding of that which ought to have been paid. Whether that principle can be applied in any view of this case, whether there can be any penalty for money paid under the stipulations of a treaty, not wrongfully, not illegally, not in violation of any right, is a serious question. Can a case of that kind be said to be one where the penalty of interest should be inflicted?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. We are not paying this money to Japan because by virtue of any contract we are bound to pay it. It did not come to our hands in any shape, in any way as a trustee for Japan; but the matter, pure and simple, is just this: by treaty, by the consent of Japan this money came into our hands upon the theory that Japan was bound to pay us for injuries that we had received from that Government. Now, after investigation, prolonged, protracted, deferred, we reach the conclusion that in equity and good conscience we ought not to have received it, and just so soon as we reach that conclusion we say to her, "Take back that which you ought not to have given and which we ought not to have received." That is my theory about it.

I cannot agree in other particulars with the bill submitted. If it be true that we ought not to have received this money, then we ought not to touch one cent of it.

Mr. THURMAN. Who says that we ought not to have received any of it?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I understand that to be the theory on which the report of the Committee on Foreign Relations is based.

Mr. THURMAN. By no means. Nobody ever denied yet, I think, and I have known, I believe, three bills similar to this pass the Senate and heard them very elaborately argued, and nobody yet that I ever heard asserted that it was not right that we should receive what was necessary to indemnify us for the injuries done to the Pembroke and one or two other smaller vessels, something like $12,000, and also to receive what would be fair prize-money for the Wyoming. That much we were perfectly entitled to receive on the plainest principles of law. What we received above that we had no right to.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. One of the Japanese daimios in rebellion against the Japanese Government closed certain straits passing through the territory of Japan and took one of our merchant vessels and prevented the merchant vessel from proceeding through the straits; did no injury to her substantially, however, but turned her back upon her voyage. In consequence of that, we sent one of our war vessels, the Wyoming, that attacked the forts of this daimio and destroyed them, and the Japanese Government made full compensation for the injury done to the merchant vessel by reason of the failure of her voyage. The insult to our flag was entirely wiped out by the attack of our vessel and its success on the forts of the daimio. In that condition of affairs, when the injury done to our merchant vessel had been compensated for, when the insult to our flag had been redressed, we then sent, in conjunction with three other powers, an expedition of war vessels, we having one among them, and in consequence of that extorted perhaps from the Japanese Government this sum of $3,000,000, of which we received the amount I have before stated.

If we had received full satisfaction for the injury done to our merchant vessel, as we had; if we had taken full satisfaction by reason of the attack of our war ship, the Wyoming, for the insult he had done to our flag, what had we to have reparation for at any time after that?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I asked the Senator from Alabama awhile ago whether he could fix any measure of damages for the insult to the flag. While I am at a loss to discover any fair legal standard by which we can arrive at that I imagine that we may work ourselves up to a degree of sentiment that can be justified; but when a sum of money is paid by one power to another, I am at a loss to understand how we are to view it as a compensation for an insult to our flag.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. We had obtained indemnity for that insult to our flag, and had redress full and ample. Now this bill presents this condition of affairs, that is curious to my mind, perhaps not so to others. In the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama, and assented to as I understand by the Senator from Connecticut, it is provided not only that we shall make compensation out of this fund to the officers and men of the Wyoming, but also make compensation to the men of the vessel that accompanied that expedition.

Mr. THURMAN. No.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I beg the Senator's pardon. That is the bill reported from the committee.

Mr. THURMAN. No joint expedition. The Wyoming went up there alone.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I know; that was the first expedition. But when the joint expedition went there we had a vessel called the Takiang, and on that was a detachment of United States sailors from the United States ship Jamestown. What was that vessel doing there then? What was that expedition sent there for then? Not to procure redress to our merchant ship, the Pembroke, because that had been redressed, it had been paid for fully; not to procure redress for the insult for our flag, because the Wyoming had itself redressed the insult to our flag.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. How?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. By battering down the forts and blowing up the vessels that had insulted our flag.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Losing five men and more than that number wounded.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. It had redressed the insult to our flag; but let us go on. We sent one vessel with this second expedition, that vessel was the steamer Takiang, manned from the United States ship Jamestown, and that expedition wrung from Japan this money, and now our consciences being pricked in the matter, believing we ought not to have received this money, we say "we will pay back the money but we will retain out of it a sum sufficient to compensate the men who did the wrong in the vessels that we sent as part of the expedition."

Mr. MORGAN. The honorable Senator will allow me a moment. The expedition of the Wyoming was not with the other powers.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I understand that.

Mr. MORGAN. In order to assist the Mikado of Japan to bring this rebellious prince to subjection these four powers combined, as well for that purpose as also to vindicate other insults those powers themselves had received, and sent this joint expedition in which the Takiang, a hired ship, participated.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Do I understand the Senator from Alabama to say that these four powers had united for the purpose of exacting compensation from the regularly constituted authorities of Japan, had taken any notice of the insurgent movement there in any way whatever?

Mr. MORGAN. I have not asserted any such thing. I said that they united for the purpose of bringing the rebellious prince into subjection, that prince being opposed to the liberal policy of Japan in throwing her ports open to foreign powers. That was the situation precisely, and after the ships engaged in the joint expedition had brought the daimio into subjection and had taken the forts, then the four powers entered into a convention with the government of Japan, and they ratified all pre-existing treaties made by the tycoon, a different functionary of the government, and made the treaties with the government of Japan entirely obligatory on all its departments. Then for the purpose of compelling the government of Japan after that, as was provided in the third article of the convention, to throw open the port of Simonoseki or some other port in the inland seas, this arrangement was made: first, $2,000,000, and then raised to $3,000,000, as expressed in the third article of the convention, on the condition that if Japan would open the port of Simonoseki or some other port in the inland sea that should be regarded as a compensation, for the reason that these powers were not making the exaction on Japan because they wanted the money, but because they wanted open ports.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. With the permission of the Senator from Iowa, I wish to ask the Senator from Alabama one question. I understood him to say——

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I shall be done in a few minutes; but go on.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I understood him to say that the four powers had united together for the purpose of bringing a rebellious prince of Japan to submission. That produced in my mind a confusion of ideas in connection with this whole subject.

Mr. MORGAN. I am very sorry for it.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I am seeking for information, because I am not a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and when the Senator from Alabama, who is a member of that committee, says that these four great powers of the earth, including the United States, confederated together for the purpose of bringing to submission a rebellious prince of Japan, it presents to my mind a question that is most embarrassing.

Mr. MORGAN. That is just how it was.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. The Senator from Alabama has at some length presented this matter to the consideration of the Senate already, and I have endeavored not to misstate, and I think I have not misstated, anything in regard to it. Now, to bring it to a point, in July, 1864, our war ship, the Wyoming, redressed the insult to our flag, committed by turning back the Pembroke, by attacking the Japanese forts and demolishing them, and, I think, destroying some of the Japanese vessels. On the 8th of August after that our minister writes home:

> The Japanese Government has arranged to my satisfaction the claims which I had been instructed by the President of the United States to make upon it.

Now, mark you, one of our merchant ships had been turned back and lost her voyage; in that way our flag had been insulted. We made reclamation upon the Japanese Government for the injury done to the owner of the merchant vessel, and the Japanese Government had acknowledged its liability for it to the satisfaction of our minister, had given full satisfaction for whatever demand had been made upon the Japanese Government by our minister.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question right there?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Yes, sir.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Was this the minister who afterward participated in the convention with European powers to take this money?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I think the same, but I am not certain. Mark you, after we had received full satisfaction for the injury done to our merchant ship; after we had taken full satisfaction for the insult to our flag; after both these things had been done, we then join with this joint expedition that is sent there; we send a vessel, the Takiang, and put on board of her a detachment of United States marines, I suppose, and sailors, and after our satisfaction had been full and complete, by this joint expedition we get from the Japanese Government this fund. And yet in this bill we are seeking to retain part of the fund in our hands to pay for the force used in exacting it.

I have some kind of indistinct recollection of having read when I was a boy, in some anecdotes of Benjamin Franklin, that he told on a certain occasion of a Frenchman who heated a poker that he wanted to apply to a certain use, and the use to which the person upon whom it was to be applied very strongly objected, and after some considerable controversy the Frenchman gave it up that he would not use the poker for that purpose at all, but he insisted that the person upon whom the red-hot poker was to have been used should pay for the heating of it. I forget the particulars of the story, but it looks to me a good deal like this.

We ought not to have joined in this joint expedition. We had received pay for the injury to our merchant ship; we had taken pay for the insult to our flag. There was nothing more to demand from the Japanese Government. Because that was so and because we did something beyond that and after that I am content to give back to the Japanese Government dollar for dollar every dollar that we received from it, and I am willing to pay the men of the Wyoming not out of what we took wrongfully from Japan but out of the public Treasury whatever they should receive. If the money was taken wrongfully from Japan and we owe anything to the men of the Wyoming, we ought, and Japan ought not, to pay it. Either this money was wrongfully or rightfully brought into the United States Treasury. I believe it was brought there wrongfully, and because I believe that I am willing to return it; but I am not willing to pay one dollar in the shape of interest, not one dollar either to Japan or to the officers and men of the Wyoming and Takiang, but I am willing to go to Japan with the money in our hands and say, "We ought not to have received this from you, and because we ought not to have received it from you we return it to you."

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Before the Senator from Iowa takes his seat let me ask him if it does not present a very remarkable scene to the country and to the world to find the Congress of the United States—and when I speak of the Congress of the United States I speak, of course, of the two Houses—animadverting in such severe terms as our records will show the world upon the deliberate action of the treaty-making power of this Government, which by the Constitution is lodged in this body and in the Executive.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I turn that subject over to my friend from Florida.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Mr. President, I have a few words to say, and only a few, on this subject. Although I have not considered this question as closely as some of the gentlemen who are selected for the Committee on Foreign Relations, it presents to my mind a very embarrassing question, viewed in all its parts.

What do we find to be the case? We find a large sum of money now invested in United States bonds which was originally paid by a foreign government into the hands of the Executive of the United States for the violation of a public treaty of the United States. The Constitution of the Union, framed after the most considerate debate and reflection, has vested the power to deal with foreign nations in the Senate and in the Executive, and has taken it beyond the control of Congress. The Executive, the President, made this treaty stipulation with Great Britain, with France, with Holland, and under that solemn compact of nations we received a large sum of money, which up to this time it appears has never passed out of the hands of that executive officer who is charged with the administration of our foreign affairs.

It is said to be now a trust fund. What has made it a trust fund? How came it to be a trust fund? Who gave to Mr. Evarts the power to invest this money in United States bonds? When money is paid over to the Government of the United States under the solemn provisions of a treaty, by what authority does the President or the Secretary of State presume to invest that money as a trust fund in the securities of his own Government? Where is the authority for it? And why should we be called upon at this time to pay this exorbitant demand for interest? Has Congress ever been consulted? In the case of the Geneva award money, which is familiar to every Senator here, before the Secretary of the Treasury was permitted to invest that fund in the securities of this Government it was necessary to give the authority by a distinct act of legislation. There is the record; no one will deny it. If that was necessary in the case of the Geneva award fund, I ask if it was not necessary in the case of the Japanese fund?

And now we are met here with a claim of a million of dollars nearly arising out of an investment made by the Secretary of State without any authority of law.

Mr. THURMAN. Why does the Senator say "without authority of law?"

Mr. JONES, of Florida. That is my understanding of it.

Mr. THURMAN. The understanding is all wrong. I will find authority for it.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Does the Senator from Ohio say that an act of Congress authorized it?

Mr. THURMAN. No, sir; but I say that according to my recollection a resolution of Congress did.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. That is the same thing. I asked the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations if he knew of such a law.

Mr. EATON. My reply was that I did not quite remember, but I thought there was a resolution of Congress, but that possibly the Secretary of State had placed it in his Department on his own authority; my impression was that there was a resolution of Congress.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. There is nothing in the report on the subject.

Mr. EATON. The money is there.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. The money is there, invested in United States bonds, and that money was obtained under the provisions of a treaty entered into by this Government with three other powers that we recognized as nations of the earth. Now, I have no objection whatever to returning the principal sum; it is all that I will vote to return; and I agree fully in the views expressed by the Senator from Iowa that that is all that ought to be returned.

Mr. EATON. I should like to ask my friend if he thinks that it ought to be returned?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I do.

Mr. EATON. Why? Because we hold it unjustly?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. No, because it was inequitable; not because it was illegal, but because it was inequitable. I draw the distinction between that which is not legal and that which is inequitable. I understand that no demand has been made upon this Government by the Japanese authorities for this money, and it presents a very remarkable case to me that this fund should be returned in the way that is proposed.

I agree with what was said by the Senator from Delaware, that if this money is to be returned it ought to be returned in a regular international channel, and that the Constitution of the United States has not vested in Congress the power to deal with foreign States; it has not vested it with power to deal with international affairs at all, but it has conferred that power on the President and the Senate, the treaty-making power. If this fund is to go back into the coffers of the foreign State, nothing in my mind can be more proper than that it shall go back through the regular international channel by a treaty or a convention which will bring face to face the two powers, where the reasons can be stated why it is returned and where those other powers who participated so greatly in enabling us to procure it can be brought to a knowledge of this transaction.

What a figure shall we cut in the estimation of those states with which we co-operated in obtaining this money when it shall go forth to them that after we were willing to receive their support and their co-operation to rob a weak power, after years of reflection and study and mortification and shame, we cut loose from them, and by ourselves sneakingly went to Japan and deposited in her coffers the proportion of the common spoils? Is that the way for a power to act which occupies the position the United States does among the nations of the earth? If Great Britain has been in the wrong, if France has been in the wrong, if Holland has been in the wrong in this matter, why not let us, in a manly, national way, say, "We got this money on a false principle; you co-operated with us in this transaction, and we will settle it together, and we give you notice now that having obtained it by virtue of your power added to ours, we will sever ourselves from you when it comes to the doing of justice by way of restitution." Individuals would do it. If four robbers on a public highway had stolen the purse of an honest man, and their consciences twitted them in the matter, and they made up their minds to restore it, one would hardly do it without consulting the others. I do not use that as an illustrationwhich is exactly parallel to this case; but I say it has been avowed all along that this money was taken from the Japanese Government by overwhelming force and power. The United States allowed herself to be made a party to that combination which forced $3,000,000 from this weak state, and it is possible that she would not have got this money by her own individual exertions. We know very well that a half dozen powers would succeed in wringing from a weak state what any one power would not be able to do by the exertion of its individual authority. But the United States accepted this fund as the result of a combination between four of the most powerful nations of the earth, and after retaining it for years her conscience smote her and she concluded to take her portion of it outside of her confederates and go and deposit it back again into the treasury of the power that was wronged.

I ask in all seriousness, admitting all that has been remarked in respect to the injustice done to Japan, is this the way to do what is proposed? After the treaty-making power of the United States, brought face to face with the other powers of the earth, had wrung this money from a foreign state, and it has remained in the Department of State for years, should we now return it by an act of Congress? The principle of making restitution I am not quarreling with, because I think in the main it is right; but why do you propose to pass a law authorizing the return of the money? It does seem to me that if the executive government were animated with a proper spirit on this subject it could easily communicate to the Senate, making known the facts of this case and suggesting a new convention by which this money would be returned to Japan without the action of Congress at all. This money was obtained by a convention—the Senator from Alabama said he had it on his table, and it is there—the Senate ratified the transaction by which it was obtained, not by the United States alone, but by the exhibition of physical force on the part of England, of France, of Holland, and the United States joined together to oppress this weak power. That is the way it was got; and you never would have got a dollar in any other way beyond what was due to you. And having obtained this fund in this way, there was nothing, I am sure, contrary to the law of nations in the manner of its acquisition. I say it was not exactly right, but at the same time it cannot be denounced as illegal. It was perfectly competent for this Government to have entered into the convention as it did with these foreign states, perfectly competent for its minister abroad to put any estimate he thought proper for the damage resulting from the violation of the respect due to his flag. The insult was wiped out and the money was paid; and now I say that having obtained the fund legally, in accordance with the law of nations, although this debt was more than satisfied, I am not willing to pay one dollar of interest on the fund.

Mr. THURMAN. Mr. President, I had sincerely hoped that I should not feel called upon to say one word on this bill, but that it would pass without discussion because the subject I thought was fully understood. Similar bills to this have been before the Senate from time to time ever since I took my seat in this body, and I have borne a somewhat prominent part in their discussion, and if my memory is not at fault three times with scarcely a dissenting voice the Senate has passed the bill; and therefore I did not expect that it would be necessary to say a word, but as new Senators have come in and they take new views we have to go over the ground again and again.

In the first place, then, let me say a word, for I want to speak very briefly, upon the idea of my esteemed friend from Florida, that the treaty-making power ought to be set in operation to enable us to do a simple act of justice, to return to Japan money that in the court of conscience we cannot retain. What is the necessity of invoking the action of the treaty-making power? Shall our performance of duty depend upon the will of France or England or the Netherlands, or is it necessary that we shall negotiate with Japan to get Japan to consent to receive the money? What possible use can there be in a convention or a treaty to enable us to do what any honest man would do—return to its owner the property that does not belong to him?

There is another reason why my friend from Florida need not be in the slightest degree sensitive about these foreign powers. Nobody has asserted that they got more than they ought to have received; and our returning this money to Japan is no rebuke to either of them.

So far from it, what does your Committee on Foreign Relations report:

In making this recommendation, it is not to be understood that your committee in the slightest degree attack the motives governing the authorities of France, Great Britain, or the Netherlands.

The expenditures of those governments were vastly larger than the expenditure of the United States, being in fact greater than the amount of money received by them from Japan—

But that was not our case, that was the case of those powers—and thus they may be justified by every principle of public morality in retaining the full amount obtained by the convention between the powers. Yet it is the judgment of your committee that the United States cannot in justice retain the amount allotted to it by the arrangement entered into by its representative with the representatives of the aforesaid governments.

Each government had its own claims; each government expended money to enforce those claims. The expenditure of Great Britain alone far exceeded, thirty times exceeded the expenditure of the United States, and your committee say very properly that so far as those governments are concerned for the aid they gave they may properly retain the money; but the case is wholly different with the United States.

Then, Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa involves two things. In the first place it cuts off all allowance of interest; in the second place, by returning the whole principal to Japan it cuts off all allowance to the officers and crew of the Wyoming and the Takiang. Is that right?

First, on the subject of interest: If this money had never been used by the United States; if it had lain in the gold in which it was paid, in either of the Departments of the Government, and earned nothing, then it could not be said that we were bound to pay interest. No one would pretend that; but here is money which ex æquo et bono ought never to have been received from Japan by the United States; but the United States did receive it, and the United States made it earn interest, and made it earn interest all the time. Now, the question is whether or not the United States will say: "We will return the principal, and all the profit we made out of the money that we ought never to have taken from you we will use for ourselves." Oh, Mr. President, that will not do.

A SENATOR. Why pay interest?

Mr. THURMAN. I have told the Senator why, and told him so that I hope he will be satisfied, for I have never found anybody yet who was not satisfied whenever this matter was discussed. I will come to that in a moment.

I said, and I still believe, that this money was kept in the State Department, invested in pursuance of a resolution of Congress. It is possible I may be mistaken about that. It may have been a resolution or it may have been in some act of Congress, or it may not have been passed at all, but it does not matter whether there was an act of Congress or whether there was a resolution or not, the fact exists that it was so kept, that the Government has allowed it to be so kept, that it is a separate fund and has earned interest all the time.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question?

Mr. THURMAN. Certainly.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Do I understand him to assert the proposition here in the Senate that when money is paid under the provisions of a treaty into the hands of the executive government or the Secretary of State, that officer or the President or anybody connected with the executive government has authority to put it out at interest without the sanction of Congress?

Mr. THURMAN. I do not care whether he had one particle of authority. That has nothing to do with the question. The fact is that he did invest it, and the interest is in the fund. It is not at all likely that it was done without law. It was invested. When did we get it? We got it in installments right in the midst of the late civil war, when the Government needed every dollar it could get, and when therefore it wanted this money and was perfectly willing that the money should be put into Government bonds, so that the Government could get the money and use it in the prosecution of the war, while the bonds would constitute the Japanese indemnity fund. That is what the Government did; and if it had not been for the war that money would have been returned to Japan in less than twelve months after it was received, for the very first official declaration that ever was made upon the subject by any officer of the American Government was Mr. Seward's declaration that we held it without any equivalent.

So much, then, for the interest. I do no care whether or not these men transcended their powers. Here is the simple fact that the money was invested. This gold that we got was employed in putting down the rebellion; the money was invested and the interest has accrued upon it.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. The Senator from Ohio, I think, is mistaken as to dates.

Mr. THURMAN. How am I mistaken as to dates?

Mr. KIRKWOOD. The report says, and I think correctly, that the mikado was not a party to this treaty until 1865, and my recollection is that the rebellion ended that year.

Mr. THURMAN. Yes, sir, but this treaty was formed on the 22d of October, 1864.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. But the Mikado of Japan was not a party to it until 1865, and it was from Japan I understand that the money came. Then I should like the Senator from Ohio to explain, as to money paid to us as our money, what more benefit we could derive from it by borrowing it from ourselves and agreeing to pay ourselves interest on it, than by putting it into the Treasury and using it as any other money belonging to us. What benefit could be derived by making what we call a loan out of it?

Mr. THURMAN. Because this Government did not intend to be guilty of the injustice of keeping that money, and if it had not been for the exigencies of the time it would have been returned within twelve months after it was received. It was received, the greater part of it, during our war; it was payable quarterly and three-fourths of it must have been received before there was definitive peace in this country.

So much for that. Now, I come to the question of prize-money to the officers and crew of the Takiang. Senators have not looked at this treaty to see for what this money was paid, or they would not make any question about that. What is this treaty?

The representatives of Great Britain, France, the United States, and the Netherlands, in view of the hostile acts of Mori Daizen, prince of Nagato and Suwo, which were assuming such formidable proportions as to make it difficult for the tycoon faithfully to observe the treaties—

The treaties that had been made before our treaty was made, when Commodore Perry was in the Japanese waters—having been obliged to send their combined forces to the strait of Simonoseki, in order to destroy the batteries erected by that daimio for the destruction of foreign vessels and the stoppage of trade; and the government of the tycoon, on whom devolved the duty of chastising this rebellious prince, being held responsible for any damage resulting to the interests of the treaty powers, as well as the expenses occasioned by the expedition:

The undersigned, represetatives of treaty powers, and Sakai Hida no Kami, a member of his second council invested with plenipotentiary powers by the tycoon of Japan, animated with the desire to put an end to all reclamations concerning the acts of aggression and hostility committed by the said Mori Daizen since the first of these acts, in June, 1863—

I beg Senators to note the date, that was before the Wyoming went to Simonoseki—against the flags of divers treaty powers, and at the same time to regulate definitively the question of indemnities of war, of whatever kind, in respect to the allied expedition to Simonoseki, have agreed and determined upon the four articles following.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Does the Senator claim that that is the treaty under which this money was paid to us?

Mr. THURMAN. Undoubtedly it is the very treaty under which it was paid to us.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. The report of the committee states that the money was paid under the treaty of October 20, 1864.

Mr. THURMAN. That is what I am reading from.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I thought the transaction occurred in 1863.

Mr. THURMAN. I say this treaty goes back to cover all aggressions made by the Japanese or by the rebellious daimio beginning with 1863. That is what I called the attention of the Senate to. It covered therefore the aggression upon the Pembroke, it covered the injury that our vessel, the Wyoming, sustained when she went into Simonoseki to open that strait and to chastise that daimio.

What is the law, the international law, upon this subject? Is it not the duty of every government to prevent its citizens or subjects from preying on the commerce of other people with whom that government sustains friendly relations? Can anybody doubt it? Is not every government responsible for the acts of its own citizens and subjects? Suppose the State of New York or the State of New Jersey should fire on vessels coming over the bar at Sandy Hook or coming up the Sound, where would be the reclamation? Upon New York and New Jersey? No, sir; upon the United States. Every foreign power whose vessels were thus injured would apply not to New York or New Jersey, but to the United States, and the United States would be bound to make good the injuries that had been inflicted.

It is recognized by this very treaty, acknowledged by Japan, that the tycoon did not perform that duty, the responsibility of which rested on him, and that therefore his government was liable for those injuries and liable to pay those reclamations.

Mr. BLAIR. May I ask the honorable Senator a question?

Mr. THURMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLAIR. I am one of those new Senators to whom the Senator referred, who are not so familiar with this subject as he is, and the question I ask is purely for information. I understand the Senator and I understand the report both to go upon the theory that the $3,000,000 was justly paid by Japan; that she was in fault; that these foreign powers having commercial interests in her waters were obstructed in the exercise of their rights and their interests, and were justified in the act which they did; and that Japan properly paid, not as an act of extortion, but as one of justice and reparation on her part, $3,000,000, and should have paid more, perhaps. Then, these powers having combined for the vindication of their joint rights and interests, met together and apportioned this fund among themselves. The United States received $785,000, one-fourth, precisely the same proportion that each of the others received, while she was entitled to perhaps one-twentieth of what Great Britain received. The question which I wish to ask of the honorable Senator is this: When Japan paid the whole justly, and we have received very much more than our proportion, if anybody has any right to the return of any portion of this money, why is it not Great Britain and the other foreign powers rather than Japan?

Mr. THURMAN. The Senator cannot seriously ask such a question.

Mr. BLAIR. I am extremely serious about it.

Mr. THURMAN. If he is, then I am sorry for the Senator. Really, now, what right have we to take money from Japan for injuries that she has done to Great Britain, or France, or the Netherlands?

Mr. BLAIR. But the Senator will bear in mind we do not take this money from Japan; this is long division simply.

Mr. THURMAN. I know the Senator says our sharpness has enabled us to cheat John Bull, Mynheer, and Monsieur.

Mr. BLAIR. Did not the Senator say that we have very much more than our proportion and Great Britain much less?

Mr. THURMAN. I did not say "much less."

Mr. BLAIR. I understood the Senator to say that the whole amount was properly paid by Japan, and we had much more than our proportion.

Mr. THURMAN. Who says so?

Mr. BLAIR. I understood the Senator to say so, and the report says so.

Mr. THURMAN. No, sir; I say that it does not appear, and so your committee say it does not appear, that these other powers got more than they ought to have received.

Mr. BLAIR. When I asked the question the Senator was making that statement himself, and the report says explicitly in these words:

> The expenditures of those governments were vastly larger than the expenditure of the United States, being in fact greater than the amount of money received by them from Japan, and thus they may be justified by every principle of public morality in retaining the full amount obtained by the convention between the powers.

Which is $3,000,000; that they may be fully justified in retaining the full $3,000,000; that the combination of powers are entitled to $3,000,000. That is the explicit finding of the report, and it was the statement of the Senator, as I understood him.

Mr. THURMAN. The Senator does not understand me.

Mr. BLAIR. I asked for information.

Mr. THURMAN. The committee do say that the expenditures of these powers exceeded $3,000,000. I do not know exactly where the committee got those figures, but I suppose them to be correct.

Mr. BLAIR. They make this record, however.

Mr. LOGAN. What have we got to do with the adjustment between Great Britain and Japan?

Mr. THURMAN. That is what I want to know, too.

Mr. BLAIR. But we got no money afterward except by adjustment with Great Britain, France, and Holland. This money was taken as the result of the attack of a joint expedition in protection of joint interests in Japanese waters; and the whole was paid, not to any one power, but by virtue of this convention to a combination of powers, and it is the report of the committee and the statement of the Senator certainly that it was all paid justly, that Japan was in fault to the amount of $3,000,000, and if we got a larger proportion than we were entitled to receive, why not refund to Great Britain? Our agents took $785,000 of that amount from Great Britain as our proportion more than belonged to us. If you do not choose to ratify the act of our agent in taking from those powers what did not belong to us we can return it to them; or it may be said, on the other hand, that having paid this full amount to us and paid it voluntarily they are estopped to claim it; they paid it to us as a gift, and in that case it belongs neither to Japan nor does it belong to any one of the other combined powers, and we have acquired a title to it by the rules applicable to gifts. The point with me is to know why we should return it to Japan.

Mr. THURMAN. It is delightful to have a speech interjected right into your speech; it is delightful to hear the workings of genius so strong that a Senator cannot keep in his seat, but is obliged to get straight up and interrupt somebody. I am delighted to see it again and again, because it only shows that it is a constant force that never wears out by any exertion whatsoever.

Mr. President, your committee have not said that these other powers got too much or too little, because even if their expenditures were more than $3,000,000 it does not follow at all that they were entitled to reclaim more than $3,000,000. These $3,000,000 were given by the Japanese Government, and the four powers divided it. They gave to the United States more than her share, far more than her share. Mr. Pruyn, I believe, said they did that because of the moral support that the Government of the United States gave by joining in this expedition. But what reason is there for our holding this money which we never would have demanded if we had been alone dealing with Japan, because some other nations got too much or got too little?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. THURMAN. I would rather not.

Mr. CONKLING. These coruscations of genius improve the Senator's speech.

Mr. THURMAN. That is all true; but I wanted only about fifteen minutes, and here I have had the floor for half an hour; but more than half the time has been taken up by other Senators.

In regard to the prize-money, I have shown by the treaty itself—and there is not a lawyer on this floor but will admit that that is international law, too—that it was the duty of the government of Japan to prevent the outrages that were being perpetrated by a rebellious daimio in violation of the treaties of the four powers with Japan. It was the duty of that government to do it, but the government was not able to do it; but the United States did it, first with the Wyoming, and then the combined forces completed it about a year afterward. Therefore this duty which devolved upon the government of Japan had to be performed, and it was performed by these very vessels, the Wyoming and others; and on every principle of international law the government of Japan was bound to pay such sum as would enable the Government of the United States to pay that prize-money to her officers and her seamen which they would have paid if it had been open and flagrant war.

Japan will not complain. Japan never thought of complaining of this matter. On the contrary, by this very treaty she agrees to pay, and although she does not mention prize-money in terms, yet you very well know that if it had been open war the Wyoming would have had prize-money, the Takiang would have had prize-money, and when these vessels performed that duty which devolved upon the government of Japan, and which that government admitted in this treaty did devolve upon her, how can there be any doubt that the same principle should apply to this case as if there had been open war?

Mr. President, I will not take up the time of the Senate more than to express the hope that this bill will pass; and while it passes, do justice to those gallant men, for I undertake to say that among the many brilliant achievements of the American Navy, from the time of the Revolution down to this day, there is not an achievement of a single ship that surpasses in brilliancy that of the Wyoming in the strait of Simonoseki, and I say we should be doing the grossest injustice to the aged man, now almost at death's door, who commanded that ship, and to his officers and sailors, if we do not pay to them what would have been paid long, long ago had there been open and flagrant war. Let us do that justice, and then let us return the residue, with its accretions, to the Japanese Government, and we shall have done an act that will do more to elevate the American Government in the eyes of the civilized world than any government was ever before enabled to do.

Mr. WALLACE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. ["No!" "No!"]

Mr. EATON. Let us finish this bill.

Mr. WALLACE. I withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. GEORGE M. ADAMS, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6529) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills and joint resolution:

A bill (H. R. No. 2165) to amend section 2297 of title 32 of the Revised Statutes relating to homestead settlers;

A bill (H. R. No. 2269) for the relief of Calvin Bronson;

A bill (H. R. No. 3742) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to sell certain real estate belonging to the United States, and vesting the title to certain other lands in the city of Vincennes, in the State of Indiana, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 4477) to regulate the mode of purchasing tobacco for the United States Navy;

A bill (H. R. No. 5627) to amend section 1486 of the Revised Statutes, in order to preserve the meaning of the original law from which it was taken with reference to the rank of engineer officers, graduates of the Naval Academy; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 186) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish States, for the use of agricultural colleges, one set of standard weights and measures, and for other purposes.

SUNDRY CIVIL BILL.

Mr. BECK, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

JAPANESE INDEMNITY FUND.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. When the Senator from Ohio [Mr. THURMAN] addressed the Senate he said there was authority of law for the action of the Secretary of State in investing this money in United States bonds. I waited patiently for the distinguished Senator to read the resolution (he said it was in the form of a resolution) that authorized the Secretary of State to invest it; but he took his seat without informing the Senate that any such authority had ever been given. Nobody is less disposed to do injustice than I am. The trouble is, there has been no authority whatever given to the Secretary of State to invest this money. It ought to have been paid into the Treasury of the United States and have remained there as part of the common treasury. It is said that he did invest it, and the fact is presented here as being equivalent to an authority to do it. When a man performs an act which involves legal power and authority, what kind of reasoning is it to say that he did it; that is enough. He did it. The Senator from Connecticut says he did; and that is an end of the argument. I do not so regard it.

Mr. EATON. It is an end of the fact, not of the argument. I will give the argument when I have the floor.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. The Secretary of State invested the money, and this Government now is about to pay over to the Japanese authorities a vast sum of money arising out of this investment without any sanction of law, without any authority of law, the investment having been made by the Secretary of State in accordance with his own will. I do not propose to tax the people of the United States to the extent that this bill proposes, to do such a thing as that. The Senator from Connecticut may be able to show to the Senate what amount of money the Government has realized from this investment when he gets the floor, as it has been paying this interest on its own security, it having been invested without authority in its own bonds. I leave it to the ingenuity of my distinguished friend from Connecticut to show how much money the United States has realized from this investment to justify this large expenditure in the way of payment to the Japanese Government with interest as proposed by the bill.

I said a while ago that interest is a penalty. You cannot take up any law book which treats of the subject which will not tell you that interest is a penalty imposed by justice because of the willful withholding of what is justly due. I say there never has been any obligation in law on the part of this Government to refund this money to the Japanese Government. There never has been any obligation which by the remotest implication could carry with it the obligation to pay it.

While I am as much disposed to conform to the principles of justice in this case as anybody can be, I will not do violence to my own sense of justice in dealing with the rights of the people whom I have the honor to represent. I will not be carried away by any false sympathy, by any far-stretched notions of commercial advantage that may inure to the Government under which I live. I do not approve of the means and ways by which justice is attempted to be done in this case. I would infinitely prefer, if I had my way, that it should be done in the way that the wrong was committed. I would do it in concert with those powers through whose instrumentality we succeeded in getting this money. I would not go alone. We got this money by and through the co-operation of three independent states, which are recognized to-day as the foremost powers on the face of the earth.

The whole fund was paid in the first instance to Great Britain, and we met there with Great Britain and divided it up. We took our part and the Senate of the United States ratified it. Now, after our conscience begins to sting us, we propose to sneak away from our confederates in this game of plunder, and, as I said awhile ago, to put back our share of the spoils into the hands of the nation from which we took it, without concert or co-operation with our confederates. It is not decent; it is not right; it is not proper in any view in which you can regard it. A nation is nothing but an aggregation of individuals, and what would not be tolerated in individual life I am sure would not be sanctioned among an aggregation of individuals.

Wrong is charged here. It is said that injustice has been done. We were only a party. Let us come out and make an honest confession, but do not let us assume more virtue than we really have. Why not enter into an international communication with the powers with which we co-operated when we got this money, and say in an open and manly way, "Let us do full justice; let us make common restitution;" and instead of giving back to the Japanese Government $785,000 with interest, give them back the $3,000,000. You never would have had a cent but for the co-operation of Great Britain and France. There is not a sensible man on this continent who does not know that; but now, for the sake of some imaginary commercial advantage or in the furtherance of some false sentiment, we propose to break away from our national confederates and, assuming a high air of virtue after we have retained this fund for years, it is proposed to go and quietly deposit it in the coffers of Japan and say to the world, "We are a virtuous people and our confederates are all rascals." Is that the way that a great power of the earth ought to act in the transaction of business?

I am sure that I do not exaggerate when I say that we occupy no small position among the nations of the earth. No member of the Committee on Foreign Relations can go further than I am willing to go in doing justice in this case, but I do not intend to be carried away by any false sentiment. I am willing to look in the face the transactions that have occurred in connection with the acquisition of this fund. I cannot overlook them; and now, when, after retaining this fund for years, you propose to do justice and disregard entirely your associates in its acquisition, you are not acting according to that spirit of etiquette and of propriety which should distinguish the honorable action of a nation.

Why did the Senate of the United States ratify this transaction? Why did it put its seal of affirmation upon the convention under which this money was paid? I care not what changes may have taken place in the political complexion of the body; the Senate is a continuing body. Foreign states never take notice of those political changes which affect us so much, but which in the character of this great assembly amount to nothing in its intercourse with foreign states. I cannot find it in my heart to condemn with the severity that I have heard indicated here the action of the Senate and the Executive in the transaction out of which this money came. This money did not float into the hands of the Secretary of State by mere accident; it got there under all the forms which are observed in the most solemn affairs appertaining to international relations. The treaty was made by the representative of the Government of the United States with foreign states, and was ratified by the Senate. Under that treaty this money was paid, and still Senators get up here and denounce this transaction, putting disgrace upon their own country in the eyes of the universe. I cannot do that. It may have been a mistake. It could easily have been corrected at the time by the Senate refusing to ratify the convention, which it did not do; but after having ratified it and when the authority of the United States was pledged in conjunction with the other powers of the earth that exacted this money from this weak power, it does not lie in our mouths to abuse either our own Government or those who represented it at that time in the transaction. It is not fitting to go forth to your own people or to the people of the world. It may have been that the facts of the case were not understood. It may have been that the Senate was not as well informed as the Senate is to-day in reference to the merits of this transaction; but do not undertake to blacken your own character in the estimation of foreign states. Do justice, but be consistent if possible.

I do not think that this foreign state has any claim in equity or in law. The sum of money which was paid in strict accordance with the law of nations and the convention entered into with France, England, and Holland can be refunded; but I say we are not liable to any penalty because the Government of the United States as then represented thought proper to give its sanction to that transaction. Things have changed; parties have changed. These things weigh nothing with me when it comes to dealing with the national affairs of this great country. In dealing with foreign states I will go as far to uphold and maintain the action of the Senate and Executive when made up of those who differ with me in politics as I will when they are composed of those with whom I am associated. Every man familiar with the transaction out of which this payment grew must admit that it had the sanction of the Senate and the Executive. No man can deny it. Still we are called upon here, and in the language of exaggeration, to denounce our own Government, to set up the claims of a foreign state, and to say that she has been oppressed, and all that. It is not becoming; it is not right. If injustice has been done, I say repair it in a decent and proper way, but do not undertake to convert yourselves into critics and review the action of your predecessors in a harsh spirit because it is possible that they did not have before them all the facts which you possess.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Florida yield to me in order that I may move that the Senate take a recess until seven and a half o'clock?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Yes, sir.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I move that the Senate adjourn. ["No, no."]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate take a recess until half past seven o'clock. ["No, no."] If there is any hope of finishing this bill within the next few minutes (I confess that I have very little encouragement so to hope) I will very cheerfully withdraw my motion for a recess, because I am very anxious that the pending bill shall be disposed of; but I am equally anxious that the Senate shall take a recess and come back here in order that we may proceed with the Calendar.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I want to go to the Calendar, too, and I want to have this bill concluded. I have but a few more words to say.

Mr. CONKLING. Let me say, if either of my friends is becoming discouraged about this bill, that I have a little bill here, a very nice little bill, that I could take up and pass without anybody objecting to it, in a few minutes, I do not wish to intrude, but I think it might reconcile the differences between these two distinguished Senators.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no doubt the bill of the Senator from New York would tend very much to reconcile the differences, as everything he does has that tendency.

Mr. CONKLING. It would make the whole thing placid, if the Senate would only allow it to be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee withdraw his motion for a recess?

Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw it if there is any hope of proceeding with this bill. Of course I do it unconditionally.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I have some little interest in the Calendar, and I do not propose to protract the discussion. This is a far more important matter than many others that lie behind it. There are some things on the Calendar I know which are important, but there is nothing on the Calendar half as important as this measure. I think it is proper that this subject should be understoood, because I feel satisfied from what I have read in the public prints and from what I have heard outside that the subject is not understood.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should like to ask the Senator one or two questions, with his permission. Is there any dispute about the fact that we have now in our possession moneys that we ought not to have taken from the Japanese Government? If that fact is admitted, then I want to ask the further question, whether we are not bound in honor to refund the money, and whether we can perform any higher act of national honor than to refund the money which it is admitted we have in our possession without authority?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. That is a very abstract question, to begin with. I am sorry that the Senator has asked me the question. I think I can answer it. This money was paid to the Government of the United States for the violation of a public treaty and an insult to its flag. Cuba paid $100,000, or something like that, for its violation of public law in taking the lives of some people there and insulting the flag of the United States. I never could understand what rule of damages was adopted in that case. Some said it was blood money, and so it was. Cuba paid some eighty thousand dollars to the United States for murdering Ryan and his associates and capturing a ship of an individual citizen of the Union, in which the Government of the United States had no interest whatever.

What is the rule of damages in such a case? How will the Senator from Delaware prescribe it? If the flag of his country is insulted, if its citizens are murdered, and if in order to avoid the penalties and perils of war it is determined to accept a pecuniary satisfaction, I ask the Senator what rule of damages his sense of justice prescribes that would regulate the amount of the payment?

Mr. SAULSBURY. My understanding of this case is (and I have not heard the fact disputed) that there was an agreement between certain powers to exact from the Japanese Government a certain amount of money, a larger amount than they themselves had lost.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I do not understand that to be the case at all.

Mr. SAULSBURY. That has been assumed.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I know it has been assumed, but it has not been proven.

Mr. SAULSBURY. From all that I have seen in connection with this case, my impression is that we are in the position of having money in our possession that ought not rightly to be there; and if that is true, I know of no higher act the honor of the people requires us to perform than to return it with its accumulations to the party from whom we have taken it.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator from Florida kindly yielded to me a while ago to make a motion for a recess. I am informed since I withdrew that motion that there are two or three Senators who desire to be heard upon this bill. If we are going to take a recess at all we ought to take it at this hour, in order to get back here at half past seven o'clock. If the Senator will yield to me for that purpose, I will now make the motion and will not withdraw it.

Mr. BURNSIDE and others. Say eight o'clock.

Mr. HARRIS. It is five o'clock now, and two and a half hours at this late day of the session are quite recess enough.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator will get quite a number more votes for his motion if he will extend the recess to eight o'clock.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I can get back here by half past seven, but other Senators think eight o'clock will suit them best.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator from Florida yield to me to make the motion?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Oh, yes.

Mr. CONKLING. I want to ask a question of the Chair, if the Senator will allow me. Would that leave the Japanese indemnity-fund bill the unfinished business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the rule adopted the other morning the Senate would proceed this evening to the calendar of bills from the House unless otherwise ordered. It is within the power of the Senate to order otherwise.

Mr. HARRIS. Would it not leave the bill now under consideration the unfinished business for to-morrow after the morning hour?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would if taken up at the close of the night session.

Mr. HARRIS. That I supposed to be the rule. It will come up at half past one o'clock to-morrow as the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be the unfinished business for to-morrow at half past one o'clock.

Mr. HARRIS. Now, I move that the Senate take a recess until half past seven o'clock this evening.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend by inserting eight o'clock.

Mr. EATON. I wish to say to my friend from Tennessee that if the pending bill is set aside in this way it is the end of the bill. In justice to my committee, or myself, or my sense of decency—to use an expression that my friend from Florida has made very familiar to my ears here—I must oppose the laying aside of this bill. When we come here to-morrow, I want to say to my friend from Tennessee that the sundry civil appropriation bill will be ready, and I cannot antagonize that. Let us take a vote on this question to-night, coming here after the recess and going through with this bill. I do not want to hold anybody here now.

Mr. HARRIS. There are two answers to the suggestion of the Senator from Connecticut. If we take a recess now and reassemble at seven and a half o'clock, a majority of the Senate can proceed with the consideration of this bill if it sees proper to do so, and unless a majority favor it it ought not to be proceeded with. Secondly, if we take a recess now and return and go on with the consideration of House bills upon the Calendar favorably reported, the bill now under consideration is the unfinishad business at one and a half o'clock to-morrow. The sundry civil bill cannot be called up by that time nor for some time afterward, because it will be impossible that it shall be printed and laid upon our table until late to-morrow evening or to-morrow night; and the Senator from Connecticut will have abundant time to consider and dispose of his bill before that bill can possibly be taken up in the Senate. I do not desire to antagonize the consideration of the Senator's bill, but I do desire to utilize the time.

Mr. EATON. I think my friend is mistaken with regard to the sundry civil bill. As a member of the Committee on Appropriations, I believe that my information is such that that bill will be here to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator that it has been reported already.

Mr. HARRIS. If I am authorized to say so, it is formally reported, I grant, but I chance to know that the committee will be in session every hour of to-night to go through with that bill, and I chance to know that it will not reach the hands of the printer until to-morrow morning, and it cannot be considered by the Senate until late to-morrow or to-morrow night. I therefore move that the Senate take a recess until seven and a half o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] has moved as an amendment that the Senate take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I hope the Senators who desire an evening session will yield half an hour to those whose engagements may prevent them from being here at half past seven. That is very reasonable I am sure. I do not think it is asking a great deal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts to take a recess until eight o'clock.

The amendment was not agreed to, there being on a division—ayes 16, noes 24.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee to take a recess until half past seven o'clock——

Mr. BURNSIDE. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pending which the Senator from Rhode Island moves that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

Mr. THURMAN. I wish to inquire what will be the unfinished business to-morrow at half past one?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business to-morrow at half past one will be the Japanese fund bill. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee to take a recess until half past seven o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at five o'clock and twelve minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess till half past seven o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at half past seven o'clock p. m.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. McDONALD, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HARRIS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. No. 7203) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. GARLAND in the chair.) The Secretary will report the first House bill on the Calendar favorably reported under the rule.

The bill (H. R. No. 2773) granting a pension to James P. Hunter was announced as being first in order.

Mr. BALDWIN. I ask the Senate to consent to take up for present consideration Senate bill No. 1836. It will not take two minutes to pass the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. I appeal to the Senator from Michigan not to interfere with this call of House bills favorably reported on the Calendar. By devoting one or two hours to that call to-night I think we shall get through with the entire Calendar. I gave notice when the resolution was adopted fixing that order of business that I should object to any interference with the rule. Hence, I hope the Senator will not regard my objection as in any possible sense personal, but I must object.

Mr. McMILLAN. I think it was understood that the Senator from Michigan should have the privilege of disposing of two cases in his charge within the morning hour. I understood him to state it would take but five or ten minutes to dispose of them.

Mr. TELLER. Wait until after we have run through the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being objection the Senator from Michigan will have to move that the pending order be postponed.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Michigan to yield to me a moment until I call up a conference report.

Mr. BALDWIN. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report will be laid before the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. It is on the fortification appropriation bill.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Chief Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 6529) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$175,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$325,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 4, and agree to the same.

W. B. ALLISON,
JAMES B. BECK,
NEWTON BOOTH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
JOHN H. BAKER,
HIESTER CLYMER,
ERASTUS WELLS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to remind my honorable friend from Tennessee that the Senator from Michigan had a sort of promise yesterday when the Japanese indemnity bill was laid aside that if he would withdraw his objection to the application then, it would not in the least prevent him from getting up his bills to-day without interference from the Calendar, and under those circumstances I desire to ask him whether he will not permit the Senator from Michigan to take up his bills.

Mr. HARRIS. It would afford me very great pleasure to oblige the Senator from Michigan or the Senator from Massachusetts; but I know if I yield to one appeal, I shall have seventy-five other appeals of exactly the same character, and it would afford me great pleasure to yield to all of them.

I beg to say to the Senator from Michigan, that if he will allow us to proceed for an hour or so upon the Calendar, I will give him all the aid in my power to get up his bill, for I am satisfied that in an hour and a half we can dispose of the House bills upon the Calendar, and then the Senator's bill can be taken up and considered, and it will afford me infinite pleasure to give him all the aid in my power to get it up for consideration.

Mr. BALDWIN. I am very sure, as has been suggested by the Senator from Tennessee, that there is no personal reason why he objects to the present consideration of the bill to which I have called attention; but it was understood last night when I made this motion that if it should be withdrawn at that time consent would be given that the bill should be taken up early this morning. I again made the motion in the afternoon, and the same suggestion was made as is made now; and more time has been taken up now than it would have taken to pass the two little bills I desire to have taken up. It is the first time during the present session that I have asked this of the Senate, and I must persist in the request.

Mr. COCKRELL. I simply desire to say that nobody over here that I ever heard of ever made any promise of the kind. I never heard of such a thing, I say very frankly. It may have been talked of and may have been heard by some Senators around the Senator from Michigan, but not here——

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I would suggest that unanimous consent be given to-night, so far as we can, that we take up the bills of the Senator from Michigan to-morrow morning. There are too many persons interested in these House bills to have them set aside.

Mr. BALDWIN. I insist on the motion. The suggestion was made last night, and it was made again this morning, and it is the first time I have made such a request during the present session. It is something which has been granted every day; it has been granted to-day in the Senate, and it has been granted almost every day during the session. I should not, however, insist on it if I had not a very important business engagement which will take me out of the Senate by and by, and besides at a later period in the evening there will very likely be no quorum present. If the Senate see fit to vote me down, so be it. I insist on the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan moves to postpone the pending order with a view of taking up the bill which he has indicated.

The question being put, it was declared that the noes appeared to prevail.

A division was called for.

Mr. MCMILLAN. I remember distinctly when the Senator from Michigan applied to the Senate for unanimous consent to take up these bills that it was understood that if he would postpone his request the Senate would yield to his request and take up the bills. I know the Senator has yielded two or three times. This privilege has been granted to other Senators to-day, as the Senator has remarked, and I see no reason why his request should not be granted.

Mr. HOAR. It is the first time when a Senator whose term of service here was within two days of its close stating to the Senate that he had an important business engagement which is to take him away by and by was refused such a request to take up a bill as a matter of course. It is the first time such a thing ever happened.

Mr. WITHERS. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. BALDWIN. One more suggestion. It will be remembered by the Senator from New York [Mr. KERNAN] that last night when he made a motion for an adjournment and I objected to it, the Senator said, "If the Senator from Michigan will withdraw his motion we will aid him in getting up the bill to-morrow morning."

Mr. KERNAN. I certainly did say so, and I am willing to aid him for that reason.

Mr. HARRIS. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan to postpone the pending order.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 20, noes 15; no quorum voting.

Mr. HARRIS called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 30, nays 15; as follows:

YEAS—30.

Allison,	Dawes,	Kernan,	Pugh,
Bailey,	Eaton,	Kirkwood,	Ransom,
Baldwin,	Hampton,	Lamar,	Rollins,
Booth,	Hill of Colorado,	McMillan,	Slater,
Butler,	Hoar,	McPherson,	Vance,
Call,	Ingalls,	Morgan,	Williams.
Cameron of Pa.,	Jonas,	Pendleton,
Coke,	Jones of Florida,	Platt,

NAYS—15.

Beck,	Garland,	Logan,	Walker,
Cockrell,	Groome,	McDonald,	Wallace,
Davis of Illinois,	Harris,	Maxey,	Withers.
Davis of W. Va.,	Hereford,	Teller,

ABSENT—30.

Anthony,	Conkling,	Jones of Nevada,	Sharon,
Bayard,	Edmunds,	Kellogg,	Thurman,
Blaine,	Farley,	Morrill,	Vest
Blair,	Ferry,	Paddock,	Voorhees,
Brown,	Grover,	Plumb,	Whyte,
Bruce,	Hamlin,	Randolph,	Windom.
Burnside,	Hill of Georgia,	Saulsbury,
Cameron of Wis.,	Johnston,	Saunders,

So the motion was agreed to.

ARTHUR W. EASTMAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Michigan?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. No. 1836) for the relief of Arthur W. Eastman. It proposes to confirm the homestead entry of Arthur W. Eastman made at Traverse City, Michigan, on the 22d of May, 1876, for the southwest quarter of section 28, in township numbered 34 north, of range 3 west.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Is there a report in the case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. HILL, of Colorado, February 23, 1881:

The Committee on Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (S. No. 1836) for the relief of Arthur W. Eastman, has had the same under consideration, and reports:

The committee adopts the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office as its report, and recommends that the bill do pass.

The letter is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., February 9, 1881.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 8th instant, transmitting Senate bill No. 1836, for the relief of Arthur W. Eastman, and requesting the views of this office in reference to said bill becoming a law.

In reply I have to state that from the testimony and papers in the case, it appears that Mr. Eastman, who made his homestead entry May 22, 1876, attempted to establish a residence on the entered tract, but was prevented from doing so on account of disability from wounds received in the Army during the late civil war; that on account of his health he has been prevented from complying with the requirements of the homestead law. No other party has any claim to the land embraced in the entry of Eastman, though a contest was initiated against it by a party having no rights thereto of prior date.

I am unofficially informed that the bill in question was drafted in this Department after a careful consideration of all the equities in the case, as the only relief to be afforded Mr. Eastman. I would therefore recommend that the bill may become a law.

Very respectfully,

J. A. WILLIAMSON,
Commissioner.

JESSE B. CALDWELL, Esq.,
Clerk of Committee on Public Lands, United States Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEAM-BARGE TECUMSEH.

Mr. BALDWIN. Now I ask the Senate to take up for present consideration the bill (S. No. 2084) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue an American register to the steam-barge Tecumseh.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment to add:

Under the legal conditions of registration.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES P. HUNTER.

Mr. HARRIS. Regular order, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first House bill on the Calendar favorably reported will be laid before the Senate.

The bill (H. R. No. 2773) granting a pension to James P. Hunter was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing on the pension-roll the name of James P. Hunter, late a private in First Illinois Light Artillery.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES B. FURMAN.

The bill (H. R. No. 1452) for the relief of James B. Furman was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for placing the name of James B. Furman, late a private of Company C of the Seventh Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, on the pension-roll.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WYATT BOTTS.

The bill (H. R. No. 802) granting a pension to Wyatt Botts was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, at the rate of $8 per month, the name of Wyatt Botts, late a private in Company B, Eighty-eighth Regiment Infantry Ohio Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHANNA MEEHAN AND CHILDREN.

The bill (H. R. No. 2637) granting a pension and arrears of pension to Johanna Meehan and minor children was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, after the word "from," in line 10, to strike out "the 14th day of July, 1872, when said Patrick Meehan died," and insert "and after the passage of this act;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the names of Johanna Meehan, widow of Patrick Meehan, private of Company I, Eighty-ninth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, and Johanna Meehan, Annie Meehan, and Catharine Meehan, minor children of said Patrick and Johanna Meehan, and pay them a pension, to commence from and after the passage of this act until said children reach the age of sixteen years, and so long as the said Johanna Meehan remains the widow of said Patrick Meehan.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PLATT. The title ought to be amended by striking out "and arrears of pension."

The amendment was agreed to.

HENRY MILLS.

The bill (H. R. No. 2439) granting a pension to Henry Mills was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Henry Mills, late a private Company D, of the Ninety-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TAXES ON CHURCH PROPERTY.

The bill (H. R. No. 6324) to construe an act entitled "An act to relieve the churches in the District of Columbia, and to clear the title of the trustees of such property," was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That upon the payment on or before the 1st day of October, 1881, of all taxes and assessments levied since the 1st day of July, 1874, upon church property used for parsonage purposes in the District of Columbia, all taxes and assessments levied upon said parsonage property prior to said 1st day of July, 1874, together with any and all penalties, costs, and interest that may have accrued thereon, shall be, and hereby are, remitted and released.

SEC. 2. That all taxes and assessments heretofore levied upon orphan asylums and on the grounds actually occupied thereby, together with all penalties, costs and interest that may have accrued thereon, shall be, and hereby are, remitted and released; and said asylums and grounds shall hereafter be exempt from taxation while so occupied: Provided, That all other real estate belonging to such institutions shall still be held for assessment and taxation, and for all previous assessments and taxes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to construe an act entitled 'An act to relieve the churches and orphan asylums of the District of Columbia, and to clear the title of the trustees of such property.'"

WASHINGTON AND CHESAPEAKE RAILROAD.

The next House bill in order on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 7117) authorizing the Washington and Chesapeake Railroad Company to extend its railroad into and within the District of Columbia.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to let it go over informally, and without prejudice, until the Senator from Maryland, who reported the bill, [Mr. WHYTE,] is present.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I would rather not do that. I would rather have it go over.

Mr. COCKRELL. I notified the Senator from Maryland that I should object to it when it was called up. I do not think he had any expectation of passing it.

Mr. HARRIS. I prefer that it go over without prejudice, in view of the fact that he is absent and has charge of the bill.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I should rather it would go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee make the motion that it go over without prejudice?

Mr. HARRIS. I make that motion. I simply ask that Senators consent to let it go over without prejudice.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I should like to be kindly to the Senator from Maryland, but I would rather this bill should be passed by for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will go over under the objection of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

SOUTHERN MARYLAND RAILROAD.

The bill (H. R. No. 6659) to authorize the Southern Maryland Railroad Company to extend a railroad into and within the District of Columbia, was announced as being next in order.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I think that should go over, too.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BELT STREET RAILROAD.

The bill (H. R. No. 7032) to amend the act incorporating the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, to insert as section 5 the following:

That the said corporation shall be bound to keep said tracks and a space of two feet beyond the outer rails thereof, and also the space between the tracks, at all times well paved and in good order, in such manner and with such material as may be directed by the commissioners of the District of Columbia; and if there be at any time no such commissioners, then by the Secretary of War, without expense to the United States or the said city.

Mr. ROLLINS. I hope the amendment will be voted down. I think there is no necessity for the amendment. The committee have informally authorized me to make that request of the Senate, as this is provided for in the original charter. I withdraw the amendment, if I have the right to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the amendment?

Mr. INGALLS. In order to avoid the implication which might arise from withdrawing this amendment that the railroad company were authorized to disregard the provisions of this amendment, it ought to be distinctly stated that it is withdrawn, if it be the case, because the original charter of the company requires that to be done which the amendment provides for. I have not examined the bill myself, and if the Senator from New Hampshire has done so and can state that this amendment will not affect the obligation of the company to pave as required by the amendment, I shall not object to its withdrawal.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. The bill, as I understand, authorizes this company to lay certain additional tracks. If it accepts this amendment to the charter, it is bound by the fourth section of this act. There can be no doubt in the world of that, and it will have to lay down its tracks accordingly.

Mr. ROLLINS. I am advised by those better qualified to judge of the effect of the original act that the company will not be relieved of any responsibility in this matter. It will still be required to keep the tracks in order and the space provided for.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. They certainly will if they accept the addition to their charter.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

METROPOLITAN STREET RAILROAD.

The bill (H. R. No. 7031) to amend the charter of the Metropolitan Railroad Company of the District of Columbia was announced as the next in order.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I object to the consideration of that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. ROLLINS. I hope the Senator from Pennsylvania will not object to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill has been passed over.

Mr. ROLLINS. I was in hopes the Senator would withdraw his objection.

FORT RIDGELY RESERVATION.

The bill (H. R. No. 3751) to amend chapter 198, volume 16, of the Statutes at Large was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to amend chapter 198, volume 16 of the Statutes at Large, being an act for the disposal of the lands within the Fort Ridgely military reservation, Minnesota, by adding thereto a new section:

SEC. 4. All lands within the limits of the said reservation, and not embracing any Government improvements, shall be open to homestead settlement and timber-culture entry as other public lands in Minnesota from and after the passage of this act: Provided, That all persons now residing on any of said lands, or who have failed on any of the lands of said reservation as bona fide settlers, shall have sixty days from and after the passage of this act to refile on the same tract as homestead or tree-culture entry, and shall have a preference over all other persons as to the tracts so settled on by them. And all persons who were allowed to pre-empt any of said lands, and who have paid for the same at the rate of $1.25 per acre, shall be entitled to a patent for the same.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to hear the report in that case read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report submitted by Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, February 22, 1881:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 3751) to amend chapter 198, volume 16 of the Statutes at Large, having duly considered the same, beg leave to submit the following report:

The committee adopt the House report in this case, which is as follows:

"Your committee find the purpose of this bill is to open the Fort Ridgely military reservation in Minnesota to homestead and timber-culture entry, the same as other lands in the State. This reservation has already been restored to the public domain by the act sought to be amended, being 'An act for the disposal of the lands within the Fort Ridgely military reservation, Minnesota,' and there seems no good reason why the lands embraced in this reservation should not be subject to the same terms of entry as other lands in Minnesota.

"The Secretary of War having been addressed on the subject, replies that he 'knows of no objection to the bill.'

"The committee have amended the bill so as to except from its operation that portion of the reservation already deeded to the United States for the uses of a cemetery.

"With this amendment, your committee recommend the passage of the bill."

In addition to the above report, your committee beg to call attention to the following letter from the Secretary of War, giving further information upon the subject:

"WAR DEPARTMENT,
"Washington City, January 20, 1881.

"MY DEAR SENATOR: I have your letter of the 17th instant, inclosing House bill No. 3751, to amend chapter 198, volume 16 of the Statutes at Large, the purport of which is to open the Fort Ridgely military reservation in Minnesota to homestead and timber-culture entry in the same manner as other lands in the State, and, as the matter affects my State, requesting information on the subject.

"Acknowledging your courtesy, I beg to remark that by the act of Congress of July 1, 1880, (which the present bill amends,) all interest in that reservation passed out of the jurisdiction of the War Department and the whole matter turned over to the Interior Department for final disposition. The tract on which are located most of the Government improvements has been in controversy between the United States and H. B. Randall, suit having been brought at the instance of the Interior Department. Should this litigation not be satisfactorily settled, I conceive that the clause in the proposed bill, 'and not embracing any Government improvements,' will afford sufficient protection to the interests of the Government.

"With regard to the cemetery lot, the War Department, on the 16th of November last, declined to accept the proffered deed from Randall and wife, and concurred in the recommendation of the Quartermaster-General that the remains, except those whose graves have been marked by a monument erected by the State authorities and lie within an iron fence also erected by the State, be removed to the Rock Island Cemetery.

"Very truly yours,

"ALEX. RAMSEY,
"Secretary of War.

"Hon. J. D. CAMERON,
"United States Senate."

The committee therefore beg leave to report the bill back to the Senate favorably, and recommend its passage.

Mr. McDONALD. I think I shall have to object to that bill. The lands have been for some time under the control of the Secretary of the Interior, and there does not seem to be anything from the Interior Department relating to the subject. The information from the Secretary of War on that subject certainly is too imperfect to justify our passing a bill covering so much ground.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana objects to the further consideration of the bill, and it goes over.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the Senator to withdraw the objection. This is a bill already considered in the House of Representatives and passed there; it is merely amending the statute placing the lands which were embraced within the Fort Ridgely military reservation in the Interior Department, and placing them subject to sale under the law regulating pre-emptions, but the laws in regard to settlement upon the lands under the timber-culture act do not apply to it. The effect of this bill is to bring these lands within the operation of those laws. I see no reason why there should be hesitation about amending the section as this bill provides. I hope the Senator from Indiana will withdraw his objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Indiana withdraw his objection?

Mr. McDONALD. As I heard the bill read there is much more in it than merely amending the section of the statute referred to. I certainly think the Interior Department ought to have been conferred with in regard to that reservation and the proper disposition to be made of it. The Secretary of War informs us that it has been some years since it passed from under the control of the War Department and became part of the public lands and was made subject to the control of the Interior Department. I do not feel like letting a bill of that kind pass without knowing more about it.

Mr. McMILLAN. If the Senator insists upon his objection let the bill pass over without prejudice until he can have an opportunity of examining it.

Mr. McDONALD. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

HERBERT JOYCE.

The bill (H. R. No. 5748) for the relief of Herbert Joyce was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the accounting officers of the Treasury to settle with Herbert Joyce, late a private of Company B, Second Battalion, Sixteenth United States Infantry, all bounty, pay, and allowances retained from him by reason of a sentence of a court-martial approved April 23, 1866, remitted August 15, 1866, he having subsequently served for the full term of his original enlistment of five years, and been honorably discharged.

Mr. LOGAN. Read the report in that case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary informs the Chair that there is no report.

Mr. KERNAN. There is a House report.

Mr. COCKRELL. I have here the report of the House committee. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. RANDOLPH] adopted the House report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Missouri send up the report, and it will be read?

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. UPDEGRAFF, of Iowa, from the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives, June 4, 1880:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. No. 5748) for the relief of Herbert Joyce, would respectfully report:

That on the 4th day of January, 1864, Herbert Joyce enlisted for five years in the Sixteenth United States Infantry, (regular Army,) and was assigned to Company B, Second Battalion, then at Chattanooga, Tennessee; that his company accompanied General Sherman's army, and Joyce was in three of its battles, and was, on the 28th of May, 1864, in the battle of New Hope Church, Georgia, taken prisoner, sent to and confined in Andersonville military prison until December 11, 1864, nearly seven months; that he was exchanged, and returned to Chattanooga, Tennessee; that he was then but sixteen years old, and being disheartened and homesick, (from the hard duty, for one so young, and confinement,) without proper furlough he went to his home, but with no apparent intention of deserting. He was arrested as a deserter, tried before a court-martial, and sentenced to forfeit all pay and allowances then due him or that might become due him, and, in addition thereto, be confined at hard labor for the remainder of his term of enlistment. Upon this sentence he was confined at hard labor some four months, when Major-General Thomas remitted the unexecuted portion of the sentence, and he was returned to his company. After return to his company he continued a faithful soldier for the full remainder of his term of enlistment, and also the full time lost by reason of the desertion in addition thereto, and was honorably discharged for full-term service.

At the time of the sentence of the court-martial, and subsequently during his confinement under same, there was and became moneys due him for bounty, pay, and allowances, and which the Government refused to pay him upon his final honorable discharge, for the reason that it was part of the executed portion of the sentence of the court-martial and not remitted by order of General Thomas. This the Government still retains, and Joyce has never been paid same. The Government has received full-term service, including all loss of time, and agreed to pay these allowances and bounty therefor; and your committee, considering his youth, his imprisonment nearly seven months as prisoner of war at Andersonville, and nearly four months' confinement at hard labor upon the sentence of the court-martial, his subsequent faithful service for full term and all time lost, and honorable discharge, are unanimously of the opinion the Government should adjust and settle with him for all bounty, pay, and allowances retained from him by reason of the sentence of the court-martial, and they therefore report this bill favorably to the House, and recommend its passage.

Mr. LOGAN. I dislike to object to a bill of that kind coming from the committee of which I am a member, but I should like to hear some further explanation in reference to it. That report certainly shows that this is legislation in reference to a judgment of a court-martial, and I cannot understand how Congress can do that.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Then pass it over without prejudice.

Mr. LOGAN. I ask that it go over. I think the proper mode of relief is by pardon in a case of that kind, and not by legislation of Congress, and I shall make objection unless it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over without prejudice.

LEWIS A. KENT.

The bill (H. R. No. 3450) for the relief of Lewis A. Kent was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It declares that Lewis A. Kent, late captain of Company G, Sixth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, who was mustered as such captain to date July 28, 1864, shall be taken and deemed to have been mustered as such captain as of the 7th of May, 1864, that being the day when he was assigned to and from which he continuously discharged the duties of such office, and shall be recognized and treated by all the Departments of the Government of the United States as a captain mustered at the last-named date, and doing duty as such from that date until his final muster-out of service.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AWARDS TO PARTIES IN TENNESSEE.

The bill (H. R. No. 6248) directing the payment of certain awards in favor of parties therein named was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the payment to the persons named, in the State of Tennessee, of the sums found to be due them by the court of claims created by Major-General George H. Thomas, in the year 1864, composed of Colonel H. C. Gilbert, of the Nineteenth Michigan Regiment of the United States Volunteers, as president, and Captain Hubbard, Lieutenant Colville, Doctor John B. Armstrong, and S. L. Colville, members, the names and amounts being specified in detail.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOMER FELLOWS.

The bill (H. R. No. 3789) for the relief of Homer Fellows was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the payment to Homer Fellows of $250, in full payment of his claim for services as an employé of the House of Representatives from December 4, 1877, to April 4, 1878.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHOCTAW CLAIM.

The bill (H. R. No. 440) for the ascertainment of the amount due the Choctaw Nation was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HOAR. Is there anything in that bill which sets out what are the claims which are to be presented, in any way? If I heard it correctly, as the Clerk read it very rapidly, it is an act simply authorizing the Court of Claims to consider all differences between the United States and the Choctaw Nation. If the Choctaw Nation should claim the city of Washington as their property, the Court of Claims would have jurisdiction.

Mr. GARLAND. I will state to the Senator from Massachusetts that the preamble contains in short the object of this bill.

Whereas the Choctaw Nation, for itself and in behalf of individual members thereof, makes claim against the United States on account of various treaty provisions which it is alleged have not been complied with: Therefore.

It is in reference to treaties between the United States and the Choctaw Nation, now in existence for over thirty years, matters which have been pending in Congress for that length of time, and it is at last concluded that the cheapest way to get rid of the whole case is to let them go into the Court of Claims, prove their cause of complaint, and have it adjudicated there.

Mr. HOAR. This is a House bill, and to amend it would send it back and endanger its passage. I will not on the statement of the honorable Senator make an objection, but it strikes me it is rather a loosely drawn bill.

Mr. GARLAND. It is not as well drawn perhaps as most bills are, but I beg the Senator not to object, because an objection is fatal to the bill at this session, and one of the agents of that nation after living here thirty-odd years to see the end of this has died at last, and the other one, the only one surviving, has come on and he will not live very long if this bill is not passed.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was read and agreed to.

HEIRS OF LANGLEY B. CULLEY.

The bill (H. R. No. 3826) for the relief of the heirs of the late Langley B. Culley was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for the payment to the heirs of the late Langley B. Culley, a naval constructor in the Navy of the United States, of $2,300 in payment for all services now due the heirs of Culley from the United States.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Is there a report in that case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair.) The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. TALBOTT from the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives February 20, 1880:

The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the memorial of the heirs of Langley B. Culley, a naval constructor in the Navy of the United States, having had the same under consideration, respectfully submit the following report:

It appears by the records of the Navy Department that Langley B. Culley was appointed a naval constructor by the late John Y. Mason, Secretary of the Navy, February 26, 1845, at a salary, as stated in his letter of appointment, of $2,300 per annum; and that said appointment was revoked by George Bancroft, who succeeded Mr. Mason as Secretary of the Navy, April 17, 1845, Mr. Culley having accepted the appointment in a letter dated February 26, 1845. It also appears that at the time of his appointment and acceptance of the office he owned and occupied a ship-yard in Baltimore, Maryland, where he was doing a successful business in the line of his profession; and in order to enter on the discharge of the duties of the office to which he had been appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, he sold out his ship-yard, and sacrificed a flourishing business; and after holding himself in readiness for fifty days to obey the orders of the Navy Department, he was informed by the Secretary of the Navy that in consequence of the failure of Congress to make an appropriation for the pay of the office to which he had been appointed, said appointment was revoked. In the mean time his business arrangements had been broken up, and his ship-yard had passed into other hands.

From the numerous statements which the committee have examined, all of which bear testimony to the high moral, intellectual, and professional abilities of Mr. Culley, and of his eminent fitness for the position to which he had been appointed, and taking into consideration the sacrifices which he made in accepting said appointment, and for which neither he nor his heirs have received any compensation, the committee are unanimously of the opinion that his heirs are justly and equitably entitled to at least one year's pay at the rate named in his letter of appointment, and herewith report the accompanying bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate, and ordered to a third reading.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I should like to inquire whether it has been customary where a party has been appointed to an office and his appointment revoked before he enters on the discharge of the duties of the office to indemnify him for any losses which he may have sustained by reason of his having given up the business in which he had previously been engaged? It seems to me rather a strange proceeding. The Government makes an appointment of a man to an office: subsequently it is deemed proper to revoke that before he enters on the discharge of the duties of the office. This is a proposition to go now and indemnify him for the loss he sustained by giving him a year's salary. It seems to me rather a novel proceeding. I do not know personally anything about the claim except as it is presented in the report.

Mr. VANCE. I am only able to answer the Senator from Delaware that in the opinion of the committee it was just to appropriate this amount. This man had sold out and broken up his business by reason of the appointment, which was revoked by the Secretary of the Navy. Whether it is the custom or not it is but just that some compensation should be made to him. The testimony elicited by the committee was to the effect that he had received no compensation whatever, not even for the two months for which he held the commission.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LOGAN subsequently said: I wish to call the attention of the Senate to House bill No. 3826, which passed a few moments ago. I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which that bill was passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. HARRIS in the chair.) The motion to reconsider will be entered.

REDMOND TULLY.

The bill (H. R. No. 2058) for the relief of Redmond Tully was announced as next in order.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to hear the report read in that case.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. RANDOLPH from the Committee on Military Affairs February 25, 1881.

Mr. LOGAN. It is not necessary to read the report any further. The bill cannot pass, and I shall object to it. Let it go over merely.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Being objected to, the bill goes over.

Mr. TELLER. Without prejudice.

Mr. LOGAN. Without prejudice. I desire, however, to state, so that it may not be considered that I am objecting to a man who was a soldier, that this bill puts him back into the Army and gives him the rank he would have held if he had remained in the Army, which certainly would displace a great many other officers. I cannot agree to a bill of that kind being passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. GROOME. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Illinois that it requires unanimous consent for a bill to go over without prejudice as he has suggested, and the Senator from Maryland objects.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I object to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island objects to the consideration of the bill, and the bill goes over.

Mr. GROOME. I move to postpone the present and all prior orders, with a view to proceeding to the consideration of the bill, and upon that motion I desire to be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would state to the Senator from Maryland that it is not in order to debate the merits of a bill on a motion to take it up.

Mr. GROOME. I do not propose to debate the merits of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Anything the Senator may see proper to state in the way of taking it up would be in order.

Mr. GROOME. I do not propose to debate the merits, but I propose to state the situation to the Senate. Of course I need not remind the Senate that we are within three days of the end of the session. If the bill goes over to-night it goes over permanently. I feel that if postponed to-night, it would then be defeated. A bill for the relief of this person has been twice reported favorably at this session by the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. That fact ought to commend it to the Senate. I have consumed very little of the time of the Senate during this or the last session, as every Senator knows. I am perhaps entitled on that score to as much courtesy as any Senator can possibly ask; and if other Senators had pursued the course which I have pursued at all times as a member of this body, of not debating unnecessary questions, or consuming in frivolous discussions the time of the Senate, we would have had the most ample opportunity for the consideration of this and every other question which would possibly come before us; but having, as I said, remained almost silent during the whole session, I feel that I have a right, when an objection is made to this bill which I know is its inevitable defeat if it prevails, to make the motion I do, which is in fact nothing more than to prevent one objection from controlling the action of the Senate.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator will allow me, I will state to him that the objection I have is not that the bill ought not to pass, but I object to the bill in the shape in which it is.

Mr. GROOME. I understand that perfectly.

Mr. LOGAN. I will state that if the bill should pass in its present shape it would put Mr. Tully back to the rank he formerly held. I do not know how long he has been out of the Army.

Mr. GROOME. He has been out since he was illegally mustered out in 1870, as stated by this very report, and also by a report made by the Senator from Illinois himself. Both reports state that he was illegally mustered out, and state it correctly.

Mr. LOGAN. No matter how he was mustered out, the point is, the bill proposes to put him back in the Army of the date at which he was mustered out and to give him the rank that he would have had if he had remained in the Army. Following that the pay will follow.

Mr. GROOME. No, sir; any provision whatever that the Senator may propose to prevent the pay will be satisfactory to me.

Mr. LOGAN. If he is put back in the Army he displaces a number of officers, and my objection is not to the bill but to its form. I never drafted a bill of that kind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois will allow the Chair to suggest that this debate is out of order.

Mr. LOGAN. I am only explaining to the Senator the point of my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understands, but the Chair is here for the purpose of enforcing the rules, and he must rule that debate on the merits of the proposition is out of order.

Mr. GROOME. My motion is simply to get rid of one single objection or two objections against this bill. My motion is that the present and all prior orders be postponed in order to enable me to take up the bill, and upon that motion I should like to have the sense of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maryland that the pending and all prior orders be postponed, giving notice that if the motion prevails he will move to take up the bill mentioned by him.

Mr. GROOME. Which is the very bill that would be up but for a single objection.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 22, noes 11; no quorum voting.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BURNSIDE. I can only say if men are to be legislated back into the Army in this way——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island will pardon the Chair for enforcing the same rule upon him that he did upon the Senator from Illinois. It is not in order to debate the merits of a bill on a proposition to postpone the pending order. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maryland to postpone the pending and all prior orders for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of the bill, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 30, nays 16; as follows:

YEAS—30.

Bailey,	Hill of Colorado,	Paddock,	Saunders,
Butler,	Jonas,	Pendleton,	Slater,
Call,	Jones of Florida,	Platt,	Vance,
Coke,	Kernan,	Plumb,	Vest,
Davis of W. Va.,	Lamar,	Pugh,	Walker,
Groome,	McDonald,	Ransom,	Williams.
Hampton,	Maxey,	Rollins,
Hereford,	Morgan,	Saulsbury,

NAYS—16.

Anthony,	Burnside,	Harris,	Logan,
Beck,	Cockrell,	Ingalls,	Teller,
Blair,	Davis of Illinois,	Jones of Nevada,	Wallace,
Booth,	Dawes,	Kirkwood,	Withers.

ABSENT—29.

Allison,	Conkling,	Hill of Georgia,	Sharon,
Baldwin,	Eaton,	Hoar,	Thurman,
Bayard,	Edmunds,	Johnston,	Voorhees,
Blaine,	Farley,	Kellogg,	Whyte,
Brown,	Ferry,	McMillan,	Windom.
Bruce,	Garland,	McPherson,
Cameron of Pa.,	Grover,	Morrill,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hamlin,	Randolph,

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. GROOME. I now submit the motion indicated a few moments ago, to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. No. 2058) for the relief of Redmond Tully.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the President to reinstate Redmond Tully, late first lieutenant of the Twelfth United States Infantry, as of the date he was previously mustered out, giving him the grade, rank, and promotion which he would have held had he remained continuously in the Army; and that he shall be assigned to the first vacancy occurring in such grade in the infantry arm of the service. But he shall receive no pay or allowance for the time he was out of service other than that already received at the time of his muster-out.

Mr. GROOME. Mr. President, I do not propose at this late day of the session to delay the Senate by debating at any length this or any other question. I simply want to submit a very brief statement of facts as to this case, and when I have discharged this duty to a citizen of my State, I will be perfectly willing that the Senate shall dispose of the bill in such manner as its own sense of justice may lead it to believe is right.

The facts as disclosed in the report are few and simple. They show that upon the 2d day of January, 1871, this man, Redmond Tully, who had been a brave, capable, and efficient officer, performing every duty with the utmost fidelity, was discharged from his place in the Army without any just cause whatsoever and in direct disregard of law. That statement is fully sustained by the report of the Military Committee which I hold in my hand. On July 15, 1870, an act was passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives providing that certain officers of the Army could be put upon the supernumerary list before a given day, and that from that supernumerary list the various regiments could be filled with second lieutenancies; but the express condition of that law was that no officer should be mustered out of service without being allowed a hearing before a board of officers to show cause against it.

In direct defiance of this provision of law this officer, whom this report shows to be a most deserving one in every possible respect, was mustered out of the service without being given any chance to go before any board and show any cause whatever why he should not be so mustered out.

The report shows that he was mustered out upon the recommendation of his commanding officer, Colonel Vodges, of the First Artillery, then acting as brigadier-general. Colonel Vodges, in a letter which has been presented to the committee and has been made a part of their report, declares that he recommended the dismissal of this man from the Army because certain circumstances at that time were brought to his notice which reflected upon Captain Tully's character, which he then had every reason to believe to be true; but he adds that subsequent inquiry satisfied him that those supposed facts could not be sustained. So that, as shown by this very report, this man was illegally mustered out of the Army because his commanding officer had recommended it in consequence of the statement reflecting upon him, which the commanding officer states in the frankest and fullest manner he afterward ascertained to be totally without foundation. But that is not all of this case.

The right of the President to put officers upon this supernumerary list was limited to the 1st day of January, 1871, as shown by this report, and as shown by the twelfth section of the act to which I have referred. Yet the President of the United States, in disregard of law, on the 2d day of January, 1871, one day after all right upon his part to fill this supernumerary list had expired, issued his order placing this man on the supernumerary list, and then mustering him out, to take effect as of the day before the order was issued, which was the last day upon which such an order could legally be made. Upon the 2d day of January, 1871, I want to restate, when he had no authority whatever, under the law he made this transfer to the supernumerary list and muster out, and as the only possible means of sustaining himself he directed that the transfer and muster out should take effect and date back one day.

These are the facts simply stated. They show plainly, clearly, and unmistakably to every Senator who has listened to the statement I have made, that this man, a brave, efficient, and deserving officer, who is declared so to be by certificates of his commanding officers, and of many of his brother officers, as shown in this very report of the committee, was mustered out of the service in direct violation of law.

Mr. President, it is for the Senate to say under these circumstances whether it will pass the bill in such a shape as to put him back into the Army and give him his old date of commission and rank. He is simply asking that he may not suffer the consequence of the illegal act which removed him from the Army further than this, that he is ready and willing to agree, and it is agreed by this very bill, that if he should be reinstated in his old position in the Army he is to receive no pay during the intermediate term of years in which he was out of service.

I think he might well have claimed more than he does claim. I think he might well have claimed, having been discharged from the Army in violation of law, that he should be reinstated with compensation for the whole intervening period; but he has taken the wise and correct course, in my judgment, of asking not full justice, but a measure of relief which somewhat approaches it. Place him back in the rank of lieutenant and you will place a man who has about reached middle life in a position in which juniors without number will be over his head, who have rendered nothing like the faithful and efficient service that he has.

I have now stated the case. I think the bill ought to pass in the shape in which it is now before the Senate, and all the more do I think so inasmuch as I feel that any amendment to it may lead to its defeat at this late day of the session. I therefore submit it to the Senate and of course must abide the result, whatever it may be.

Mr. LOGAN. I desire to detain the Senate but a moment, merely to state in a plain manner, so that I may be understood by all, exactly the position that the bill would place this man in. I do not deny the unfortunate position in which he is placed; but if you pass the bill reinstating him, you do not nominate him to the Senate to be confirmed, but give the President power to put him back in the Army. I do not believe that authority can be given, but still I will not discuss that here. If you reinstate him in the Army, and give him the rank that he would have had, for that is the bill, provided he remained in the service, will the Senator from Indiana please tell me what rank he would have had if he had remained in the service? If the Senator cannot tell, how will the President tell? He might have been a brigadier-general.

Mr. GROOME. If the Senator desires me to answer I will tell him what his rank will be.

Mr. LOGAN. What?

Mr. GROOME. It will be that of captain.

Mr. LOGAN. How does the Senator know that?

Mr. GROOME. Your report shows that—the report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. LOGAN. He might have been dismissed from the service prior to this time.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Then he would have had no rank at all.

Mr. LOGAN. Then he would have had no rank at all. The President has got to take it for granted under this bill that he would have been a good soldier all the time, and that he would have attained a certain rank, and he is to appoint him to that rank. That is the bill. It does strike me that that is not the proper way to legislate.

Men are unfortunate or fortunate as circumstances may throw them in certain ways. That we cannot legislate for; but the rule is that where a person is entitled to go back into the Army we give the President authority to nominate him, for the reason that age intervenes sometimes. The law requires a certain age. This man is beyond that age. Hence to get back in the Army the President must have the authority from Congress to appoint this man, because he is over the age that a man may be appointed a lieutenant in the Army. Hence the bill authorizes that. If it was not so, he could nominate him in the Army to fill a vacancy as a lieutenant.

The bills that have been passed uniformly authorize the President to nominate to the Senate, and the Senate confirms a person to be rated in the Army as a lieutenant, or if he was a captain when mustered out as a captain, taking rank not of the rank that he might have had by some good fortune or other, but the rank that he held when mustered out. That is the uniform rule of the legislation by Congress.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. LOGAN. Certainly.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Do I understand the Senator to mean that if a man who held the rank of lieutenant was unjustly dismissed from the public service, and afterward it was ascertained that injustice had been done him, and that he ought to be restored, his case would stand in law upon the same footing as that of a man who had never been in the service at all?

Mr. LOGAN. I said to the Senate that I would not discuss that proposition, and I will show the Senator why. I said that men were unfortunate sometimes. Here there are, for instance, in this man's regiment thirty lieutenants and ten captains. Their rank is all fixed; it is fixed on the register. You will put this man back in the Army, not of the rank he had at the time he went out of the Army, but of the rank that you can figure out on the roll he would have attained at this time. You displace every captain you put him above; you disorganize the whole line of captains in the regiment, and it may now under the rule disorganize the whole line of the Army.

Mr. MAXEY. I beg to call the attention of the Senator from Illinois to Senate bill No. 592, for the relief of Redmond Tully, which was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs by the Senator from Illinois with a report. That bill shows precisely the view of the committee as stated by the Senator from Illinois, and it was considered and reported on full investigation. It provides that the President shall be authorized to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint him to the Army. I suggest to the Senator from Illinois, as he has charge of that bill, and therefore it would come better from him than me, that he move that as a substitute for the pending bill.

Mr. LOGAN. I desire the attention of the Senator from Maryland. The Senator from Maryland said that I had made a report in this case. I did, and I also reported a bill. Let me read the bill that I reported to the Senator that he may understand it.

Mr. GROOME. The Senator did not understand me as saying that he reported the same bill which is now before the Senate? I alluded to his report to show that it had received favorable action from him.

Mr. LOGAN. First I will read the bill that I reported:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate Redmond Tully, late first lieutenant of the Twelfth United States Infantry, as first lieutenant in the United States Infantry, to take effect from his nomination and confirmation under this act, and that he shall be assigned to the first vacancy occurring in such grade in the infantry arm of the service: Provided, That no pay or allowances on account of previous rank or services be allowed or paid to the said Tully: And provided further, That all laws prohibiting appointments in the Army in such cases be, and they are hereby, suspended so far, and so far only, as to the nomination of said Tully.

That is to suspend the law that prohibits him on account of his age. That bill I drafted, and for that bill I am ready to vote.

Mr. MAXEY. Now I ask the Senator from Illinois to read the last paragraph in the report.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. What is the difference between the two bills?

Mr. LOGAN. The difference is that under the bill passed by the House the man is not nominated to the Senate at all, but it authorizes the President to put him in the Army and on any rank that he deems he might have taken if he had staid in the service. By the bill that I reported, when he is nominated and confirmed, he is assigned by order of the President to the first vacancy in the regiment that occurs. There is a very great difference.

Mr. COCKRELL. Giving him the same grade and relative rank——

Mr. LOGAN. That he had at the time. When bills have come from the House in the form that the pending bill has come, they have always been changed in our committee as this Senate bill reads. It is the uniform practice; it is according to the rule in the Army and according to law.

Mr. GROOME. I should like to ask the Senator from Illinois if a very considerable number of bills have not passed giving to officers who have been dismissed from the Army the same rank they would have had if they had not been dismissed, and in weaker cases than this giving them the same measure of relief that is proposed in the pending bill?

Mr. LOGAN. That may have been done in times past.

Mr. GROOME. It has been done in quite a number of cases.

Mr. LOGAN. I am not responsible for many things that have been done, neither is the Committee on Military Affairs; and I hope the Senate will not be held responsible for many things that have been passed into law. But this is the rule; it interferes with nobody. It is as near justice as we can go without doing injustice to others. If we could do the justice to this man that is asked and do no injustice to others, we might agree to it, but by doing what is asked we would do injustice to ten captains in the regiment. We do not want to do injustice to ten men in order that we may do justice to one man, and where we cannot do ample and complete justice we must do justice as nearly as possible. This is as near justice as we can do under the law and under the rules regulating the Army. Therefore, I offer the Senate bill which I have read as a substitute for the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois offer the bill as proposed to be amended by the committee, or as it was originally drafted?

Mr. LOGAN. As amended in committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be reported.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and to insert:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to nominate Redmond Tully, late first lieutenant of the Twelfth United States Infantry, as first lieutenant in the United States Infantry, to take effect from his nomination and confirmation under this act, and that he shall be assigned to the first vacancy occurring in such grade in the infantry arm of the service: Provided, That no pay or allowances on account of previous rank or services be allowed or paid to the said Tully: And provided further, That all laws prohibiting appointments in the Army in such cases be, and they are hereby, suspended so far, and so far only, as to the nomination of said Tully.

Mr. COCKRELL. This amendment leaves out one or two words which are essential and which our committee always insert. I move to insert after the word "nominate" the words "and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint."

Mr. LOGAN. I have no objection to that; that modification ought to be made.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is the way the bills have been usually reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. LOGAN. That is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be so modified. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified.

Mr. GROOME. I simply want to say one word. I am not going to debate the question at any length. I simply want the Senate to understand that they are deciding whether that is all the measure of justice that they will give to an officer who has been concededly mustered out of his position as an officer in the Army in direct violation of law. If, in a case where it is conceded that the muster-out was in direct violation of the law, where the officer is truly deserving, the Senate is unwilling to give him the place in the Army which he would have had if he had remained continuously in the service, I of course bow to the wisdom of this body and will submit gracefully; but I do not propose that a vote shall be taken without the Senate distinctly understanding the proposition which they are about to pass upon.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, in 1869 we found ourselves with an immensely large Army, much larger than the people of this country were disposed to maintain by taxation. It became necessary to reduce that Army. An act was passed for the reduction of the numbers composing the Army, of men and of officers. It was impossible to mete out equal and exact justice to every officer who was then in the Army. Provision was made as favorable as Congress at that time believed could be made. Those who had to be mustered out were transferred from one arm of the service to the other; they were to be placed upon the supernumerary list; they were to be appointed as second lieutenants in the Army. A certain number had to be mustered out of the Army in order to reduce it. Congress had the power and the right to muster out or discharge every one of them. They chose that manner of mustering out a certain number. Mr. Tully came within the provisions of this law. He was mustered out, and a large number of others were mustered out.

Mr. GROOME. Not under that law.

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes; under that law.

Mr. GROOME. The report of the committee shows differently.

Mr. COCKRELL. I know exactly what I am talking about. It was in consequence of that law reducing the Army, that Mr. Tully was mustered out of service. Some one had to be mustered out. The authorities executing the law of course did the best they could. Dissatisfaction sprang up. There was partiality shown doubtless in some instances; it is human nature to be partial to friends and relatives.

A large number of these persons have appealed to Congress to be reinstated in the Army, as it is called, for permission to be appointed again to the same grade they held. These cases have been coming before the Committee on Military Affairs ever since I became a member of that committee in 1875. I say to the Senate that we never have reported a bill restoring and reinstating a man in the rank he would have held had he been continuously in the service; and I say if you pass this bill without the amendment now offered you had better add an amendment to the foot of the bill to disband and disorganize the Army of the United States. It means that; it means nothing else. Think of it: when a young man went out of the Army in 1871, who has had his time, his talent all to himself, who has not performed one particle of service to the country, ten long years after that Congress takes him up as a pet and favorite and places him in the rank probably of a major in the Army.

Mr. McDONALD. Or a major-general.

Mr. COCKRELL. Or a major-general for that matter, depending upon the discretion of the President, and then talk about keeping up an army with such partiality as that.

Mr. President, we hear too much about officers getting out of the Army illegally. I have told attorneys and others time and again in this city when they came with a plea that a party was illegally out of the Army, that if he were illegally turned out it was a null and void act, and the only way to test it was to go into the Court of Claims and sue for pay. Not one has ever yet dared to test the legality ot these proceedings. If the proceedings mustering them out were nos legal, they are entitled to the pay from the time they went out to thif time. Why do they not sue for it? It would be $25,000 in this case. Why was not suit brought?

There may have been some hardships, there may have been injustice done, there may have been favoritism, there may have been partiality, but it is not possible for the Forty-sixth Congress to go back and undo everything that has been done in this matter in the last twenty-five or fifty years, and mete out equal and exact justice to every individual citizen. What we would consider just might be considered by a subsequent Congress to be gross injustice.

Now, I ask that the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois embracing such amendments as the committee have always reported, the very amendments that the Committee on Military Affairs at the present session in full committee passed upon and reported to the Senate, may be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Illinois, [Mr. LOGAN.]

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

FORT RIDGELY RESERVATION.

Mr. McMILLAN. I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 3751) to amend chapter 198, volume 16 of the Statutes at Large, which was passed over without prejudice, and I ask that it be considered at this time.

Mr. KERNAN. I merely rise for an inquiry, not to object to the bill. I wish to inquire, now when no one is talking, whether we are under the five-minute rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The five-minute rule is in force. The Chair should state that it did not occur to the present occupant of the Chair, hence it has not been enforced; but it will be hereafter.

Mr. COCKRELL. I beg the Chair's pardon; it was not in force in the consideration of the last bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No, it was not, under the rule.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is now in force when we proceed under the rule to the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was not in force in the consideration of the last bill because the rule had been postponed. The Secretary will report the bill called for by the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. What bill is it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A bill that was passed over at an early part of the evening without prejudice.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Are we on the Calendar now?

Mr. McMILLAN. This bill is on the Calendar.

Mr. McDONALD. The bill referred to by the Senator from Minnesota was passed over on my objection. I have been advised since that the bill as it passed the House was submitted to the Commissioner of the General Land Office and met the approval of the Commissioner, although that does not appear in the report. Upon that understanding I withdraw my objection and will allow the bill to be considered.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. No. 3751) to amend chapter 198, volume 16 of the Statutes at Large.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HOAR. The title of the bill should be amended. Let the title read "An act concerning the disposal of land in the Fort Ridgely military reservation."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the title will be amended as suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. McMILLAN. I hope the title of the bill as it came from the House will be allowed to remain.

Mr. HOAR. I withdraw the suggestion, as it would require sending the bill back to the House for amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and the title will stand as reported originally.

JOHN S. CORLETT.

The bill (H. R. No. 1102) granting a pension to John S. Corlett was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments.

The first amendment was in line 4, after "pension-roll," to strike out "from the date of December 12, 1863."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in line 8, after the word "private," to strike out the words "from the date of the amputation of his leg by reason of injuries received in line of duty in the service of the United States in the war of the rebellion" and to insert the word "soldier."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. INGALLS. Let the bill be read as amended.

The Chief Clerk read the bill as amended, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John S. Corlett, late a teamster in the service of the United States, and pay him the pension of a private soldier.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

JOHN T. NEALE.

The bill (H. R. No. 3309) for the relief of John T. Neale was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll, as an enlisted private, the name of John T. Neale, late a scout under General Andrew Porter, provost-marshal of the District of Columbia, in the war for the suppression of the rebellion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY ANN M'CARROL.

The bill (H. R. No. 1469) granting a pension to Mary Ann McCarrol was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Mary Ann McCarrol, of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, widow of James McCarrol, deceased, late a member of Company B, Forty-third Ohio Volunteers, who died from disease and exposure contracted in the line of duty while in the military service of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD H. MITCHELL.

The bill (H. R. No. 2549) granting a pension to Edward H. Mitchell, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Edward H. Mitchell, of Company I, Seventy-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB GELWICKS.

The bill (H. R. No. 205) granting a pension to Jacob Gelwicks was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll the name of Jacob Gelwicks, late of Company L, Eleventh Regiment Missouri Militia.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MINING CLAIMS.

The bill (H. R. No. 1280) to amend section 2326 of the Revised Statutes, relating to suits at law affecting the title to mining claims, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that if, in any action brought pursuant to section 2326 of the Revised Statutes, title to the ground in controversy shall not be established by either party, the jury shall so find, and judgment shall be entered according to the verdict. In such case costs shall not be allowed to either party, and the claimant shall not proceed in the land office or be entitled to a patent for the ground in controversy until he shall have perfected his title.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ABRIDGMENTS OF LETTERS-PATENT.

The bill (H. R. No. 5066) to provide for the preparation of classified abridgments of all letters-patent of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The first section appropriates $10,000, to be expended under the direction of the Commissioner of Patents in the preparation of classified abridgments of all letters-patent of the United States.

Section 2 provides that the abridgments shall be printed, and one copy of each shall be furnished to each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress, one copy to each of eight public libraries to be designated by each Senator, Representative, and Delegate, and two copies to the Library of Congress; and also copies to such foreign governments, libraries, and learned societies as the Commissioner of Patents may designate; but copies shall be sold at the cost of printing, and all sums received from the sale shall, on or before the first day of each month, be paid into the Treasury.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CARLILE BOYD.

The next House bill in order on the Calendar was the bill (H. R. No. 3477) for the relief of Carlile Boyd.

Mr. COCKRELL. The adverse minority report in that case has not yet come from the Printer. I object to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill goes over under objection.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. Let it go over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That will require unanimous consent.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is not in condition for that; it is not included in the order for this Calendar. I make no point on that particularly, but the order embraced only the cases then on the Calendar. This bill has been since put on the Calendar. The record shows that fact.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is mistaken, in the opinion of the Chair, as to the order under which we are acting. It is not confined, if the Chair remembers without referring to the resolution, to cases now on the Calendar, but extends to all cases as reported. That is the impression of the Chair.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. The Senator who is most deeply interested in this case [Mr. VOORHEES] is now absent from the Senate. I have no objection at all to its going over now, but I want it to go over without prejudice, so that it may come up to-morrow.

Mr. COCKRELL. Other cases have been objected to going over without prejudice. I cannot permit it to go "without prejudice." Let it go over as other cases go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill goes over.

JOHN H. TEMPLETON.

The bill (H. R. No. 7160) for the relief of John H. Templeton was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads with an amendment, after the words "sum of" in line 5, to strike out:

Five hundred and seventy-six dollars and sixty-four cents in his account with the Post-Office Department, being the amount stolen from his safe in the post-office at said village, by burglars, on the night of the 3d day of August, 1880; the said amount being made up of $486.64 in postage stamps, and $90 in postage funds, so stolen.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Four hundred and eighty-six dollars and sixty-four cents in his account with the Post-Office Department, being the value of postage-stamps stolen from his safe in the post-office in said town, by burglars, on the night of the 3d day of August, 1880.

So as to make the bill read:

That the Postmaster-General be authorized, and he is hereby directed, to credit John H. Templeton, postmaster at Millerton, State of New York, sum of $486.64 in his account with the Post-Office Department, being the value of postage-stamps stolen from his safe in the post-office in said town, by burglars, on the night of the 3d day of August, 1880.

Mr. McDONALD. Is there a report?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no written report.

Mr. McDONALD. I should like to understand how the Senate committee comes to differ with the House as to the amount of this larceny?

Mr. COCKRELL. I can state the rule adopted by the Committee on Claims, and also, as I understand, by the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads, and that is only to pay for those things the officer was absolutely required to keep in his office, and not anything else that he may have had. The House bill appropriates so much:

The said amount being made up of $486.64 in postage-stamps and $90 in postage funds.

The committee find that it was not required of him to keep as much as $90 in postal funds on hand, and therefore they strike that out and put in $486.64, being the amount of postage-stamps that were stolen from him and which he had to keep on hand.

Mr. CONKLING. As I know something about this bill, I venture to ask the Senator from Missouri to call a halt, if he will in what he is saying. I understand that this man is entitled in law and in fact to what the Senator proposes to strike out, if he is entitled to anything in this regard.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit me to explain?

Mr. CONKLING. Yes.

Mr. COCKRELL. I know nothing in the world of this case. A reason was asked why the amendment was proposed. I only stated what had been the custom of committees in similar cases. I know nothing about this. I do not know whether the man is entitled to anything or not. I only know what I learn from having the bill before me. I was only speaking of what I understood to be the rule.

Mr. CONKLING. I beg the Senator from Missouri to hear me while I say that I know about it among other things, that which the report of the House committee, a very full and minute report now in my hands, discloses. I know also about it because of a statement made to me orally by a member of the House after this amendment had been proposed. He came and begged me not to allow a thing to be done so arbitrary and without reason, as in the same bill to affirm that this man should be repaired the loss of this burglary, and yet that he should not be repaired as to what actually and undoubtedly was stolen. If my honorable friend will indicate to me, so that I can understand the distinction which he draws, I think I can read to him from this report the answer to that distinction.

Mr. COCKRELL. I know nothing about the report. I have not read it. I have not had time to read every report that is made. I understand that the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads (and I know the distinction has been made also by the Committee on Claims) do not allow a postmaster credit on a claim for everything which he may lose, but only for those things which the law requires him to keep in the post-office, and if he should have other things in addition to the amount required to be on hand, it is at his peril. I understand that to be the rule, and I presume the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads to be guided by it. Members of the committee are here and can speak for it. The Senator who reported this bill [Mr. SAULSBURY] and the chairman are not here, and I only spoke of what I understood to be the rule.

Mr. CONKLING. My honorable friend and I shall be able to understand this in a moment, I am sure, without the aid of the chairman of any committee except the committee of which my friend is chairman. If a postmaster is told to deposit his funds in a bank and does not do it, puts them in a safe or somewhere else, and they are stolen, the rule undoubtedly has been not to compensate him for that. If, as in two or three cases that we have had, a safe is furnished to the postmaster in which to keep his funds, and he does not put them there, and they are stolen, we do not pay him for those funds. If he has gone on, as in two cases which I remember, somewhat heedlessly, as the committee thought, never acquainting the Department with his need of a safe or a strong box, or a lock-up, and being very careless, as in one instance particularly that I remember, the committee said "No; this man has not taken adequate care." Now, let me see whether the case before us falls within any such rule as this:

Mr. Finch and clerk sleep in the store. On the night of August 3, 1880, three masked burglars forced an entrance through a window, and going to the room of Mr. Finch and clerk found them sleeping and at once overpowered them, and having gagged and bound them took them down stairs to the safe, and ordered Mr. Finch, with pistols at his head, to open the safe for them. He refused, whereupon he was beaten with pistol butts and knocked down twice. Upon his still refusing to open the safe, he was again knocked down and beaten until he nearly fainted from loss of blood. A rope was then placed around his neck, and he was informed that if he again refused to open the safe his life would pay the forfeit. Whereupon Mr. Finch, seeing that further resistance was useless, surrendered and opened the safe to them. After robbing the safe the burglars fled, leaving Mr. Finch and clerk bound and gagged. Mr. Finch succeeded in removing the gag from his mouth, and by his cries aroused people living near. A meeting of citizens was called at once in the public hall, and an organized pursuit was given by large numbers of men, but the burglars escaped. A detective was then employed from Pinkerton's agency in New York, New York, for over a week at a heavy expense, but with no result. A notice offering a reward of $1,000 was printed and scattered far and wide within ten hours after the robbery. In fact, no effort or expense has been spared to recover the property and capture the perpetrators, but all without avail.

Then follows, by items, a particular account, to a cent and a fraction, of the contents of this safe, being that which this man was bound to keep on hand, was bound to keep on hand under a very recent decision of the highest court in the country, that for which he was chargeable in every sense in which he could be charged for stamps. If in any case whatever of a loss by fire or burglary restitution is to be made, is it possible that in an instance so extraordinary, so far beyond the ordinary casualties of this kind, the Senate is to split $486.64 in two in order to establish a principle which does not exist? I hope this amendment will be non-concurred in and that this bill, as reported with unusual care from the House committee, will be allowed to stand, and not take "two bites of a cherry," when, I humbly submit, there is no sort of distinction upon which the division can be made.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I think the Senator from Delaware is now in his seat, and he had this bill in charge as a sub-committee.

Mr. SAULSBURY. The committee adopted the rule which had governed its action in all similar cases, to allow the postmaster for postage-stamps, it appeared from the report of the Post-Office Department he had on hand. This one had the amount which the committee have allowed. That has been the rule of the committee for the last five or six years, since I have been a member of it. It would be very unjust now to make this an exception to the rule, which has governed all the other cases that have come from that committee.

I know nothing personally about the affair, but relied upon the report made by the Department that this gentleman had lost a certain amount of postage-stamps, and he had on hand at the same time other moneys, which he was not under the necessity of keeping in his drawer, and we think that this comes within the same rule which has governed the action of the committee in all similar cases for the last five years, without, so far as I know, a single exception.

Mr. CONKLING. Will the Senator allow me one moment? Will he mention to me one case, a single one, in which, in a locality where there was no bank to deposit money, and the postmaster took postal money—the Senator knows what I mean by that—and put it in the safe, and that safe was robbed, the Senate has refused to pay for it, if it was willing to pay for postage-stamps or anything else taken in that robbery? If the honorable Senator will mention one such case I shall be obliged to him.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not know that I can mention any particular case, but there have been numerous cases before the committee of that character. As to the particular circumstances of the cases, I cannot carry them in my brain.

Mr. CONKLING. Does the honorable Senator mean to say that there have been numerous cases, or one case of a post-office at a place where there was no bank in which to deposit moneys, and in which postal money, money belonging to the money-order branch of the Post-Office was in a safe and robbed, no other place being provided to keep it, where the Senate has said that the postmaster was not lawfully keeping that money in the safe?

Mr. SAULSBURY. As to the amount which a postmaster is required to keep for the purpose of meeting money orders, if at any time he has in his possession an amount of money beyond that limitation he keeps it at his own risk and in contravention of the direction of the Department.

Mr. CONKLING. Does the Senator know how much money this postmaster had?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not now remember anything about the case.

Mr. CONKLING. It was less than one hundred dollars.

Mr. SAULSBURY. The report is in conformity with the rule which has governed the action of the committee.

Mr. CONKLING. It was only $90.

Mr. SAULSBURY. My recollection is that the limitation of postal money orders is something like $50.

Mr. CONKLING. He had $486.64 of stamps and only $90 in postal funds. Does the Senator think that exceeds the limit?

Mr. KERNAN. Will my colleague yield to me a moment? The report of the House committee finds the fact that there was stolen $486.64 in postage-stamps and $90 in postal money. Then what follows?

> The circumstances of the robbery are fully set forth in the accompanying petition and report of the Post-Office inspector who made the investigation (which are made a part of this report) and fully establish the facts that every possible precaution was taken to guard against robbery, and that the loss occurred through no carelessness or neglect of duty on the part of the postmaster or of any one connected with the office.

There were the stamps; there was the little sum of money, and the House committee find that he took every precaution, in a place where there was no bank, putting it in the only safe there was in the store; which was a good one. I say a word about this because the papers show that this old gentleman is poor, and that this $90 is considerable to him; and if we amend this House bill we cannot get it through this Congress. It will take all he has to pay the amount.

Mr. CONKLING. That is the point; my colleague states it at last. It is not for this $90 I am beseeching here; but if this bill is to be amended here, amended I submit unjustly, and sent back to the House, not ninety farthings of this money will go to this man in time, perhaps, to reach him this side of the grave.

Mr. KERNAN. The Post-Office Department suspended it until Congress could act at this session, and his friends will have to raise the money if this bill does not pass.

Mr. SAULSBURY. My friends from New York represent a postmaster in their own State; but it is impossible for the Post-Office Committee, as every gentleman who has served on that committee knows, with the numerous cases that come before them, to proceed properly in the business without adopting certain rules to govern their action; and though the application of those rules to all cases may work a hardship in a particular case, that is no reason why the committee should break the rules, because if they do that then we are left to the representations that may be made to us of the hardships of each particular case to govern our action rather than by any definite rule.

Mr. HOAR. Were these money-order funds?

Mr. CONKLING. Money-order funds.

Mr. HOAR. I put the question with the view of ascertaining whether these identical bills—not the sum of money equivalent to them—were the property of the United States, so that if the Postmaster had been killed, his successor could instantly have taken possession of them; or whether they were a debt due from him to the United States, so that the United States—although, of couse, a preferred creditor—would have had to receive an equivalent from his representative? If they were money-order funds, they belonged to the United States, as post-office funds, if I understand the provision of the statute, just as postage-stamps do. If they were the ordinary postmaster's money, although for the convenience of the public service he keeps, to make his payments, a certain sum always in the post-office, still that is a debt from him to the Government. There seems to be the distinction.

Mr. CONKLING. I have stated very distinctly twice, both from the report of the House committee and from the statement of the Representative of the District, the answer to the question put by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Now, I venture once more to ask the Senator from Delaware if he will not, for the purpose of his individual vote, take notice of the fact that this bill does not violate the principle that the Senator talks about? On the contrary, I state to him again that there was but $90 of these postal funds and nearly five hundred dollars of postage-stamps so that, in place of the amount of money exceeding the limit, the case is otherwise; it did not exceed the limit. This man confessedly, within every principle, was doing just what he should have done. He had the money he was bound to have; he had it where he was bound to keep it; and there is no distinction whatever, under any rule which the Senator has referred to, between the $90 and the $480 of postage-stamps. So we are not asking the Senator to violate his rule, but merely to notice that, in point of fact, this case does not fall within it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. MAXEY. I deem it due to the Post-Office Committee to make a statement of what is not only the rule of the Post-Office Committee, but the established rule of the Department. Where there is a United States depository, a national bank, or any other public depository in a town where there is a post-office, the deposit must be made regularly every day in that depository. If so made and that is robbed, the postmaster is exonerated; but if there be none, if no safe even is furnished to him, and a loss is sustained by the postmaster, there is no act of Congress which exonerates him from liability; and in every case of that kind, where there is no fault whatever, an act of Congress has to be passed for his benefit.

Now, coming to the point here, it appears from the statement made that the Post-Office Committee has endeavored to follow the rules prescribed by the Department, that is, where there is a national bank, or other means of depositing the funds, they must be deposited, and the Post-Office Department further requires that where there be no such depository in the town the funds shall be sent to the nearest depository, allowing a certain amount to be kept by the postmaster for use, and that amount is regulated by the business of the office, and the times of transmittal are also regulated by the business of the office.

In this particular case I do not know, because I did not investigate it, whether, as stated by the Senator from New York, the postmaster had on hand any more than the law and regulations authorized; but I assume that the Senator from Delaware, who had charge of the case, found that he had that much more money than he was authorized by the regulations to keep on hand. Any other rule, it occurs to me, than that which the committee have adopted, would simply make the Government an insurer for every postmaster in the country.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. I do not think we are doing precisely the right thing in this case. I have in my hand the report made by the House committee, containing all the official information there is in the case, and I do not find any place in it—perhaps I have overlooked it—where there is a claim for loss of money at all, beyond postage-stamps, except in the petition presented.

Mr. KERNAN. You will find it in the first part of the report.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. The Senator will please to understand me. I am speaking of the official documents in the case filed in the Post-Office Department. There is here a sworn statement of the postmaster, in which is given at considerable length and with much particularity, a statement of the circumstances under which the robbery took place, and the amount and value of the stamps stolen, but not one word is said in that sworn statement with regard to the loss of the money unless I have overlooked it; and in the report of the special agent sent by the Post-Office Department to investigate the matter the same statement in regard to the loss of postage-stamps is given, but nothing whatever is said in regard to the loss of money, and the only places in which the loss of money is alluded to at all are in the petition presented by the postmaster and in the report of the House committee, and there is no evidence at all sustaining either that allegation of the petition or that allegation of the House committee. Now, unless it can be pointed out in some of the official documents, either the sworn statement of the postmaster himself or in the report made by the special agent sent to investigate the matter, that some money was stolen, I repeat I think we are going rather too fast in making the allowance of it.

Mr. MAXEY. This is a very important precedent.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Allow me further. It breaks down also, as I understand, what has been a traditionary rule in the Post-Office Committee, a rule which I found there when I became a member of it four years ago, and which I think never has been broken until now. If we break it up now, we shall have to establish a new rule.

Mr. MAXEY. I think it is a rule of the greatest importance and in the interest of the Government for safety, and, in order to know hereafter what we are to do, I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

Mr. CONKLING. I ask the Senator to withdraw that call for a moment. I suppose the Senator would not like a bill of this magnitude to break up the Senate for the lack of a quorum when there are only three or four remaining bills; and, as bearing upon that, I want to say a word or two.

My honorable friend from Iowa [Mr. KIRKWOOD] says, if I understand him, that he has been looking at the evidence, as it appears in this report, and does not find in the official papers evidence to establish a particular fact. I shall decline to look at that evidence myself for this purpose, although I have read the House report, because when a committee find a fact, particularly a fact relating to dollars and cents within the limits of $90, we cannot believe the finding of the committee, without going behind and investigating the evidence to see whether the committee falsely asserted it or not, it introduces principles into legislation, which will certainly be very inconvenient at half after ten at night so near the end of this session; indeed I think life would be too short to conduct proceedings in that way. Therefore I shall say nothing about that.

One Senator spoke of an immemorial usage in the Post-Office Committee. Now, I ask any Senator to put his hand in this report, or anywhere else, upon any fact which shows that this man had of these postal funds more money, one cent more, than the law authorized and required him to have. Until that is done, I submit it is very idle to talk about a usage of the Post-Office Committee, which usage is not to allow for money had by the party in possession in excess of that which the law warranted his having. Is there any pretense of that in this case? If there is not, what is the foundation for this talk about an immemorial usage in the Post-Office Committee, in the case of a bill which has come from the Post-Office Committee of the House, that has existed just as long as this committee has, and which has had the same usage and the same rule, as I have a right to say, because they have concurred in the same bills on this subject? Now, by what sort of assumption is it that the committee have violated this rule and we are violating it when there is no evidence of it, but the proof is the other way?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Upon the question of agreeing to the amendment the Senator from Texas demands the yeas and nays.

Mr. KIRKWOOD. Mr. President, I do not know this man at all; I do not know anything connected with this case, except what appears in the House report. The Senator from New York says that when the committee of the House make an allegation in a report made by them in regard to a sum of $90, it is of questionable propriety to investigate whether or not there is any evidence to support the report they make. Now, I call attention to this peculiarity in this case: The postmaster himself made, under oath to the Post-Office Department, a statement concerning this loss and the circumstances attending it. In that sworn statement he does not say one word in regard to the loss of money, unless I have overlooked it. The Post-Office Department sent a special agent to the place where the loss occurred to investigate the matter, and he gives a report of the loss, in which he does not say one word in regard to the loss of money. When the postmaster files his petition here, upon which the action of the other House is based, and upon which our action is based, there and then, for the first time, he alleges the loss of this $90 in money. There is no evidence whatever of the loss except the statement contained in his memorial, which the House committee adopted as evidence, I suppose. That is all there is of the case. The man himself made his sworn statement as to his loss and did not mention the money; the special agent of the Post-Office Department made his investigation and his report, and did not mention the money. I suppose the report of the House committee is based, as all reports should be based, upon the evidence, and the evidence is submitted with that report, and the evidence does not contain a single item upon which that part of their report is based.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas demands the yeas and nays on the question of agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. MAXEY. I care nothing in the world about this case because the difference in amount is very slight between the Senate committee and the House, but I do not want a rule established with respect to the reports we shall make hereafter for the consideration of the Senate, which I believe to be a dangerous rule. That is all. I believe the rule we have established is right, and I believe that the amendment is right, and, therefore, I cannot let its rejection go as a precedent for any future action.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I think we ought to take issue upon this as being dangerous in principle. We find in the petition presented by the postmaster himself, that it was money received from the sales of postage-stamps, and he has not further stated that that was retained by him to meet money orders.

Mr. CONKLING. But the committee expressly find the fact; and this unlettered old man in his petition which he drew, knowing no such distinction, simply set forth the fact that he had the money. The committee find, not only that he had the money, but they find that it was postal funds expressly, and now, because he does not say anything about it one way or the other in his petition, we are asked to find that the committee had no foundation for its finding and that we ought affirmatively to reverse it in order to mulct this old man in $90.

Mr. SAULSBURY. All I want to do is to justify the action of the committee of which I am a member. Acting on the petition itself, there was nothing to show the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-roads that a single dollar of this money was retained for money-order funds, but that it was money that he had possession of from the sale of postage-stamps. If it had been appropriated to money-order funds, if it had been set apart for that purpose, it would be according to the rule to pay him, and, if he had so affirmed in his petition, the committee would so have found; but we find from his own declaration, not that it was postal-order money, but that it was money received from the sale of postage-stamps, and so we have followed the rule which has governed the committee all the time. So far as this case is concerned, I do not care a fig about it, provided the Senate is in possession of the facts which governed the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the question. On agreeing to this amendment, the Senator from Texas demands the yeas and nays.

Mr. MAXEY. I have accomplished the object I had in view. I do not want this to act as a precedent. I am not in charge of the bill, and so far as the call for the yeas and nays is concerned I leave it to the committeeman having charge of the bill. I only wanted to put myself right on the record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas demand the yeas and nays?

Mr. MAXEY. I do not demand them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The demand is withdrawn.

Mr. BAILEY. I ask for the yeas and nays, and for this reason: I understand the facts to be that in the application made by this postmaster, Templeton, to the Post-Office Department and in the statement he made to the Post-Office Department, he nowhere said that he lost any money by this burglary. An agent of the Pest-Office Department was sent out to investigate the facts, and in his investigation returned to the Postmaster-General he makes no mention of postal money-order funds, and there is no evidence whatever, as the Senator from Iowa states, of the loss of money, except the petition which is filed by the applicant for relief.

Mr. KERNAN. The Senator from Tennessee will allow me to correct him. The Post-Office agent does find that the burglars took from this safe all the money in it, being about two thousand dollars, including the post-office money.

Mr. BAILEY. Not $2,000 of post-office money.

Mr. KERNAN. No; everybody's moneys.

Mr. BAILEY. But he makes no mention of money that belonged to the Post-Office Department held by this man as postmaster. I understand, moreover, that none of this money appears anywhere to have belonged to the money-order department of the Post-Office, but the applicant states that it was money which arose from the sale of stamps. If these facts be true, as stated by the Senator from Iowa, it seems to me that the amendment offered by the Post-Office Committee is correct.

Mr. CONKLING. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. CONKLING. Shall I understand the Senator to mean that the fact that this money, $90, was derived from the sale of stamps, bears at all upon the question whether it had come to be postal funds or not? If the Senator will allow me to put my question in one other form, he may understand it much better.

Mr. BAILEY. I understand the Senator.

Mr. CONKLING. Is it not true that the postal funds held in the Post-Office are just such funds, just so derived, to wit, from the sale of stamps, which in place of forwarding to the Post-Office Department or to the depository, he holds up to a certain amount to meet the money orders?

Mr. BAILEY. I say that during the four years I have been a member of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads of the Senate, the rule adopted by that committee, and that has been uniformly acted upon by the Senate, has been not to make any allowance for moneys which are lost and which arose from the sale of stamps. It has been the universal rule, and for the reason among others that the postmaster has an interest in that money; it is his own money in a sense; it does not belong absolutely and exclusively to the Government, but it belongs in part to himself; nor is he required to keep it in the post-office.

I understand, moreover, that there is no evidence whatever, except his own petition, that one dollar of money that belonged to the Post-Office was taken away from him upon that occasion. The Senator from New York speaks of a report. What report? Certainly the Senator from New York does not speak of a report from a committee of this body. He speaks of a report made by a committee of the House, of the other branch of Congress. I understand the very reason for submitting a measure which has been adopted by the House of Representatives to a committee of the Senate is that the Senate may be informed through its own instrumentalities, through its own agencies, in regard to the facts, and yet he speaks of the report of the committee. What committee? The report of the committee of the Senate? Not at all. There is no such report from the committee of the Senate, as I understand. It is a report from another body. The Senate certainly does not look to the reports of committees of the House of Representatives, not adopted by the committees of this body, for information in regard to facts. It looks to its own agencies, to its own servants, to its own methods, and to the persons that the Senate itself intrusts with the duty of making investigations.

I think it is hardly just to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads for the Senate to disregard the testimony of the applicant himself, to disregard the report of the detective appointed by the Post-Office Department, to disregard the report of a committee of the Senate, and to fall back upon a report made by a committee of the House, without any evidence whatever, except the petition of the applicant, upon which that report is based.

It is hardly fair to this committee, it is hardly treating it, as it seems to me, justly, to disregard the report of its own committee and to look to a report made by a committee of another body, based upon no evidence whatever, and reverse a report made unanimously by a committee of the Senate. I submit whether that is fair or just to the Senate's own committee, whether it should be rebuked in that way, and rebuked why? Simply because an amendment to this bill may force it to be carried back to the House. Are you to administer that sort of chastisement to your own committees? Are you to tell them that they must disregard the evidence that is before them and rely alone on a House report; that they shall adopt it, or, if they do not adopt it, that the Senate shall adopt it?

I want the Senate to understand this question before it shall act on this matter, for it seems to me that if the action of the Senate shall be based upon a report made by a House committee, hereafter your committees will be very tender indeed upon questions of this kind when Senators come in and undertake to rebuke them for their action and ask the Senate to rebuke them for their action. The Senate committees will themselves be a little disinclined to make a report upon the facts and to act upon the rules which have uniformly governed that committee and the Senate itself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, on which the Senator from Texas demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I desire to say that there is no proof that this office was a money-order office.

Mr. CONKLING. Is there any proof to the contrary?

Mr. SAULSBURY. We are not to assume that was the case unless it is so affirmed either in the petition itself or in some proof laid before us. The report of the House committee speaks of this money as postal funds. Now, postal funds are such funds as arise from box rents and from the sale of postage-stamps; but there is not a single asseveration here, either in the petition of the petitioner himself, in the report of the House committee, or by any proof furnished to this committee, that one dollar of this was postal-money-order funds. It was, on the contrary, expressly declared to be, in the petition itself, proceeds of postage-stamps, which had been previously sold, and there never has been a case since I have been a member of that committee, to my knowledge, where we have ever allowed a dollar for the proceeds of the sales of postage-stamps, unless it was the proceeds of sales of postage-stamps retained in a money-order office as money-order funds.

Again, there is nothing to show that one dollar of this money which is said to have been lost was kept separate and distinct from the money of the store in which the post-office was situated. There was a loss of some two thousand dollars, but there is nothing to show that the postmaster kept the post-office money separate and distinct from the other money which he lost. So that if the Senate now reverse the action of the committee, if they say that the amendment of the committee is wrong, then we have nothing to guide us in the future in our action in examining these cases. It is true the amount is but small, and the Government could well afford to give any man $90 who was poor and needy perhaps. We have thrown away thousands upon objects less meritorious, perhaps, than it would be to give this man $90; but it reverses the whole action of that committee and leaves us without anything to guide our action hereafter.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. I wish to ask the Senator upon what evidence does it appear that any loss was sustained at all?

Mr. SAULSBURY. Nothing in the world as to the money except the statement of the postmaster himself. The report from the Post-Office Department does not show, we have nothing from the Department to show, that there was any money lost. There is nothing to show it except the statement of the applicant himself.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. How is it in respect to the stamps?

Mr. SAULSBURY. As to the stamps, we have proof from the Post-Office Department that they were lost—a detailed statement of the character and numbers of the stamps.

Mr. McDONALD. Is there any evidence that the stamps were lost? The Post-Office Department furnished evidence that there were stamps in the office, but no evidence that the stamps were stolen.

Mr. SAULSBURY. An agent was sent out from the Post-Office Department on notification that there had been a robbery. He made report of the fact that there had been a robbery. The account with the Post-Office shows that this gentleman had in his possession a certain amount of postage-stamps.

Mr. McDONALD. Which might have been stolen. The fact that they were stolen and the amount stolen rests, as I understand, on the statement of the postmaster.

Mr. HOAR. The robbery was witnessed by two persons.

Mr. McDONALD. The same statement also covers the funds, so that the evidence of the robbery of the postage-stamps is precisely of the same character, so far as I can see, as that which proves that there was a certain amount of postal money stolen. The Post-Office Department had no account of the amount of postal money.

Mr. SAULSBURY. But the Post-Office Department knows about the amount of postage-stamps sold per day, per week, or per month at the respective post-offices, and reports are required, and the Post-Office Department can form an estimate as to the amount of postage-stamps on hand at any particular post-office at any particular day, drawn from the previous transactions of the Department with the particular office.

Mr. McDONALD. Suppose the postmaster had taken himself the amount of postage-stamps which were taken and had charged it as the result of a robbery, is there any evidence furnished by the Post-Office Department on that point any more than as to the amount of money he had in his safe and which was taken at the same time?

Mr. SAULSBURY. If stamps to the amount of $100 were taken the Post-Office Department could not know assuredly from actual observation that they were taken; but the Department could arrive at the conclusion that they were stolen from the fact that, according to the previous transactions of that office, there ought to have been about that amount of postage-stamps on hand at that time. Of course the Post-Office Department could not say from the knowledge the Postmaster-General possesses that they were actually stolen; but it can arrive at the conclusion that that is true from the known character of the office and the known amount of stamps.

Mr. McDONALD. And the known character of the office that the amount was taken; and therefore, as I understand, it comes back to the same question that you have just as much evidence that the money was taken out of the safe as you have that the stamps were taken out of the safe.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I will state to the Senator from Indiana that I am not making any point as to whether there was money stolen or not. I am only saying that if there was money arising from the sale of postage-stamps, it was the duty of the postmaster to protect it. He had converted the property of the Government into funds, and he could have kept them in his pocket, or deposited them in a bank, or done anything he pleased with them. They had become his property and he was responsible to the Government for it, having converted the property of the Government into money.

Mr. McDONALD. Another question. Did the Post-Office Committee have before them at the time this House bill was examined anything except the report of the House committee upon the question?

Mr. SAULSBURY. We had a report from the Post-Office Department.

Mr. McDONALD. Was that report incorporated in the report made by the committee of the House of Representatives?

Mr. SAULSBURY. We had one which was sent in manuscript to our committee, I think.

Mr. KERNAN. Was not that the same one in which the agent reported that there had been a robbery and $2,000 taken out of the safe and this post-office money with it? It was all in the same report.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not remember the details of that report. The report was before the committee in manuscript, which was furnished from the Post-Office Department on our call, not furnished by the House of Representatives, but it came to us in response to the call of our committee.

Mr. KERNAN. The Senator ought to be able to tell me whether the letter which I have here was not before the committee:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THIRD ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., January 31, 1881.

SIR: Referring to my letter of the 20th instant, in relation to the robbery of the post-office at Millerton, New York, on the 3d of August, 1880, I have the honor to inclose you copy of the report of Post-Office Inspector B. K. Sharretts, who has investigated the matter.

Very respectfully, &c.,

A. D. HAZEN,
Third Assistant Postmaster-General.

Hon. J. W. STONE,
Of Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads,
House of Representatives.

I want to know if that was the same man who sent the letter to the Senate?

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not remember whether it was the Postmaster-General himself or one of his subordinates, but it was sent to our committee within the last ten days in manuscript, in response to a call made by our committee. As to whether he copied this from the report of January 31 or not I do not know.

Mr. KERNAN. I assume that it was the same.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I do not know on what ground the Senator from New York could have made any such assumption.

Mr. KERNAN. I made it on this ground: The committee of the House called on the Postmaster-General, as it appears, and the Third Assistant Postmaster-General addressed a communication, inclosing a report of the inspector who had investigated this matter.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. President, we have been talking an hour about a question of $90. I hope we shall have a vote on the question and stop debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment, upon which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. HOAR. I hope theSenate will give unanimous consent to withdraw the request for the yeas and nays, and allow the question to be taken without a count.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to withdrawing the demand for the yeas and nays?

Mr. BAILEY. I object, for the reason that the matter is of importance.

Mr. HOAR. I do not think the Senator understands the request. My request is that there be unanimous consent to withdraw the call for the yeas and nays and take this question by the sound, when probably there will be no count required. Any Senator who desires that any further business shall be transacted to-night will see the consequences of insisting on the call.

Mr. BAILEY. I withdraw the call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to withdrawing the order for the yeas and nays? The Chair hears none. The order is withdrawn. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the amendment reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads?

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is not the bill (S. No. 2190) for the relief of John H. Templeton a Senate bill of the same character, and ought it not to be indefinitely postponed? I call the attention of the Senator from Delaware to it.

Mr. SAULSBURY. It is precisely the same bill. The House sent over the bill we have just acted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, Senate bill No. 2190 will be indefinitely postponed. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

DAVID W. BELL.

The bill (H. R. No. 5832) for the relief of David W. Bell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the proper accounting officer of the Post-Office Department to credit David W. Bell, postmaster at Oxford, Michigan, with $363.68 in his account as postmaster with the Department, that being the amount of postal money and postage-stamps stolen from the post-office on the night of the 23d of March, 1880.

Mr. McDONALD. Is there a report in that case?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a report.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

IMPRESSMENTS IN NAVAL SERVICE.

The bill (H. R. No. 2437) for the relief of several persons impressed into the United States naval service was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides for payment to the several persons comprising the crews of the steamers Champion Nos. 3 and 5, or their legal representatives, for the time they were each held as prisoners of war, including the necessary time it took them to reach their homes after their release, at the same rate of pay per month they were each receiving at the time they ware captured; also, for commutation of rations for same time.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to have some explanation of a bill which pays captives a sum of money.

Mr. JONES, of Florida. This is a House bill. A bill of a like character was reported by the Senate committee and the report made by myself from the Committee on Naval Affairs, setting forth the facts of this case. I think I can give the essential facts in a much shorter time than the report can be read.

These claims grew out of the destruction of two steamboats which were employed by the Government of the United States during the war. They were engaged in the transportation of men and munitions of war on the Lower Mississippi under a contract with the Navy Department, and while in that service Admiral Porter determined to go with an expedition up Red River, and impressed those steamers into that service. They went up Red River, men and all, and when they were rather high up the river some batteries were constructed below, and on their return they were destroyed. Nearly all the lives on both vessels were lost. The owners of the boats, under a law on the statute-book, have been paid for the vessels. A few of the survivors were captured and taken prisoners, and the object of this bill is to provide for paying to them or their heirs the wages they were entitled to under the contract with the Government during the period of their captivity.

Mr. HOAR. Captured by the rebels?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Yes. The military branch of the public service has a law or regulation which enables them to do this thing without any action on the part of Congress, but it seems that the Navy Department has not; and in like cases the Quartermaster's Department has paid claims of this description without any special warrant or authority from Congress, but it was found by the accounting officers of the Treasury that this very just relief cannot be granted without an act of Congress. The bill has passed the House, came to the Naval Committee, and is reported unanimously.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Florida to the word "or" in line 10. The Chair is of opinion that it should have been "of." It reads, "at the same rate or pay per month."

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I suppose that can be corrected as a clerical error.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Florida if he did not on the 19th of March, 1880, report a precisely similar bill, a Senate bill, order of business No. 426, which ought to be indefinitely postponed?

Mr. JONES, of Florida. Yes; and I ask that that bill be indefinitely postponed, Senate bill No. 826, for the relief of several persons impressed into the United States naval service.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the bill will be indefinitely postponed. The Chair hears no objection.

THOMAS SNELL.

The bill (H. R. No. 6479) for the relief of Thomas Snell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to release, cancel, and satisfy a judgment against Snell as surety for a quartermaster.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

REGISTRATION OF TRADE-MARKS.

The bill (H. R. No. 5088) to authorize the registration of trade-marks and protect the same was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HIRAM JOHNSON AND OTHERS.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the Senate to consider at this time House bill No. 6033, which was passed over without prejudice some two or three days ago.

The Chief Clerk read the title of the bill (H. R. No. 6033) to pay Hiram Johnson and other persons herein named the several sums of money herein specified, being the surplus of a military assessment paid by them and accounted for to the United States in excess of the amount required for the indemnity for which it was levied and collected.

Mr. HOAR. That bill cannot go through in the absence of a quorum of the Senate. It is a very objectionable bill in principle. I shall have to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts objects to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I desire to say that I have no wish to have the bill acted upon in the absence of a quorum, if I have the power and right to do so; but I must insist upon taking the judgment of the Senate upon the merits of this bill, and in order that I may do so, I move to postpone the pending order for the purpose of moving to proceed to the consideration of this bill. I am willing to say that if the Senate will postpone the prior orders and take the bill up, so that it leaves it for us to proceed with it to-morrow morning, I have no desire to press it to a vote to-night. I am perfectly willing for every Senator to be in his seat, would prefer to have them all here, and we can proceed with its consideration then; but I want to leave it in a position that I can be sure to have consideration of it to-morrow.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I have no opinion about this bill myself except that it is apparent that it requires explanation and raises a grave question; but I know that several Senators when it came up the other day expressed a very decided interest in having it discussed and expressed doubts about the propriety of the bill. Therefore I cannot consent that it shall be taken up in their absence when the seats of the Senate are vacant; but I say to the Senator from Tennessee that if a majority of the Senate desire to take it up to-morrow morning, his motion will be in order at the close of the morning business.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator does not quite understand me. I desire to postpone all prior orders and to take up the bill to-night, and I shall not insist upon proceeding with its consideration, but I want it to have the advantage of its being the unfinished business so that I shall not be subject to be postponed by a single objection to-morrow morning. I move to postpone the present and all prior orders, and then I shall move to proceed with the consideration of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. GARLAND in the chair.) The Senator from Tennessee moves to postpone the present and all prior orders with a view of proceeding to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

A division was called for.

Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw the motion for the present, but I give notice that I will make the motion to-morrow morning when there is a full Senate, and I shall insist upon a vote on it.

CLAIMS FOR QUARTERMASTERS' STORES.

Mr. McDONALD. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill No. 1926. It is a very short bill.

The bill (S. No. 1926) relating to quartermasters' stores furnished to the forces of Major-General Lewis Wallace during the Morgan raid through Indiana and Ohio was read.

Mr. HOAR. It seems to me that the bill ought not to be passed without explanation.

Mr. McDONALD. The purpose of this bill is simply to enable those claimants who have presented their claims to come forward with proofs in support of their claims, without the production of the quartermasters' receipts, upon showing either that a receipt was not given at the time or that it has been lost.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator from Massachusetts will remember that this bill was before the Committee on Claims, and it is simply to place the claimants for property taken in Indiana upon the same footing that they were in the other States.

Mr. McDONALD. It is reported by the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRELL. It simply enables the Quartermaster-General to take the same kind of proof from claimants in Indiana that he takes from claimants in other States under the act of July 4, 1864. They are acting under a special law which differs from the act of July 4, 1864.

Mr. HOAR. The objection is withdrawn.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. McDONALD. I propose to amend this so as to save all question and to remove any possible objection by adding:

But nothing herein shall in any manner repeal or affect the statute of limitations in relation to such claims.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before putting the motion the Chair will lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (S. No. 2022) in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri.

The motion was agreed to; and (at eleven o'clock and twenty-two minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, March 1, 1881.

The House met at eleven o'clock a. m. Prayer by Rev. DAVID WILLS, chaplain United States Army.

The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. COVERT. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the call of committees for reports, and the morning hour will begin at thirty minutes past eleven.

Mr. McMAHON. I ask consent to report from the Committee on Appropriations the deficiency appropriation bill for printing and recommitting.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. McMAHON, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. No. 7251) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, and for prior years, and for those certified as due by the accounting officers of the Treasury, in accordance with section 4 of the act of June 14, 1878, heretofore paid from permanent appropriations, and for other purposes; which was read a first and second time, ordered to be printed, and recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. COVERT. By instructions of the Committee on Agriculture, I now report back to the House the bill (H. R. No. 7099) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, with the Senate amendments thereto, with a recommendation that the amendments of the Senate be concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon concurring in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. BREWER. I ask for the reading of the report, so as to show what the amendments of the Senate are.

The SPEAKER. No report is required in this case. The bill, with the Senate amendments, is reported back from the Committee on Agriculture, with the recommendation that the amendments of the Senate be concurred in by the House.

Mr. BREWER. Let the amendments be read.

Mr. REED. Perhaps the gentleman from New York [Mr. COVERT] can state what the amendments are.

Mr. ATKINS. I ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. COVERT] to make an explanation to the House of the amendments.

The SPEAKER. They will be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read.

Mr. BREWER. I would like to hear some explanation of those amendments.

Mr. COVERT. The amendments adopted by the Senate are comparatively few, and the majority of them are of a purely formal character. The Senate has at the end of each paragraph or section, where appropriations were made, carried out the sum total of the appropriations, so that the various amounts appropriated for the several divisions of the Department are separately shown. The annual salary of the Commissioner is increased by the action of the Senate from $3,500 to $4,000. The House had adopted as a rule to govern the distribution of seeds and plants that three-fourths of all seeds should, upon their request, be supplied to Senators and Representatives for distribution among their agricultural constituents, the balance to be distributed by the Commissioner. The Senate has amended this paragraph by striking out the words "three fourths" and inserting the words "one-half," thus giving to Senators and members of the House one-half of all seeds and plants for distribution. They have also stricken out "agricultural" before the word "constituents," in the paragraph referred to, leaving the matter of distribution, so far as the character of the recipients is concerned, to the judgment of Senators and Representatives. They further amend by providing that seeds remaing uncalled for at the end of the fiscal year shall be distributed by the Commissioner.

By the action of the Senate an appropriation of $5,000 is made to complete the testing by scientific examination of the textile strength and felting capacity of the different wools and animal fibers collected at the recent international exposition held at Philadelphia.

In lieu of the appropriation of $10,000 made by the House for investigating the diseases of domesticated animals, the Senate has appropriated $25,000, to be available immediately; and of this sum $15,000 is directed to be devoted to the investigation of the disease of pleuro-pneumonia among cattle. The House bill appropriated $15,000 for the investigation as to insects injurious to agriculture. The Senate amendment increases this amount to $25,000. By the action of the Senate the appropriation for the erection of a building for the display of agricultural implements is made immediately available. The Senate amendments increase the amount appropriated by the House bill $25,500.

The House Committee on Agriculture have carefully considered all these amendments of the Senate and have instructed me to ask the concurrence of the House in all of them. I now do so, and trust the amendments as a whole will be promptly concurred in.

The amendments of the Senate were concurred in.

Mr. COVERT moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

DISTRICT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. COBB. I submit a report from a conference committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7035) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 5, 36, 37, 38, and 59.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 7, 8, 10, 21, 22, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 51, 52, 61, 64, and 65.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$40,940;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$20,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$96,500;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: On page 18 of the bill, at the end of line 10, after the word "Treasury," insert the following: "and with his action on the same to be printed in the general Book of Estimates;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the committee have been unable to agree on the following amendments: numbered 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 49, 50, 60, 63, and 66.

T. R. COBB,
JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
FRANK HISCOCK,
Managers on the part of the House.
R. E. WITHERS,
ISHAM G. HARRIS,
WILLIAM WINDOM,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now read the statement accompanying the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the District of Columbia appropriation bill respectfully submit the following detailed statement in explanation of the report agreed upon by the conference committee.

The effect of the action recommended by the committee on the Senate amendments will be, if ratified by the two Houses, as follows:

On amendments 1 and 2, strikes out proposed increase of appropriation for dredging James Creek, from $5,000 to $10,000.

On amendments 4, 5, and 6, increases the salaries of three watchmen from $180 to $240 each, and also increases the appropriation for miscellaneous items and contingent expenses of the Washington Asylum from $30,000 to $34,000.

On amendment 7, increases appropriation for the new workhouse from $3,500 to $4,500.

On amendment 8, increases the appropriation for the almshouse from $3,000 to $3,700.

On amendment 10, strikes out reference to section 4843 as prescribing who are admissible to the Government Hospital for the Insane.

On amendments 21 and 22, increases the sum for relief of the poor from $10,000 to $15,000, and provides that the compensation to physicians to the poor shall not exceed $50 per month.

On amendment 23, inserts the following:

"And hereafter the engineer commissioner shall be entitled to receive such compensation, in addition to his Army pay and allowances, as will make his compensation equal to $5,000 per annum, and a sum sufficient to pay said additional compensation is hereby appropriated."

On amendments 36 and 37, strikes out proposed increase of a clerk's salary from $1,200, to $1,400.

On amendments 38, 39, and 40, makes the appropriation for current work on streets, alleys, and avenues $20,000 instead of $25,000 and increases the sum for current repairs to county roads from $10,000 to $20,000.

On amendments 41, 42, and 43, the first is merely verbal, the second and third increases the sum for erecting lamps from $500 to $1,000.

On amendment 44, provides for compensation of a justice of the peace while acting as police judge not exceeding $300.

On amendments 45, 46, 47, and 48, provides for erecting four instead of three school-houses and increases the appropriation for that purpose from $100,000 to $104,000.

On amendments 51 and 52, provides as follows:

For repairs to the Georgetown market-house, $3,000.

For removal of bodies from Holmead's cemetery, (when requested by the relatives,) $1,000.

On amendment 59, strikes out proposed increase of sum for contingent expenses from $15,000 to $20,000.

On amendments 61 and 62, regulates the manner of transmitting to Congress the estimates for the expenses of the District of Columbia.

On amendments 64 and 65, provides for the sale by the commissioners of certain real estate belonging to the District, and that the proceeds may be used for the erection of two new police station-houses in Washington and an engine-house in Georgetown, and also inserts the following:

"SEC. 4. That the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, in charge of public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia, be, and is hereby, authorized to sell and convey, by good and sufficient deed, to each of the owners of lot 1, square 184; lot 5, square 185; lots 5, 6, and 7, square 198; lot 12, square 199, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, such portion of the ground immediately adjoining the front of said lots, or either of them, as will make the angles at the four corners of Sixteenth and K streets, northwest, right angles, upon payment into the Treasury of the United States by said owners, or each of them, of an amount for the number of feet in each lot so to be conveyed at the rate the same may be appraised by three disinterested freeholders resident of the city of Washington, to be selected and sworn by said Chief of Engineers impartially to appraise said real estate at the true value thereof in money; and upon said sale, the owners of said lots respectively shall pay into the Treasury of the United States, for the erection of a high-school building in the city of Washington, one-third of said purchase-money, and the remainder thereof, with interest, in one year from the date of sale. No conveyance shall be made until all the purchase-money is paid: Provided, That said Chief of Engineers shall not sell or convey one portion or any part of said real estate unless all the same is sold or conveyed."

On amendments 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 49, 50, 60, 63, and 66, leaves them in the same attitude as when non-concurred in by the House.

T. R. COBB,
JO. C. S. BLACKBURN,
FRANK HISCOCK,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. COBB. I move the adoption of the report.

The conference report was adopted.

Mr. COBB moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. COBB. I now move the House further insist on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, and ask for a further conference on the disagreeing votes between the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints, as managers of said conference on the part of the House, Mr. COBB, Mr. BLACKBURN, and Mr. HISCOCK.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BAKER. I move to take from the Speaker's table the message from the Senate in reference to the bill (H. R. No. 6529) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes; and further insist on its non-concurrence in the amendments of the Senate, and agree to the further conference asked on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as managers of said conference Mr. BAKER, Mr. CLYMER, and Mr. WELLS.

LOUISIANA CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a question of the highest privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to present a report from the Committee on Elections in reference to the contested-election cases against Mr. ACKLEN. I ask that the resolutions be read.

Mr. ROBESON. I call for the reading of the report. Is there a report accompanying this case?

Mr. SPRINGER. There is.

Mr. ROBESON. Then I hope it will be read, both the report and resolutions.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report and resolutions.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Elections, to whom was referred the contested-election cases of W. B. Merchant vs. J. H. Acklen and Robert O. Herbert vs. J. H. Acklen, of the third congressional district of the State of Louisiana, respectfully beg leave to report:

That the notices of contest and answers thereto were referred to the Committee on Elections and filed with the clerk of said committee on the 13th day of April, 1879. Evidence taken in the above cases was printed on the 15th day of January, 1880, and copies of the same were sent to the contestants, as required by the rules of the committee, by the clerk of said committee with an official notice to prepare briefs within twenty days from the 25th day of January, 1880, to which no attention was given by said contestants.

On the 21st day of May, 1880, the clerk of the committee was directed by resolution to telegraph to Messrs. Merchant and Herbert to appear before the committee, either in person or by attorney, on the 29th day of May, 1880, and show cause why their cases should not be dismissed on account of the failure to file briefs as directed. No attention was given to these dispatches, and the parties neither appeared in person nor by attorneys, as notified.

The said contestants were again notified by registered letters on the 22d day of December, 1880, to appear before the Committee on Elections on the 11th day of January, 1881, and show cause why the cases should not be dismissed; and to this no reply was made. We therefore respectfully recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That Joseph H. Acklen was duly elected and is entitled to a seat in this House as a Representative in the Forty-sixth Congress from the third congressional district of the State of Louisiana.

Resolved, That Robert O. Herbert and W. B. Merchant have leave to withdraw their papers of contest in this case.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Mr. SPRINGER. This is a unanimous report from the Committee on Elections, and I move the previous question upon its adoption.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions reported from the Committee on Elections.

The resolutions were agreed to.

Mr. SPRINGER moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolutions were agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WARNER. I call for the regular order of business. I recognize the importance of getting to business on the Speaker's table. The funding bill is a measure of the highest public importance; and while that is blocked by filibustering, I shall insist upon the regular order to the exclusion of everything not privileged.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the morning hour for the call of committees.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to dispense with the morning hour to-day.

The motion was not agreed to.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

By unanimous consent, leave to print remarks in the RECORD in reference to the pension bill was granted to Mr. MYERS; also, to Mr. FINLEY and to Mr. SCALES on the interstate-commerce bill. [See Appendix.]

MORNING HOUR.

The SPEAKER. The House having refused to dispense with the morning hour, the regular order of business being demanded, the Chair will now call the committees for reports.

REFUNDMENT OF TAXES—PENALTIES, ETC.

Mr. HERBERT, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported, as a substitute for House bill No. 2062, a bill (H. R. No. 7252) to amend and re-enact section 3220 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, so as to provide for the payment of judgments obtained under it as judgments of the Court of Claims are now paid; which was read a first and second time, referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE OF A BILL.

On motion of Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania, the Committee on Accounts was discharged from the further consideration of the claim of John G. Doran, for reimbursement of money expended by him in the preparation of indexes to House printed matter; and the same was referred to the Committee on Claims, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

M. C. FISHER.

Mr. FRYE, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported, as a substitute for House bill No. 4854, a bill (H. R. No. 7253) for the relief of M. C. Fisher; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FRYE. I am authorized by the Committee on Ways and Means to ask unanimous consent to pass this bill at this time. There can be no objection to it.

The SPEAKER. The morning hour has expired. The regular order being demanded by the gentleman from Ohio, the Chair cannot recognize at this time the request for unanimous consent.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. I move that the House now proceed to business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. ROBESON. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBESON. The unfinished business is now pending, I believe.

The question of appeal from the Speaker's decision was passed upon last night. The question of consideration raised by the gentleman from Kentucky is still undecided.

The SPEAKER. Practically there is no question of consideration presented at this time.

Mr. ROBESON. When we adjourned on yesterday the House had just decided, in reference to the Speaker's ruling, that the motion of the gentleman was in order and should stand as the judgment of the House. That now stands as the judgment of this House. The gentleman's motion is in order, and remains, therefore, as unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. That character of motion must be made on each day, and can only be regulated each day for itself. It does not come over as unfinished business.

Mr. PRICE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Clerk to read from the records of the debates of yesterday in reference to a ruling of the Speaker.

The Clerk read as follows:

The question of consideration is not precluded——

Mr. GILLETTE. Does that require unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. The Chair supposes the gentleman rises to a question of order or a parliamentary inquiry or something of that kind not yet developed.

Mr. GILLETTE. Then I object to the reading.

Mr. PRICE. That is upon the question now pending, the question of order; and I want to have read a ruling of the Chair made on yesterday.

Mr. GILLETTE. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made to the reading.

Mr. PRICE. But this is in reference to the ruling made by the Chair himself on yesterday, and is in continuation of the point of order raised.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can save a great deal of time by calling up the unfinished business, if that is what he wants to reach.

Mr. PRICE. I do not know that I would save much time in that way. What I sent to the desk would have been read before this time if it had been allowed.

The SPEAKER. The Chair was not allowed to have it read because the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] objected.

Mr. PRICE. How can the gentleman from Iowa object to the reading of a decision of the Chair given yesterday on the question that is before the House now?

The SPEAKER. What question does the gentleman mean? The only question before the House now is the motion of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] that the House proceed to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. PRICE. And that was antagonized by the declaration that there was unfinished business pending before the House on which the question of consideration was raised yesterday. And I want to have the decision of the Chair on that question read from the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not doubt that if the consideration of the unfinished business is demanded in the manner as it was demanded yesterday, the same right attaches.

Mr. PRICE. Then I demand it.

Mr. CARLISLE. And I raise the question of consideration on the unfinished business.

Mr. HASKELL addressed the Chair.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. HASKELL. I do not rise to debate. But if in order, I move to recommit the apportionment bill to the committee.

Mr. PRICE. With instructions to strike out the fifth section.

The SPEAKER. That bill is not yet before the House.

Mr. HASKELL. If gentlemen wish to get rid of the unfinished business, then let them agree to recommit the apportionment bill.

Mr. COX. I did not know the gentleman from Kansas had charge of that bill. I desire to say a word as to that.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order. The Chair cannot recognize one gentleman for debate more than another.

Mr. COX. If I had the voice of my friend from Kansas [Mr. HASKELL] I could debate.

The SPEAKER. It will be time enough to debate the question as to the disposition of the apportionment bill when it is before the House; but the question of consideration comes up first.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBESON. The question of consideration, as I understand, is raised by the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE.]

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. ROBESON. I would like to know what is the effect of that question; whether the effect is merely to defeat the consideration of a particular thing, or whether it defeats the consideration of all unfinished business?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will decide that point when it arises.

Mr. ROBESON. I would rather the Chair should decide it now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair declines to decide it till it comes up.

Mr. HASKELL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. COX. And I rise to a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. COX. I desire to ask a question.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. COX. I rise to a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear it.

Mr. COX. It is whether or not the Chair will entertain the motion of the gentleman from Kansas as to the apportionment bill; and further——

The SPEAKER. The Chair will, as these points in fact arise, decide them; but he will not anticipate a point of order.

Mr. COX. One more question. I want to know if gentlemen who are urging the consideration of the apportionment bill will agree to take it up in good faith and dispose of it without obstruction and without delay.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. ROBESON. I hope the gentleman from New York will have unlimited time to state what he desires.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The Chair calls the gentleman from New York to order.

Mr. COX. And the gentleman from New York submits to the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does it with great respect to the gentleman from New York. The question is on the question of consideration raised by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] as to the unfinished business.

Mr. ROBESON. I demand a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. What question does the gentleman desire to have divided?

Mr. ROBESON. The question can be divided; can it not?

The SPEAKER. The pending question is the question of consideration.

Mr. ROBESON. I have addressed a question to the Chair, and the Chair refuses to answer me. If the question includes two propositions, I demand a division.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from New Jersey means a division of the House on the question of consideration——

Mr. ROBESON. I do not mean that.

The SPEAKER. How is it possible to divide a question of consideration?

Mr. ROBESON. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry, and I trust the Chair will listen to me.

The SPEAKER. Certainly; the Chair will listen to the gentleman.

Mr. ROBESON. I want to know if the question of consideration be decided in the negative, whether it merely defeats the coming up of the particular business which comes up first in order, or whether it has the double action of not only defeating that but of defeating something else.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is never premature in his decisions.

Mr. ROBESON. I think the Chair ought to decide that question.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. ROBESON. I beg pardon. I am pursuing with great respect an important parliamentary question. Now, if it has that effect, I desire the Chair should say so now, that I may exercise my right and demand a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not deprived of any right he possessed by the refusal of the Chair to decide a point of order not before the House. That would be in the nature of an attempt on the part of the Chair to influence the House in the conduct of its business, which would not be justifiable. The question is upon considering the bill.

Mr. ROBESON. With all due deference to the Chair——

Mr. REAGAN. I rise to make a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. REAGAN submitted the following:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House No. 7104, making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 10, 25, 122, 130, 135, and 138.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 131, 132, 133, 134, 136, and 139; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "40" and insert "30;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "66" and insert "45;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Insert after the word "dollars" the following:

"Provided, That the Secretary of War is directed to expend of the money hereby appropriated a sum not exceeding $10,000 to extinguish any claim of right held by any company or corporation to take tolls or make charges for the navigation of so much of said river as is above described: And provided further, That said claim of right shall be extinguished and released on or before the 1st day of December, 1881; and no part of this appropriation shall be expended in the improvement of said river until such claim of right is wholly extinguished and released: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be taken or held as a waiver on the part of the United States of the exclusive control of the navigation of said river relieved from any charges or tolls imposed by any company or corporation."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Insert in the list of surveys the following: "Little Red River, in Arkansas;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 101, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: After the word "without," in the fifteenth line of the amendment, insert "actual;" and strike out the last clause, so that it will read as follows:

"Such parts of the money appropriated by this act for any particular improvement requiring locks and dams as may be necessary in the prosecution of such improvement may be expended in the purchase, voluntary or by condemnation, as the case may be, of necessary sites: Provided, That such expenditures shall be under the direction of the Secretary of War: And provided further, That if the owners of such lands shall refuse to sell them at reasonable prices, then the prices to be paid shall be determined and the title and jurisdiction procured in the manner prescribed by the laws of the State in which such lands or sites are situated. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to apply the money herein appropriated for improvements, other than surveys and estimates, in carrying on the various works, as far as can be without actual detriment to the interest of the Government, by contract. Where such works cannot be done by contract without injury to the public interest, they may be prosecuted by hired labor. Where said works are done by contract, such contract shall be made after sufficient public advertisement for proposals, in such manner and form as the Secretary of War shall prescribe; and such contracts shall be made with the lowest responsible bidders, accompanied by such securities as the Secretary of War shall require, conditioned for the faithful prosecution of the work according to such contract, and for the proper payment of all liabilities incurred in the prosecution thereof for labor and material."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: Strike out "Newark," and insert "New York;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 137, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: After the word "Whiteoak," insert "Meherrin and New;" and strike out "river," and insert "rivers;" and the Senate agree to the same.

JOHN H. REAGAN,
JOHN E. KENNA,
THOMAS M. BROWNE,
Managers on the part of the House.

M. W. RANSOM,
J. T. FARLEY,
S. J. R. MCMILLAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The accompanying statement required by the rule will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The conference on the part of the House, who met in conference with the Senate committee on the river and harbor bill and agreed to the accompanying conference report, beg leave to submit in relation thereto the following detailed statement as to the effect of the recommendations of the conference committee:

This bill, as it passed the House, provided for the appropriation of $10,179,800. To this sum the Senate added by amendments $962,000. Of the one hundred and thirty-nine amendments to the bill made by the Senate, the House conferees agreed to recede from the disagreement of the House on one hundred and twenty-five; and receded from its disagreement, with amendments, on seven items. And the Senate conferees receded from seven of the Senate's amendments. The effect of which was to reduce the amount of the increases by the Senate amendments by the sum of $66,000. This leaves the aggregate amount proposed to be appropriated by the bill, as amended by the conference committee, at $11,141,800. All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN H. REAGAN,
JNO. E. KENNA,
THOMAS M. BROWNE.
Conferees on the part of the House.

Mr. REAGAN. I call the previous question.

Mr. COX. I raise the point of order that under Rule XXIX all conference reports are required to be accompanied by "a detailed statement sufficiently explicit to inform the House what effect such amendments or propositions will have upon the measures to which they relate." I make the point of order that the formal report just read, while it shows in the aggregate the additions made by the Senate to this bill, and how the aggregate is affected by the changes made in the conference, is nevertheless not such a report as the rules require, a report containing an explicit statement showing each particular proposition. For instance, Mr. Speaker, suppose this committee had added certain items not in difference between the two Houses; suppose that on certain questions where there has been no disagreement matters entirely alien to the bill have been introduced. Then I contend that the point of order lies, and that the bill must go to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. KENNA. The report meets both those questions.

Mr. COX. We cannot tell from the report whether the committee has added anything or not.

Mr. REAGAN. If the gentleman is through, I desire to say a word on the point of order. The gentleman's point is, that as to each of the one hundred and thirty-nine amendments there ought to be a detailed report stating the action upon each. The report of the conference committee states that as to one hundred and twenty-five of the Senate amendments, the House recedes from its disagreement; that as to seven of the Senate amendments, the House recedes from its disagreement, with amendments; that as to certain other amendments, the Senate recedes. The effect of this is stated to be a reduction to the extent of $66,000 in the amount proposed to be appropriated by the Senate amendments. I can conceive of no other practical information which could be desired in this detailed report.

The point is made, however, that the House cannot tell from this report but that extraneous matters have been introduced into the bill. Why, sir, the report itself precludes the possibility of any such thing, to say nothing of the known fact that no committee of conference would dare to do a thing of that kind. The report disposes of the whole one hundred and thirty-nine amendments, stating what has been done with each; and it makes no reference to any other amendment. The point is made upon a supposition which has no foundation in the bill or report, and can have none.

As I take it, the report contains what the rule contemplates should be stated to show the House by what amount the appropriations have been increased or diminished. We show the disposition of each amendment, and that the appropriations as acted upon by the conference committee are reduced by the sum of $66,000. The provision of the rule is that—

There shall accompany every such report a detailed statement sufficiently explicit to inform the House what effect such amendments or propositions will have upon the measures to which they relate.

Now, where the House has receded from the Senate amendments with amendments, where any new matter is introduced in the bill, that is explained in the conference report. It states just what has been done by the action of the committee. We have not failed to bring before the House any fact which we could bring before it and which was necessary for its action.

Mr. COX. The gentleman does not answer my question, although he admits that new matter has come into the bill—matter extraneous to the bill.

Mr. REAGAN. I have made no such admission.

Mr. COX. How can we tell from this report that that has not been done? It is an old custom; it has been done frequently; it is a vicious practice which ought to be torn up by the roots. I would like the report to show, in accordance with Rule XXIX, explicitly and in detail just how each of the amendments affects the House bill, either by reduction or increment. Here we have a bill involving ten or eleven million dollars. It goes to the Senate and $900,000 is added to it. The committee of conference, as they state, reduce the amount $66,000. The matter comes back here and the previous question is called. There may or may not be new matter in it; but we have the right to send it to the Committee of the Whole for inquiry, unless we have an explicit report, so that we may know on the call of the yeas and nays how to vote as to the final disposition of the conference report.

Mr. WARNER. And, Mr. Speaker, I submit further that the report is not sufficiently explicit to enable the House to determine whether it will agree to the increments that have been made in the Senate to certain items or the decrements that have been made to other items. The very object of such a report is to show the House explicitly the effect of the amendments, and the amendments have not even been read. The Senate amendments have never been read in this House.

Mr. MCLANE. I submit to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WARNER] that if he takes any such exception as that to the report, he is bound to indicate what particular item is not explained in the report.

Mr. WARNER. No item is explained in the report, even by number.

Mr. MCLANE. Any gentleman who has the bill before him, and will refer to it as the report is read, will find precisely what the rule requires.

Mr. WARNER. No member could follow by the bill the report as it was read. The object of the report under the rule is to furnish to the House the very information which we now require to have, and which this report does not furnish.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. Mr. Speaker, this rule requires a "detailed statement" as to the manner in which every amendment affects the bill. Here are one hundred and thirty-nine amendments. There is no "detailed statement" referring to any amendment. The word "detailed" is a plain word; it means that every item of these one hundred and thirty-nine amendments must be explained so that we may see how the bill is affected by each; but here is a loosely-worded statement dealing in generalities entirely. There is no detail about it. It is the clearest kind of a violation of the rule. It seems to me the point made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] is well taken and should be sustained.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. COX. I distinctly raise the point of order that this is not such a report as the rule requires.

The SPEAKER. That would drive the Chair to decide upon the contents of the report.

Mr. COX. Will the Chair remember that at the last session of Congress on the report of the conference committee on an appropriation bill the question was raised by the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER,] and we were compelled to sit down and write in detail the effect of the amendments.

The SPEAKER. Because the conferees had not submitted any accompanying statement.

Mr. COX. It was the first time the new rule was administered and we were compelled to go into detail as to the effect of amendments.

The SPEAKER. So far as the Chair can observe, the rule has been complied with. It is for the House to determine whether the contents of the report meet what, in the judgment of the members, the rule requires.

Mr. COX. What was the object of the rule, Mr. Speaker, but to let the House know the action in detail so we might be able to vote properly?

The SPEAKER. The House may refuse to accept the report. To vote it down is the remedy the House has if in its judgment the report is not sufficient.

Mr. ATKINS. There is nothing practical in what my friend from New York is asking; and for this reason: yesterday when the detailed statement in regard to the legislative, &c., appropriation bill was read at the Clerk's desk there were not a dozen men in the House who knew one thing about that detailed statement when it was read through by the Clerk.

Mr. COX. Because we had a great deal of confidence in the gentleman from Tennessee and his committee.

Mr. ATKINS. That may be all true, and I thank the gentleman for the confidence he may repose in us, and I suppose the same confidence may be reposed in my friend from Texas and his committee. Now, as has been very well said, if any gentleman will take up the bill and the items in the conference report and follow the bill along with the numbers in reference to which recommendations are made one way or the other, he can tell all about what has been done by the conference committee on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses. If gentlemen do not listen, however, and do not pay attention either to the conference report itself or to the detailed statement which accompanies it, why then the one is just as blank as the other.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think it is within the province of the Chair to judge as to the contents of the report. That belongs to the House. One member might think as the gentleman from New York does, that the report is not a fulfillment of the injunction of the rule, but all the rest of the House might think differently. It is, therefore, to the mind of the Chair a matter for the House to determine by recommitting the report or in some other mode reaching a judgment as to its sufficiency. As far as the Chair is able to observe the letter and spirit of the rule has been complied with in this case.

Mr. COX. I rise to another point of order. I wish to say a word in reply to the very kind admonition of my friend and neighbor from Tennessee.

Mr. McLANE. I rise to the point that that is not a point of order.

Mr. COX. Hear me through.

Mr. McLANE. I want the decision of the Chair.

Mr. COX. You can never find the point until you get to the end of the sentence.

Mr. McLANE. Sometimes the gentleman will get to the end of a sentence without having any point in it at all.

Mr. COX. That depends upon how the gentleman's intellect runs.

Mr. McLANE. I require the gentleman from New York to state his point of order.

Mr. COX. It is this; the statement was made there was new matter in this bill; and, therefore, under the rules, it must go to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. I ask my friend from Texas whether or not it is true or not true that there are matters in this bill never in difference between the two Houses.

Mr. REAGAN. There is not one thing in the bill that was not in difference between the two Houses. No item has been attached that was not in difference between the two Houses.

Mr. COX. Is there any money appropriated that was not on the bill?

Mr. REAGAN. I wish to express my astonishment that the gentleman from New York should ask such a question. He has no right to impugn the motives or action of a committee when that committee is bound by parliamentary law and common decency to obey the rules of the House.

Mr. COX. I am endeavoring now to make a point of order on which I would like to have the ruling of the Chair, and I ask the gentleman from Texas the question——

Mr. REAGAN. The gentleman has no right to make an insinuation against the action of the conference committee in his question or otherwise.

Mr. COX. I have a right to make my point of order.

Mr. REAGAN. The gentleman in making his point has no right to reflect upon me or the conference committee or to impugn our motives.

Mr. COX. I am making no insinuation against the gentleman, but I will not allow my right of debate to be restricted by any such assertions. There has been, as everybody is aware, a large sum added to this bill in the Senate. Now, there must have been items added to it, and I say, without impugning the motives or action of anybody, items added which were not in the bill when it went from the House to the Senate or to the conference committee——

Mr. McLANE. I call the gentleman to order.

The SPEAKER. If the Chair understands the point of order made by the gentleman from New York, it is that there are items in the bill which have not been acted upon by the House in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. REAGAN. Let me respond to the gentleman. I think it is right that we should have the privilege of responding to him. I have already stated, and the report shows, that we have not only not added anything to the Senate amendments to the bill, but that we have absolutely reduced the total sum $66,000 in the conference. I have stated emphatically that no new matter has been introduced.

Mr. COX. Has no matter been introduced which has not been considered in the House?

Mr. REAGAN. No matter has been introduced which is not in issue between the two Houses.

Mr. HASKELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order. There must be some method by which this matter can be gotten out of the way, so that we can go on with the apportionment bill or the funding bill, and not waste time in this way.

Mr. WARNER. There ought to be, but gentlemen on the other side seem disposed to prevent such action.

Mr. MILLS. I hope we will soon get through with this business.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York makes the point of order, as the Chair is able to understand it, that there is matter in this bill which did not originate in the House, and makes the point of order that under Rule XX of this House, although such matter be incorporated in the bill in furtherance of the original purpose of the bill, that is, for the improvement of rivers and harbors, it should have its first consideration in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. The Chair supposes that to be the point. Now, that would have been a good point if the rules had not been suspended and the bill taken from the Speaker's table and the amendments of the Senate non-concurred in. But the suspension of the rules interferes with the operation of the very rule the gentleman from New York seeks to apply here.

Mr. WARNER. I wish to make another parliamentary inquiry. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. MILLS. Let us dispose of this question.

Mr. WARNER. I have risen to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WARNER. My inquiry is, that as there are amendments in this bill incorporated by the Senate, involving hundreds of thousands of dollars, which were not included in this bill as it was reported to the House, and considered by the House in Committee of the Whole, therefore these items have not been considered by the House, in committee or otherwise. Now, I submit whether it is not in order under Rule XX to require the consideration of such amendments in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union as the rule provides?

The SPEAKER. The Chair, in response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Ohio, will state that every amendment of the Senate has been considered in the House, under a technical compliance with the rule, because they were non-concurred in, which was the action of the House upon them.

Mr. ROBINSON. In support of what the Chair has stated, I will say that the same point was up on yesterday on a question by the gentleman from Ohio, when it was proposed to suspend the rules and non-concur in the Senate amendments to this bill, and the Chair ruled that the point of order must be taken before the bill was sent to conference; and that the point of order could not be made against the conference report. In this case it is a simple repetition of the same ruling which has already been had upon other bills not only at this session of Congress but heretofore.

Mr. WARNER. But I made the point of order when the bill was sent to the committee of conference.

Mr. ROBINSON. And I say this without regard to our attitude upon the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts is undoubtedly correct as to the time the point should be made. But if the point of order had been made prior to sending the bill to the conference committee, the Chair would suggest in that event that the suspension of the rules accomplishes the same effect by taking it outside of the limitation placed upon it by the provisions of Rule XX.

Mr. ROBINSON. The rules were suspended on yesterday, and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. I understand my colleague to say that new matter has been added to this bill by the conference committee.

Mr. REAGAN. Not a dollar. There has been no matter, as I have already stated, which has not been in controversy between the two Houses. The conference committee have reduced the total amount.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS. I understand, so far as I am able to gather from the reading of this report, that numerous items have been incorporated in the bill which were not acted upon by the House at all. Now, in view of that fact, I move that the bill be recommitted to the conference committee with instructions to make a report under Rule XXIX.

Mr. REAGAN. The gentleman has not the floor to make any such motion.

Mr. COX. I desire to ask the gentleman from Texas a single question: whether or not the sum appropriated in this bill for the survey of Red River in Arkansas has not been incorporated in it since it left the House?

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. Speaker, the bill contained an appropriation of $10,000 for the improvement of Little Red River in the State of Arkansas. In the conference the point was made that improvement had not been estimated for; and the Senate committee, on the motion of the House conferees, agreed to strike out the appropriation, with an amendment ordering a survey.

Mr. WARNER. Would it be in order to move to lay this report on the table?

The SPEAKER. To vote down the report is the direct way to defeat it. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] demands the previous question.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. REAGAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the report of the conference committee.

Mr. ROBESON. On that question I demand the yeas and nays.

On ordering the yeas and nays there were—ayes 42, noes 115.

So (the affirmative being more than one-fifth of the whole vote) the yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 162, nays 84, not voting 44; as follows:

YEAS—162.

Acklen,	Cravens,	Kelley,	Sawyer,
Aiken,	Crowley,	Kenna,	Scoville,
Aldrich, N. W.	Culberson,	Kimmel,	Shallenberger,
Aldrich, William	Daggett,	King,	Shelley,
Atkins,	Davidson,	Loring,	Sherwin,
Baker,	Davis, George R.	Lowe,	Simonton,
Ballou,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Marsh,	Slemons,
Barber,	Deuster,	Martin, Benj. F.	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bayne,	Dibrell,	Martin, Edward L.	Smith, William E.
Beale,	Dick,	Mason,	Stevenson,
Belford,	Dunn,	McCoid,	Stone,
Berry,	Dunnell,	McKenzie,	Talbott,
Bingham,	Elam,	McKinley,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Bisbee,	Ellis,	McLane,	Taylor, Robert L.
Blackburn,	Errett,	Miles,	Thompson, P. B.
Blake,	Evins,	Miller,	Tillman,
Bland,	Felton,	Mills,	Townsend, Amos
Bliss,	Forney,	Money,	Tucker,
Bouck,	Frost,	Monroe,	Turner, Thomas
Boyd,	Gibson,	Muldrow,	Upson,
Bragg,	Goode,	Myers,	Urner,
Brigham,	Gunter,	New,	Valentine,
Browne,	Harris, Benj. W.	Newberry,	Vance,
Buckner,	Harris, John T.	Nicholls,	Voorhis,
Burrows,	Hatch,	O'Neill,	Waddill,
Cabell,	Hawk,	O'Reilly,	Ward,
Caldwell,	Hayes,	Orth,	Washburn,
Calkins,	Hazelton,	Pacheco,	Wellborn,
Cannon,	Heilman,	Persons,	Wells,
Carlisle,	Henkle,	Phelps,	Whiteaker,
Carpenter,	Herbert,	Philips,	Williams, C. G.
Caswell,	Herndon,	Phister,	Williams, Thomas
Chalmers,	Hiscock,	Poehler,	Willits,
Claflin,	Hooker,	Price,	Wilson,
Clardy,	Horr,	Reagan,	Wise,
Clark, John B.	House,	Reed,	Wood,
Clements,	Hubbell,	Richardson, J. S.	Wright,
Conger,	Hunton,	Richmond,	Yeates,
Cook,	Hurd,	Robertson,	Young, Casey.
Covert,	Jones,	Ross,
Crapo,	Jorgensen,	Samford,

NAYS—84.

Anderson,	Einstein,	Ladd,	Robinson,
Atherton,	Finley,	Lapham,	Ryan, Thomas
Bachman,	Fisher,	Le Fevre,	Sapp,
Bailey,	Forsythe,	Lindsey,	Scales,
Beltzhoover,	Fort,	Lounsbery,	Singleton, J. W.
Bicknell,	Frye,	McGowan,	Smith, A. Herr
Bowman,	Geddes,	McMahon,	Sparks,
Brewer,	Godshalk,	McMillin,	Springer,
Briggs,	Hall,	Morrison,	Starin,
Camp,	Hammond, John	Morse,	Steele,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hammond, N. J.	Muller,	Thomas,
Clymer,	Haskell,	Neal,	Thompson, Wm. G.
Cobb,	Hawley,	Norcross,	Turner, Oscar
Coffroth,	Hill,	Osmer,	Tyler,
Colerick,	Hostetler,	Overton,	Updegraff, J. T.
Converse,	Joyce,	Page,	Updegraff, Thomas
Cowgill,	Ketcham,	Prescott,	Van Voorhis,
Cox,	Killinger,	Ray,	Warner,
Davis, Horace	Kitchin,	Rice,	Weaver,
Deering,	Klotz,	Richardson, D. P.	Whitthorne,
Dickey,	Knott,	Robeson,	Yocum.

NOT VOTING—44.

Armfield,	Ford,	Manning,	Ryon, John W.
Barlow,	Gillette,	McCook,	Singleton, O. R.
Blount,	Harmer,	Mitchell,	Speer,
Bright,	Henderson,	Morton,	Stephens,
Butterworth,	Henry,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Chittenden,	Houk,	O'Brien,	Van Aernam,
Davis, Joseph J.	Humphrey,	O'Connor,	Wait,
De La Matyr,	Hutchins,	Pound,	White,
Dwight,	James,	Rothwell,	Wilber,
Ewing,	Johnston,	Russell, Daniel L.	Willis,
Ferdon,	Keifer,	Russell, W. A.	Young, Thomas L.

So the report of the committee of conference was agreed to.

At the conclusion of the second call of the roll,

Mr. FINLEY asked consent that the reading of the names be dispensed with.

Mr. ROBESON and Mr. PRICE objected.

The names of those voting were then read.

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois, with Mr. POUND.

Mr. JAMES with Mr. O'BRIEN.

Mr. JOHNSTON with Mr. WAIT, both being absent on account of indisposition.

Mr. BUTTERWORTH with Mr. SPEER, until four o'clock to-day.

Mr. STEPHENS with Mr. DWIGHT, on this vote. If Mr. STEPHENS were present, Mr. DWIGHT would vote "no."

Mr. ARMFIELD with Mr. MANNING, on the river and harbor appropriation bill.

Mr. FERDON with Mr. WILLIS, on this vote.

Mr. HENDERSON with Mr. TOWNSHEND of Illinois, on all questions, Mr. TOWNSHEND being absent on account of severe illness, and Mr. HENDERSON being at liberty to vote on any question if necessary to make a quorum.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. REAGAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the committee of conference was agreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 709) for the relief of William S. Burgess and others;

A bill (H. R. No. 1320) for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Perces, and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service;

A bill (H. R. No. 1542) for the relief of Charles Clinton, of New Orleans, late assistant treasurer at New Orleans;

A bill (H. R. No. 2503) for the relief of John H. W. Riley, of California;

A bill (H. R. No. 3451) for the relief of George W. Brower;

A bill (H. R. No. 3785) appropriating money for the erection of a penitentiary in the Territory of Dakota;

A bill (H. R. No. 4261) for the relief of Henry B. Eastman;

A bill (H. R. No. 4590) to provide for the sale of certain property owned by the United States in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4663) to admit free of duty one of the bells of Saint Michael's chimes, Charleston, South Carolina, which has been sent to England to be recast;

A bill (H. R. No. 5389) for the relief of Samuel Harper;

A bill (H. R. No. 5532) establishing a life-saving station at Louisville, Kentucky;

A bill (H. R. No. 5629) to graduate the price and dispose of the residue of the Osage Indian trust and diminished reserve lands lying east of the sixth principal meridian in Kansas;

A bill (H. R. No. 6493) to provide for the construction of a public building at Jackson, in the State of Mississippi; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 373) relative to printing the agricultural report for the year 1880.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House was requested, bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 3132) to confirm the title to certain lands of the State of Ohio; and

A bill (H. R. No. 2384) amendatory of and supplementary to an act to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Fort Wayne, Indiana, approved June 18, 1878.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on the question of consideration of unfinished business, raised by the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE.]

Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order that the order of business cannot be changed without a two-third vote. The rules are very distinct on that point, and the Chair has so held repeatedly.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is unable to say whether two-thirds will vote——

Mr. ROBESON. We have a right to know how we are voting.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot determine what the vote will be until it is taken.

Mr. CONGER. Was the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] to dispense with the order of unfinished business, or was it——

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration was pending when interrupted by the conference report on the river and harbor appropriation bill.

Mr. CONGER. The question of consideration between what?

The SPEAKER. Against the unfinished business.

Mr. CONGER. But the rule says that the order of business shall not be changed except by a two-third vote.

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration is in the line of order of business.

Mr. CONGER. No; it cannot be a question of consideration against all unfinished business. When we reach an order of business the question of consideration may be raised against each bill as it comes up.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not deciding that question now.

Mr. CONGER. We want to know what the proposition will lead to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey raised a point which the Chair did not decide because the necessity for it had not arisen, and the Chair thinks it has not yet arisen.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the regular order, which is the consideration of unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PRICE] called up the unfinished business and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] raised the question of consideration, which question was recognized and pending when he was taken off the floor by reason of a conference report.

Mr. REED. Question of consideration of what?

The SPEAKER. Of the unfinished business.

Mr. REED. Of the whole of it?

The SPEAKER. That pending at the last adjournment.
Mr. REED. That is the apportionment bill.
The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Iowa was to proceed to unfinished business. The Chair is not going to take advantage of anybody.
Mr. REED. Then the question of consideration which we are now called to vote upon is upon the apportionment bill.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa did not state it as such.
Mr. REED. He called for the unfinished business, and that means the apportionment bill.
Mr. TUCKER. What does the gentleman from Iowa call up?
Mr. REED. The call for the unfinished busipess is not a call for unfinished business in a lump, but for that unfinished business, whatever it may be, which has priority.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will not decide that point until the vote is taken whether the House will or will not consider the unfinished business.
Mr. REED. Do I understand then the Speaker to entertain a question of consideration against the unfinished business in a lump?
The SPEAKER. The Chair has made no such decision.
Mr. REED. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PRICE] called up the unfinished business; that must be that unfinished business which is in order.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will decide——
Mr. ROBESON. The gentleman from Iowa called up the unfinished business in order under the rules. If the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] desires to pass over that, he must move to suspend the rules.
Mr. CONGER. I demand that the House shall know what particular business of the unfinished business the question of consideration is raised upon, or whether it is upon the whole unfinished business.
The SPEAKER. The Journal shows that the gentlemen from Iowa called up the unfinished business.
Mr. ROBESON. That was equivalent to a call for the regular order.
Mr. REED. That is a call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER. And the gentleman from Kentucky raises the question of consideration.
Mr. REED. Consideration of what?
The SPEAKER. What gentlemen on the left want to know is whether that is comprehensive, or whether it applies only to a single bill. The Chair will decide that when the issue is made, after the vote is given.
Mr. REED. The issue is made now. I make the point of order that the question of consideration as to the unfinished business as a whole cannot be made.
Mr. CARLISLE. Then the motion of the gentleman from Iowa is out of order.
Mr. REED. Will the Chair understand the proposition——
The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks he understands it.
Mr. REED. I make the point of order that the question of consideration on unfinished business as a whole cannot be made.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will decide that——
Mr. REED. After we have voted on it?
The SPEAKER. When any member asks the Chair to decide it; when it is actually presented as an issue to the House.
Mr. REED. It is now an issue.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will decide it on request of any member when it is an issue.
Mr. REED. It is an issue now.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] will observe that the motion now is to proceed to the consideration of unfinished business.
Mr. REED. But there is no occasion to vote on that; that is the regular order. The gentleman from Kentucky interposes a question of consideration. I make the point of order that the question of consideration cannot be interposed against the call for the regular order, which is what the gentleman from Iowa made in substance.
Mr. COX. Everybody knows that the unfinished business is the apportionment bill with the previous question on it.
Mr. REED. The Speakor does not seem to be quite clear on that point.
The SPEAKER. The Chair is clear about that point. Whether it is comprehensive or whether it is single in its operation the Chair does not wish to decide until the question is raised.
Mr. REED. But it cannot be decided after the vote is taken.
The SPEAKER. The Chair will determine that point, if the vote is in the negative, whether it embraces a single bill or whether it is comprehensive.
Mr. REED. But the Chair will then decide the point after we have voted on it.
The SPEAKER. But nothing else could be done now.
Mr. REED. We need the information to enable us to vote intelligently.
The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman is full of information on that point.
Mr. REED. I submit to the Chair that I think I am.
Mr. ROBESON. I would like to ask the Chair a parliamentary question.
The SPEAKER. Certainly.
Mr. ROBESON. When the regular order is called under the rule, I would like to ask whether that regular order can be set aside without a suspension of the rules?
The SPEAKER. The Chair decided yesterday that the House had a right to express the determination whether it would consider any business; and the question of consideration is now raised.
Mr. REED. The call of the gentleman from Iowa was equivalent to a call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER. There is not very much difference.
Mr. REED. We want to know what the difference is.
The SPEAKER. But the Chair does not wish to decide the point in advance. If the House should vote not to consider, then the Chair would be prepared to say whether that vote applied to a single bill or was comprehensive in its operation.
Mr. CONGER. Will the Chair inform the House what business would be in order under the regular order?
The SPEAKER. What is the unfinished business?
Mr. CONGER. What order of business have we now reached?
The SPEAKER. We have now reached unfinished business.
Mr. CONGER. I demand the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky raises the question of consideration.
Mr. REED. Now, is it the question whether we are going to consider the regular order? and if we vote not to consider it, have we got through our business?
The SPEAKER. If the House should vote not to consider, then the gentleman from Maine can make his point of order whether that applies to a single bill or whether it covers all.
Mr. REED. The point of order which I make is that under a call for the regular order there is something which is before the House.
The SPEAKER. It is the unfinished business called for by the gentleman from Iowa, on which the gentleman from Kentucky raises the question of consideration, which the Chair recognizes as in order.
Mr. REED. But there must be a particular measure which is before the House under the regular order. Now, what is that particular measure?
Mr. CARLISLE. I suggest to the gentleman from Maine that if he be correct in his proposition, then the motion which the gentleman from Iowa has made is out of order, because his motion was simply to proceed to the unfinished business generally.
Mr. REED. Now we call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The regular order is the demand of the gentleman from Iowa——
Mr. MILLS. The regular order is to take a vote on the questio Will the House now consider the unfinished business?
The SPEAKER. That is the point.
Mr. FRYE. I suggest to the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE,] who advocated a certain position yesterday, that the whole trouble now comes from a wrong ruling yesterday which was sustained by a majority of this House, and that the proper motion now, disregarding that ruling, would be to move to suspend the rules and go to business on the Speaker's table.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. FRYE] will allow the Chair to say he does not consider that the ruling of yesterday was wrong; on the contrary, a night's reflection has convinced him of the accuracy of the ruling.
Mr. KEIFER. Others have had a "night's reflection," and they are satisfied of the contrary.
The SPEAKER. The Chair is bound by the ruling of the House, which supports his own judgment. But the effort of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] is to induce the Chair to decide in advance the question of order whether this motion is general in its character and covers the whole of the unfinished business, or whether it is single in its operation, covering only one bill. That the Chair does not wish to decide until the point arises.
Mr. REED. I submit to the Chair that, the regular order having been called, we are entitled to know what the regular order is.
The SPEAKER. The regular order is the demand of the gentleman from Iowa, on which the gentleman from Kentucky raises the question of consideration.
Mr. PRICE. Will the House give me permission to make a proposition, not to exceed five minutes? I think it may result in some harmony.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. TUCKER. What is the proposition?
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks consent to make a statement to the House, not to exceed five minutes—a statement, as he explains, in the direction of harmony.
Mr. HASKELL and others objected.
Mr. PRICE. Then, gentlemen do not want harmony.
Mr. CARLISLE. If somebody can be permitted to reply to the gentleman from Iowa, I presume there will be no objection.
The SPEAKER. There is objection.
Mr. PRICE. Then I modify my motion, and call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa modifies his motion.
Mr. ROBESON. We call for the regular order.
The SPEAKER. As many as are in favor of proceeding——
Mr. REED. There cannot be any necessity for voting to proceed with the regular order.
The SPEAKER. The regular order is the unfinished business.

Mr. REED. What is the unfinished business? What particular unfinished business is there? What is the first unfinished business?

Mr. CONGER. I call for a statement of the first unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the issue might as well be presented in one way as another. The Chair will not decide the point of order until it arises.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the first unfinished business on the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa modifies his motion to call for the first bill in order; and on that the gentleman from Kentucky raises the question of consideration.

Mr. REED. Not on a call for the regular order. The gentleman cannot raise the question of consideration on the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, as the gentleman indicates now, the bill——

Mr. REED. No matter whether he does or not.

Mr. PRICE. That is what I wanted five minutes to make a proposition about.

Mr. REED. Will the Chair kindly state to the House what the proposition is?

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the unfinished business, which is the bill known as the "apportionment bill."

Mr. REED. We are much obliged to the Chair.

The SPEAKER. But the Chair was not bound to decide the question until it properly arose, although he was very clear on the point, as gentlemen on the left might have seen.

Mr. TUCKER. Do I understand the gentleman from Iowa as now modifying his motion so as to call up the apportionment bill?

The SPEAKER. That is the effect.

Mr. TUCKER. I raise the question of consideration.

Mr. KEIFER. Oh, no!

The SPEAKER. Those in favor of considering the regular order, which is the apportionment bill——[Cries of "No!" on the republican side.]

Mr. CONGER. The Chair cannot afford to change his ruling.

Mr. COX. There is an opportunity to test the sincerity of gentlemen on the other side. They evidently do not want either bill. If they vote for the apportionment bill they can have it.

Mr. CONGER. That is only talk, and I love to hear the gentleman talk.

Mr. COX. Only say so, and you can get the apportionment bill.

Mr. KEIFER. We raise the question of order that the question of consideration cannot be raised against the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it can. It is against the apportionment bill, which is the first question.

Mr. KEIFER. We were operating under the previous question as to that apportionment bill yesterday.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decided yesterday it was not material whether the previous question was pending or not.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. UPSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 6730) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

APPROVAL OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

A message from the President, by Mr. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that he had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

An act (H. R. No. 6532) making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for deficiencies, and for other purposes;

An act (H. R. No. 7172) to admit free of duty two watches presented to Joseph Upton and G. W. Curtis for rescuing the crew and passengers of the steamship American;

An act (H. R. No. 6514) concerning settlement of boundary lines between New York and Connecticut;

Joint resolution (H. R. No. 315) amending and re-enacting joint resolution approved June 14, 1879, directing a monument to mark the birthplace of George Washington;

Joint resolution (H. R. No. 387) authorizing the printing of thirty thousand copies of the third report of the United States Entomological Commission;

An act (H. R. No. 4572) defining the verification of returns of national banks;

An act (H. R. No. 192) granting a pension to Hulda L. Barnard;

An act (H. R. No. 3100) granting relief to Samuel B. Hutchinson;

An act (H. R. No. 2290) granting a pension to William Bowman;

An act (H. R. No. 4887) granting a pension to Rosalie Louis;

An act (H. R. No. 2123) granting a pension to Albert N. Jack;

An act (H. R. No. 624) granting a pension to Robert S. Goodall;

An act (H. R. No. 7036) to establish post-routes;

An act (H. R. No. 7103) to constitute Atlanta, Georgia, a port of delivery; and

An act (H. R. No. 7033) making the city of Chattanooga, in the State of Tennessee, a port of delivery.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The question was put to the House whether it would proceed to consider the regular order which was the unfinished business, being the apportionment bill, and the Speaker declared by the sound that the "noes" had it.

Mr. ROBESON. I demand a division, and I wish to ask the Chair to state the question.

The SPEAKER. Those in favor of proceeding to the consideration of the unfinished business known as the apportionment bill, will say "ay" and those opposed will say "no."

The House divided; and there were—ayes 69, noes 100.

Mr. CONGER. I desire we may have tellers. I feel a reasonable anxiety to get at the apportionment bill as quickly as possible.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman seems to have changed his mind. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONGER. I think I am aiding the Chair in that direction.

Mr. BOUCK. I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. SPRINGER. As this involves the question of consideration between the apportionment bill and the funding bill, I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. ROBESON. There is no such question up.

Mr. SPRINGER. There is.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. FINLEY. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What is this contest on, the apportionment bill or the funding bill?

The SPEAKER. That is not a parliamentary inquiry. The question is, Will the House proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business known as the apportionment bill?

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 98, nays 145, not voting 47; as follows:

YEAS—98.

Aldrich, N. W.	Davis, Horace	Killinger,	Richardson, D. P.
Aldrich, William	Deering,	Klotz,	Robeson,
Bailey,	Dunnell,	Lapham,	Robinson,
Ballou,	Einstein,	Lindsey,	Russell, W. A.
Bayne,	Ferdon,	Loring,	Ryon, John W.
Beltzhoover,	Fisher,	Mason,	Sapp,
Bingham,	Forsythe,	McCoid,	Sherwin,
Bisbee,	Fort,	McCook,	Smith, A. Herr
Blake,	Frye,	McKinley,	Starin,
Bowman,	Godshalk,	Miles,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Boyd,	Hammond, John	Miller,	Thomas,
Briggs,	Harmer,	Monroe,	Townsend, Amos
Brigham,	Harris, Benj. W.	Morton,	Tyler,
Browne,	Hawk,	Neal,	Updegraff, J. T.
Burrows,	Hawley,	Newberry,	Valentine,
Calkins,	Hayes,	Norcross,	Van Aernam,
Camp,	Hazelton,	O'Neill,	Voorhis,
Carpenter,	Heilman,	Orth,	Van Voorhis,
Claflin,	Hiscock,	Osmer,	Ward,
Conger,	Horr,	Overton,	Washburn,
Cowgill,	Hubbell,	Page,	Williams, C. G.
Crapo,	Jorgensen,	Price,	Willits,
Crowley,	Joyce,	Ray,	Wood.
Daggett,	Keifer,	Reed,
Davis, George R.	Ketcham,	Rice,

NAYS—145.

Aiken,	Culberson,	Knott,	Shelley,
Anderson,	Davidson,	Ladd,	Simonton,
Armfield,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Le Fevre,	Singleton, J. W.
Atherton,	De La Matyr,	Lounsbery,	Slemons,
Atkins,	Dibrell,	Lowe,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bachman,	Dickey,	Manning,	Smith, William E.
Baker,	Dunn,	Marsh,	Sparks,
Barlow,	Elam,	Martin, Benj. F.	Springer,
Beale,	Ellis,	Martin, Edward L.	Steele,
Belford,	Evins,	McKenzie,	Stevenson,
Berry,	Felton,	McLane,	Talbott,
Bicknell,	Finley,	McMahon,	Taylor, Robert L.
Blackburn,	Forney,	McMillin,	Thompson, P. B.
Bland,	Geddes,	Morrison,	Thompson, W. G.
Bliss,	Gibson,	Muldrow,	Tillman,
Blount,	Gillette,	Muller,	Tucker,
Bouck,	Goode,	Myers,	Turner, Oscar
Bragg,	Gunter,	New,	Turner, Thomas
Bright,	Hall,	Nicholls,	Upson,
Buckner,	Hammond, N. J.	O'Reilly,	Urner,
Cabell,	Harris, John T.	Persons,	Vance,
Caldwell,	Haskell,	Phelps,	Waddill,
Cannon,	Hatch,	Philips,	Warner,
Carlisle,	Henkle,	Phister,	Weaver,
Chalmers,	Herbert,	Poehler,	Wellborn,
Clardy,	Herndon,	Prescott,	Wells,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hill,	Reagan,	Whiteaker,
Clark, John B.	Hooker,	Richardson, J. S.	Whitthorne,
Clements,	Hostetler,	Richmond,	Williams, Thomas
Clymer,	House,	Robertson,	Willis,
Cobb,	Hunton,	Ross,	Wilson,
Coffroth,	Jones,	Rothwell,	Wright,
Converse,	Kelley,	Ryan, Thomas	Yeates,
Cook,	Kenna,	Samford,	Yocum.
Covert,	Kimmel,	Sawyer,
Cox,	King,	Scales,
Cravens,	Kitchin,	Scoville,

NOT VOTING—47.

Acklen,	Davis, Joseph J.	Frost,	James,
Barber,	Deuster,	Henderson,	Johnston,
Brewer,	Dick,	Henry,	McGowan,
Butterworth,	Dwight,	Houk,	Mills,
Caswell,	Errett,	Humphrey,	Mitchell,
Chittenden,	Ewing,	Hurd,	Money,
Colerick,	Ford,	Hutchins,	Morse,

Murch,	Russell, Daniel L.	Stone,	Wilber,
O'Brien,	Shallenberger,	Townshend, R. W.	Wise,
O'Connor,	Singleton, O. R.	Updegraff, Thomas	Young, Casey
Pacheco,	Speer,	Wait,	Young, Thomas L.
Pound,	Stephens,	White,

So the House refused to consider.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. STEPHENS and Mr. DWIGHT, until three o'clock to-day.

Mr. MILLS with Mr. UPDEGRAFF, of Iowa, on this vote.

Mr. O'CONNOR and Mr. HOUK, both being ill, are paired until further notice.

Mr. MONEY with Mr. HUMPHREY, until to-morrow, on all questions except making a quorum.

Mr. WHITE with Mr. WISE, for three hours from twenty minutes after one o'clock, upon all questions before the House.

Mr. ACKLEN. I wish to ask how my vote is recorded?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's vote is not recorded.

Mr. ACKLEN. I vote "no."

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot ask unanimous consent to allow the gentleman's name to be inserted if he did not answer to his name on either call of the roll.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, announced the passage without amendment, of the following bills of the House:

A bill (H. R. No. 1359) for the relief of Louis P. di Cesnola, late consul at Cyprus.

A bill (H. R. No. 2705) for the relief of Joseph Clymer, of Texas.

A bill (H. R. No. 4413) for the relief of J. Scott Payne.

A bill (H. R. No. 4434) for the relief of Mrs. Martha Bridges, Bartow County, Georgia.

A bill (H. R. No. 4607) for the relief of Passed Assistant Engineer Absalom Kirby, of the Navy.

A bill (H. R. No. 5097) appropriating money toward the expense to be incurred in centennial celebration of the battle of Groton Heights, and for other purposes.

The message also announced the passage of the following bills of the House with amendments:

A bill (H. R. No. 4451) to provide for the erection of a monument at Schuylerville, New York, commemorative of the battle of Saratoga, and for other purposes.

A bill (H. R. No. 5715) to vacate and close an alley in square 504, in Washington, District of Columbia.

The message further announced the passage of the bill (S. No. 2064) to reorganize and incorporate anew the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company; in which bill and amendments concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Iowa, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 7099) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. PRICE. I move to suspend the rules with a view to taking from the Speaker's table and putting upon its passage a pension bill——

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. TUCKER. I move that the House proceed to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. CONGER. I demand the consideration of the unfinished business.

The SPBAKER. What is the unfinished business to which the gentleman refers?

Mr. CONGER. Whatever is on the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to state that the next bill on the Calendar is the bill (H. R. No. 2266) to prohibit Federal officers, claimants, and contractors from making contributions for political purposes. That was a special order, and comes over.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to be heard on that bill.

Mr. TUCKER. I raise the question of consideration in reference to that bill.

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration being raised, the Chair will submit it to the House.

Mr. TUCKER. I demand the yeas and nays on that bill.

The Speaker announced that the yeas and nays were ordered, more than fifty members having voted therefor.

Mr. CONGER. I ask for tellers on the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays are ordered. It does not require tellers.

Mr. CONGER. There might be a question about the number that voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks there is no question, more than one-fifth of those present having voted.

Mr. CONGER. I submit that we had better have tellers, in order that there may be no question as to the number that may have voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair submitted the question to the House, and fifty gentlemen were on their feet in response.

Mr. CONGER. The Chair counted, and yet so many were standing that there might be some confusion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair counted fifty members rising in response to his inquiry, which is more than one-fifth of the last vote; and under such circumstances the Chair declared the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CONGER. The Chair refuses to allow tellers then?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not refuse anything. But the gentleman knows that the practice of the House is in accordance with the rules, that one-fifth of those voting on the last vote are sufficient to order the yeas and nays.

Mr. CONGER. The question is whether the House may have an opportunity of verifying the count in case a question should arise as to whether a sufficient number had voted. That is my point; of course the Chair can overrule it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not overrule anything in this connection. The Chair has simply conformed to the practice of the House. But if the gentleman chooses to question the count of the Chair under the circumstances, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. CONGER and Mr. TUCKER were appointed tellers.

Mr. HOUSE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOUSE. Did not the Chair announce that a sufficient number had risen to demand the yeas and nays?

The SPEAKER. The Chair did so announce, but the gentleman from Michigan denies the accuracy of the count.

Mr. HOUSE. Who is to prevail, then?

The SPEAKER. The tellers will determine whether the Chair is correct or not. The Chair is not uneasy as to the verification of the count.

The House divided, and 58 members voted in the affirmative.

The SPEAKER. A sufficient number to order the yeas and nays. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 61, noes 164, not voting 65; as follows:

YEAS—61.

Aldrich, N. W.	Conger,	Monroe,	Smith, A. Herr
Aldrich, William	Cowgill,	Morton,	Starin,
Ballou,	Crapo,	Neal,	Stone,
Barber,	Crowley,	Norcross,	Thomas,
Bayne,	Davis, George R.	O'Neill,	Townsend, Amos
Bingham,	Deering,	Orth,	Tyler,
Bisbee,	Ferdon,	Pacheco,	Updegraff, J. T.
Blake,	Hayes,	Page,	Van Aernam,
Bowman,	Hiscock,	Price,	Voorhis,
Briggs,	Hubbell,	Ray,	Van Voorhis,
Brigham,	Joyce,	Reed,	Ward,
Browne,	Ketcham,	Rice,	Willits,
Burrows,	Lindsey,	Richardson, D. P.	Young, Thomas L.
Camp,	McCook,	Robeson,
Carpenter,	McGowan,	Sapp,
Claflin,	Miles,	Sherwin,

NAYS—164.

Acklen,	Dick,	Killinger,	Rothwell,
Aiken,	Dickey,	Kimmel,	Ryan, Thomas
Anderson,	Dunn,	King,	Ryon, John W.
Armfield,	Dunnell,	Kitchin,	Samford,
Atherton,	Einstein,	Klotz,	Sawyer,
Atkins,	Elam,	Knott,	Shallenberger,
Bachman,	Ellis,	Ladd,	Shelley,
Beale,	Errett,	Le Fevre,	Simonton,
Beltzhoover,	Evins,	Lounsbery,	Singleton, J. W.
Berry,	Felton,	Lowe,	Slemons,
Bicknell,	Finley,	Manning,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Blackburn,	Fisher,	Marsh,	Smith, William E.
Bland,	Ford,	Martin, Benj. F.	Sparks,
Bliss,	Forney,	Martin, Edward L.	Springer,
Blount,	Fort,	Mason,	Steele,
Bouck,	Frost,	McCoid,	Stevenson,
Bragg,	Frye,	McKenzie,	Talbott,
Buckner,	Gibson,	McLane,	Taylor, Robert L.
Cabell,	Goode,	McMahon,	Thompson, P. B.
Caldwell,	Gunter,	McMillin,	Thompson, W. G.
Cannon,	Hammond, John	Morrison,	Tillman,
Carlisle,	Hammond, N. J.	Muldrow,	Tucker,
Chalmers,	Harmer,	Muller,	Turner, Oscar
Chittenden,	Harris, Benj. W.	Myers,	Turner, Thomas
Clardy,	Harris, John T.	New,	Upson,
Clark, Alvah A.	Haskell,	Nicholls,	Urner,
Clark, John B.	Hatch,	O'Reilly,	Valentine,
Clements,	Hawley,	Osmer,	Vance,
Cobb,	Hazelton,	Overton,	Warner,
Converse,	Heilman,	Persons,	Washburn,
Cook,	Henkle,	Phelps,	Weaver,
Covert,	Herbert,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Cox,	Herndon,	Phister,	Whiteaker,
Cravens,	Hill,	Poehler,	Wilber,
Culberson,	Hooker,	Prescott,	Williams, C. G.
Davidson,	Hostetler,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Davis, Horace	House,	Richardson, J. S.	Willis,
Davis, Lowndes H.	Hunton,	Richmond,	Wilson,
De La Matyr,	Hurd,	Robertson,	Wright,
Deuster,	Kelley,	Robinson,	Yeates
Dibrell,	Kenna,	Ross,	Young, Casey.

NOT VOTING—65.

Bailey,	Boyd,	Calkins,	Colerick,
Baker,	Brewer,	Caswell,	Daggett,
Barlow,	Bright,	Clymer,	Davis, Joseph J.
Belford,	Butterworth,	Coffroth,	Dwight,

Ewing,	James,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Forsythe,	Johnston,	Newberry,	Updegraff, Thomas
Geddes,	Jones,	O'Brien,	Waddill,
Gillette,	Jorgensen,	O'Connor,	Wait,
Godshalk,	Keifer,	Pound,	Wells,
Hall,	Lapham,	Russell, Daniel L.	White,
Hawk,	Loring,	Russell, W. A.	Whitthorne,
Henderson,	McKinley,	Scales,	Wise,
Henry,	Miller,	Scoville,	Wood,
Horr,	Mills,	Singleton, O. R.	Yocum.
Houk,	Mitchell,	Speer,
Humphrey,	Money,	Stephens,
Hutchins,	Morse,	Taylor, Ezra B.

So the House refused to consider the bill, (H. R. No. 2266.)

After the second roll-call,

Mr. TUCKER moved to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. PRICE. I object.

The Clerk proceeded to read the names of those who had voted.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. BAKER with Mr. CLYMER. Being engaged in conference they are paired until further notice.

Mr. MITCHELL with Mr. STEPHENS; both being absent on account of sickness.

Mr. CASWELL with Mr. GEDDES, on this vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. TUCKER. I now renew my motion that the House proceed to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table.

Mr. CONGER. I ask for the next unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. The next unfinished business is the interstate-commerce bill, the bill (H. R. No. 4748) to establish a board of-commissioners of interstate commerce, and for other purposes.

Mr. TUCKER. Upon that I raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House consider the next unfinished business, being the interstate-commerce bill?

The House divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 92.

Mr. CONGER. A quorum has not voted.

The SPEAKER. A quorum not having voted the Chair will order tellers, and appoints the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. CONGER, and the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. TUCKER.

Mr. WHITE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITE. Is the next item of unfinished business the interstate-commerce bill?

The SPEAKER. It is; and the issue is now on that bill.

Mr. WHITE. It is a very important bill.

Mr. REAGAN. It is a most important bill, but I do not propose to let it be used for filibustering purposes.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 45, noes 124.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

On the question of ordering the yeas and nays there were ayes 40, more than one-fifth of the last vote.

So the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CONGER. Will the Chair state the question to the House?

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House consider the interstate-commerce bill?

Mr. WHITE. Those who want to consider it will vote "ay."

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 67, nays 144, not voting 79; as follows:

YEAS—67.

Aldrich, N. W.	Cowgill,	Joyce,	Robeson,
Aldrich, William	Crapo,	Keifer,	Shallenberger,
Bailey,	Daggett,	Kenna,	Sherwin,
Ballou,	Davis, George R.	Lapham,	Stone,
Barber,	Deering,	Lindsey,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Bayne,	Errett,	Mason,	Thompson, W. G.
Bisbee,	Ferdon,	McCoid,	Townsend, Amos
Blake,	Fisher,	McGowan,	Tyler,
Brewer,	Forsythe,	McKinley,	Updegraff, J. T.
Briggs,	Frye,	Monroe,	Updegraff, Thomas
Brigham,	Godshalk,	Neal,	Van Aernam,
Burrows,	Hall,	Newberry,	Voorhis,
Calkins,	Hawk,	Page,	Ward,
Camp,	Hayes,	Price,	Williams, C. G.
Carpenter,	Heilman,	Ray,	Willits,
Claflin,	Horr,	Rice,	Wood.
Conger,	Hubbell,	Richardson, D. P.

NAYS—144.

Acklen,	Clardy,	Einstein,	House,
Aiken,	Clark, Alvah A.	Elam,	Hunton,
Armfield,	Clark, John B.	Ellis,	Hurd,
Atherton,	Clements,	Evins,	Jones,
Atkins,	Cobb,	Felton,	Kelley,
Bachman,	Converse,	Forney,	Ketcham,
Beale,	Cook,	Fort,	Killinger,
Belford,	Covert,	Frost,	Kimmel,
Beltzhoover,	Cox,	Gibson,	King,
Berry,	Cravens,	Goode,	Kitchen,
Bicknell,	Crowley,	Gunter,	Klotz,
Bingham,	Culberson,	Hammond, N. J.	Knott,
Blackburn,	Davidson,	Harris, Benj. W.	Ladd,
Bland,	Davis, Horace	Harris, John T.	Le Fevre,
Bouck,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Haskell,	Lounsbery,
Bragg,	De La Matyr,	Hatch,	Lowe,
Buckner,	Deuster,	Hawley,	Manning,
Cabell,	Dibrell,	Herbert,	Marsh,
Caldwell,	Dickey,	Hill,	McKenzie,
Carlisle,	Dunn,	Hooker,	McLane,
Chalmers,	Dunnell,	Hostetler,	McMahon,
McMillin,	Phister,	Shelley,	Turner, Oscar
Miller,	Poehler,	Simonton,	Turner, Thomas
Mills,	Reagan,	Singleton, J. W.	Upson,
Morrison,	Richardson, J. S.	Slemons,	Urner,
Morse,	Richmond,	Smith, A. Herr	Vance,
Muldrow,	Robertson,	Smith, Hezekiah B.	Waddill,
Muller,	Robinson,	Smith, William E.	Washburn,
New,	Ross,	Springer,	Wellborn,
Nicholls,	Rothwell,	Steele,	Whiteaker,
O'Neill,	Ryan, Thomas	Stevenson,	Whitthorne,
O'Reilly,	Samford,	Talbott,	Williams, Thomas
Orth,	Sapp,	Taylor, Robert L.	Willis,
Persons,	Sawyer,	Thompson, P. B.	Wilson,
Phelps,	Scales,	Tillman,	Wright,
Philips,	Scoville,	Tucker,	Yeates.

NOT VOTING—79.

Anderson,	Finley,	Martin, Edward L.	Singleton, O. R.
Baker,	Ford,	McCook,	Sparks,
Barlow,	Geddes,	Miles,	Speer,
Bliss,	Gillette,	Mitchell,	Starin,
Blount,	Hammond, John	Money,	Stevens,
Bowman,	Harmer,	Morton,	Thomas,
Boyd,	Hazelton,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Bright,	Henderson,	Myers,	Valentine,
Browne,	Henkle,	Norcross,	Van Voorhis,
Butterworth,	Henry,	O'Brien,	Wait,
Cannon,	Herndon,	O'Connor,	Warner,
Caswell,	Hiscock,	Osmer,	Weaver,
Chittenden,	Houk,	Overton,	Wells,
Clymer,	Humphrey,	Pacheco,	White,
Coffroth,	Hutchins,	Pound,	Wilber,
Colerick,	James,	Prescott,	Wise,
Davis, Joseph J.	Johnston,	Reed,	Yocum,
Dick,	Jorgensen,	Russell, Daniel L.	Young, Casey
Dwight,	Loring,	Russell, W. A.	Young, Thomas L.
Ewing,	Martin, Benj. F.	Ryon, John W.

So the House refused to consider the interstate-commerce bill.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. HERNDON with Mr. MORTON, for this day.

Mr. PACHECO with Mr. YOUNG, of Tennessee, on all political questions, for this day.

Mr. MULDROW with Mr. MILES.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.]

Mr. CONGER. What is the next unfinished business?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not aware there is any unfinished business to be disposed of that comes within the language of the rule.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed, with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. No. 1729) for the payment of certain Indian-war bonds of the State of California.

The message further announced that the Senate agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 7035) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the Senate further insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. No. 7035) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, agreed to the further conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WITHERS, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. WINDOM as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on the proposition of the gentleman from Virginia that the House now——

Mr. CONGER. I find under the head of "unfinished business" several bills which have not been noticed.

The SPEAKER. Those bills are not "unfinished business" in the light of the rule. The Chair has caused a careful examination to be made by the journal clerk——

Mr. CONGER. I find under the head of "unfinished business" a bill (H. R. No. 269) supplemental to an act entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain." There has been an adverse report.

The SPEAKER. That was reported adversely from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and would not be considered as "unfinished business."

Mr. CONGER. Why is it on the Calendar then?

The SPEAKER. It is put there for the information of the House as the most appropriate place; but it is not "unfinished business" within the contemplation of the rule, which says that—

After the hour shall have been devoted to reports from committees, it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business in which the House may have been engaged at an adjournment.

The House was not engaged at any adjournment in the consideration of that bill.

Mr. ROBESON. One moment. I call the attention of the Chair to the last clause of the rule:

And it shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of all other unfinished business——

Mr. TUCKER. What "other unfinished business" is there?

The SPEAKER. There is not any other, as the Chair is advised.

Mr. REED. There is quite a lot of unfinished business.

Mr. CONGER. I find also on the Calendar House bill No. 1029, concerning commerce and navigation and the regulation of steam-vessels.

The SPEAKER. That was considered at a special evening session and lost its status, not having been then acted upon.

Mr. CONGER. But it is ordered to be considered "from day to day until disposed of."

The SPEAKER. It never was taken up again, and does not hold the relation of unfinished business in the light of the rule.

Mr. CONGER. It was considered twice, according to the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has caused the most searching examination to be made; but if the gentleman can show that the journal clerk is mistaken, the Chair is quite willing to be corrected.

Mr. CONGER. This bill was ordered to be considered "from day to day until disposed of;" it has been considered twice, and is not disposed of.

The SPEAKER. It was twice considered at special evening sessions; but it fell with the day. That is the information the Chair has.

Mr. O'NEILL. There is a bill on the Speaker's table which the country would very much like to have finished—the Eaton tariff-commission bill.

The SPEAKER. The way for the gentleman to reach that bill is to vote to go to business on the Speaker's table. If the gentleman will vote in that direction, he may reach the Eaton tariff bill.

Mr. CONGER. There is another bill to which I call the attention of the Chair, House bill No. 3764, on page 23 of the Calendar. That certainly has been considered lately.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman be kind enough to give the title?

Mr. CONGER. It is "A bill for the relief of General Fitz-John Porter."

The SPEAKER. That has never been considered. It is on the House Calendar.

Mr. CONGER. That is a special order——

The SPEAKER. That bill is on the House Calendar. A Senate bill on the same subject is upon the Speaker's table.

Mr. CONGER. It was made a special order for Friday, February 13, and "from day to day thereafter until disposed of."

The SPEAKER. It has never been taken up, and does not bear the relation of unfinished business. [Cries of "Regular order!"] The Chair wants to be corrected if there is any error.

Mr. BLAND. How long must we wait on the gentleman?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will give the gentleman reasonable time.

Mr. BLAND. If the Chair says there is no other unfinished business——

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed by the journal clerk, who has made a most searching examination, that there it no other unfinished business under the rule; but if any gentleman can find such business, the Chair will recognize it.

Mr. BLAND. There are a great many members here who desire that the business of the House shall proceed. We have not time to wait on the gentleman from Michigan. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. This is the regular order. If the gentleman from Michigan has knowledge of any other unfinished business——

Mr. REED. There is a resolution in regard to printing, which was pending when the House adjourned June 19, 1879.

The SPEAKER. That came in as a privileged report.

Mr. REED. But it was pending when the House adjourned. That makes it unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. It was not considered. It does not come within the rule.

Mr. REED. The rule says that—

It shall be in order to proceed to the consideration of all other unfinished business——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will please read on.

Mr. REED, (reading)—

whenever the class of business to which it belongs shall be in order.

The SPEAKER. That alludes to business assigned for Friday or to a particular day set apart for special business; for instance, business of the District of Columbia.

Mr. ROBESON. It alludes to Friday with regard to private business; but it alludes to all other days for public orders.

The SPEAKER. There is really, so far as the Chair is able to inform the House, no other business standing unfinished in the light of the rule.

Mr. REED. Here is this resolution stated in the Calendar as pending when the House adjourned on the 19th of June, 1879. Now if that was pending when the House adjourned, it is unfinished business. I refer the Speaker to page 90 of the Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has the Calendar before him.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. When the Speaker made the announcement saying that the organ of the House, the Clerk of the House, could not find any other unfinished business, and none is discovered, I say we should proceed then with the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wants to make assurance doubly sure.

Mr. REED. I submit that any member of the House has a right to correct the Clerk.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. But the gentleman must specify some particular unfinished business, or otherwise it is mere factious opposition.

Mr. REED. I beg to state that I believe this resolution for printing report No. 14, from the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, is unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

JUNE 19, 1879.

Mr. SINGLETON, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Printing, to which was referred the following resolution:

"Resolved, That 10,000 extra copies of House Report No. 14, first session, Forty-sixth Congress, be printed for the use of the House," reported the same with an amendment, striking out the words "for the use of the House" and inserting in lieu thereof the following, namely: "at the Government Printing Office; 2,500 copies for the use of the Senate, and 7,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives."

Mr. CONGER made the point of order that the said resolution and amendment must receive their first consideration in a Committee of the Whole House.

The Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CONVERSE) overruled the point of order, on the ground that the said resolution and amendment thereto, proposed by the Committee on Printing, did not make an appropriation of money.

The SPEAKER. The RECORD will show that the House really never proceeded in the sense of the rule to consider.

Mr. REED. The point was overruled.

The SPEAKER. The point was brought in as a check on the point of order.

Mr. REED. No; the point of order was overruled.

The SPEAKER. It was never considered nevertheless. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. REED. The point of order was overruled, and thereupon the House adjourned. It was up. That was the consideration of it.

The SPEAKER. It was never entered upon.

Mr. REED. What does the Chair regard as entered upon?

The SPEAKER. Debate.

Mr. REED. When a question is brought up and put by the Speaker, it seems to me it is being considered. If the Speaker will recollect——

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed by the journal clerk they never actually did consider it. But the RECORD will show.

Mr. REED. If the Speaker will recollect the authority cited from the Journal of the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress, there was a case where a matter was brought up and the moment it was read a motion to adjourn prevailed. It thereupon came up the next day and the question of consideration was raised. That shows the practice of the House, at least to that extent.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will have the exact record read.

Mr. SPRINGER. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman makes the point that this report from the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures is the unfinished business.

Mr. SPRINGER. Has the Chair decided whether there is any other unfinished business?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has sent for the RECORD to know how to decide. The RECORD is here, and the Clerk will read from the proceedings as published in the RECORD.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. The Committee on Printing, to which was referred a resolution of the House providing for the printing of 10,000 copies of House Report No. 14 of the first session of the Forty-sixth Congress, have directed me to report the same back with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The resolution will be read, and then the Clerk will read the amendment recommended by the Committee on Printing.

The resolution was read, as follows:

"Resolved, That 10,000 extra copies of House Report No. 14, first session Forty-sixth Congress, be printed for the use of the House."

The amendment reported from the committee was to strike out the words "for the use of the House" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "at the Government Printing Office; 2,500 copies for the use of the Senate, and 7,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives."

Mr. BAKER. What document is that?

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. STEPHENS] will explain.

Mr. CONGER. That report should go to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. There is no appropriation of money in it.

Mr. STEPHENS. It is an ordinary report.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. Yes, it is the ordinary form of report.

Mr. CONGER. It requires the expenditure of money.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. Will the gentleman listen to an explanation from the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. CONGER. I will hear the statement.

Mr. STEPHENS. The report which this resolution provides for printing is a report of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures on the metric system in coinage. The last House ordered a large number of extra copies of this report to be printed; I forget how many.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. The order was for 10,000 copies.

Mr. STEPHENS. That order passed the House, but did not pass the Senate on account of the lateness of the session. I suppose I would be within bounds if I said that there have been a thousand letters asking for copies of that report.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. The amendment reported from the committee is simply in regard to the distribution of the report. It is the same resolution which passed the last House, but failed in the Senate.

Mr. CONGER. I dislike so much to have the metric system forced upon the honest people of the United States, with all its unnamable terms, changing the entire names even of the usual weights and measures of the country, that I feel like opposing it whenever I have an opportunity.

Mr. STEPHENS. Let the country have an opportunity to see the report. This resolution does not adopt the report; it simply provides for printing it.

Mr. CONGER. No man knows what it means.
Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. This is a privileged report; I have a right to make it.
Mr. CONGER. The gentleman says he has a right to make this report.
Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. Certainly, it is a privileged report.
Mr. CONGER. Then I make the point of order that it should go to the Committee of the Whole.
Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. It does not order the expenditure of a dollar of money.
Mr. CONGER. It requires the expenditure of money.
Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi. I say that the gentleman cannot make that motion; he has not the floor to do it.
Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is not well taken; the resolution appropriates no money.
Mr. CONGER. Does the Chair decide that this resolution does not involve any expenditure of money?
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair decides that it does not make any appropriation, and that the point of order is not well taken.
Mr. BREWER. I move that the House now adjourn.
Mr. FORT. Let this report be first acted upon.
The motion of Mr. BREWER was then agreed to; and accordingly (at four o'clock and fifty minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

The SPEAKER. It will be seen this report came in as a question of privilege which attaches to the Committee on Printing to report at any time, and immediately the point of order was made, and that point of order was overruled, whereupon the gentleman from Michigan moved that the House adjourn. In fact the resolution and amendment were never considered, and are not in the light of the rule to be taken as unfinished business.

Mr. REED. The question was certainly debated.

Mr. TUCKER. I hope we will proceed.

The SPEAKER. The point of order was debated.

Mr. REED, No; it was debated when the point of order was raised.

The SPEAKER. It was debated out of order because the point of order was the only thing pending.

Mr. MILLS. Let us vary the performance and vote awhile.

Mr. BLAND. Either that, or I move to take a recess.

Mr. REED. Is it unfinished business?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks in the light of the rules it does not come over as unfinished business, an adjournment having taken place immediately on the point of order being overruled.

Mr. REED. The journal clerk seems to have made up the Calendar with that as the unfinished business.

The SPEAKER. The journal clerk does not make it up.

Mr. REED. Who does?

The SPEAKER. The file clerk made it up as unfinished business. It has not the character of unfinished business provided for under the rules.

Mr. ROBESON. Does the Speaker decide that the motion of the gentleman from Virginia is the regular order under the rule?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman to make his motion and recognizes the motion as pending.

Mr. ROBESON. Then I rise to a privileged question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBESON. I ask that the rules be suspended to take up House joint resolution No. 324, relating to the termination of articles 18 and 21 of the treaty of 1871 with Great Britain relating to the fisheries.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not recognized to submit that motion, but the gentleman from Virginia has a motion pending.

Mr. ROBESON. The question that I present is one of privilege. I submit this motion as a privileged question.

Mr. TUCKER. What is the privileged part of it?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not recognized for such a purpose.

Mr. ROBESON. It is a privileged motion, because I move to suspend the rules.

Mr. WARNER. But the gentleman has not the recognition of the Chair for that purpose.

Mr. ROBESON. But I am entitled to the floor at any time for that purpose.

Mr. WARNER. Not more than any other gentleman.

Mr. ROBESON. If any other gentleman rises to ask a suspension of the rules the Speaker has a right to choose between them as to which he will recognize.

Mr. CARLISLE. Not while a previous motion has been recognized and not disposed of and is pending.

Mr. ROBESON. The motion that I submit is pending under the rules, and I have a right to submit it. It is a privileged question, and I do submit it now, in accordance with the rules of this House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not recognized the gentleman from New Jersey for any such purpose.

Mr. ROBESON. I claim that it is my right. I claim that it is a privileged motion, and I have the right during the last six days of the session to move to suspend the rules, which motion takes precedence of the demand which the gentleman from Virginia makes. The motion that I make is the regular order; it is in accordance with the rules; it is a motion to suspend the rules allowed by the rules, and cannot be denied to any member. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. CHALMERS. You must be recognized before you can submit the motion.

Mr. ROBESON. I have a right to be recognized for this purpose, though, and I have submitted the motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not recognized for such purpose.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ROBESON. Pending the motion of the gentleman from Virginia, and after my motion is submitted, it takes precedence of the other motion, being one of a higher privilege, and must be entertained in these last six days.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not recognize the gentleman to make his motion. The gentleman will remember that he cannot take another member off the floor who has a motion which is pending, excepting in such manner as the rules provide. [Cries of "Regular order!" "Regular order!"]

Mr. ROBESON. The rules do provide for this motion, and I rise to a point of order.

Mr. MILLS. I call for the regular order.

Mr. ROBESON. Gentlemen may demand the regular order, but you will not gain anything by that. It does not do any good here. I am on the floor now, having an important question which I think ought to be settled.

Mr. WARNER. Yes; and the funding bill is an important question, too, that ought to be settled.

Mr. ROBESON. I would like to have a ruling of the Chair upon the point of order which I raise. I claim that the motion which I submit is one of higher privilege, and must take precedence and be recognized under the rules as having precedence.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest that possibly if the gentleman would speak in a lower tone it would be heard more distinctly by the House.

Mr. ROBESON. Possibly so. I thank the Speaker for his opinion. I will endeavor to regulate my voice so the Chair will hear me. Now, I rise to a point of order.

Mr. KLOTZ. Regular order.

Mr. ROBESON. My point of order is, that having moved to suspend the rules——

Mr. COX. The gentleman ought to be recognized before he can make his motion.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from New Jersey will suspend, the Chair will cause to be read a report upon this subject. The Chair hopes there will be order while it is being read, and is of opinion that both sides of the House will probably concur in the conclusion arrived at by this report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Garfield, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following report; which was read, considered, and, under the operation of the previous question, agreed to, namely:

"The Committee on Rules, to whom was referred the resolution of the House in reference to a modification of Rules 59 and 113, or of the practice which has arisen under them, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to present the following report:

"The rules under consideration are as follows:

"'59. When two or more members happen to rise at once, the Speaker shall name the member who is first to speak.—April 7, 1789.

"'113. The rules of proceedings in the House shall be observed in a Committee of the Whole House, so far as they may be applicable, except the rule limiting the times of speaking.—April 7, 1789; but no member shall speak twice to any question until every member choosing to speak shall have spoken.—December 18, 1805.

"With the exception of the last clause of Rule 113, which was adopted in 1805, these rules have remained unchanged for ninety years. In the nature of the case discretion must be lodged with the presiding officer, and no fixed and arbitrary order of recognition can be wisely provided for in advance, and the committee are of opinion that these rules should not be changed.

"The practice of making a list of those who desire to speak on measures before the House or Committee of the Whole is a proper one to enable the presiding officer to know and remember the wishes of members as to the order of recognition; he should not be bound to follow the list, but should be free to exercise a wise and just discretion in the interest of free and fair debate."—Journal, first session, Forty-sixth Congress.

Mr. ROBESON. That report having been read, and the Speaker having said he thought that perhaps it would convince this side of the House, I desire to show in one minute how that report does not apply to this case at all.

The SPEAKER. That was a unanimous report.

Mr. ROBESON. I admit it was unanimous, and perfectly right. But the simple fact is it does not apply to this case. It is undoubtedly true that when two gentlemen rise in order the Speaker may choose which he will recognize. Nobody doubts that. The right of recognition belongs to the Speaker. But the Speaker is not entitled to recognize a man out of order in preference to a man in order. That will not be contended.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is not the gentleman from New Jersey out of order?

Mr. ROBESON. It may be I am, and it may be I am not. Now, the question is just this: If the gentleman from Virginia makes a motion to go to the Speaker's table he is recognized for that purpose because that is in the regular order under the rule. Now, then, I am entitled, if it were not for the restriction of one of our rules, and every man would be entitled at any time, to rise and move that the rules be suspended, which would suspend the regular order under which the gentleman from Virginia rises. But our rule says that the Speaker shall not recognize anybody to move to suspend the rules except on the first and third Mondays of each month——

The SPEAKER. The rule says he shall not; but does not say he shall.

Mr. ROBESON. And during the last six days of a session.

Mr. TALBOTT. I desire to ask the gentleman from New Jersey one question on that point.

Mr. ROBESON. Not now. The gentleman will wait till I get through.

Well now, that is just the question. I may move to suspend the rules under which the gentleman from Virginia rises and presses his motion; and this is one of the last six days of the session. Now, if another gentleman moves to suspend the rules and put anything else on its passage, then the Speaker will have the right to recognize him rather than me. That is the right of recognition. But so long as no other member does rise for that purpose, then I am entitled to do so.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois. I rise to a question of order.

Mr. ROBESON. I am on the floor.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois. I call the gentleman from New Jersey to order. The Chair has already decided that he would not recognize the gentleman from New Jersey for the motion he is now discussing.

Mr. ROBESON. I am arguing a question of order.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois. The Chair has already ruled the gentleman out of order, and I now call the gentleman to order; and pending that, I insist that the gentleman shall observe the rules and take his seat.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey will state his point of order in brief, that the Chair may know whether to recognize him or not.

Mr. ROBESON. I state this point of order: that the gentleman from Virginia having moved to go to the Speaker's table as the regular order under the rules, I now rise to move to suspend those rules; and my point of order is that under those circumstances the recognition of the gentleman from Virginia is out of order, and I make that point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the suggestion of the gentleman——

Mr. ROBESON. And I take an appeal from the Chair's ruling.

The SPEAKER. Because in the exercise of a wise discretion the Chair has recognized the gentleman from Virginia. The rule is not compulsory on the Chair, and never has been so construed in regard to motions to suspend the rules during the last six days of a session. The restriction is that the Speaker shall not do so and so except during the last six days.

Mr. TUCKER. It is that he shall not entertain a motion except, and so forth. It does not give any privilege.

Mr. ROBESON. But the discretion is with the Chair, and it is made by that very rule obligatory on the Chair to recognize motions to suspend the rules. I appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. CHALMERS. And I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. ROBESON. I have the floor, and do not yield for that motion. I have made the appeal and desire to be heard in support of it.

The SPEAKER. Where would that lead to if a member could in that way take another member off the floor who has been recognized, even if the construction be correct which the gentleman from New Jersey is seeking to place on the rule? And it is not correct.

Mr. COX. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. COX. It is this: that on a question of recognition by the Chair of any member of the House an appeal cannot be taken, and the Chair has so decided.

The SPEAKER. The Chair states there is no appeal from a recognition.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to a point of order, and make the point that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] is out of order after a motion has been made to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. ROBESON. What does the Chair rule on that point of order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. ROBESON. And I rise to make the point of order, that he is out of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot entertain an appeal on a recognition.

Mr. KELLEY. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KELLEY. It is whether the gentleman from Pennsylvania be the Speaker of the House, or the gentleman from New Jersey?

Mr. MCMAHON. I was on the floor to make that same inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey is out of order.

Mr. ROBESON. I rise to reply to the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, [Mr. KELLEY.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman has been heard enough.

Mr. PRICE. May I make a parliamentary inquiry?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. PRICE. Has it not always been in order to move a suspension of the rules during the last six days of a session?

The SPEAKER. It has not. It has not been the practice of the House to allow one member, by a motion to suspend the rules, to take another gentleman off the floor when a question was pending. Nor has it ever been held that it was compulsory on the Speaker under the terms of the rule to recognize that motion.

Mr. PRICE. That is not my question. My question is, has it not been considered in order during the last six days of a session to move a suspension of the rules?

The SPEAKER. It has been when a member has been recognized for that purpose, but the Chair does not recognize any member for that purpose now.

Mr. MILLS. The Chair can recognize whom he pleases.

Mr. ROBESON. I desire to say—— [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. There is no controversy before the House.

Mr. TUCKER. The Speaker has decided that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROBESON] is out of order.

Mr. ROBESON. And I take an appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. There can be no appeal from the recognition of the Chair.

Mr. ATKINS. The gentleman is clearly out of order.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] to now proceed to business on the Speaker's table.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 122, noes 27.

Mr. ROBESON. Is that a quorum?

The SPEAKER. It is a quorum.

So the motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill of the House of the following title:

A bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

BUSINESS ON THE SPEAKER'S TABLE.

The SPEAKER. The House has decided by the vote just taken to proceed to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table.

REPORT OF CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The first business on the Speaker's table was the following message from the President of the United States:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a copy of a letter addressed to the chairman of the civil-service commission on the 3d of December last, requesting to be furnished with a report upon the result in the post-office and custom-house in the city of New York of the application of the civil-service rules requiring open competitive examinations for appointments and promotions, together with the report of Hon. Dorman B. Eaton, the chairman of the commission, in response.

The report presents a very gratifying statement of the results of the application of the rules referred to in the two largest and most important local offices in the civil service of the Government. The subject is one of great importance to the people of the whole country. I would commend the suggestions and recommendation of the chairman of the commission to the careful consideration of Congress.

R. B. HAYES.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
February 28, 1881.

The message, with the accompanying documents, was referred to the Select Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, and ordered to be printed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION.

The next business on the Speaker's table was a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report of the Mississippi River commission.

The SPEAKER. That will be referred to the Committee on Commerce and printed.

Mr. CONGER. Let it be read.

Mr. BAYNE. We want to hear it.

The SPEAKER. It will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON CITY, March 1, 1881.

To the SPEAKER of the House of Representatives:

The Secretary of War has the honor to transmit to the House of Representatives, in compliance with section 5 of the act of June 23, 1879, copy of the report of the Mississippi River commission, dated January 8, 1881, together with a letter of the Chief of Engineers submitting same to the Department. In view of the importance of the subject it is respectfully requested that this report be printed.

ALEXANDER RAMSEY,
Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. That will be referred to the Committee on Commerce and printed.

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

IMPORTATION OF CLASSICAL ANTIQUITIES, ETC.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 2524) in relation to the importation of classical antiquities, returned from the Senate with amendments.

Mr. MILLS. I hope the amendments of the Senate will be concurred in with an amendment.

Mr. CONGER. Let the amendments be read.

Mr. GUNTER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GUNTER. When business on the Speaker's table was last being considered the House adjourned pending the consideration of the bill (S. No. 451) to reimburse the Creek Orphan fund.

The SPEAKER. That will be reached when the class of business to which it belongs shall be reached.

Mr. MILLS. I ask that the amendments of the Senate to this bill be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

In line 1, strike out "duty" and insert "duties generally."

At the end of line 3 insert:

"And the term 'objects of classical antiquities' as herein used shall be understood to include all such articles whether manufactured before or during the mediæval period."

After line 3, insert the following section:

"SEC. 2. That section 3022 of the Revised Statutes is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"'Imported salt in bond may be used in curing fish taken by vessels licensed to engage in the fisheries, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; and upon proof that the salt has been used in curing fish, the duties on the same shall be remitted. And exporters of meats, whether packed or smoked, which have been cured in the United States with imported salt, shall upon proof, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, that such meats have been cured with imported salt, have refunded to them from the Treasury the duties paid on the salt so used in curing such exported meats.'"

Change section 2 to section 3.

Amend the title so as to read: "An act in relation to the importation of classical antiquities, and for other purposes."

Mr. TUCKER. I make the point of order that that amendment of the Senate must receive its first consideration in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Chair sustains the point of order, because the Senate have added to the bill a proposition which comes within the scope of Rule XX, and which, if introduced into the House originally, would have been subject to the same point of order.

The bill, with the Senate amendments, was accordingly referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC MARINE SCHOOLS.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 2769) to amend the act entitled "An act to encourage the establishment of public marine schools," approved June 20, 1874, so as to extend it to the ports of Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and Galveston; returned from the Senate with amendments.

Mr. CONGER. Let the amendments of the Senate be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

In line 5 strike out "and."

At the end of the bill add the following: "And in Narraganset Bay."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act to encourage the establishment of public marine schools,' approved June 30, 1874, so as to extend it to the ports of Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Galveston, and in Narraganset Bay."

Mr. ALDRICH, of Rhode Island. I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. CLYMER. I make a point of order on those amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] moves to concur in the Senate amendments. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLYMER] makes a point of order.

Mr. CLYMER. I withdraw the point.

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I renew the point of order.

The SPEAKER. What point of order does the gentleman make?

Mr. WHITTHORNE. That the amendment increases expenditures and is not in the direction of retrenchment.

The SPEAKER. That rule does not apply. The only question is whether Rule XX is applicable; that is, whether this amendment is such an amendment as if it had originated in the House would have required the bill to go to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. The amendment does not make any appropriation at all. The Chair overrules the point of order.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Rhode Island, moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in, and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES FOR AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the joint resolution (H. R. No. 186) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish States, for the use of agricultural colleges, one set of standard weights and measures, and for other purposes.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

In line 4, strike out "any."

In same line, strike out "college" and insert "colleges."

In lines 4 and 5, strike out "is maintained in whole or in part by State appropriations" and insert "have received a grant of land from the United States."

At the end of line 6, to insert: "Provided, That the cost of each set shall not exceed $200; and a sum sufficient to carry out the provisions of this resolution is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. WARNER. I move to concur in the amendments of the Senate. They are merely verbal. The object is simply to provide agricultural colleges with standard instruments.

The amendments were concurred in.

Mr. WARNER moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BAKER. I rise to submit a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman for that purpose.

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House No. 6529, making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: "In lieu of the sum proposed insert '$175,000;'" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: "In lieu of the sum proposed insert '$325,000;'" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment numbered 4, and agree to the same.

JOHN H. BAKER,
HIESTER CLYMER,
ERASTUS WELLS,
Managers on the part of the House.
W. B. ALLISON,
JAS. B. BECK,
NEWTON BOOTH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. BAKER. I call for the reading of the statement accompanying the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the bill making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for other purposes, submit the following detailed statement in explanation of the action recommended in the report submitted:

The effect of the action recommended on amendment 1 is to make the appropriation for protection, preservation, and repair of fortifications and other works of defense $175,000 instead of $200,000, as proposed.

On amendment 3, makes the sum for armament of sea-coast fortifications $325,000 in lieu of $250,000, as proposed.

On amendment 4, inserts the following:

"And the President is authorized to select a board, to consist of one engineer officer, two ordnance officers, and two officers of artillery, whose duty it shall be to make examination of all inventions of heavy ordnance and improvements of heavy ordnance and projectiles that may be presented to them, including guns now being constructed or converted under direction of the Ordnance Bureau; and said board shall make detailed report to the Secretary of War, for transmission to Congress, of such examination, with recommendation as to what inventions are worthy of actual test, and the estimated cost of such test; and the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for such purpose."

JNO. H. BAKER,
ERASTUS WELLS,
HIESTER CLYMER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. BAKER. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The main question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the report was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

CALVIN BRONSON.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 2269) for the relief of Calvin Bronson.

The amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

At the end of the bill add the following:

"In full satisfaction of an illegal tax assessed upon certain smoking-tobacco and paid by him under protest."

Mr. BRIGHT. I move that the House concur in the amendment.

Mr. CONGER. Let the bill be read as it will stand if amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized and directed to pay to Calvin Bronson $11,211, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, in full satisfaction of an illegal tax assessed upon certain smoking-tobacco and paid by him under protest.

Mr. WHITE. Was there a report in this case?

The SPEAKER. None is required under the rules. This is a House bill with a Senate amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. BRIGHT moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENGINEER GRADUATES OF NAVAL ACADEMY.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 5627) to amend section 1486 of the Revised Statutes, in order to preserve the meaning of the original law from which it was taken, with reference to the rank of engineer officers, graduates of the Naval Academy.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

In lines 2 and 3 strike out the words "'service' in lines 5 and 6," and insert "'accordingly,' at the end of the section."

Mr. CONGER. Let the bill be read as it will stand as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That section 1486 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended by inserting after the word "accordingly," at the end of the section, the words: "Provided, That nothing in this section shall be so construed as to give to any officer of the staff corps precedence of, or a higher relative rank than that of, another staff officer in the same grade and corps, and whose commission in such grade and corps antedates that of such officer."

Mr. TALBOTT. I move concurrence in the Senate amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. TALBOTT moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

GOVERNMENT LAND IN VINCENNES.

The next business on the Speaker's table was a bill (H. R. No. 3742) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to sell certain real estate belonging to the United States, and vesting title to certain other lands in the city of Vincennes, in the State of Indiana, and for other purposes, returned from the Senate, with amendments.

The amendments were read, as follows:

Page 2, line 15, after the word "city," insert "and cause the same to be appraised at its fair cash value."

Page 2, line 24, after the word "cash," insert "at not less than the appraised value."

Mr. CONVERSE. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands to move the House concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. CONGER. Let the bill be read in extenso.

The bill was read as it would be with the Senate amendments.

Mr. CONVERSE. If I may be allowed one word in explanation, I will say that the only change is in simply requiring the land to be appraised, and that it shall not be sold for less than the appraised value. Both amendments are right. I move concurrence.

The amendments of the Senate were concurred in.

Mr. CONVERSE moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendments of the Senate were concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

HOMESTEAD SETTLEMENTS.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 2165) to amend section 2297 of title 32 of the Revised Statutes, relating to homestead settlers, returned from the Senate with an amendment, as follows:

In line 3 strike out all after the word "provided" down to and including the word "land," and in line 5 insert as follows:

"That where there may be climatic reasons, the Commissioner of the General Land Office may, in his discretion, allow the settler twelve months from the date of filing in which to commence his residence on said land, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe."

Mr. DUNNELL. Let the bill be read as it will be amended.

The bill, as amended, was read.

Mr. CONVERSE. I move the House non-concur in the amendments of the Senate and ask for a committee of conference.

Mr. DUNNELL. I move to concur.

Mr. POEHLER. I will state to my colleague that I introduced this bill, and as it is now amended it will not answer the purpose for which it was introduced.

Mr. DUNNELL. I withdraw my motion to concur.

Mr. POEHLER. I think it can be amended in the committee of conference so as to make it exactly right.

Mr. CONVERSE. I move to non-concur and ask for a committee of conference.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONVERSE moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PURCHASING TOBACCO FOR THE NAVY.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 4477) to regulate the mode of purchasing tobacco for the United States Navy, returned from the Senate with the following amendments:

In line 7, after "New York," insert "Harrisburgh, Pennsylvania."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "Lynchburgh, Petersburgh, Danville," and insert "Raleigh, North Carolina."

Line 9 strike out "Rochester, New York."

Mr. TALBOTT. I move to non-concur in the amendments of the Senate and ask for a committee of conference, and on that motion I demand the previous question.

Mr. McMILLIN. Oh, no; let us concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. ARMFIELD. I move to concur.

Mr. TALBOTT. I have demanded the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurrence.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 87, noes 30.

Mr. PRICE. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa makes the point of no quorum. The Chair appoints as tellers Mr. PRICE and Mr. McMILLIN.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 127, noes 32.

So the amendments of the Senate were concurred in.

ADDITIONAL LAND DISTRICT, KANSAS.

The next business on the Speaker's table was a bill (H. R. No. 4411) to establish an additional land district in the State of Kansas, returned from the Senate with amendments.

Mr. CONGER. What becomes of the joint resolution (H. R. No. 340) in reference to the distribution of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD?

The SPEAKER. That has been signed by the President and is now a law. The pending question is on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. No. 4411) to establish an additional land district in the State of Kansas, which will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 3, strike out "27" and insert "31."
Page 1, line 6, strike out "third" and insert "fourth."
Page 1, line 7, strike out "16" and insert "21."
Page 1, line 7, strike out "27" and insert "31."

Mr. CONGER. Let the bill be read as it will be as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the following described territory in the State of Kansas, to wit, commencing at the southeast corner of township 35 south, range 31 west of the sixth principal meridian, on the south boundary of the State of Kansas; thence west on said southern boundary to the western boundary of said State; thence north on said western boundary to the fourth standard parallel south; thence east along said parallel to the northeast corner of township 21 south, range 31 west, and thence south to the place of beginning, in the State of Kansas, shall constitute an additional land district, to be called the southwestern land district, the location for the office of which shall be designated by the President of the United States, and shall by him from time to time be changed as the public interest may seem to require.

SEC. 2. That the President be, and he hereby is, authorized, whenever the public interests shall require, to appoint, in accordance with existing laws authorizing appointment to office, a register and a receiver for the district hereby created, who shall each be required to reside at the site of the office for said district, have the same powers, responsibilities, and emoluments, and be subject to the same acts and penalties which are, or may be, prescribed by law in relation to other land offices of the United States.

SEC. 3. That all sales and locations made at the offices of the districts in which the lands embraced in this district have hitherto been included, situated wholly within the limits of this district, which shall be valid and right in other respects up to the day on which the new office shall go into operation, be, and the same are hereby, confirmed.

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas. I move to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to ask how many land offices there are in that State already?

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas. I want to state, in response to my friend from Michigan, that some of the settlers in this part of the State have to go from one hundred to one hundred and fifty miles to reach a land office. This part of the State is filling up very rapidly and there is need for additional offices.

The motion to concur in the Senate amendments was agreed to.

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas, moved to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REFUNDING THE NATIONAL DEBT.

The next business on the Speaker's table was the bill (H. R. No. 4592) to facilitate the refunding of the national debt.

The Senate amendments were read, as follows:

In line 15, printed bill, section 1, strike out "in the" and insert "to an."
In same line strike out "of."
In lines 16 and 17 insert "of denomination of $50 or some multiple of that sum."
In lines 18 and 19 insert "payable semi-annually."
In line 20 strike out "ten" and insert "twenty."
In line 21 strike out "certificates in the" and insert "Treasury notes to an."
In line 22 strike out "of" and insert "not exceeding."
In line 23 strike out "twenty and fifty."
In lines 24 and 25 insert "or some multiple of that sum not exceeding one hundred thousand dollars."
In line 25 strike out "the" and insert "a."
In line 26 strike out "of" and insert "not exceeding."
In line 27 insert "payable semi-annually."
In lines 29 and 30 insert "and no Treasury note of a less denomination than $100 shall be registered."
In line 31 strike out "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes."
In line 40 insert "publication of."
In line 16, at the end of the section, insert:
"It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to authorize public subscriptions, at not less than par, to be received at all depositories of the United States, and at all national banks, and such other banks as he may designate, for the bonds and for the Treasury notes herein provided for, for thirty days before he shall contract for or award any portion of said bonds or Treasury notes to any syndicate of individuals or bankers, or otherwise than under such public subscriptions; and if it shall happen that more than the entire amount of said bonds and Treasury notes, or of either of them, has been subscribed within said thirty days, he shall award the full amount subscribed to all persons who shall have made bona fide subscriptions for the sum of two thousand dollars or less, at rates most advantageous to the United States, and the residue ratably among the subscribers in proportion to the amount by them respectively subscribed, at rates most advantageous to the United States."
In section 2, line 3, strike out "certificates" and insert in line 4 "Treasury notes."
In line 10 strike out "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes."
In line 11 strike out "but none of the provisions of this act shall apply to the redemption or exchange of any of the bonds issued to the Pacific Railway Companies."
At the end of the section insert "but none of the provisions of this act shall apply to the redemption or exchange of any of the bonds issued to the Pacific Railway Companies."
In section 3 strike out lines 1, 2, and 3: "Authority to issue bonds and certificates to the amount necessary to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby granted;" and in line 3 insert "the."
Strike out in line 5 "provided that" and insert "and."
Strike out in line 7 "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes."
Strike out in line 8 "one-quarter" and insert "one-half."
In section 4, line 3, insert "temporarily."
In lines 6, 7, 8, and 9 insert "which shall from time to time be repaid and replaced out of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds or Treasury notes authorized by this act."
In line 12 strike out "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes authorized by this act."
In lines 13 and 14 strike out "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes."
In section 5, line 1, strike out "May" and insert "July."

Add section 6, as follows:

"SEC. 6. That the payment of any of the bonds hereby authorized, after the expiration of five years, shall be made in amounts to be determined from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, the bonds so to be paid to be distinguished and described by the dates and numbers, beginning for each successive payment with the bonds of each class last dated and numbered; of the time of which intended payment or redemption the Secretary of the Treasury shall give public notice, and the interest on the particular bonds so selected at any time to be paid shall cease at the expiration of thirty days from the publication of such notice."

Change section 6 to section 7.

Mr. CONGER. I ask for the reading of the bill as it is proposed to be amended by the Senate.

The bill was read with the Senate amendments.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to make a point of order upon this bill that it should go to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of certain amendments proposed by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. It has already been there, and has received consideration in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. CONGER. I think the Chair has ruled before I have made the point of order. There are certain amendments in this bill which have been incorporated by the Senate which should receive their first consideration in Committee of the Whole under the rule.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Michigan indicate what amendment he refers to?

Mr. CONGER. I will refer now to the amendment on page 3 of the printed bill beginning at line 41, including line 59, the entire amendment in italics. I refer to the amendment of the Senate beginning with the words:

It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe to authorize, &c.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Michigan make a point of order upon that amendment?

Mr. CONGER. I do.

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to know if it would be in order to move concurrence in the Senate amendments to this bill?

The SPEAKER. That would be the first motion.

Mr. McMILLIN. I desire to make that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan makes the point of order upon the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. CONGER. Under Rule XX I make the point of order that any amendment of the Senate to any House bill shall be subject to the point of order that it shall first be considered in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union if, originating in the House, it would be subject to that point. I make the point as to several of these Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. Make one at a time, please.

Mr. CONGER. Then I make it upon that amendment of the Senate which is numbered 16 in this printed bill, commencing at line 41, on page 3, down to and including line 59, to which I have just referred.

The SPEAKER. What point of order does the gentleman make?

Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order that if this provision had originated in the House it would have been subject to the point of order that it should have its first consideration in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman raise the question that it would have been subject to the point of order if it had originated in the House?

Mr. CONGER. I do.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman thinks it would have been subject to the point of order in the House. Do I understand that to be the gentleman's opinion?

Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order that if it had originated in the House it would have been required under the rules to have had its first consideration in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and therefore under Rule XX, coming here as a Senate amendment, it is subject to the point of order.

Mr. HASKELL. Rule XX and Rule XXIII also cover this point. The third clause of Rule XXIII is applicable to it. This rule has reference to the original point, that is where it originates in the House; and Rule XX provides for the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. What branch of Rule XXIII does the gentleman from Kansas refer to?

Mr. HASKELL. To the third clause of Rule XXIII.

Mr. CONGER. Let the Clerk read the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

All motions or propositions involving a tax or charge upon the people; all proceedings touching appropriations of money, or bills making appropriations of money or property, or requiring such appropriation to be made, or authorizing payments out of appropriations already made, or releasing any liability to the United States for money or property, shall be first considered in a Committee of the Whole, and a point of order under this rule shall be good at any time before the consideration of a bill has commenced.

Mr. CONGER. Rule XX I have already read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan now makes the point that under the third clause of Rule XXIII, and under the provisions of Rule XX, that amendment to which he has referred, if originating in the House, would have been subject to the point of order that it should have had its first consideration in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union. Does the gentleman from Michigan desire to be heard upon the point of order?

Mr. CONGER. I desire to say that this is a proposition of the Senate; that if it were an original bill of the House referring to the disposition of property of the United States, it would necessarily have had its first consideration in the House in Committee of the Whole. It disposes of the property of the United States.

Mr. CARLISLE. I would ask the gentleman from Michigan if there is anything in the Senate amendment No. 16, which appropriates any part of the money or the property of the United States?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that the amendment to which the gentleman from Michigan asks attention, if introduced in the House as a separate bill, being a matter directing the Secretary of the Treasury to make rules, regulations, &c., for this specific purpose, would have gone to the House Calendar.

Mr. HASKELL. Before the Chair renders a final decision, may I say a word?

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. HASKELL. The body of this bill, the Chair will admit, provides for the authorization, the manufacture, and the making of certificates of indebtedness of the United States. It provides for a bond and for certain other securities.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is only directing his attention at present to a single amendment.

Mr. HASKELL. I will come to that. That is the scope of the bill—the authorization and preparation of bonds and certificates of the United States debt obligations, current securities. Now, the language of the Senate amendment, No. 16, provides for the disposition of that property. They are negotiable notes. The bill provides for their making, and the wording of the Senate amendment, new matter that this House has never considered, provides the way, the manner, and the means of putting those securities out of the possession of the United States into the hands of private individuals. It is property of the United States and most valuable property. The amendment is therefore subject to the point of order.

Mr. WARNER. The amendment is a mere regulation directory of what precedes in the bill. It directs how that may be carried out and does not involve any expenditure at all.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is clear on the point of order made by the gentleman from Michigan that if this amendment was a bill in the House it would not be subject to the point of order but would go to the House Calendar. The Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. I make then a point of order on the amendment in section 3, page 4, of the printed bill.

And the expense of preparing, issuing, advertising, and disposing of the bonds and Treasury notes authorized to be issued, shall not exceed one-half of one per cent.

In the original bill there was a provision for bonds and "certificates." Here it is for "Treasury notes." In the original bill the House provided that one-quarter of 1 per cent. should be the cost of preparing, issuing, &c. In the Senate amendment is a proviso that one-half of 1 per cent. shall be the cost.

The SPEAKER. The point the gentleman from Michigan makes is that because the Senate has increased the amount to be allowed in that connection the amendment is subject to the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. The Senate has put in a proposition which increases that expense $1,750,000 whatever the form may be. And the Senate has provided for an expenditure on what was not in the House bill at all, namely, the preparation, &c., of Treasury notes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is a mere difference of designation.

Mr. CONGER. There is an increase in the amount of $1,750,000.

The SPEAKER. If the Chair gathers the point of order correctly, and if he does not the gentleman will correct him, it is that this is subject to a point of order because the Senate have increased the expense to one-half of 1 per cent.

Mr. CONGER. And also that it is for a different object.

The SPEAKER. The provision of the Constitution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

The SPEAKER. Now the Senate simply in this case amended in a legitimate way authorized by the Constitution by increasing the amount. The House had in Committee of the Whole considered the question of the amount to be paid. And it constantly happens that the Senate under the Constitution and under their rules, and not at variance with the House rules, increases the amount in a House bill.

Mr. CONGER. But I supposed we were acting under Rule XX of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair includes both rules in his remark. The Chair spoke of the "rules" of the House. The Chair thinks it was a legitimate amendment for the Senate to make, to increase the amount. The House originally provided for an appropriation. If the House had not provided for any appropriation, there might be room for discussion. But the House already provided for an appropriation, and the Senate has simply said that under the authority given in the Constitution, in its spirit and letter, it has amended and increased the amount. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. ROBESON. I wish to say we are not questioning the constitutionality of that amendment. We only say that when we consider it, it must be under our rules in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. The Chair says, under the Constitution, which is higher than the rules of either or both Houses, the Senate has the power to amend in the manner in which the Senate has amended in this case.

Mr. REED. We do not question at all the right of the Senate to make the amendment. We only say that under our rules it is an amendment which ought to be considered in Committee of the Whole House.

The SPEAKER. There is no rule of the House that would send a bill to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union that had already been considered in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, in connection with an appropriation, in consequence of the Senate merely adding an increase.

Mr. REED. The Senate also substitutes Treasury-notes for certificates.

The SPEAKER. That is a matter of denomination.

Mr. CONGER. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to say one word in reference to the appeal. The gentleman from Michigan makes the point of order that the increase of this particular appropriation makes the amendment obnoxious to the rule requiring it to be considered in Committee of the Whole House. If this had been a new provision, the point of order would have been well taken; but as this is simply an amendment in reference to a subject which has already been considered by the House, it is not a new proposition, but simply increases the amount already agreed upon by the House.

Now, to illustrate: If the Committee of the Whole House had put a provision in the bill fixing a particular amount, and when the bill came into the House a motion had been made to increase that amount, no person would say that that would carry the bill back into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HATCH. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HATCH. The Chair has already decided the point of order, and my point is that debate is not in order.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order upon the point of order, but upon the appeal.

Mr. CARLISLE. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. CONGER. Not while I hold the floor.

Mr. SPRINGER. I thought the gentleman had yielded the floor.

Mr. CONGER. I had the floor, but the gentleman from Illinois, being livelier than I, took possession of it for a moment.

Mr. ROBESON. The gentleman from Illinois is a SPRINGER. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not desire to spring a trap on you, however.

Mr. CONGER. I think this is a very proper occasion to test the validity of our rules. Disagreeing with the Speaker in his judgment of Rule XX, I desire to have the opinion of the House upon it, and the Chair undoubtedly desires it likewise. Now I will read Rule XX:

> Any amendment of the Senate to any House bill shall be subject to the point of order that it shall first be considered in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union if, originating in the House, it would be subject to that point.

Here in this amendment of the Senate is a proposition to add $1,750,000 to the expenditure of the Government under this proposed law. It is a proposition which, originating in the House, and authorizing the expenditure of $1,750,000, it is admitted by all must go to the Committee of the Whole.

The Senate has put an amendment upon this bill which proposes an expenditure of $1,750,000 more than the House proposed. If such a proposition as that, appropriating one and three-quarter millions of the money of the United States, can be put on the bill in the Senate and not go to the Committee of the Whole of the House, then our rule is perfectly worthless, and the Senate may put on amendments and increase expenditures to any extent without the House having the power to consider them in Committee of the Whole.

The reason of the thing is against the decision of the Chair. The whole object of the rule was that these propositions for expenditure of the public money should be considered by the House in Committee of the Whole. Under the ruling of the Chair how easy it is to avoid this rule. For instance, the House passes a bill appropriating $100. That bill goes to the Senate, and the Senate puts on an amendment increasing the amount to $100,000,000. If the rule be as the Speaker now holds, there is no remedy; and if the majority of the House desire to pass such a bill without consideration in Committee of the Whole, attaching the hundred-million proposition of the Senate to the one-hundred bill of the House, under the ruling of the Chair it could be done.

It seems to me that the absurdity of the proposition should make us pause before we establish such a ruling as that. I feel it to be my duty to appeal from the decision of the Chair, in order that the House and the Speaker both may consider this question, which has come up frequently, and which must come up frequently hereafter.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say that the subject-matter of this bill was treated in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and an appropriation was attached to the bill by the House. The simple act of the Senate was to increase that appropriation.

Mr. REED. The Senate has also substituted "Treasury notes" for "certificates."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] does not include that in his point of order, does he?

Mr. CONGER. I stated that distinctly.

The SPEAKER. The Chair holds that that is a mere denomination.

Mr. CONGER. I stated in my place that I included that in my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair again desires to say that the subject-matter of this bill was considered by the House in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and to it was attached an appropriation. The gentleman from Michigan appeals from the decision of the Chair. The Chair has decided that the Senate having increased the amount as in their judgment was necessary to secure the execution of the object originally considered by the House in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union——

Mr. CONGER. And for a different object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman holds that thereby, in view of that increase by the Senate, the bill shall again go to the Committee of the Whole. Let us illustrate. That point of order would send every bill with a Senate amendment to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, if it had one dollar of increase in it.

Mr. PRICE. Will not this bear on the question?

Mr. CONGER. I desire the Chair in making the statement of what I appeal from to say also what I said "and for another purpose."

The SPEAKER. The Chair has overruled the point of order in reference to "another purpose," because it is a mere denomination. The Chair rules that that would not take it to the Committee of the Whole, because a bill simply designating the indebtedness would go to the House Calendar.

Mr. PRICE. There is one point which I think the Chair has not considered. It will be remembered by the Chair, because the Chair took part in that discussion, that this very question was before the House in Committee of the Whole, and the House in Committee of the Whole refused to make the amount $3,500,000. The House decided by a vote that it would make it but $1,750,000; and the Senate has done just what the House refused to do.

The SPEAKER. The House can recede or insist. The question is upon laying the appeal on the table.

The question was taken; and upon a division there were—ayes 114, noes 26.

Mr. PRICE. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is raised that no quorum has voted. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. CARLISLE, and the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. CONGER.

Mr. CONGER. Well, let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, there being fifty in the affirmative; more than one-fifth of the last vote.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 173, nays 29, not voting 88; as follows:

YEAS—173.

Aiken,	Davis, Horace	Kimmel,	Sawyer,
Aldrich, William	Davis, Lowndes H.	King,	Scales,
Armfield,	Deering,	Kitchin,	Scoville,
Atherton,	De La Matyr,	Klotz,	Shallenberger,
Atkins,	Deuster,	Knott,	Shelley,
Bachman,	Dibrell,	Ladd,	Sherwin,
Baker,	Dick,	Le Fevre,	Simonton,
Beale,	Dickey,	Lindsey,	Slemons,
Belford,	Dunn,	Lowe,	Smith, William E.
Beltzhoover,	Dunnell,	Martin, Benj. F.	Sparks,
Berry,	Dwight,	Martin, Edward L.	Speer,
Blackburn,	Einstein,	Mason,	Springer,
Blake,	Elam,	McKenzie,	Stevenson,
Bouck,	Errett,	McKinley,	Talbott,
Bragg,	Evins,	McLane,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Brewer,	Felton,	McMahon,	Taylor, Robert L.
Briggs,	Finley,	McMillin,	Thompson, P. B.
Bright,	Ford,	Miles,	Thompson, W. G.
Browne,	Forney,	Miller,	Tillman,
Buckner,	Forsythe,	Mills,	Townsend, Amos
Burrows,	Fort,	Morrison,	Tucker,
Butterworth,	Frost,	Morse,	Turner, Oscar
Cabell,	Frye,	Muldrow,	Upson,
Caldwell,	Gillette,	New,	Van Aernam,
Calkins,	Goode,	Nicholls,	Waddill,
Cannon,	Gunter,	O'Neill,	Ward,
Carlisle,	Hammond, N. J.	O'Reilly,	Warner,
Carpenter,	Harris, John T.	Orth,	Washburn,
Chalmers,	Hatch,	Osmer,	Weaver,
Clardy,	Hawk,	Page,	Wellborn,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hawley,	Persons,	Wells,
Clark, John B.	Hazelton,	Philips,	White,
Clements,	Henderson,	Poehler,	Whiteaker,
Clymer,	Herbert,	Prescott,	Whitthorne,
Cobb,	Hill,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Colerick,	Hiscock,	Rice,	Willis,
Converse,	Hooker,	Richardson, J. S.	Wilson,
Cook,	Hostetler,	Richmond,	Wise,
Covert,	House,	Robertson,	Wood,
Cowgill,	Hunton,	Robinson,	Wright,
Cox,	Hurd,	Rothwell,	Yeates.
Cravens,	Jones,	Russell, Daniel L.
Culberson,	Kenna,	Ryon, John W.
Davidson,	Ketcham,	Samford,

NAYS—29.

Aldrich, N. W.	Davis, George R.	McGowan,	Starin,
Bailey,	Fisher,	Newberry,	Updegraff, J. T.
Bayne,	Heilman,	Norcross,	Wilber,
Bisbee,	Hubbell,	Price,	Willits,
Bowman,	Jorgensen,	Ray,	Young, Thomas L.
Brigham,	Lapham,	Reed,
Claflin,	McCoid,	Richardson, D. P.
Conger,	McCook,	Smith, A. Herr

NOT VOTING—88.

Acklen,	Geddes,	Loring,	Ryan, Thomas
Anderson,	Gibson,	Lounsbery,	Sapp,
Ballou,	Godshalk,	Manning,	Singleton, J. W.
Barber,	Hall,	Marsh,	Singleton, O. R.
Barlow,	Hammond, John	Mitchell,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bicknell,	Harmer,	Money,	Steele,
Bingham,	Harris, Benj. W.	Monroe,	Stephens,
Bland,	Haskell,	Morton,	Stone,
Bliss,	Hayes,	Muller,	Thomas,
Blount,	Henkle,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Boyd,	Henry,	Myers,	Turner, Thomas
Camp,	Herndon,	Neal,	Tyler,
Caswell,	Horr,	O'Brien,	Updegraff, Thomas
Chittenden,	Houk,	O'Connor,	Urner,
Coffroth,	Humphrey,	Overton,	Valentine,
Crapo,	Hutchins,	Pacheco,	Vance,
Crowley,	James,	Phelps,	Van Voorhis,
Daggett,	Johnston,	Phister,	Voorhis,
Davis, Joseph J.	Joyce,	Pound,	Wait,
Ellis,	Keifer,	Robeson,	Williams, C. G.
Ewing,	Kelley,	Ross,	Yocum,
Ferdon,	Killinger,	Russell, W. A.	Young, Casey.

So the appeal from the decision of the Chair was laid on the table.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. JORGENSEN with Mr. BEALE, until half past six this evening.

Mr. CRAPO with Mr. GIBSON.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS with Mr. LOUNSBERY.

Mr. HASKELL with Mr. WISE, on all questions for to-night.

Mr. BICKNELL with Mr. BOYD, until six o'clock to-day.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois, with Mr. MILES, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. BLOUNT with Mr. MONROE, on this vote.

Mr. OVERTON with Mr. ROSS, on all questions.

Mr. MANNING with Mr. CAMP, for two hours, Mr. CAMP reserving the right to vote on a demand for the yeas and nays.

Mr. STEELE with Mr. HARRIS of Massachusetts, on all questions for the remainder of the day, except that either may vote to make a quorum.

Mr. HAYES with Mr. ELLIS, for this day; but either may vote to make a quorum.

Mr. BLAND with Mr. CHITTENDEN, until six o'clock this evening, Mr. BLAND reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. ACKLEN with Mr. HORR, for to-day.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. TUCKER. With a view to giving members an opportunity to obtain some refreshment, and with a view further of pressing this bill to final consideration to-night, I move that the House now take a recess until eight o'clock. And I desire to give notice that when the House shall reconvene I will press the consideration of this bill to final action.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the gentleman to put off the reassembling of the House until half past eight o'clock. Some gentlemen must go to the cars about that time.

Several MEMBERS. That is right.

Mr. TUCKER. I will not object. I am very glad for once to be able to agree with my friend from Michigan.

The motion of Mr. TUCKER was agreed to; and accordingly (at five o'clock and thirty minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until half past eight o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 8.30 o'clock p. m.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WARD, from the Commitee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 709) for the relief of William S. Burgess and others;

A bill (H. R. No. 1542) for the relief of Charles Clinton, of New Orleans, late assistant treasurer at New Orleans;

A bill (H. R. No. 2503) for the relief of John H. W. Riley, of California;

A bill (H. R. No. 3451) for the relief of George W. Brower;

A bill (H. R. No. 3785) appropriating money for the erection of a penitentiary in the Territory of Dakota;

A bill (H. R. No. 4261) for the relief of Henry B. Eastman;

A bill (H. R. No. 4590) to provide for the sale of certain property owned by the United States in the District of Columbia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4663) to admit free of duty one of the bells of Saint Michael's chimes, Charleston, South Carolina, which has been sent to England to be recast;

A bill (H. R. No. 5389) for the relief of Samuel Harper;

A bill (H. R. No. 5532) establishing a life-saving station at Louisville, Kentucky; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6493) to provide for the construction of a public building at Jackson, in the State of Mississippi.

JAMES VANCE, ETC.

Mr. UPSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask by unanimous consent to take up for consideration at this time Senate bill No. 1268, for the relief of James Vance or his legal representatives and the legal representatives of William Vance.

Mr. WARNER. I demand the regular order of business.

REFUNDING BILL.

The SPEAKER. The regular order being demanded, the House proceeds to the consideration of the unfinished business.

Mr. TUCKER. The bill which is now before the House——

Mr. CONGER. I have some points of order on this bill yet to make.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state them.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to make the point of order first on amendment 26, which provides for the expenditure of money from time to time, to be repaid and replaced out of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds or Treasury notes authorized by this act. This amendment of the Senate provides for the payment of $50,000,000 not in the original bill. I make the point of order that must go to the Committee of the Whole to have its first consideration, being the payment of money independent of anything in the House bill. It has not had consideration as yet in the House. It is an entirely new proposition for the disposition of the public moneys of the United States. It has not been considered by the House, and is liable to the points which Rules XX and XXIII impose on the Senate amendments. It does not come under the class of cases upon which the Speaker ruled before.

Mr. CARLISLE. If I understand the gentleman from Michigan, his point of order is made on that part of the Senate amendment 26 which requires the $50,000,000 to be paid into the Treasury again, and not that portion which requires payment of any appropriation out of the Treasury. I suppose the Speaker can have no difficulty in ruling upon that.

Mr. CONGER. I thought I made my point so clear that it might be understood at once. The twenty-sixth amendment of the Senate is in these words:

Which shall from time to time be repaid and replaced out of the proceeds of the sale of bonds and Treasury notes authorized by this act.

Mr. WARNER. Yes, replaced in the Treasury.

Mr. CARLISLE. Put into the Treasury of the United States out of the proceeds of the sales of the bonds.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Michigan through?

Mr. CONGER. I await the decision of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The amendment of the Senate is germane to the original text of the bill, that is it relates to the identical $50,000,000 provided for in the original text of the House bill, which has already met the requirements of the rule, that it shall be first considered in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. In fact, it is a mere modification of the original text of the House bill. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, I now make the point of order on section 6, an entirely new section, which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the payment of any of the bonds hereby authorized, after the expiration of five years, shall be made in amounts to be determined from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, the bonds so to be paid to be distinguished and described by the dates and numbers, beginning for each successive payment with the bonds of each class last dated and numbered; of the time of which intended payment or redemption the Secretary of the Treasury shall give public notice, and the interest on the particular bonds so selected at any time to be paid shall cease at the expiration of thirty days from the publication of such notice.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Michigan desire to be heard on his point of order?

Mr. CONGER. Yes, sir, for a moment. Now, Mr. Speaker, here is a provision which has never been before the House until now, for the payment of bonds hereby authorized after the expiration of five years, in amounts to be determined from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury at his discretion. It provides for the payment of from five to seven hundred million dollars out of the Treasury, and after the expiration of five years. It has never been considered in the House. It disposes of money and property of this Government in amounts ranging from five to seven hundred million dollars. Not much of a sum I admit to require consideration in the Committee of the Whole where every little pension bill for payment of $8 a month to a soldier has to go. It embraces payments to that amount.

And if the rule be worth anything, or the necessity of the rule is apparent at all, a rule which requires bills appropriating money or providing for the appropriation of money or the disposition of any property of the United States, whatever the rule may say in its broadest extent I hold that it is manifestly applicable here. This is one of those provisions, and the last one in this bill, and I have saved it until the last, so that the Speaker may determine and consider whether a proposition contemplating as this does to dispose of five to seven hundred million dollars out of the Treasury of the United States, shall, by the ruling of the Speaker, be taken from the consideration of the Committee of the Whole, when the disposition of an acre of land, a pension of $8 a month, or the disposition of a dollar of money, is subject to the point of order. I want the Speaker to rule whether this disposition of millions and hundreds of millions of money can be swept away here from the consideration of the Committee of the Whole House, where it properly belongs, by the simple ruling of the Speaker of this House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to say, in connection with the point of order, that the payment of bonds mentioned in this section is provided for in a prior section of the bill. The section to which the gentleman takes exception mentions in fact that there is authority by prior sections of the bill for the disposition of these bonds. This section simply regulates or establishes rules in reference to the manner of the payment of these bonds provided for in prior parts of the bill. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have a record upon that, and appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. TUCKER. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. PAGE. Will the gentleman from Virginia yield to me to ask a question before the appeal is taken? I would like to ask him if the Committee on Ways and Means have amendments which they propose to this bill, and if they will be offered, and we are to have a vote on them?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. PAGE. On amendments offered by the committee?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia, which is to lay on the table the appeal of the gentleman from Michigan from the decision of the Chair. Does the gentleman desire a record by yeas and nays?

Mr. CONGER. No; it is not necessary.

The SPEAKER. The question is on laying on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The appeal was laid on the table.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, in respect to the bill which is now before the House, I believe it is free from points of order which have been suggested in reference to it. I have been authorized by the Committee on Ways and Means to propose to the House to concur in the Senate amendments as mentioned in the paper which I now send to the Clerk. I am also directed to move to concur with the amendment of the Senate, No. 16, with an amendment proposed by the committee, as stated in the paper which I also send to the Chair.

Mr. McMILLIN. I desire to reserve all points of order.

Mr. TUCKER. The committee have directed me to move concurrence in the sixteenth amendment of the Senate, on page 3 of the bill, with certain amendments which I have sent to the desk.

Mr. SPRINGER. I would suggest to the gentleman from Virginia that he allow a vote first on the Senate amendments which are to be accepted.

Mr. TUCKER. Then, in section 4 of the printed bill——

Mr. CONGER. I object to the gentleman's amendments being considered in this manner.

Mr. TUCKER. I believe I have the floor.

Mr. CONGER. Well, now my friend will probably suspend until the point of order is decided; he should not be so technical.

Mr. TUCKER. If the gentleman desires to make a point of order as to the method in which I am now proceeding I will yield the floor; if not, I do not desire to yield.

Mr. CONGER. I do make the point of order as to the method of proceeding.

The SPEAKER. What is the point of order?

Mr. CONGER. That the amendments which have been incorporated by the Senate must be proposed and voted upon in their regular sequence. Let us have the amendments seriatim to vote upon.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I think we should have the privilege of knowing exactly how the amendments are to be acted upon, that is to say, that these amendments in which it is proposed to concur be stated, and those which are not to be concurred in be stated separately.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan makes the point of order that the amendments of the Senate to the bill under consideration must be taken up in the order in which they appear on the bill. The Chair thinks that is correct.

Mr. TUCKER. Then I move the previous question on the several amendments of the Senate mentioned in the paper I have sent to the desk.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Will the gentleman allow me to present an amendment to the twenty-seventh amendment of the Senate?

Mr. TUCKER. I will state to the gentleman from Indiana that I do not believe the twenty-seventh amendment is one of those mentioned in the paper which I have sent to the desk.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I ask for the reading of the paper.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Indiana, so that he will have an opportunity of presenting his amendment subsequently if it be admissible.

The Clerk will read the amendments which the gentleman from Virginia, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, as the Chair supposes by direction of that committee, suggests and on which he demands the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. That is not a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not so stated.

Mr. CONGER. I suppose these amendments are to be read one by one, and acted upon separately.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will cause them to be read in their consecutive order.

Mr. CONGER. One by one and subject to amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Committee on Ways and Means recommend through its chairman concurrence in certain amendments that can be voted upon separately, or in gross, unless gentlemen object. If a separate vote is demanded, it is the right of the House to have it upon each one.

Mr. CONGER. We wish to offer other amendments.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Virginia moves to concur and demands the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. If he does that, he cannot in my humble opinion get the previous question to-night. There has been an understanding that there should be an opportunity to offer amendments.

Mr. TUCKER. We are perfectly willing to try conclusions with the gentleman on that subject.

Mr. CONGER. There should be the right to offer amendments.

Mr. TUCKER. I move concurrence in the amendments mentioned on the paper sent to the Clerk's desk and ask the previous question on them.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I desire to ask a single question. It is, if the gentleman from Virginia cannot make his motion to concur and non-concur without prejudice to the rights of anybody, whether the House cannot be placed in possession of the recommendations of the committee and still be entitled to separate votes on the amendments?

The SPEAKER. Certainly. The right of any member to demand a separate vote cannot be taken away.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. It has not been stated, I understand, what amendments the committee propose to concur in.

The SPEAKER. Not yet.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I think the House would like to know what the committee propose, and then we can go to work intelligently. I hope the gentleman from Michigan, with that understanding, will let the report of the committee be made in full. It occurs to me that can be done without the loss of the rights of any one and greatly to the advantage of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not suffer any one to lose any right.

Mr. HASKELL. If the previous question be ordered on twenty-seven amendments, there will be no opportunity for members to offer amendments.

Mr. CONGER. I desire the Chair to inform me how we can have a separate vote, if the previous question be ordered on twenty-seven amendments.

The SPEAKER. They need not be voted upon in gross. As soon as it is required, a separate vote on any amendment can be had.

Mr. CONGER. The previous question cannot be ordered on them till they are presented for concurrence or non-concurrence.

The SPEAKER. The amendments in the list sent to the desk are amendments pending before the House, in every one of which the gentleman from Virginia asks concurrence and demands the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. But other gentlemen may desire to offer amendments to those amendments.

The SPEAKER. Then the previous question must be voted down. The object of ordering the previous question is to cut off debate and amendment from those amendments.

Mr. FORT. Why cannot the gentleman from Michigan put in his amendments before the previous question is ordered, and let them be voted upon under the operation of the previous question?

Mr. ATKINS. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry, but I shall wait till members on the floor cease their colloquies.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to have order. Gentlemen will resume their seats.

Mr. ATKINS. The inquiry I wish to make is this: Has a motion been made to concur in all the amendments?

The SPEAKER. That motion has not been made.

Mr. ATKINS. I thought a motion had been made to concur in all the amendments.

Mr. TUCKER. If gentlemen will allow me, I will make a statement that will explain the whole matter. The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom this bill when it came from the Senate with amendments was not referred, took the bill, however, into their consideration the other day and, on a full and free conference, the committee agreed I believe nem. con. to the amendments of the Senate which I have mentioned in the paper first sent to the desk, enumerating twenty-six or twenty-seven amendments of the Senate, as to which I was instructed on behalf of the committee to move concurrence.

There were amendments to which the Committee on Ways and Means proposed amendments on the part of the House; and I am instructed by the committee to propose in the House those amendments to amendments of the Senate. I was going on to state what those amendments were when I was interrupted by the gentleman from Michigan. But the gentleman from Michigan knows as well as I do that the amendments which are mentioned in the first paper sent to the desk were, I believe unanimously, by the committee recommended to the House for entire concurrence.

Mr. CONGER. I have not seen the paper and know nothing about it.

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman has not seen the paper, but he knows the fact.

Mr. CONGER. I do not know what is in the paper.

Mr. TUCKER. But the gentleman knows the fact. And he knows I would not state what was not true when standing here to make a report from the committee.

Mr. CONGER. That is not the question, what is true or what is not true.

Mr. TUCKER. I do not desire any indorsement from the gentleman from Michigan on that subject, and other members of the committee will bear me out in what I have stated.

Mr. CONGER. I hope the gentleman is not at all in a condition to be taken out.

Mr. TUCKER. I did not hear what the gentleman from Michigan said, and I do not care.

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Virginia would have enjoyed it had he heard it.

Mr. TUCKER. No doubt. What I say is that the Committee on Ways and Means have instructed me to move concurrence in the amendments of the Senate enumerated upon the first paper sent to the Clerk's desk; and in those amendments I now move the concurrence of the House and ask the previous question.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Before the vote is taken on the previous question I ask that those amendments be read.

The SPEAKER. They will be.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois, (to Mr. TUCKER.) Why not go on now and state all that you propose to do?

Mr. HAWLEY. Give us the whole programme at once.

Mr. FRYE. I wish to ask the gentleman from Virginia a question. The demand being made for the previous question, did the gentleman from Virginia intend to preclude the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] from offering an amendment to the fifth section, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] from offering an amendmont?

Mr. TUCKER. Unquestionably not.

Mr. FRYE. I so supposed.

Mr. TUCKER. My friend from Maine knows or might well presume that I intended to reserve, as was agreed in the committee, the right of the gentleman from Michigan to offer his amendment, and of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] to offer an amendment. I intend to carry out the agreement made by the Committee on Ways and Means upon the principles of uberrima fides, perfect good faith, which even carping censoriousness must applaud and at which calumny will be silent.

Mr. CONGER. I must say I am glad of that. [Laughter.]

Mr. FRYE. The gentleman from Virginia does not understand me as implying any censure upon him?

Mr. TUCKER. None at all.

Mr. FRYE. I suppose the gentleman would carry out the agreement of the committee; but as he had not mentioned those two amendments at all in his former remarks, it was left an open question——

Mr. TUCKER. My friend from Maine will notice that when I was going on to mention what I proposed to do, I was interrupted by the point of order of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. REED. As I understand the gentleman from Virginia, the previous question is only called on such amendments as have already been offered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] desires that the amendments indicated by number in the paper which the gentleman from Virginia has sent to the desk be read. [Cries of "That is right!"] The Chair directs the reading.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Ways and Means propose concurrence in the following amendments of the Senate:

First amendment:

In line 15, section 1, of the printed bill strike out "in the" and insert the words "to an."

Second amendment:

In the same line strike out the word "of."

Third amendment:

In the sixteenth line of the first section, after the word "dollars," insert "of denominations of $50, or some multiple of that sum."

Fourth amendment:

After the words "per annum" in the nineteenth line of the section 1, insert the words "payable semi-annually."

Fifth amendment:

In line 20, section 1, strike out the word "ten," and insert the word "twenty."

Sixth amendment:

In line 21, same section, strike out the words "certificates in the" and insert "Treasury notes to an."

Seventh amendment:

In line 22, same section, strike out the word "of" and insert the words "not exceeding."

Eighth amendment:

In line 23, same section, strike out the words "twenty and fifty."

Ninth amendment:

After the word "dollars," in line 23, same section, insert the words "or some multiple of that sum not exceeding $1,000."

Tenth amendment:

In line 25, same section, strike out "the" and insert "a."

Eleventh amendment:

In line 26, same section, strike out the word "of" and insert the words "not exceeding."

Twelfth amendment:

In line 27, same section, after the words "per annum," insert the words "payable semi-annually."

Thirteenth amendment:

After the word "issue," in line 29, same section, insert the words "and no Treasury note of a less denomination than $100 shall be registered."

Fourteenth amendment:

In line 31, same section, strike out the word "certificates" and insert the words "Treasury notes."

Fifteenth amendment:

In line 40, same section, insert before the word "notice" the words "publication of."

Seventeenth amendment:

In line 3, section 2, strike out the word "certificates" and insert the words "Treasury notes."

Eighteenth amendment:

In line 10, same section, strike out the word "certificates" and insert the words "Treasury notes."

Nineteenth amendment:

In lines 11, 12, and 13, same section, strike out the words "but none of the provisions of this act shall apply to the redemption or exchange of any of the bonds issued to the Pacific Railway Companies."

Twentieth amendment:

After the word "destroyed," in line 15, same section, insert the words "but none of the provisions of this act shall apply to the redemption or exchange of any of the bonds issued to the Pacific Railway Companies."

Twenty-first amendment:

In section 3 strike out lines 1 and 2, and line 3 down to the word "the."

Twenty-second amendment:

In line 5, same section, strike out the words "provided that, ' and insert in lieu thereof the word "and."

Twenty-third amendment:

In line 7, same section, strike out the word "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes."

Twenty-fourth amendment:

In line 8, same section, strike out the words "one-quarter," and insert in lieu thereof the words "one-half."

Twenty-sixth amendment:

In line 6, section 4, after the words "this act," insert "which shall from time to time be repaid and replaced out of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds or Treasury notes authorized by this act."

Twenty-seventh amendment:

In line 12, section 4, strike out the word "certificates" and insert the words "Treasury notes."

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I desire to offer an amendment to that amendment.

Mr. TUCKER. Where does the gentleman's proposed amendment come in?

Mr. DE LA MATYR. After the word "act," in line 13.

Mr. TUCKER. I have no objection to allowing the gentleman's amendment to be read for information.

Mr. FRYE. If the gentleman is going to open this matter to amendment from one member, he must open it to every amendment which any gentleman may desire to offer.

Mr. TUCKER. I say the gentleman may have the amendment read for information. But I object to the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The previous question if ordered would cut off the amendment. [Cries of "Read!" "Read!"] The amendment which the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] desires to offer will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the twenty-seventh amendment by adding after the words "Treasury notes authorized by this act," in the twelfth and thirteenth lines, the following:

"Provided, That whenever any national banking association shall retire its circulation in whole or in part as provided by law, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be issued and placed in circulation in lawful manner a like amount of legal-tender Treasury notes in addition to those now in use as currency, and of the character and denominations now authorized; and no national banking association so diminishing its circulation, or which may have retired any portion of its circulating notes since the 18th of February, 1881, shall hereafter be permitted to increase the amount of its circulating notes."

Mr. TUCKER. I cannot admit that amendment. I call the previous question on my motion to concur.

Mr. CONGER. Let us understand clearly what we are doing. I desire to know whether if the previous question be called——

Mr. TUCKER. The Clerk has not read all the amendments in which we propose to concur.

Mr. CONGER. Let all the amendments be read.

The Clerk continued as follows the reading of the amendments in which the Committee on Ways and Means proposed concurrence:

Twenty-eighth amendment:

In lines 13 and 14, section 4, strike out the word "certificates" and insert the words "Treasury notes."

Thirtieth amendment:

Insert as section 6 the following:

"That the payment of any of the bonds hereby authorized after the expiration of five years, shall be made in amounts to be determined from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, the bonds so to be paid to be distinguished and described by the dates and numbers, beginning for each successive payment with the bonds of each class last dated and numbered; of the time of which intended payment or redemption the Secretary of the Treasury shall give public notice, and the interest on the particular bonds so selected at any time to be paid shall cease at the expiration of thirty days from the publication of such notice."

Thirty-first amendment:

Number section 6 as section 7.

Mr. TUCKER. Those are the amendments upon which the Committee on Ways and Means move concurrence, on which I ask the previous question.

Mr. PAGE. Now, let me ask the gentleman from Virginia to allow the amendments that are to be proposed by the Committee on Ways and Means to be read. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. TUCKER. I have no objection to that, but it was objected to when proposed awhile ago.

Mr. PAGE. It seems to me the House ought to know what amendments are to be proposed by the committee; and I understand the gentleman from Virginia has no objection.

Mr. TUCKER. None in the world.

Mr. PAGE. Then let them be read from the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The amendments will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

It is proposed to concur in the sixteenth amendment with the following amendment:

In line 55 of section 1, after the word "subscriptions," strike out the words "for the sum of $2,000 or less" and insert in lieu thereof the words "in order of time of said subscriptions."

In line 56, same section, after the word "States," strike out the remainder of the section.

Mr. TUCKER. I send up the other amendment which the committee proposes, as the House seems to desire to know all that the committee proposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 3, section 4, strike out the word "temporarily," and insert in lieu the words "from time to time."

In the same line, after the word "dollars," insert the words "at any one time."

In line 11, of the same section, after the word "of," insert the word "any."

In line 12, after the word "or," insert the words "of the."

At the end of section 5 add the following:

"Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal or in any manner affect or modify sections 5220, 5222, 5223, and 5224 of the Revised Statutes of the United States of America."

Mr. TUCKER. Those are all the amendments that the committee propose. It was agreed by the committee that there should be reserved to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] the right to offer each one amendment—all these amendments to be brought within the influence of the previous question.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I want my amendment pending to the twenty-seventh amendment of the Senate.

Mr. MILLS. I have the floor.

Mr. WARNER. And the gentleman from Texas yields to me.

Mr. GILLETTE. Will the gentleman from Virginia allow gentlemen on either side of the House to place their amendments before the House? I wish to call his attention to the fact that the national party has no representative on that Committee on Ways and Means, and we have agreed to an amendment, and I ask him to allow that amendment to be placed before the House for a vote.

Mr. WARNER. I offer the following amendment to the twenty-first amendment of the Senate, as follows:

In addition to the bonds and Treasury notes hereby authorized to be issued, the Secretary of the Treasury is futher authorized and required to issue United States notes, under the provisions of titles 38 and 39 of the Revised Statutes, to an amount equal to the national-bank circulation surrendered pending and during the process of retunding under this act, and no more; and said notes shall be paid out in the current expenditures of the Government, and kept as part of the paper circulation; and interest-bearing bonds of the United States equal in amount to the notes so issued shall be redeemed and canceled in addition to the bonds otherwise redeemed and.

Mr. TUCKER. Where does that come in?

Mr. McMILLIN. Before the amendment is announced, I move for concurrence in the Senate amendments. I do not like to antagonize the committee having this matter in charge, but I would like to know whether it would be in order to press that motion now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain the motion and examine the point.

Mr. WEAVER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Was the amendment just read offered or merely read for information?

Mr. WARNER. It was offered as an amendment.

Mr. WEAVER. I move to amend, before the words "Treasury notes," by inserting the words "legal tender."

Mr. CONVERSE. I rise to a question of order. I understand the gentleman from Virginia to move the previous question on certain amendments to the bill. I submit now whether other amendments can be offered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair supposes these were being read for information and that the House would first dispose of the amendments which the committee recommend should be concurred in, and then, if they desired to close debate and prevent further amendment, they would order the main question, which would cut off further amendments and debate thereon.

Mr. CONVERSE. I ask for a vote on the previous question. These amendments, as I understand, do not relate to that part of the bill in reference to which the gentleman from Virginia has demanded the previous question.

The SPEAKER. They do not.

Mr. CLYMER. This twenty-first amendment is recommended by the committee to be concurred in.

The SPEAKER. If the previous question is ordered it does not come in.

Mr. CLYMER. I understand the position to be this: the gentleman from Virginia moving concurrence has, by the request of the committee, yielded the floor to the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. Then it had better come out of the list of amendments.

Mr. TUCKER. I want to know, for I could not hear, where the gentleman from Texas offered his amendment to come in.

Mr. REAGAN. The difficulty could be obviated by proceeding regularly and disposing of the amendments proposed by the committee in their order. We could then take up the amendments of the Senate including the amendment of my colleague and that of the gentleman from Michigan.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the demand for the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. On the amendments of the committee? The gentleman said I was to be permitted to offer an amendment.

Mr. FRYE. Did the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WARNER] offer the amendment for the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. MILLS?]

Mr. WARNER. I did.

Mr. FRYE. Then that is the amendment of the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. MILLS.]

Mr. WARNER. That is correct.

Mr. TUCKER. I understand the amendment of my friend from Texas is to the twenty-first amendment of the Senate. There are certain erasures proposed by the Senate, and that amendment is to come in where the erasures are. I would suggest that the twenty-first amendment, in which I on behalf of the committee move concurrence, be left out of the motion I make for concurrence.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I move the twenty-seventh amendment be left out, upon which I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. REAGAN. If the gentleman would take up the amendments and act upon them regularly, we could easily dispose of them.

Mr. TUCKER. I insist on my demand for the previous question.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I desire to know whether the twenty-seventh amendment is included.

The SPEAKER. It is included as one of the amendments upon which the gentleman moves concurrence and upon which he demands the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman says I was to be permitted to offer an amendment. All the other amendments have been read for information. I ask that mine also be read for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the fifth section by striking out "July" in the first line and all after the words "provided further" in line 20 to and including the word "repeal" in line 24, and by inserting the word "September" in the first line in place of the word "July" proposed to be stricken out.

Mr. McMILLIN. I desire to reserve all points of order.

Mr. CARLISLE. I suggest to the gentleman from Michigan that there is no amendment now in order.

The SPEAKER. It is being read only for information.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Before we vote I want to know whether the twenty-seventh amendment is included in this motion?

The SPEAKER. It is one of the amendments included on which the previous question is demanded. The question is now on ordering the main question.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 101, noes 60.

So the main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote asked on any amendment?

Mr. CONGER. On each amendment.

Mr. MILLS. I suppose there will hardly be a separate vote required on those in which we have moved concurrence.

Mr. CONGER. There is a difference of opinion about that.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendments.

The amendments were read, and those numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4 were severally concurred in.

Amendment numbered 5 was read, as follows:

In line 20 of the first section strike out the word "ten" and insert "twenty;" so that it will read: "Redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after five years and payable twenty years from the date of issue."

Mr. WHITTHORNE. I object to that and ask a separate vote upon it.

Mr. WEAVER. I demand a separate vote on that amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Amendments numbered 6, 7, and 8 were severally concurred in.

Amendment numbered 9 was read, as follows:

In line 24 of section 1 insert, after the word "dollars," "or some multiple of that sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. WEAVER. I demand a separate vote upon that.

The amendment was agreed to.

Amendments numbered 10, 11, and 12 were severally concurred in.

Amendment numbered 13 was read, as follows:

After the word "issue," in line 29 of the first section, insert: "And no Treasury note of a less denomination than $100 shall be registered."

Mr. CONGER. On that I want a separate vote. Let the amendment he again read.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. CONGER. The poor man's note cannot be registered. [Derisive cries on the democratic side.] I hear the groans, and they sound natural.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 103, noes 55.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Amendments numbered 14, 15, 17, 18, 19, 20, 22, and 23 were severally concurred in.

Amendment numbered 24 was read, as follows:

Strike out after the word "exceed," in the eighth line of the third section, the words "one-quarter" and insert "one-half;" so that if amended it will read as follows: "And the expense of preparing, issuing, advertising, and disposing of the bonds and Treasury notes authorized to be issued shall not exceed one-half of 1 per cent."

Mr. CONGER. On that I ask a vote.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 120, noes 25.

So the amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 26 was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 27 was read, as follows:

In line 12 of section 4, after the words "bonds or," strike out the word "certificates" and insert "Treasury notes authorized by this act."

Mr. GILLETTE. I ask a separate vote on that amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendments numbered 28 and 30 were severally concurred in.

Mr. BUCKNER. Mr. Speaker, in the printed bill which we have there is an amendment numbered 29, at the beginning of section 5, to strike out "May" and insert "July."

The SPEAKER. That was taken out of the list furnished to the desk.

Mr. CARLISLE. There has been no report made upon that.

Amendment 31 was concurred in.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the votes by which the several amendments of the Senate were concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now report the next amendment which it is proposed to concur in with an amendment.

Mr. TUCKER. On the twenty-first amendment of the Senate, in section 3, which proposes to strike out the following words:

Authority to issue bonds and certificates to the amount necessary to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby granted, and the—

I move concurrence in the amendment of the Senate; and on that and the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Texas to that amendment I call the previous question.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I ask the gentleman from Virginia to allow me to move a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Texas. He certainly will have the fairness to do that and give us a vote on the substitute.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will be guided entirely by the wishes of the gentleman from Virginia in charge of the bill.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I hope the gentleman will allow me to offer a substitute to the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia moves to concur.

Mr. MILLS. Do I understand the gentleman from Virginia to move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment?

Mr. TUCKER. No; I move to concur with the Senate amendment.

Mr. MILLS. Then I move concurrence with the amendment which I have offered.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. And I offer a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MILLS. Your substitute is not in order; my amendment is.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield for the substitute?

Mr. TUCKER. I have no authority to do so.

Mr. WEAVER. I hope the gentleman will yield. It is the only amendment that we will ask to offer and will not consume any time.

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman from Virginia cannot yield.

Mr. WEAVER. He can yield by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will take the liberty of asking what the gentleman's instructions are?

Mr. TUCKER. I would be glad to oblige my friend from Iowa, but I am instructed by the committee to do what I have done.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will suggest to the gentleman from Indiana how he may test the sense of the House in reference to this matter: by having a record on the demand for the previous question.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. That would give us no opportunity of presenting the amendment.

Mr. WEAVER. It will not offer a test in any manner whatever.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it would be indicative of the sense of the House as to the question of allowing the substitute to be presented.

Mr. TUCKER. I understand the previous question has been ordered upon this amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood that this amendment was withdrawn from the demand for the previous question on the amendments which have been acted upon.

Mr. WEAVER. On what is the previous question demanded?

The SPEAKER. Why, the gentleman from Virginia states the committee instructs him to demand the previous question on the amendment of the Senate in which he moves to concur, but allows the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] to concur with an amendment to come in.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I see no reason why the gentleman from Virginia cannot allow to be offered a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. CARLISLE. The gentleman from Virginia moved the previous question and yielded to allow the gentleman from Texas to present his amendment.

The SPEAKER. To be voted on?

Mr. CARLISLE. It was presented and then the previous question was ordered.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no; not ordered!

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not said anything to the contrary of what is stated by the gentleman from Kentucky. But the House has not ordered the main question on the twenty-first amendment of the Senate. It was taken out from the list of amendments on which the main question was ordered.

Mr. CARLISLE. If it was taken out from the list on which the previous question was ordered, then I misunderstood the gentleman from Virginia.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the main question on the twenty-first amendment of the Senate, in which the gentleman from Virginia moves concurrence, and yields to allow the gentleman from Texas to present a motion to concur with an amendment.

Mr. PRICE. And the previous question will cover both?

The SPEAKER. Now the demand is for the previous question on those two propositions.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I ask the gentleman from Virginia to yield that I may offer a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the main question.

Mr. DICK. I ask that the amendment of the gentleman from Texas be again read.

Mr. WARNER. In order not to jeopardize the bill at this late day and defeat refunding, with the consent of the gentleman from Texas, I withdraw the amendment.

The SPEAKER. Then the gentleman from Virginia moves the previous question on concurring in the Senate amendment.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. I renew the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WEAVER. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WEAVER. Has the previous question been ordered on this amendment?

The SPEAKER. It has not, but it has been demanded.

Mr. WEAVER. At the proper time I wish to be recognized to move to recommit the bill to the committee with instructions to incorporate in the bill the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. DE LA MATYR.] That I will have the right to do.

The SPEAKER. That would make a test vote if it is allowed. The Chair does not decide now whether that would be in order or not. As many as are in favor of ordering the main question will say "ay"——

Mr. CONGER addressed the Chair.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan rise?

Mr. CONGER. I desired the Chair not to put the question till the amendment which had been withdrawn had been renewed by a member of this House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman in charge of the amendment withdrew it. The gentleman had the right to control his own amendment, no decision having been made thereon; and the demand for the previous question came solely on the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. CONGER. But the amendment of the gentleman from Texas was renewed.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Before the gentleman from Virginia demanded the previous question on the Senate amendment alone I renewed the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. The withdrawal of the amendment took it away from the demand of the previous question, and that demand rested only on the twenty-first amendment of the Senate.

Mr. CALKINS. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] renewed it instantly.

The SPEAKER. If the House wants to put in that amendment, it can vote down the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman had the right to renew it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not recognize that he had that right. The gentleman from Virginia was acting under instructions from his committee, and he was instructed to allow the gentleman from Texas to offer a motion to concur with an amendment. Now, that gentleman did make that motion to concur with an amendment, but susbequently withdrew it. The previous question then came upon the amendment of the Senate solely.

Mr. FRYE. The only thing that astonishes me is that the gentleman from Texas should have backed down so easily.

Mr. CLYMER. It was the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WARNER] who withdrew the amendment.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Does the Chair decide I had no right to renew the amendment of the gentleman from Texas?

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides that at this time the gentleman from Indiana cannot do what he desires.

The question being taken on ordering the main question, the Speaker stated on a viva voce vote that the "ayes" appeared to have it.

Mr. CONGER. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 108, noes 77.

Mr. CONGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, upward of fifty members voting therefor; being more than one-fifth of the last vote.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 121, nays 91, not voting 78; as follows:

YEAS—121.

Aiken,	Buckner,	Cook,	Geddes,
Armfield,	Cabell,	Covert,	Gibson,
Atherton,	Caldwell,	Cox,	Gunter,
Atkins,	Cannon,	Cravens,	Hammond, N. J.
Bachman,	Carlisle,	Davidson,	Harris, John T.
Baker,	Chalmers,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Hatch,
Beale,	Chittenden,	Deuster,	Herbert,
Beltzhoover,	Clardy,	Dibrell,	Hill,
Berry,	Clark, Alvah A.	Dick,	Hooker,
Bicknell,	Clark, John B.	Dickey,	Hostetler,
Blackburn,	Clements,	Dunn,	House,
Bland,	Clymer,	Elam,	Hunton,
Blount,	Cobb,	Evins,	Hurd,
Bouck,	Coffroth,	Finley,	Kelley,
Bragg,	Colerick,	Forney,	Kenna,
Bright,	Converse,	Frost,	Kimmel,

King,	New,	Scales,	Vance,
Kitchin,	O'Reilly,	Scoville,	Waddill,
Klotz,	Persons,	Simonton,	Warner,
Knott,	Philips,	Slemons,	Wellborn,
Le Fevre,	Phister,	Smith, Hezekiah B.	White,
Lounsbery,	Poehler,	Smith, William E.	Whiteaker,
Manning,	Prescott,	Sparks,	Whitthorne,
Martin, Benj. F.	Reagan,	Springer,	Williams, Thomas
Martin, Edward L.	Richardson, J. S.	Stevenson,	Willis,
McMahon,	Richmond,	Talbott,	Wilson,
McMillin,	Robertson,	Taylor, Robert L.	Wright,
Mills,	Ross,	Thompson, P. B.	Yeates.
Morrison,	Rothwell,	Tillman,
Muldrow,	Samford,	Tucker,
Myers,	Sawyer,	Upson,

NAYS—91.

Aldrich, N. W.	Dunnell,	Ladd,	Sherwin,
Aldrich, William	Dwight,	Lapham,	Smith, A. Herr
Anderson,	Einstein,	Mason,	Stone,
Bailey,	Errett,	McCook,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Ballou,	Ferdon,	McKinley,	Thomas,
Bayne,	Fisher,	Miller,	Thompson, W. G.
Bingham,	Ford,	Monroe,	Townsend, Amos
Bisbee,	Forsythe,	Newberry,	Updegraff, J. T.
Blake,	Fort,	Norcross,	Updegraff, Thomas
Bowman,	Frye,	O'Neill,	Urner,
Brewer,	Gillette,	Osmer,	Valentine,
Briggs,	Godshalk,	Overton,	Van Aernam,
Brigham,	Hall,	Page,	Voorhis,
Burrows,	Hammond, John	Price,	Van Voorhis,
Calkins,	Harmer,	Ray,	Ward,
Carpenter,	Hawk,	Reed,	Washburn,
Claflin,	Hawley,	Rice,	Weaver,
Conger,	Hazelton,	Richardson, D. P.	Wilber,
Cowgill,	Heilman,	Robinson,	Willits,
Crapo,	Hiscock,	Russell, W. A.	Wood,
Davis, George R.	Hubbell,	Ryan, Thomas	Yocum,
Davis, Horace	Jorgensen,	Sapp,	Young, Thomas L.
De La Matyr,	Ketcham,	Shallenberger,

NOT VOTING—78.

Acklen,	Haskell,	McCoid,	Russell, Daniel L.
Barber,	Hayes,	McGowan,	Ryon, John W.
Barlow,	Henderson,	McKenzie,	Shelley,
Belford,	Henkle,	McLane,	Singleton, J. W.
Bliss,	Henry,	Miles,	Singleton, O. R.
Boyd,	Herndon,	Mitchell,	Speer,
Browne,	Horr,	Money,	Starin,
Butterworth,	Houk,	Morse,	Steele,
Camp,	Humphrey,	Morton,	Stephens,
Caswell,	Hutchins,	Muller,	Townshend, R. W.
Crowley,	James,	Murch,	Turner, Oscar
Culberson,	Johnston,	Neal,	Turner, Thomas
Daggett,	Jones,	Nicholls,	Tyler,
Davis, Joseph J.	Joyce,	O'Brien,	Wait,
Deering,	Keifer,	O'Connor,	Wells,
Ellis,	Killinger,	Orth,	Williams, C. G.
Ewing,	Lindsey,	Pacheco,	Wise,
Felton,	Loring,	Phelps,	Young, Casey.
Goode,	Lowe,	Pound,
Harris, Benj. W.	Marsh,	Robeson,

So the main question was ordered.

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. BARBER with Mr. THOMAS TURNER, for the remainder of this legislative day on all questions, except when necessary to make a quorum.

Mr. MULLER with Mr. TYLER, for this evening.

Mr. SHELLEY with Mr. CROWLEY, on this question, reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. GOODE with Mr. LORING, for evening session of to-day, except when necessary to make a quorum.

Mr. MCLANE with Mr. BROWNE, for the remainder of the day, except to make a quorum.

Mr. ROBESON with Mr. MCKENZIE, for the remainder of the legislative day, not to interfere with a quorum.

Mr. CHITTENDEN with Mr. BUCKNER, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. FELTON with Mr. PHELPS, on this bill.

Mr. ELLIS, (having voted in the affirmative.) I voted inadvertently. I am paired with Mr. HAYES, of Illinois, and withdraw my vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill of the House No. 6529, making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 440) for the ascertainment of the amount due the Choctaw Nation;

A bill (H. R. No. 802) granting a pension to W. Botts;

A bill (H. R. No. 1452) for the relief of James B. Furman;

A bill (H. R. No. 2439) granting a pension to Henry Mills;

A bill (H. R. No. 2773) granting a pension to James P. Hunter;

A bill (H. R. No. 3450) for the relief of Lewis A. Kent;

A bill (H. R. No. 3789) for the relief of Homer Fellows;

A bill (H. R. No. 6248) directing the payment of certain awards in favor of parties therein named; and

A bill (H. R. No. 7032) to amend the act incorporating the Capitol, North O street and South Washington Railway Company.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 2637) granting a pension and arrears of pension to Johanna Meehan and minor children; and

A bill (H. R. No. 6324) to construe an act entitled "An act to relieve the churches of the District of Columbia, and to clear the title of the trustees of such property."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed and requested the concurrence of the House in bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. No. 1836) for the relief of Arthur W. Eastman; and

A bill (S. No. 2084) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue an American register to the steam-barge Tecumseh.

FUNDING BILL.

The House resumed the consideration of the Senate amendments to the bill (H. R. No. 4592) to facilitate the refunding of the national debt.

The SPEAKER. The main question has been ordered upon concurring in the twenty-first amendment of the Senate.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The question was upon concurring in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Pending the vote upon the motion to concur in the Senate amendment numbered 21, I move to commit the bill, with the Senate amendments, to the Committee on Ways and Means, with instructions to incorporate with amendment number 21 the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk to be read.

Mr. CARLISLE. I reserve all points of order upon the amendment until I hear it read.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

Provided, That whenever any national banking association shall retire its circulation, in whole or in part, as provided by law, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause to be issued and placed in circulation in lawful manner a like amount of legal-tender Treasury notes in addition to those now in use as currency, and of the character and denominations now authorized. And no national banking association so diminishing its circulation, or which may have retired any portion of its circulating notes since the 18th day of February, 1881, shall hereafter be permmitted to increase the amount of its circulating notes.

The SPEAKER. What point of order does the gentleman from Kentucky make?

Mr. CARLISLE. My point of order is that the proposed amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] is not germane to the amendment proposed by the Senate. As the bill passed the House it contained this provision:

Authority to issue bonds and certificates to the amount necessary to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby granted.

That is a clause which refers alone to the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, and nothing else, to issue bonds and certificates. The Senate proposes to strike out that provision, and nothing else. Now, the gentleman proposes to concur in the amendment with an amendment, inserting in lieu of that provision a provision upon an entirely different subject.

The SPEAKER. But this is a motion to commit with instructions.

Mr. CARLISLE. I am coming to that. If it is not competent for the House by a direct vote to strike out the provision and insert in lieu of it what the gentleman from Indiana proposes, it is not competent for the House to accomplish identically the same thing by the indirect method of instructing the Committee on Ways and Means to report the bill back with an amendment. In other words, the House cannot, in the indirect form of an instruction to any of its committees, do what the House cannot do directly by a vote on the floor; and I maintain that the House cannot, by any amendment offered on this floor, amend that Senate amendment by adopting in lieu of it a provision upon an entirely different subject.

The SPEAKER. Not germane.

Mr. CARLISLE. Not germane at all. And it not being competent for the House to do it, it cannot instruct its committee to do it.

Mr. SPRINGER. The point of order I supposed the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] was going to make was that the motion to commit with instructions was not now in order, because——

Mr. WEAVER. I submit there cannot be more than one point of order pending at a time. One point of order has been made, and on that we want to be heard.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to reserve the point of order that the motion to commit with instructions to amend is not now in order, because the case now presented does not come within the terms of the rule:

It shall be in order, pending the motion for or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain and submit a motion to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee.

The question now is, not upon the passage of the bill, but upon agreeing to a particular amendment.

Mr. HASKELL. It is upon the passage of the amendment. When the amendments have passed, the bill is passed.

Mr. WEAVER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] makes a distinction without a difference.

Mr. CONVERSE. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. I understand that this is a motion to commit an amendment with instructions. I desire to inquire as to the effect upon the bill. If the motion to commit the Senate amendment with instructions be sustained, will it not carry the bill with it?

The SPEAKER. It would take the bill, of course.

Mr. DE LA MATYR. Allow me a word in reply to the point of order. This amendment is certainly germane to the bill; and it is certainly germane to the discussions which the bill has aroused over the country. I move to commit the bill to the Committee on Ways and Means—or, if that is not in order, to the Committee on Banking and Currency—with instructions to incorporate in the bill the amendment which has been read at the desk.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, the rule under which this motion is made does not require that the amendment shall be germane to anything unless to the whole bill. The bill is in the possession of the House, and it has been repeatedly held during the present session that after the main question is ordered or before the ordering of the main question, so far as that is concerned, a motion to recommit is in order. The point made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] is certainly not a good one, because we are now voting upon the passage of this amendment; and the passage of the last amendment passes the bill. I insist that we shall not incorporate into this rule anything that is not there already. Under the rule a motion to recommit with instructions is in order.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask that clause 1 of Rule XVII be read.

Mr. HASKELL. Mr. Speaker, allow me one word on the point of order.

The SPEAKER. Certainly.

Mr. HASKELL. The point has been raised by the gentleman from Kentucky that this amendment is not germane. Now, the gentleman from Kentucky has ruled from the Chair within a week that the amendment must be germane to the bill, not to the clause. The gentleman from Kentucky also says, that in this case the bill proper is not before the House, simply the amendments. I will agree to that, but I read further from page 135 of the Manual:

A bill originating in one House is passed by the other with an amendment.

The originating House agrees to their amendment with an amendment. The other may agree to their amendment with an amendment, that being only in the second and not the third degree; for, as to the amending House, the first amendment with which they passed the bill is a part of its text.

Here is the declaration of the Manual, that when an amendment of the Senate has passed that body it becomes a part of the text. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] moves to amend a Senate amendment. If his amendment is germane to the bill and is an amendment to the Senate amendment, how are you going to avoid receiving it?

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] makes the point of order that you cannot recommit with instructions, except upon the passage of a bill. I beg leave to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that as we pass these amendments one by one we pass the bill; and when the last amendment is passed, all there is to pass has passed this House. I submit that under the rule read by the gentleman himself the motion to recommit with these proposed instructions is in order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, being of opinion that this amendment would not be germane if offered as an amendment to the Senate amendment now pending, holds that an amendment which, not being germane to the Senate amendment, would not be in order if offered in the House as an amendment, cannot come in as an amendment through the agency of an instruction to a committee.

Mr. WEAVER. Allow me a parliamentary inquiry. There is no vote on the bill now; and I ask whether this motion will be in order after the amendment——

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not decided the point raised by the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. SPRINGER,] because it is not necessary.

Mr. STEVENSON. Inasmuch as the Chair has decided that the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] is not in order, I hope the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] will allow us to take a vote on the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DE LA MATYR] by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. STEVENSON] asks unanimous consent that the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana may be allowed to be voted on.

Mr. HUNTON. I object.

The question being taken on concurring in the twenty-first amendment of the Senate, it was concurred in.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The sixteenth amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

Add to the first section the following:

"It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to authorize public subscriptions, at not less than par, to be received at all depositories of the United States, and at all national banks, and such other banks as he may designate, for the bonds and for the Treasury notes herein provided for, for thirty days before he shall contract for or award any portion of said bonds or Treasury notes to any syndicate of individuals or bankers, or otherwise than under such public subscriptions; and if it shall happen that more than the entire amount of said bonds and Treasury notes, or either of them, has been subscribed within said thirty days, he shall award the full amount subscribed to all persons who shall have made bona fide subscriptions for the sum of $2,000 or less, at rates most advantageous to the United States, and the residue ratably among the subscribers in proportion to the amount by them respectively subscribed, and at rates most advantageous to the United States."

Mr. TUCKER. I am instructed by the Committee on Ways and Means to move, after the word "subscriptions," to strike out the words "for the sum of $2,000 or less" and insert in lieu thereof "in order of time of said subscriptions," and after the word "States" to strike out these words: "in proportion to the amount by them respectively subscribed, at rates most advantageous to the United States."

The SPEAKER. This is an amendment to the sixteenth amendment of the Senate.

Mr. TUCKER. To which the committee have recommended an amendment.

Mr. ATKINS. Is it the unanimous report of the Committee on Ways and Means?

Mr. TUCKER. It is not. I demand the previous question.

Mr. WHITE. Let it be again reported.

The amendment to the Senate amendment was again reported.

Mr. McMILLIN. Is it in order to move to concur in the Senate amendments? I do not want this bill killed by having to go back to the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The vote must first be taken on concurring with the amendment.

Mr. PAGE. I ask the acting chairman of this committee——

The SPEAKER. He is chairman of the committee.

Mr. PAGE. I ask him whether this comes by authority of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. TUCKER. It does, sir.

Mr. BURROWS. Must not the vote be taken on concurring?

The SPEAKER. On page 205 of the Manual is the following:

A motion to amend an amendment from the other House takes precedence of a motion to agree or disagree.

[Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. CONGER. What is the question?

The SPEAKER. It is on concurrence in the Senate amendment with the amendment.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. The question then is on concurrence in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The pending proposition is to concur in the pending amendment with an amendment.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 77, noes 79.

Mr. CONGER demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken, and decided in the negative—yeas 103, nays 111, not voting 76; as follows:

YEAS—103.

Aldrich, N. W.	Crapo,	Kelley,	Sapp,
Aldrich, William	Davis, George R.	Ketcham,	Shallenberger,
Anderson,	Davis, Horace,	Lapham,	Sherwin,
Bailey,	Dick,	Marsh,	Smith, A. Herr
Baker,	Dunnell,	Mason,	Stone,
Ballou,	Dwight,	McCook,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Bayne,	Einstein,	McKinley,	Thomas,
Belford,	Errett,	Miller,	Thompson, W. G.
Beltzhoover,	Ferdon,	Monroe,	Townsend, Amos
Bingham,	Fisher,	Morse,	Tucker,
Bisbee,	Ford,	Newberry,	Updegraff, J. T.
Blake,	Forsythe,	Norcross,	Updegraff, Thomas
Bowman,	Fort,	O'Neill,	Urner,
Boyd,	Frye,	Osmer,	Van Aernam,
Brewer,	Gibson,	Overton,	Van Voorhis,
Briggs,	Godshalk,	Page,	Voorhis,
Brigham,	Hall,	Prescott,	Ward,
Burrows,	Hammond, John	Price,	Warner,
Calkins,	Harmer,	Ray,	Washburn,
Cannon,	Hawk,	Reed,	White,
Carlisle,	Hawley,	Rice,	Wilber,
Carpenter,	Heilman,	Richardson, D. P.	Williams, C. G.
Caswell,	Hiscock,	Robinson,	Willits,
Claflin,	Hubbell,	Ross,	Wood,
Conger,	Hutchins,	Russell, W. A.	Young, Thomas L.
Cowgill,	Jorgensen,	Ryan, Thomas

NAYS—111.

Aiken,	Clark, Alvah A.	Evins,	King,
Armfield,	Clark, John B.	Finley,	Kitchin,
Atherton,	Clements,	Forney,	Klotz,
Atkins,	Clymer,	Frost,	Knott,
Bachman,	Cobb,	Gillette,	Ladd,
Beale,	Coffroth,	Gunter,	Le Fevre,
Berry,	Colerick,	Hammond, N. J.	Manning,
Bicknell,	Converse,	Harris, John T.	Martin, Benj. F.
Blackburn,	Cook,	Hatch,	Martin, Edward L.
Bland,	Covert,	Henkle,	McMahon,
Blount,	Cox,	Herbert,	McMillin,
Bouck,	Cravens,	Herndon,	Mills,
Bragg,	Culberson,	Hill,	Morrison,
Bright,	Davidson,	Hooker,	Muldrow,
Buckner,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Hostetler,	Myers,
Cabell,	Deuster,	House,	New,
Caldwell,	Dibrell,	Hunton,	Persons,
Camp,	Dickey,	Hurd,	Philips,
Chalmers,	Dunn,	Kenna,	Phister,
Clardy,	Elam,	Kimmel,	Poehler,

Reagan,	Scoville,	Talbott,	Whiteaker,
Richardson, J. S.	Simonton,	Taylor, Robert L.	Whitthorne,
Richmond,	Slemons,	Thompson, P. B.	Williams, Thomas
Robertson,	Smith, Hezekiah B.	Tillman,	Willis,
Rothwell,	Smith, William E.	Turner, Oscar	Wilson,
Samford,	Sparks,	Upson,	Wright,
Sawyer,	Springer,	Vance,	Yeates.
Scales,	Stevenson,	Waddill,

NOT VOTING—76.

Acklen,	Hayes,	McKenzie,	Ryon, John W.
Barber,	Hazelton,	McLane,	Shelley,
Barlow,	Henderson,	Miles,	Singleton, J. W.
Bliss,	Henry,	Mitchell,	Singleton, O. R.
Browne,	Horr,	Money,	Speer,
Butterworth,	Houk,	Morton,	Starin,
Chittenden,	Humphrey,	Muller,	Steele,
Crowley,	James,	Murch,	Stephens,
Daggett,	Johnston,	Neal,	Townshend, R. W.
Davis, Joseph J.	Jones,	Nicholls,	Turner, Thomas
De La Matyr,	Joyce,	O'Brien,	Tyler,
Deering,	Keifer,	O'Connor,	Valentine,
Ellis,	Killinger,	O'Reilly,	Wait,
Ewing,	Lindsey,	Orth,	Weaver,
Felton,	Loring,	Pacheco,	Wellborn,
Geddes,	Lounsbery,	Phelps,	Wells,
Goode,	Lowe,	Pound,	Wise,
Harris, Benj. W.	McCoid,	Robeson,	Yocum,
Haskell,	McGowan,	Russell, Daniel L.	Young, Casey.

So the motion to concur with the amendment was disagreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

During the roll-call a message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, announced the passage of the following bills without amendment:

A bill (H. R. No. 205) granting a pension to Jacob Gelwicks;

A bill (H. R. No. 1469) granting a pension to Mary Ann McCarrol;

A bill (H. R. No. 2549) granting a pension to Edward H. Mitchell;

A bill (H. R. No. 3309) for the relief of John T. Neale;

A bill (H. R. No. 3751) to amend chapter 198, volume 16, of the Statutes at Large;

A bill (H. R. No. 5066) to provide for the preparation of classified abridgments of all letters-patent of the United States; and

A bill (H. R. No. 1280) to amend section 2326 of the Revised Statutes, relating to suits at law affecting titles to mining claims.

It further announced the passage of the following bills with amendments in which concurrence was requested:

A bill (H. R. No. 1102) granting a pension to John S. Corlett; and

A bill (H. R. No. 2058) for the relief of Redmond Tully.

REFUNDING THE NATIONAL DEBT.

The following pairs were announced: Mr. MORTON with Mr. LOUNSBERY.

The list of names having been read,

Mr. CAMP (who had voted in the affirmative) said: Mr. Speaker, I desire to change my vote to the negative.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment; and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

Mr. CONGER. On that motion I demand the yeas and nays. We begin now to see the good faith of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 111, nays 96, not voting 83; as follows:

YEAS—111.

Aiken,	Culberson,	Kimmel,	Scales,
Armfield,	Davidson,	King,	Scoville,
Atherton,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Kitchin,	Shelley,
Atkins,	De La Matyr,	Klotz,	Simonton,
Beale,	Deuster,	Knott,	Slemons,
Beltzhoover,	Dibrell,	Ladd,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bicknell,	Dickey,	Le Fevre,	Smith, William E.
Bland,	Dunn,	Manning,	Sparks,
Blount,	Elam,	Martin, Benj. F.	Springer,
Bouck,	Evins,	Martin, Edward L.	Stevenson,
Bragg,	Finley,	McMahon,	Talbott,
Bright,	Forney,	McMillin,	Taylor, Robert L.
Buckner,	Frost,	Mills,	Thompson, P. B.
Cabell,	Geddes,	Morrison,	Tillman,
Caldwell,	Gillette,	Muldrow,	Turner, Oscar
Chalmers,	Gunter,	New,	Upson,
Clardy,	Hammond, N. J.	O'Reilly,	Vance,
Clark, Alvah A.	Harris, John T.	Persons,	Waddill,
Clark, John B.	Hatch,	Philips,	Weaver,
Clements,	Henkle,	Poehler,	Wellborn,
Clymer,	Herbert,	Reagan,	Whiteaker,
Cobb,	Herndon,	Richardson, J. S.	Whitthorne,
Coffroth,	Hill,	Richmond,	Williams, Thomas
Colerick,	Hooker,	Robertson,	Willis,
Converse,	Hostetler,	Ross,	Wilson,
Cook,	House,	Rothwell,	Wright,
Covert,	Hurd,	Samford,	Yeates.
Cravens,	Kenna,	Sawyer,

NAYS—96.

Aldrich, N. W.	Bingham,	Brigham,	Conger,
Aldrich, William	Bisbee,	Burrows,	Cowgill,
Anderson,	Blake,	Camp,	Crapo,
Bailey,	Bowman,	Cannon,	Davis, George R.
Baker,	Boyd,	Carlisle,	Davis, Horace
Ballou,	Brewer,	Carpenter,	Dick,
Bayne,	Briggs,	Claflin,	Dunnell,
Dwight,	Hubbell,	Page,	Townsend, Amos
Einstein,	Jorgensen,	Prescott,	Tucker,
Errett,	Keifer,	Price,	Updegraff, J. T.
Ferdon,	Ketcham,	Ray,	Updegraff, Thomas
Fisher,	Lapham,	Reed,	Urner,
Forsythe,	Marsh,	Rice,	Valentine,
Fort,	Mason,	Richardson, D. P.	Van Aernam,
Frye,	McCook,	Robinson,	Voorhis,
Gibson,	McKinley,	Russell, W. A.	Ward,
Godshalk,	Miller,	Ryan, Thomas	Warner,
Hall,	Monroe,	Shallenberger,	Washburn,
Hammond, John	Morse,	Sherwin,	White,
Harmer,	Newberry,	Smith, A. Herr	Wilber,
Hawk,	Norcross,	Stone,	Williams, C. G.
Hawley,	O'Neill,	Taylor, Ezra B.	Willits,
Heilman,	Osmer,	Thomas,	Wood,
Hiscock,	Overton,	Thompson, W. G.	Young, Thomas L.

NOT VOTING—83.

Acklen,	Ford,	Lounsbery,	Pound,
Bachman,	Goode,	Lowe,	Robeson,
Barber,	Harris, Benj. W.	McCoid,	Russell, Daniel L.
Barlow,	Haskell,	McGowan,	Ryon, John W.
Belford,	Hayes,	McKenzie,	Sapp,
Berry,	Hazelton,	McLane,	Singleton, J. W.
Blackburn,	Henderson,	Miles,	Singleton, O. R.
Bliss,	Henry,	Mitchell,	Speer,
Browne,	Horr,	Money,	Starin,
Butterworth,	Houk,	Morton,	Steele,
Calkins,	Humphrey,	Muller,	Stephens,
Caswell,	Hunton,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Chittenden,	Hutchins,	Myers,	Turner, Thomas
Cox,	James,	Neal,	Tyler,
Crowley,	Johnston,	Nicholls,	Van Voorhis,
Daggett,	Jones,	O'Brien,	Wait,
Davis, Joseph J.	Joyce,	O'Connor,	Wells,
Deering,	Kelley,	Orth,	Wise,
Ellis,	Killinger,	Pacheco,	Yocum,
Ewing,	Lindsey,	Phelps,	Young, Casey.
Felton,	Loring,	Phister,

So the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DIBRELL. I move to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. CONGER. I object.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. VAN VOORHIS with Mr. COX, this evening.

Mr. CONGER. Pending the reading of the pairs, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The House is now dividing.

Mr. CONGER. I thought the House had already divided.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not yet announced the result of the vote. The Clerk will conclude the reading of the pairs.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Mr. BERRY with Mr. CROWLEY, on this vote.

Mr. CALKINS with Mr. PHISTER, for the remainder of this legislative day, Mr. CALKINS being sick and Mr. PHISTER reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. CONGER. I now renew the motion that the House adjourn.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 48, noes 94.

Mr. CONGER demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 77, nays 115, not voting 98; as follows:

YEAS—77.

Aldrich, N. W.	Davis, Horace	Hutchins,	Russell, W. A.
Aldrich, William	Dick,	Jorgensen,	Shallenberger,
Bailey,	Dunnell,	Keifer,	Smith, A. Herr
Baker,	Dwight,	Ketcham,	Stone,
Ballou,	Einstein,	Lapham,	Thomas,
Bayne,	Ferdon,	McCook,	Thompson, W. G.
Bingham,	Fisher,	McKinley,	Townsend, Amos
Bisbee,	Ford,	Miller,	Updegraff, J. T.
Blake,	Forsythe,	Monroe,	Updegraff, Thomas
Boyd,	Fort,	Norcross,	Voorhis,
Briggs,	Frye,	O'Neill,	Ward,
Brigham,	Godshalk,	Osmer,	Washburn,
Burrows,	Hall,	Overton,	White,
Camp,	Hammond, John	Prescott,	Wilber,
Carpenter,	Harmer,	Price,	Wood,
Caswell,	Hawk,	Ray,	Yocum,
Conger,	Hawley,	Reed,	Young, Thomas L.
Cowgill,	Heilman,	Rice,
Crapo,	Hiscock,	Richardson, D. P.
Daggett,	Hubbell,	Robinson,

NAYS—115.

Aiken,	Chalmers,	Frost,	Klotz,
Anderson,	Clardy,	Geddes,	Knott,
Armfield,	Clark, John B.	Gibson,	Ladd,
Atherton,	Clements,	Gillette,	Le Fevre,
Atkins,	Clymer,	Gunter,	Manning,
Bachman,	Cobb,	Hammond, N. J.	Martin, Benj. F.
Beale,	Coffroth,	Harris, John T.	Martin, Edward L.
Beltzhoover,	Colerick,	Hatch,	McMahon,
Berry,	Converse,	Herbert,	McMillin,
Bicknell,	Cook,	Herndon,	Morrison,
Blackburn,	Covert,	Hill,	Morse,
Bland,	Cravens,	Hooker,	Muldrow,
Blount,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Hostetler,	Myers,
Bouck,	Deuster,	House,	New,
Bragg,	Dibrell,	Hunton,	O'Reilly,
Bright,	Dickey,	Hurd,	Persons,
Buckner,	Dunn,	Kelley,	Philips,
Cabell,	Elam,	Kenna,	Poehler,
Caldwell,	Evins,	Kimmel,	Reagan,
Cannon,	Finley,	King,	Richardson, J. S.
Carlisle,	Forney,	Kitchin,	Robertson,

Rothwell,	Smith, William E.	Tucker,	Wellborn,
Samford,	Sparks,	Turner, Oscar	Whiteaker,
Sawyer,	Springer,	Upson,	Whitthorne,
Scoville,	Stevenson,	Valentine,	Willis,
Shelley,	Talbott,	Vance,	Wilson,
Simonton,	Taylor, Robert L.	Waddill,	Wright,
Slemons,	Thompson, P. B.	Warner,	Yeates.
Smith, Hezekiah B.	Tillman,	Weaver,

NOT VOTING—98.

Acklen,	Goode,	McLane,	Sapp,
Barber,	Harris, Benj. W.	Miles,	Scales,
Barlow,	Haskell,	Mills,	Sherwin,
Belford,	Hayes,	Mitchell,	Singleton, J. W.
Bliss,	Hazelton,	Money,	Singleton, O. R.
Bowman,	Henderson,	Morton,	Speer,
Brewer,	Henkle,	Muller,	Starin,
Browne,	Henry,	Murch,	Steele,
Butterworth,	Horr,	Neal,	Stephens,
Calkins,	Houk,	Newberry,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Chittenden,	Humphrey,	Nicholls,	Townshend, R. W.
Claflin,	James,	O'Brien,	Turner, Thomas
Clark, Alvah A.	Johnston,	O'Connor,	Tyler,
Cox,	Jones,	Orth,	Urner,
Crowley,	Joyce,	Pacheco,	Van Aernam,
Culberson,	Killinger,	Page,	Van Voorhis,
Davidson,	Lindsey,	Phelps,	Wait,
Davis, George R.	Loring,	Phister,	Wells,
Davis, Joseph J.	Lounsbery,	Pound,	Williams, C. G.
De La Matyr,	Lowe,	Richmond,	Williams, Thomas
Deering,	Marsh,	Robeson,	Willits,
Ellis,	Mason,	Ross,	Wise,
Errett,	McCoid,	Russell, Daniel L.	Young, Casey.
Ewing,	McGowan,	Ryan, Thomas
Felton,	McKenzie,	Ryon, John W.

So the House refused to adjourn.

After the second roll-call,

Mr. TUCKER moved to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. ADDRICH, of Rhode Island. I object.

The Clerk proceeded to read the names of members who had voted.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. MILLS with Mr. PAGE, on this bill and its amendments, Mr. MILLS reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. RYAN, of Kansas, with Mr. WILLIAMS, of Alabama, Mr. WILLIAMS reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. DEERING with Mr. EWING.

Mr. SCALES with Mr. ERRETT, for the remainder of this day's session.

Mr. BLISS with Mr. CROWLEY.

Mr. URNER with Mr. HENKLE, for the remainder of this legislative day, except to make a quorum.

Mr. DAVIDSON with Mr. BOWMAN, for this night's session, not to break a quorum.

Mr. MANNING. I ask that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SCALES] be excused from further attendance on the House to-night. On account of illness he was compelled to leave the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. BLACKBURN.) In connection with that request the Chair also submits the request that Mr. ANDERSON, of Kansas, have leave of absence for the remainder of to-day's session on account of sickness. The gentleman from Mississippi asks that for the same reason the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. SCALES, be excused from further attendance during this day's session. Is there objection to these requests?

Mr. MARTIN, of West Virginia. I object.

Mr. MANNING. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SCALES] had to leave the House on account of illness. It was impossible for him to remain here.

Mr. MARTIN, of West Virginia. I withdraw the objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no further objection and leave of absence for the remainder of this day's session is granted to Mr. ANDERSON and Mr. SCALES.

Mr. FRYE. My colleague [Mr. LINDSEY] is in attendance on a sick daughter, and I ask that he be excused from further attendance during this day's session.

There was no objection.

Mr. BOYD. My colleague [Mr. HENDERSON] has left the House on account of sickness. I ask that he be excused.

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania. I ask that the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. JOYCE] be excused from further attendance, on account of illness.

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Pending the announcement of the vote on the motion to adjourn,

Mr. UPSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 1320) for the relief of citizens of Montana who served with the United States troops in the war with the Nez Percés, and for the relief of the heirs of such as were killed in such service;

A bill (H. R. No. 1359) for the relief of Louis P. di Cesnola, late consul at Cyprus;

A bill (H. R. No. 2705) for the relief of Joseph Clymer, of Texas;

A bill (H. R. No. 4413) for the relief of J. Scott Payne;

A bill (H. R. No. 4434) for the relief of Mrs. Martha Bridges, of Bartow County, Georgia;

A bill (H. R. No. 4607) for the relief of Passed Assistant Engineer Absalom Kirby, of the Navy;

A bill (H. R. No. 5097) appropriating money toward the expense to be incurred in the centennial celebration of the battle on Groton Heights, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 5629) to graduate the price and dispose of the residue of the Osage Indian trust and diminished reserve lands lying east of the sixth principal meridian in Kansas; and Joint resolution (H. R. No. 373) relative to printing the Agricultural Report for the year 1880.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The result of the vote on the motion to adjourn was then announced as above stated.

Mr. TUCKER rose.

Mr. CONGER. I now move the House take a recess till half past ten to-morrow morning.

Mr. TUCKER. I move——

Mr. CONGER. I insist on my motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the motion of the gentleman from Michigan in due time.

Mr. CONGER. I demand the Chair shall recognize my motion now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not recognize the gentleman from Michigan now, but recognizes the gentleman in charge of the bill.

Mr. CONGER. I rose to a privileged motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Which the Chair will entertain when the gentleman from Virginia has submitted his motion.

Mr. TUCKER. I move the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to know if my motion is not in order?

Mr. HOOKER. I hope the Chair will insist on recognizing the gentleman from Virginia, [Mr. TUCKER.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will most certainly follow the precedent of recognizing the gentleman in charge of the bill, and will thereafter recognize the gentleman from Michigan for any motion that has priority.

Mr. TUCKER. The twenty-fifth amendment of the Senate is to insert the word "temporarily" in line 3, section 4, of the printed bill. The Committee on Ways and Means instruct me to offer an amendment to strike out that word and insert in lieu thereof the words "from time to time."

Mr. CONGER. We have not finished with the sixteenth amendment. I object to going from that till it is disposed of.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The pending question is on the sixteenth amendment.

Mr. CONGER. Now, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the motion of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONGER. I ask that my motion be recognized in its order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It will not be recognized out of its order. The Chair recognizes the gentleman in charge of the bill.

Mr. CONGER. But I had addressed the Chair before the gentleman from Virginia made any motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair could not allow the gentleman from Michigan to take the gentleman from Virginia off the floor.

Mr. CONGER. If the gentleman now occupying the chair gains anything by that arbitrary ruling I wish to be informed of it to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not wish any instruction or counsel from the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONGER. That is evident enough to all of us.

Mr. TUCKER. The House has voted down the motion to concur with an amendment in the sixteenth amendment of the Senate. I move now that the House concur in that sixteenth amendment of the Senate and upon that I move the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. There must surely be the time somewhere when a privileged motion shall come in.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Which the Chair now proposes to submit. Pending which the gentleman from Michigan——

Mr. REED. Pending what?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pending the motion of the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. CONGER. What motion?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion for the previous question on concurring in the sixteenth amendment of the Senate.

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Michigan rose before that motion was made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The previous question has not been ordered.

Mr. REED. The previous question had not been called for by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] prior to the motion of the gentleman from Michigan.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan was not recognized as entitled to the floor for any such purpose.

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Michigan was entitled to the floor after the motion to concur.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Which was not the motion made by the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. REED. That was the motion made by the gentleman from Virginia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. From which conclusion the Chair dissents.

Mr. REED. It is not a conclusion; it is a question of fact.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Which the Chair states.

Mr. REED. That question of fact must be determined by the Journal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And to that the Chair appeals. The question is upon the motion made by the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. REED. If the Chair has appealed to the Journal, perhaps the Chair will wait the decision of his appeal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman want the Journal read?

Mr. REED. I want the statement from the Journal as to what motion was made by the gentleman from Virginia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the House will be patient until the journal clerk can perfect his Journal, it will be read at the request of the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. REED. And I wish to remind the Speaker pro tempore that the gentleman from Virginia must have made the motion for concurrence, otherwise he could not have called the previous question on it.

Mr. TUCKER. The previous question has been ordered upon the concurrence.

Mr. REED. And I further state that the gentleman from Virginia was in his seat when the Chair first recognized the gentleman from Michigan.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In which statement the gentleman from Maine is in error. The Chair did not recognize the gentleman from Michigan at all.

Mr. REED. I submit that I personally heard the Chair do it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair simply states that he has not recognized the gentleman from Michigan at all.

Mr. REED. The Chair stated that he recognized him.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair stated exactly the contrary of that.

Mr. CARLISLE. If the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] will allow me to say a word.

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. CARLISLE. I am satisfied that an appeal to the Journal will show this state of facts: that the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] reported a certain amendment recommended by the Committee on Ways and Means, and moved to concur in the Senate amendment with that amendment. Some gentleman on this side of the House moved to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. MCMILLIN. I myself moved to concur.

Mr. CARLISLE. And the Speaker decided that the question must be first taken on the motion to concur with an amendment. The previous question was then demanded and ordered on both motions.

Mr. REED. Very well; then the Speaker pro tempore must be in error in saying that the question now before the House is the motion of the gentleman from Virginia for the previous question.

Mr. CARLISLE. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair at the time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair at that time, and does not know the fact.

Mr. REED. Then the Chair was in error in his statement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair was in error, and accepts the statement of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] that the previous question was ordered.

Mr. REED. Then a motion for a recess is in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion for a recess is in order, and the Chair has been endeavoring to submit it to a vote of the House.

Mr. CONGER. I think the record will not show that the previous question was ordered on the motion to concur, for I made that distinct inquiry; and if the record has been correctly kept it will show that the previous question was ordered on the motion to concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is not advised.

Mr. CONGER. That, however, does not arise now; I will reserve it until the proper time. I move that the House now take a recess until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion is in order.

The question was taken upon the motion of Mr. CONGER; and upon a division there were—ayes 1, noes 54.

Mr. CONGER. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan raises the point that no quorum has voted. The Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. SAMFORD. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, there being 39 in the affirmative; more than one-fifth of the last vote.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 12, nays 112, not voting 166; as follows:

YEAS—12.

Barber,	Einstein,	Jorgensen,	Robinson,
De La Matyr,	Hall,	Prescott,	Thomas,
Dunnell,	Harmer,	Richmond,	Wilber.

NAYS—112.

Aiken,	Colerick,	Hunton,	Samford,
Armfield,	Converse,	Hurd,	Sawyer,
Atherton,	Cook,	Hutchins,	Scoville,
Atkins,	Cravens,	Kelley,	Shelley,
Bachman,	Culberson,	Kimmel,	Simonton,
Baker,	Davis, Lowndes H.	King,	Slemons,
Beale,	Deuster,	Kitchin,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Belford,	Dibrell,	Klotz,	Smith, William E.
Beltzhoover,	Dickey,	Knott,	Sparks,
Berry,	Dunn,	Ladd,	Springer,
Bicknell,	Elam,	Le Fevre,	Stevenson,
Blackburn,	Evins,	Manning,	Talbott,
Bland,	Fisher,	Marsh,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bouck,	Ford,	Martin, Edward L.	Thompson, P. B.
Bragg,	Forney,	McKenzie,	Tillman,
Bright,	Fort,	McMahon,	Tucker,
Buckner,	Frost,	McMillin,	Turner, Oscar
Cabell,	Geddes,	Mills,	Upson,
Caldwell,	Gibson,	Morse,	Vance,
Cannon,	Hammond, N. J.	Muldrow,	Waddill,
Carlisle,	Harris, John T.	New,	Warner,
Chalmers,	Hatch,	O'Reilly,	Washburn,
Clardy,	Herbert,	Persons,	Weaver,
Clark, John B.	Herndon,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Clements,	Hill,	Poehler,	Whiteaker.
Clymer,	Hooker,	Richardson, J. S.	Whitthorne,
Cobb,	Hostetler,	Ross,	Williams, Thomas
Coffroth,	House,	Rothwell,	Yeates.

NOT VOTING—166.

Acklen,	Ellis,	Mason,	Ryon, John W.
Aldrich, N. W.	Errett,	McCoid,	Sapp,
Aldrich, William	Ewing,	McCook,	Scales,
Anderson,	Felton,	McGowan,	Shallenberger,
Bailey,	Ferdon,	McKinley,	Sherwin,
Ballou,	Finley,	McLane,	Singleton, J. W.
Barlow,	Forsythe,	Miles,	Singleton, O. R.
Bayne,	Frye,	Miller,	Smith, A. Herr
Bingham,	Gillette,	Mitchell,	Speer,
Bisbee,	Godshalk,	Money,	Starin,
Blake,	Goode,	Monroe,	Steele,
Bliss,	Gunter,	Morrison,	Stephens,
Blount,	Hammond, John	Morton,	Stone,
Bowman,	Harris, Benj. W.	Muller,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Boyd,	Haskell,	Murch,	Thompson, W. G.
Brewer,	Hawk,	Myers,	Townsend, Amos
Briggs,	Hawley,	Neal,	Townshend, R. W.
Brigham,	Hayes,	Newberry,	Turner, Thomas
Browne,	Hazelton,	Nicholls,	Tyler,
Burrows,	Heilman,	Norcross,	Updegraff, J. T.
Butterworth,	Henderson,	O'Brien,	Updegraff, Thomas
Calkins,	Henkle,	O'Connor,	Urner,
Camp,	Henry,	O'Neill,	Valentine,
Carpenter,	Hiscock,	Orth,	Van Aernam,
Caswell,	Horr,	Osmer,	Van Voorhis,
Chittenden,	Houk,	Overton,	Voorhis,
Claflin,	Hubbell,	Pacheco,	Wait,
Clark, Alvah A.	Humphrey,	Page,	Ward,
Conger,	James,	Phelps,	Wells,
Covert,	Johnston,	Phister,	White,
Cowgill,	Jones,	Pound,	Williams, C. G.
Cox,	Joyce,	Price,	Willis,
Crapo,	Keifer,	Ray,	Willits,
Crowley,	Kenna,	Reagan,	Wilson,
Daggett,	Ketcham,	Reed,	Wise,
Davidson,	Killinger,	Rice,	Wood,
Davis, George R.	Lapham,	Richardson, D. P.	Wright,
Davis, Horace	Lindsey,	Robertson,	Yocum,
Davis, Joseph J.	Loring,	Robeson,	Young, Casey
Deering,	Lounsbery,	Russell, Daniel L.	Young, Thomas L.
Dick,	Lowe,	Russell, W. A.
Dwight,	Martin, Benj. F.	Ryan, Thomas

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. RUSSELL, of Massachusetts, with Mr. ROBERTSON.

Mr. WRIGHT with Mr. ANDERSON, on all questions, for the legislative session of to-day.

Mr. CRAPO with Mr. GIBSON, for this day, except to make a quorum.

Mr. BLOUNT with Mr. MCCOOK.

Mr. FINLEY with Mr. RYAN, of Kansas, on this bill, Mr. FINLEY reserving the right to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. KENNA with Mr. WARD.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Illinois, with Mr. MILES.

The result of the vote having been announced,

Mr. CONGER. No quorum!

Mr. TUCKER. If the gentleman will withdraw that point, I will move that the House take a recess.

Mr. CONGER. Very well.

Mr. TUCKER. I move that the House take a recess until to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at twelve o'clock and forty minutes a. m., Wednesday, March 2) the House took a recess until ten o'clock a. m.

MORNING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House (at ten o'clock a. m. on Wednesday, March 2) resumed its session.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I suppose the first business this morning is the question pending when we took a recess last night—the question of concurrence in Senate amendment numbered 16, the previous question having been ordered, I believe.

Mr. PRICE. Is it not a Senate amendment with an amendment reported by the Committee on Ways and Means of the House?

Mr. TUCKER. No, sir; the amendment reported by the committee was rejected.

The SPEAKER. There is a motion pending to concur in the sixteenth amendment of the Senate, and a demand thereon for ordering the main question.

Mr. CONGER. There is a call for the main question, which is not yet ordered?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is so advised—that the main question has not been ordered.

Mr. CONGER. Pending that, I move to take a recess until half-past ten o'clock.

Mr. COX. Is that in order?

The SPEAKER. The motion is in order.

Mr. CONGER. We may as well wait till members come in.

Mr. BRIGGS. There are bills on the Speaker's table to which there can be no objection; and I hope an opportunity will now be given to call them up.

Mr. CONGER. Let the question be put on my motion. I am not anxious about it being driven along, but I do not want, while I am back here smoking, to have matters going on without my knowledge.

The SPEAKER. The rule prohibits smoking.

Mr. CONGER. I asked that the question be put, so that I might go back out of the place where the rules prohibit smoking. I was making an unsuccessful effort to comply with the rules. [Laughter.]

Mr. WARNER. We have no objection to the gentleman's retiring to the smoking-room; but we cannot consent that he shall retain while there the right to object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the motion for a recess.

Mr. CONGER. My only reason for desiring the question put is that nothing else shall come in ahead of it.

The SPEAKER. The motion is in order. The Chair will submit it.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. CONGER for a recess, there were—ayes 10, noes 26.

Mr. PRICE. No quorum.

Mr. CONGER. I move a call of the House.

The question having been put on the motion for a call,

The SPEAKER said: More than fifteen members have voted for a call—a sufficient number. A call is ordered.

The roll was then called, and the following members failed to answer to their names:

Acklen,	Ewing,	Lowe,	Sapp,
Aiken,	Ferdon,	Marsh,	Sawyer,
Aldrich, Nelson W.	Finley,	Martin, Edward L.	Scoville,
Anderson,	Ford,	Mason	Simonton,
Armfield,	Forsythe,	McCoid,	Singleton, O. R.
Bailey,	Fort,	McCook,	Smith, A. Herr
Barber,	Frost,	McKenzie,	Smith, William E.
Bayne,	Frye,	Miller,	Sparks,
Beale,	Gibson,	Mitchell,	Speer,
Belford,	Gillette,	Money,	Starin,
Beltzhoover,	Godshalk,	Morse,	Steele,
Bingham,	Hall,	Morton,	Stevenson,
Bland,	Hammond, John	Muldrow,	Stone,
Bliss,	Harmer,	Muller,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bragg,	Harris, Benj. W.	Murch,	Thomas,
Bright,	Hawley,	Myers,	Tillman,
Buckner,	Hayes,	Newberry,	Townsend, Amos
Butterworth,	Hazelton,	Nicholls,	Townshend, R. W.
Caldwell,	Henderson,	Norcross,	Turner, Oscar
Calkins,	Henkle,	O'Brien,	Turner, Thomas
Camp,	Henry,	O'Connor,	Tyler,
Caswell,	Hooker,	O'Neill,	Updegraff, J. T.
Chittenden,	Horr,	O'Reilly,	Updegraff, Thomas
Clardy,	Houk,	Orth,	Urner,
Clark, Alvah A.	House,	Osmer,	Van Aernam,
Clark, John B.	Hubbell,	Overton,	Vance,
Colerick,	Humphrey,	Pacheco,	Voorhis,
Covert,	Hutchins,	Page,	Wellborn,
Cowgill,	James,	Persons,	White,
Crapo,	Johnston,	Phillips,	Wilber,
Crowley,	Jones,	Pound,	Williams, Chas. G.
Culberson,	Jorgensen,	Ray,	Williams, Thomas
Daggett,	Keifer,	Reagan,	Willis,
Davis, Horace	Kelley,	Richardson, J. S.	Wood,
Davis, Joseph J.	Killinger,	Richmond,	Wright,
Dick,	Kimmel,	Robertson,	Yeates,
Dickey,	Kitchin,	Ross,	Yocum,
Dunn,	Lapham,	Rothwell,	Young, Casey
Dwight,	Lindsey,	Russell, Daniel A.	Young, Thos. L.
Einstein,	Loring,	Russell, W. A.
Elam,	Lounsbery,	Ryon, John W.

The SPEAKER. One hundred and twenty-eight members have answered to their names.

Mr. TUCKER. I move to dispense with all further proceedings under the call.

Mr. CONGER. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 158, nays 13, not voting, 119; as follows:

YEAS—158.

Aldrich, William	Ballou,	Berry,	Bouck,
Anderson,	Barber,	Bicknell,	Bowman,
Atherton,	Barlow,	Blackburn,	Boyd,
Atkins,	Bayne,	Blake,	Brewer,
Bachman,	Beale,	Bland,	Briggs,
Baker,	Beltzhoover,	Blount,	Brigham,
Bright,	Fisher,	McMahon,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Browne,	Forney,	McMillin,	Smith, William E.
Cabell,	Geddes,	Miles,	Springer,
Caldwell,	Godshalk,	Miller,	Steele,
Cannon,	Goode,	Mills,	Stephens,
Carlisle,	Gunter,	Money,	Stevenson,
Chalmers,	Hammond, N. J.	Monroe,	Stone,
Claflin,	Harris, John T.	Morrison,	Talbott,
Clardy,	Hatch,	Morse,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Clark, John B.	Hawk,	New,	Thomas,
Clements,	Herbert,	Nicholls,	Thompson, P. B.
Clymer,	Herndon,	Orth,	Tillman,
Cobb,	Hill,	Persons,	Townsend, Amos
Coffroth,	Hooker,	Phelps,	Tucker,
Converse,	Hostetler,	Philips,	Turner, Thomas
Cook,	Hunton,	Phister,	Upson,
Cowgill,	Hurd,	Poehler,	Valentine,
Cox,	Keifer,	Prescott,	Waddill,
Cravens,	Kelley,	Ray,	Wait,
Culberson,	Kenna,	Reagan,	Ward,
Davidson,	Ketcham,	Reed,	Warner,
Davis, George R.	Kimmel,	Robinson,	Washburn,
Davis, Lowndes H.	King,	Ross,	Weaver,
Deering,	Klotz,	Rothwell,	Wells,
De La Matyr,	Knott,	Ryan, Thomas	Whiteaker,
Deuster,	Ladd,	Ryon, John W.	Whitthorne,
Dibrell,	Le Fevre,	Samford,	Wilber,
Dunn,	Lindsey,	Scales,	Willits,
Dunnell,	Manning,	Shallenberger,	Wilson,
Dwight,	Martin, Benj. F.	Shelley,	Wise,
Ellis,	McGowan,	Sherwin,	Wood,
Errett,	McKenzie,	Simonton,	Young, Thomas L.
Evins,	McKinley,	Slemons,
Felton,	McLane,	Smith, A. Herr

NAYS—13.

Burrows,	Hall,	Joyce,	Van Voorhis.
Carpenter,	Haskell,	Price,
Conger,	Hawley,	Robeson,
Forsythe,	Heilman,	Thompson, Wm. G.

NOT VOTING—119.

Acklen,	Finley,	Lounsbery,	Russell, William A.
Aiken,	Ford,	Lowe,	Russell, Daniel L.
Aldrich, N. W.	Fort,	Marsh,	Sapp,
Armfield,	Frost,	Martin, Edward L.	Sawyer,
Bailey,	Frye,	Mason,	Scoville,
Belford,	Gibson,	McCoid,	Singleton, James W.
Bingham,	Gillette,	McCook,	Singleton, O. R.
Bisbee,	Hammond, John	Mitchell,	Sparks,
Bliss,	Harmer,	Morton,	Speer,
Bragg,	Harris, Benj. W.	Muldrow,	Starin,
Buckner,	Hayes,	Muller,	Taylor, Robert L.
Butterworth,	Hazelton,	Murch,	Townshend, R. W.
Calkins,	Henderson,	Myers,	Turner, Oscar
Camp,	Henkle,	Neal,	Tyler,
Caswell,	Henry,	Newberry,	Updegraff, J. T.
Chittenden,	Hiscock,	Norcross,	Updegraff, Thomas
Clark, Alvah A.	Horr,	O'Brien,	Urner,
Colerick,	Houk,	O'Connor,	Van Aernam,
Covert,	House,	O'Neill,	Vance,
Crapo,	Hubbell,	O'Reilly,	Voorhis,
Crowley,	Humphrey,	Osmer,	Wellborn,
Daggett,	Hutchins,	Overton,	White,
Davis, Horace	James,	Pacheco,	Williams, C. G.
Davis, Joseph J.	Johnston,	Page,	Williams, Thomas
Dick,	Jones,	Pound,	Willis,
Dickey,	Jorgensen,	Rice,	Wright,
Einstein,	Killinger,	Richardson, D. P.	Yeates,
Elam,	Kitchin,	Richardson, J. S.	Yocum,
Ewing,	Lapham,	Richmond,	Young, Casey.
Ferdon,	Loring,	Robertson,

So the motion was agreed to; and all further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to correct a statement heretofore made by him. From information he then had, he stated that the main question had not been ordered on the motion to concur in the sixteenth amendment of the Senate. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which he has just been able to consult, shows that the main question was ordered. The present occupant of the chair was not in the chair at the time the question came up on concurrence in the Senate amendment numbered 16.

Mr. CONGER. The Journal will show what the actual fact is.

The SPEAKER. The Journal is the authority for the Chair.

Mr. CONGER. There is evidently an error in the RECORD. I ask the Chair to state what the Journal shows.

The SPEAKER. While the Speaker was in the chair the question came up on concurrence in the Senate amendment with an amendment, and on that the main question was ordered. The Chair is advised that it appears in the RECORD the previous question was ordered on concurrence in the sixteenth amendment; that that is the statement in the RECORD of the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE.]

Mr. WILLITS. It shows it was done while you were in the chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has never claimed that.

Mr. WILLITS. It is claimed in the RECORD.

Mr. CLYMER. The RECORD is perfectly right. The question was asked more than once of the Speaker, and the Speaker stated that the previous question was demanded on the Senate amendment with the amendment. The main question was ordered. The gentleman from Virginia moved to reconsider and lay upon the table, and the latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. That is true; but this is on the question of concurrence.

Mr. CONGER. The Journal ought to show. There should be no question about it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the Journal shows the main question on concurrence in the sixteenth amendment was not ordered.

Mr. TUCKER. Was not ordered?

The SPEAKER. The Journal so states.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. WARD, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that said committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 7101) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes.

DEFICIENCY BILL.

Mr. McMAHON. I ask by unanimous consent to interrupt these proceedings for the purpose of reporting the last of the appropriation bills and which has not yet been disposed of. It is the bill (H. R. No. 7251) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, and for prior years, and for those certified as due by the accounting officers of the Treasury in accordance with section 4 of the act of June 14, 1878, heretofore paid from permanent appropriations, and for other purposes.

Mr. TUCKER. So far as I am concerned, I will yield for the purpose of disposing of that bill.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Rhode Island. I demand the regular order.

Mr. CONGER. We cannot dispose of that deficiency bill and adjourn for this legislative day, as there are but a few minutes left. If the Chair wishes the next legislative day to commence at eleven o'clock, we had better adjourn now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no particular feeling about the matter, and leaves it with the House.

Mr. O'NEILL. I would like to say a word in connection with this request. I moved an amendment to the sundry civil bill the other day, which was not adopted, and I gave notice then that when the deficiency bill came up I would propose to offer the same amendment to have it incorporated in this bill; that was the amendment providing for increasing the pay of the night inspectors of the port of Philadelphia; and I also informed gentlemen that I would accept any amendment they offered with reference to the increase of pay of night inspectors at seaports in which they might be interested. Now, sir, I do not see how I can fulfill that promise unless we have the opportunity to offer amendments to this deficiency bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would state to the gentleman that he had better get that incorporated in the Senate.

Mr. O'NEILL. I would like to have it somewhere; but it seems such an appropriate thing to offer as an amendment to a deficiency bill, for these gentlemen are deficient in their pay as compared with night inspectors at other ports which the Secretary had power to raise, but in this case, at Philadelphia, there is no such power, and it ought to be granted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio.

There was no objection.

Mr. McMAHON, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported back the bill (H. R. No. 7251) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, and for prior years, and for those certified as due by the accounting officers of the Treasury in accordance with section 4 of the act of June 14, 1878, heretofore paid from permanent appropriations, and for other purposes, and moved to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read.

Mr. McMAHON. Before the bill is read, I will state that the subcommittee on appropriations prepared this bill with great care, devoting at least three weeks' time to it——

Mr. HISCOCK. I would suggest to the gentleman from Ohio that after the main question has been ordered he will have fifteen minutes if he chooses to explain the provisions of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York is correct; there will be fifteen minutes allowed on each side if debate is desired.

Mr. CONGER. If this bill is to be passed under a suspension of the rules, I hope the House will be in order and the bill be read for the information of the House. I presume there will be no objection to it, although I speak only for myself.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires that there shall be perfect order while the bill is being read, so that each member may hear all the provisions of the bill upon which he is called to vote.

Mr. ALDRICH, of Illinois. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. CONGER. Is the motion to suspend the rules pending?

The SPEAKER. Unanimous consent was given to the gentleman from Ohio to report the bill on which he moves to suspend the rules, and the gentleman from Illinois now moves that the House adjourn.

Mr. CONGER. Then that motion comes after the suspension was moved.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois made the motion after unanimous consent was given; but the motion is a proper one and will be submitted to the House.

Mr. DEERING. Does the motion of the gentleman from Ohio cut off opportunities for amendment?

The SPEAKER. It does if the motion prevails.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio moves to suspend the rules and put upon its passage the general deficiency bill, which the Clerk will now read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects hereinafter stated, namely:

COURT OF CLAIMS.

To pay judgments of the United States Court of Claims, $450,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, That no judgment shall be paid until the right of appeal has expired.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE.

For compensation of a telegraph operator in the office of the President of the United States from March 4, 1881, to June 30, 1881, at $1,400 per annum, $458.89.

For contingent expenses of the executive office, including stationery therefor, $2,000.

STATE DEPARTMENT.

To enable the Secretary of State to meet the expenses of the international sanitary congress, under House resolution of May 14, 1880, $5,000.

To pay R. C. Morgan, disbursing clerk of the State Department, for lithographing and for books and maps procured and paid for by him, also for postage paid for by him for that Department during the years 1878, 1879, and 1880, $225.35.

Foreign intercourse:

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of contingent expenses of United States consulates, namely:

For the year 1880, $25,022.30.

For the year 1879, $2,190.23: Provided, That this and the two foregoing paragraphs do not effect the payment of money from the Treasury, being only required to reimburse the account for consular fees.

To pay drafts on the Secretary of State by consular officers on account of contingent expenses of consulates for 1880, $4,489.45.

For printing and distributing the publications by the Department of State of the consular and other commercial reports, including circular letters to chambers of commerce, $6,713.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Territories:

For the legislative expenses of the Territory of Montana, $6,045.

For the legislative expenses of the Territory of Dakota, $6,180.

For the legislative expenses of the Territory of Idaho, $7,030.

Internal revenue:

For additional amount to pay salaries and expenses of agents and surveyors, and fees and expenses of gaugers, and for salaries of storekeepers, and for miscellaneous expenses of internal revenue for the year 1881, $500,000; and for the year 1880, $135,000.

To pay amounts found due by accounting officers for salaries and expenses of agents and subordinate officers of internal revenue for 1879, $475.

For additional amount for dies, paper, and stamps for the use of the internal revenue for the year 1881, $75,000.

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of punishments for violation of internal-revenue laws for 1880, $2,750.75; for 1879, $81.50.

Life-saving stations:

For fuel for life-saving stations, life-boat stations, and houses of refuge; repairs and outfits for the same; supplies and provisions for houses of refuge and for shipwrecked persons succored at stations; traveling expenses of officers under orders from the Treasury Department; and contingent expenses, including freight, storage, repairs to apparatus, medals, stationery, advertising, and miscellaneous expenses that cannot be included under any other head of life-saving stations on the coasts of the United States, including the rebuilding of the stations at Pea Island, North Carolina, and Brazos Santiago, Texas, and the renewal of apparatus and supplies for said stations, $12,000.

Light-house establishment:

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers to collectors of customs for commissions, at 2½ per cent., on disbursements made by them as superintendents of lights, during 1880, $380.77.

Miscellaneous:

For rent of telephones, and incidental expenses connected therewith, for 1881, $250.

For arranging and binding canceled marine papers, requisitions, and other important records; sealing ships' registers, newspapers, books, hand-stamps, and repairs of the same, for 1881, $2,000.

For repairs and preservation of public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $20,000.

For vaults, safes, and locks, and repairs of the same, for all public buildings under the Treasury Department for 1881, $7,000.

For heating, hoisting, and ventilating apparatus, and repairs of the same, for public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $10,000.

For fuel, light, and water, and miscellaneous items required by the janitors and firemen in the proper care of the public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, $50,000.

For constructing elevator in the court-house and post-office building at Indianapolis, Indiana, $10,000.

To pay B. F. Scribner, late special agent at the seal fisheries in Alaska, salary and traveling expenses for 1880, $329.10; and to pay J. W. Beaman, late special agent at the seal fisheries in Alaska, salary and traveling expenses for 1880, $277.10.

To pay the judgment of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York in favor of Edward S. Sherman, plaintiff, and against Moses H. Grinnell, former collector of customs of the port of New York, defendant, including damages, $1,130.79.

For the expenses of providing suitable apparatus for the assay laboratory in connection with the office of the Director of the Mint, $300.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, to perfect the title of the Government of the United States to the marine hospital at Wilmington, North Carolina, once sold to Dr. J. Francis King, and now in litigation, the sum of $2,050.

To enable the Secretary of the STreasury to pay the ninth installment of the war claim of the State of Pennsylvania, duly allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury by settlement made February 1, 1881, $5,156.06.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the war claim of the State of Connecticut, duly allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury, $1,793.88.

For refunding to States expenses incurred in raising volunteers under the laws: To the State of Kansas, $26,604.05; to the State of New York, $21,421.13.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the just contribution to the maintenance of the international bureau of weights and measures, in conformity with the terms of the convention of May 20, 1875, for 1881 and prior years, $1,813.81.

For compensation of R. H. Thurston for two years' services as secretary of the board for testing iron and steel, under act of March 3, 1875, from the 30th of June, 1877, to the 30th of June, 1879, the sum of $2,400, being his fixed compensation.

To pay John Scott Cunningham the sum as provided for in the act of February 8, 1881, $1,284.19.

To pay Mary E. Walker claim for services rendered by her as a temporary clerk in the Treasury Department for one year from July 14, 1873, $900.

For repayment to importers the excess of deposits for unascertained duties, or duties or other moneys paid under protest, including interest and costs in judgment cases, $300,000; which sum is hereby made available for the payment of all claims to which the appropriation is applicable which are not payable from the permanent annual appropriation provided for in section 3689 of the Revised Statutes: Provided, That no portion of this appropriation shall be expended for the payment of claims known as "charges and commissions cases."

To refund to E. E. Saunders, master of the schooner Eddie Huck, the sum of $40, being a part of the penalty exacted, but remitted by the Secretary of the Treasury.

For additional amount required for running the relieving sewer of the National Museum building into the North B street sewer instead of into the Seventh street sewer, $900.

For expense of transfer to and arrangement in the new National Museum building of the collections of the United States surveying and exploring expeditions, and of the speciments presented to the United States at the international exhibition of 1876, $10,000, being for the service of the current fiscal year.

For expenses of lengthening the steamer Fish Hawk for the purpose of increasing her fish-hatchihg capacity, and for providing additional fish-hatching apparatus, $12,709, which shall be available until used.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay for expenses incurred in his selection of a distinctive paper for the securities of the United States, such distinctive paper being required to be adopted by the Secretary of the Treasury under the provisions of section 5430 of the Revised Statutes, $321.

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to pay out of the appropriation for "collecting mining statistics" for the fiscal year 1881 a sum not exceeding $300 for extra clerical services rendered in the office of the Director of the Mint in connection therewith.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

Office of the Surgeon-General:

For furnishing artificial limbs and appliances, $200,000.

Miscellaneous:

For fuel, light, heating apparatus, matting, cleaning, labor, and incidental items, and care of two floors of the old Navy Department building, now occupied by the Adjutant-General's Office, $500.

For fuel and gas, ice, carpets and oil-cloth, plumbing, and repairs for the building number 1725 F street, and for iron shutters for same, $500.

To enable the Paymaster-General to meet the necessary expenses of the payment of claims of colored soldiers and sailors for pay, bounty, and prize-money, the sum of $5,595.02 is hereby reappropriated from the unexpended balance remaining available for such purpose, to be available during the present and the next fiscal year.

Military establishment:

For mileage of officers of the Army traveling on duty under orders, $40,000.

For pay of Military Academy band for the year 1880, $260.04.

Arrears of pay and bounty:

For the payment of claims for pay and bounty due to officers and enlisted men of the volunteer forces, and their heirs and legal representatives, there shall be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, so much as may be necessary to pay said claims, allowed during this and prior fiscal years, under the following heads of appropriations, as follows: "Pay of two and three year volunteers," and "bounty to volunteers and their widows and legal heirs;" and the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to Congress, at the commencement of the next regular session, the amount that has been paid out under this provision during this fiscal year.

Quartermaster's Department:

For horse and mule shoes, and horseshoe nails, and for necessary office and barracks furniture, and other miscellaneous articles, $15,260.

For transportation of the Army, including baggage of the troops when moving either by land or water; of clothing, camp and garrison equipage, from the depots of Philadelphia and Jeffersonville to the several posts and Army depots, and from those depots to the troops in the field; of horse equipments and of subsistence stores from the places of purchase and from the places of delivery, under contract, to such places as the circumstances of the service may require them to be sent; of ordnance, ordnance stores, and small-arms from the founderies and armories to the arsenals, fortifications, frontier posts, and Army depots; freights, wharfage, tolls, and ferriages; the purchase and hire of horses, mules, oxen, and harness, and the purchase and repair of wagons, carts, and drays, and of ships and other sea-going vessels, and boats, required for the transportation of supplies, and for garrison purposes; for drayage and cartage at the several posts; hire of teamsters; transportation of funds for the pay and other disbursing departments; the expense of sailing public transports on the various rivers, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Atlantic and Pacific; for procuring water at such posts as from their situation require it to be brought from a distance; and for clearing roads and for removing obstructions from roads, harbors, and rivers, to the extent which may be required for the actual operations of troops in the field, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1880, $125,000.

To pay land-grant railroads 50 per cent. of what the Quartermaster's Department finds justly due them for transportation during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and prior years, to be accepted in full of all demands for said services, $275,000.

For Indianapolis arsenal: For grading, curbing, and bowldering 1,176.7 feet of the sidewalk on Clifford avenue, along the line of the arsenal grounds, for the service of the current fiscal year, $1,118.43.

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

For payment of amounts found due by accounting officers for the naval establishment, as follows:

For pay of the Navy, $75.62.

For provisions for the Navy, $731.10.

For contingent expenses of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing for the year 1879, $1,314.19.

For contingent expenses of the Navy Department, $11,664.

For observation of the solar eclipse of July, 1878, $1,206.68.

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to pay Messrs. Jenkins and Lee for a marine governor supplied the United States steamer Vandalia in the fall of the year 1875, $825.

United States Marine Corps:

For contingencies for the Marine Corps, 1879 and 1880, in the Quartermaster's Department, $392.79.

For pay of Marine Corps, $1,367.

For contingent expenses of the Marine Corps, $691.10.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

Patent Office:

To reimburse Carl Schurz the sum he has paid as the costs in the case of the United States ex rel. Thomas McBride vs. Carl Schurz, Secretary of the Department of the Interior, said costs having been adjudged by the Supreme Court against said Schurz personally, the court declaring that no intentional wrong was charged or proven against him, $101.20.

To continue the photolithographing of the drawings for the current weekly issues of patents during the present fiscal year, $8,429.06.

For continuing the reconstruction of the Patent Office building: For skylights and fitting hardware to windows, hand-rails, plain and ornamental painting, marbleizing, iron sills, paint for roof, India-rubber plates, asphalt, and miscellaneous necessaries, $5,915.

Pension Office:

To enable the Commissioner of Pensions to continue the temporary clerical force in his office at the maximum of its present working capacity for the remainder of the present fiscal year, $55,000.

For the contingent expenses of his office for the same period, $10,000.

Public lands service:

For contingent expenses of General Land Office for 1880, $57.

For reproducing worn and defaced township plats for the use of the general and local land offices for 1881, $15,000.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department on account of surveying the public lands, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1880, $4,099.51.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers, on account of surveying public and private lands, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1879, $1,120.29.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of salaries and commissions of registers and receivers, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1879, $9,582.23.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department on account of expenses of investigating the habits of insects injurious to the cotton plant and agriculture, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1880, $1.14.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of protection and improvement of Yellowstone National Park, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1880, $89.76.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of expenses of commission to report upon depredations of Rocky Mountain locusts, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1879, $2.80.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of contingent expenses of office of the surveyor-general of Nebraska and Iowa, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1879, $22.95.

For payment of amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of contingent expenses of land offices, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1880, $212.98.

Indian Office:

For this amount, for the care and support of the destitute Hualapai Apache Indians in Arizona, for the current fiscal year, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, $15,000.

That the sum of $23,109.51 be paid to the members of the Wyandotte tribe of Indians, per capita, to be in full payment of their claim under treaty of February 23, 1867.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be sold an amount of the stocks or securities now held by the Government in trust for the Shawnee Indians, which, together with the accumulated interest thereon, will aggregate a sum not exceeding $2,000, sufficient to reimburse Daniel S. McDougal, or his legal heirs, and Charles S. Wilder, for the money by them paid for certain tracts of land belonging to said Shawnee Indians erroneously conveyed to them, and to which tracts of land the Government has given and can give no valid title.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay balance due Daniel G. Major, out of an unexpended balance now on the books of the Treasury to the credit of the Sioux Indians for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, the sum of $110.96 is hereby reappropriated,

Support of Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, and Wichitas, 1881: This amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the support and civilization of the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, and Wichitas for the balance of the fiscal year, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1881, $25,000.

Support of Tabequache, Muache, Capote, Weeminuche, Yampa, Grand River, and Uintah bands of Utes, 1881: This amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the support of Ute Indians of Colorado for the balance of the fiscal year, being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1881, $15,000.

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Office of the Postmaster-General:

For the following deficiencies for the current fiscal year:

For advertising, $5,000.

Office of First Assistant Postmaster-General:

For wrapping-paper, $20,000.

For wrapping-twine, $30,000.

For railway post-office clerks and for route-agents, $30,000; to be equally divided between these two branches of the service.

For compensation to clerks in post-offices, $30,000.

For wrapping-twine for blank-agency office, $5,172.47.

To enable the Posmaster-General to refund to the rightful owner, upon satisfactory proof, the contents of a letter addressed to A. R. Brooks, 373 Pennsylvania avenue, containing the sum of $50; said sum having been erroneously covered into the Treasury.

For office of disbursing clerk and superintendent of Post-Office building:

For gas, $1,000.

For telegraphing, $500.

For miscellaneous items, $1,000.

For deficiency in the amount appropriated from the revenues of the postal service for compensation of postmasters for the fiscal year 1880, as per accounts audited by the Sixth Auditor, payable out of the revenues of the Post-Office Department, $158,407.54.

To refund to Cecilia L. Faussett allowance of the Postmaster-General of a moiety of a penalty of $150 imposed on Eli Wright for violation of the postal laws, payable out of the revenues of the Post-Office Department, $75.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

For expenses of United States courts, being for deficiencies for the current fiscal year, namely:

For fees of jurors, $40,000.

For fees of witnesses, $30,000.

For support of prisoners, $100,000.

For fees of clerks, $20,000.

For fees of district attorneys, $20,000.

To pay amounts found due by the accounting officers on account of expenses of Territorial courts in Utah, $1,623.73.

To pay expenses of United States courts in Utah for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, $4,000.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay the following accounts found just and proper by the Committee on Accounts, and sent with a favorable recommendation to the Committee on Appropriations the 8th day of February, 1881:

To pay Franklin Temple, for services as messenger in the chief clerk's office, the difference between the pay of a laborer received by him and that of a messenger, during the present Congress, $960.

To pay John P. Maloney for services as messenger to the official reporters of debates from December 1 to 15, 1880, at $1,000 per annum, $38.04.

To pay George T. Rogers for services as clerk to the Select Committee on the Yorktown Centennial, $200.

To pay W. C. Garrard for services as clerk to the Committee on War Claims from April 13 to 18, 1879, six days, at $2,000 per annum, $32.97.

To pay James A. Diffenbaugh, for clerical work to be done during the coming recess, as clerk to the Committee on Accounts, in completing the records of said committee, a sum equal to one month's pay, $180.

To pay M. M. Herr for services as messenger to the Sergeant-at-Arms during a part of the second and all of the third session of the Forty-sixth Congress, $710.

To pay Adam Reisinger, for services as messenger in the Clerk's office of the House during the present Congress, the difference between the pay of a laborer received by him and that of a messenger, $960.

To pay H. Head for services as assistant clerk to the Committee on Elections from the 6th to the 16th of December, 1880, ten days, at $6 per day, $60.

To pay Charles E. O'Connor for clerical aid rendered the Committee on Claims during the second and third sessions of the Forty-sixth Congress, the sum of $500.

To pay Beaufort C. Lee for services as laborer in the Doorkeeper's department from October 15 to December 31, 1877, $75.

To pay A. Johns, J. J. Gilbert, E. W. Grant, and C. J. Hayes, for reporting done by them at the second session of the present Congress, upon bills duly audited by the Committee on Accounts, $390.75.

To pay Charles Christian for services rendered as laborer in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House from March 5 to June 30, 1879, $200.

To enable the Clerk of the House to pay the following:

To pay Samuel P. Ivins, jr., for the difference between what he received as an annual messenger in the House post-office and what he would have received if he had been a session messenger, $413.29.

To pay James C. Saunders one month's pay as clerk to Committee on Ventilation of the Hall, $186.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

To pay claim of C. S. Bundy for services as acting judge of the police court of the District of Columbia, during the absence of the judge, from August 31 to October 3, 1880, inclusive, thirty-four days, at $10 per day, $340; one-half of which is payable by the United States and one-half by the District of Columbia.

To supply deficiencies in the amount appropriated for the support of the public schools of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, one-half of which is to be paid by the District of Columbia, namely:

For contingent expenses, $1,796.92.

To supply deficiencies in the amount appropriated for the support of the public schools of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, namely:

For salaries of superintendents, teachers, janitors, secretary of the board, and clerks, $3,200.

For contingent expenses, $3,000.

For furniture for the two new buildings now in course of erection, $5,000.

PUBLIC PRINTING.

To supply deficiency in the appropriation for public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, including the cost of printing the debates and proceedings of Congress in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and for lithographing, mapping, and engraving for both Houses of Congress, Supreme Court, Court of Claims, Library of Congress, and Departments, and for all necessary materials which may be needed in the prosecution of said work, $300,000.

To enable the Public Printer to pay for a hired horse lost while in the use of the Government Printing Office, through the fault of the driver, one of the employés of said office, $250.

To pay for the use of telephones during the fiscal year 1880, $10.84.

To pay the Public Printer balance due for printing for the Public Lands commission, under act of June 16, 1880, $4,456.26.

SEC. 2. For the payment of claims certified to be due by the several accounting officers of the Treasury Department under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, and under appropriations heretofore treated as permanent, being for the service of the fiscal year 1879 and prior years, and which have been certified to Congress under section 4 of the act of June 14, 1878, as fully set forth in House Executive Document No. 30, Forty-sixth Congress, third session, and for other items, as follows:

COURT OF CLAIMS.

For contingent expenses of the Court of Claims, $34.80.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

Foreign intercourse:

For relief of destitute American seamen, $387.

For contingent expenses of United States consulates, $92.06.

For salaries of United States consuls, $28.53.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

Internal revenue:

For redemption of stamps, $262.50.

For allowance or drawback, $777.13.

For refunding taxes illegally collected, $15.78.

For refunding taxes illegally collected, $2,972.96.

For salaries and expenses of supervisors and subordinate officers of interna revenue, $801.56.

For salaries and expenses of agents and subordinate officers of internal revenue, $392.30.

For salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue, $20.

For expenses of assessing and collecting internal revenue, $1,136.39.

For refunding money erroneously received and covered into the Treasury, $64.95.

Miscellaneous:

For contingent expenses of assay office at Helena and mint at Carson, $140.88.

For contingent expenses of the independent treasury, $189.89.

For contingent expenses of steamboat inspection, two cents.

For international exhibition of 1876, $1.19.

For contingent expenses of mints at San Francisco, Denver, and Philadelphia, and at assay offices, $4,939.07.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

For contingent expenses of General Land Office, 26.04.

For surveying public lands, as follows: in California, $1,966.45; in New Mexico, $305.03; in Louisiana, $699.96.

For surveying public and private lands, $394.22.

For salaries in office of surveyor-general of Arizona, $203.57.

For depredations on public timber, $85.76.

For salaries and commissions of registers and receivers, $4,656.95.

For contingent expenses of land offices, $147.

For the State of Kansas, for amount due of the 5, 3, and 2 per cent. fund to States, $190,268.27.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

For salaries of United States district attorneys, $24.45.

For salaries of district marshals, $50.

For expenses of United States courts for 1878 and prior years, excepting claim numbered 66982, for $3,189.17, which is withdrawn from schedule herein appropriated for, $19,481.57.

For expenses of territorial courts in Utah, 1878 and prior years, $1,037.98.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

For expenses of collecting the revenue from customs for 1878 and prior years, to pay claim numbered 81790, $3.54: Provided, That hereafter the Secretary of the Treasury may appoint inspectors of customs at a compensation less than $3 per day when in his judgment the public service will permit.

For expenses of collecting revenue from customs, 1878 and prior years, to pay Thomas Kearney, Hance Lawson, George Toy, Thomas S. Hodson, Robert Bell, M. Hopkins, Joseph D. Bates, Jack Wharton, Joseph A. Dreyfous, and the Union Pacific Railroad Company the sums respectively due them, amounting in all to $1,554.05.

For contingent expenses of the Life-Saving Service, $52.

For expenses of light-vessels, $249.51.

For salaries of keepers of light-houses, $206.59.

For supplies of light-houses, $2,479.50.

For expenses of buoyage, $202.47.

For expenses of Revenue-Cutter Service and Marine Hospital Service, $3.

For refunding moneys erroneously received and covered into the Treasury, $175.

For reimbursing keepers at Timbalier light-house for loss of private property, $100.

To adjust the accounts of certain disbursing officers of the Government on account of the appropriations following, involving no expenditure of money from the Treasury, namely, under the eleven paragraphs following:

For Anita Rock Beacon, California, $183.68.

For expense of collecting the revenue from customs, $22.01.

For repairs and preservation of public buildings, $20.76.

For repayment to importers excess of deposits for unascertained duties, $530.51.

For Life-Saving Service, $45.58.

For contingent expenses of Life-Saving Service, $107.91.

For repairs of light-houses, $25.

For salaries of keepers of light-houses, fifty cents.

For expenses of fog-signals, $4,422.

For supplies of light-houses, $381.33.

For expenses of light-vessels, $725.35.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

For pay of Florida volunteers, $765.

For pay of volunteers in the Mexican war, $183.86.

For traveling expenses of California and Nevada volunteers, $187.50.

For traveling expenses of members of First Michigan Cavalry, $198.50.

For payment of mounted riflemen volunteers under Colonel John C. Frémont, in 1846, $232.87.

For pay of the Army, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 79 to 82 of same document, $13,314.92.

For expenses of recruiting, 1878 and prior years, $13.

For contingencies of the Army during same period, $1,006.50.

For ordnance, ordnance stores and supplies, during same period, $243.55.

For artificial limbs, same period, $138.40.

For allowance for reduction of wages under the eight-hour law, $22.33.

For draft and substitute fund, $914.88.

For medical hospital department, 1878 and prior years, $1,072.30.

For collecting, drilling, and organizing volunteers, 1871 and prior years, $351.82.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

Indian matters:

For pay of Indian agents, $4,720.38; for contingencies of the Indian Department, $124.82; for Indian service in the Territories, $1,890.03; for support of Apaches of Arizona and New Mexico, $208.26; for support of Chippewas, Pillager, and Lake Winnebagoshish bands, $24.14; for support of Chippewas of the Mississippi, $271.16; for support of Crows, $30.33; for support of Kickapoos, $46.27; for support of Sioux of different tribes, including Santee Sioux of Nebraska, $936.73; for payment to Upper and Lower bands of Sioux Indians, $375; for transportation of Indian supplies, $23.45; in all, $8,650.57.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

For Army transportation, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 86, 87, 88, and part of 89 of the same aforenamed document, $42,759.27.

For regular supplies for the Quartermaster's Department, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 89 and 90 of same document, $8,859.52.

For incidental expenses of the Quartermaster's Department, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 90, 91, and 92 of same document, $8,165.30.

For barracks and quarters, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 93 and 94 of same document, except for claims, (both numbered 9972,) for $1,241.80, and for $2,026.67, which are excluded from this schedule, $12,335.17.

For horses for cavalry and artillery, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 94 and 95 of same document, $3,566.

For subsistence of the Army, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 95, 96, and 97 of same document, $2,212.44.

For commutation of rations to prisoners of war in States that were in rebellion prior to July 1, 1878, as particularly itemized on pages 97 to 106 of same document, $10,305.87.

For pay, transportation, services, and supplies of Oregon and Washington volunteers, in 1855 and 1856, 1871 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 106 to 108 of same document, $6,958.53.

For transportation of officers and their baggage, 1871 and prior years, $62.70.

For clothing, camp and garrison equipage, 1878 and prior years, $67.

For horses and other property lost in the military service prior to July 1, 1878, as particularly itemized on pages 108 to 121 of the House Executive Document No. 30, Forty-sixth Congress, third session, $67,180.

To pay the claim of George T. Wright, administrator of the estate of John T. Wright, deceased, for value of steamer Peerless, lost at sea November 4, 1861, allowed by the Third Auditor and Second Comptroller, under the appropriation for property lost in the military service, $35,000.

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

For pay of the Navy prior to July 1, 1878, $7,923.27; for pay of the Marine Corps, same period, $787.10; for contingent expenses of the Marine Corps, 1878 and prior years, $149.05; for provisions for the Marine Corps, 1864 and 1865, $134.50; for bounty to seamen, $3,127.88; for bounty for destruction of enemies' vessels, $1,120.39; for indemnity for lost clothing, $1,049.50; for provisions for the Navy, Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, 1878 and prior years, $1,056.40; for contingent expenses of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, $12.88; for contingent expenses of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, $410.39; for construction and repair, Bureau of Construction and Repair, $26; for steam machinery, Bureau of Steam Engineering, $36.25; for contingent expenses of the Bureau of Navigation, forty-four cents; for Naval Observatory, Bureau of Navigation, forty-one cents; for maintenance of yards and docks, Bureau of Yards and Docks, nine cents; for widows and orphans of the lost on the Cumberland and Congress, $216; for gratuity to seamen, $100; in all, $16,150.55.

For compensation and expenses of direct-tax commissioners, 1871 and prior years: To pay claim numbered 28176, for two months' salary, to Hiram Potter, jr., $480.70: Provided, That this effects no payment of money from the Treasury.

For fulfilling treaty with Apaches, Kiowas, and Comanches, 1873 and prior years: To pay claim numbered 1269, Donald Carmichael, detention of teams for transporting Indian supplies, $1,360.

For Army transportation, 1878 and prior years: To pay claim numbered 96910, estate of Andrew Woods, deceased, $187.50.

For pay of the Marine Corps prior to July 1, 1878: To pay claim numbered 257, to Julius Beumelberg, $270.

For deficiency in postal revenues, 1878 and prior years, as particularly itemized on pages 132 and 133 of House Executive Document No. 30, Forty-sixth Congress, third session, excepting the last two, marked with a star, for $2,024.17 and for $7,500, which are excluded, $18,315.43.

SEC. 3. That the sum of $221,257 86 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to pay the Miami Indians of Indiana the principal sum that became due them on the 1st day of July, 1880, in accordance with the amended fourth article of the treaty concluded with said Indians on the 5th day of June, 1854, and ratified on the 4th day of August, 1854.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint a competent and proper person to take a census and make a list of the Miami Indians residing in Indiana or elsewhere who are entitled to participate in the distribution of said principal sum, as provided by article 4 of the treaty that was made between the United States and the Miami Indians on the 5th day of June, 1854, as amended in the Senate. Before taking such census, publication shall be made requiring all persons claiming under said treaty to make known their claim to such person so appointed within a time specified in the notice, and failing so to do, they shall be forever barred. When said census shall be so made, it shall be the duty of the person so appointed to make such enumeration and list to report the same to the Secretary of the Interior, distinguishing in his report between males and females and between those over twenty-one years of age and those under twenty-one years, which list so made, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall stand as the true list of the persons entitled to share in the payments provided for in this act; and each person named in said list shall be entitled to receive the same amount, irrespective of age or sex, payments for minors to be paid to the guardians legally appointed, as hereinafter provided, under the laws of the State or Territory in which said minors reside: Provided, however, That any minor who may be a resident of the Indian Territory and a beneficiary of said fund may receive his or her share thereof, as the case may be, through a guardian appointed by any court having probate jurisdiction in the State of Kansas. The person appointed to make such enumeration and list shall, before entering on such duty, take and subscribe an oath that he will make a true and correct enumeration and report of said Indians according to the best information he can obtain, said oath to be administered and certified to by a United States commissioner or a clerk of a court of record; and he shall receive as his compensation therefor the sum of $5 per day and his actual and necessary and other traveling expenses while engaged in said duty, not to exceed $400: Provided, That no persons other than those embraced in the corrected list agreed upon by the Miami Indians of Indiana, in the presence of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in June, 1854, comprising three hundred and two names as Miami Indians of Indiana, and the increase of families of persons indicated in said corrected list, shall be recipients of the money hereby appropriated.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint some suitable person as an agent of the United States to make payment to each of said Miami Indians who shall be more than twenty-one years of age whose name shall be borne on the list prepared as aforesaid the amount that he or she, as the case may be, shall be entitled to receive; and he, in like manner, shall pay to the guardian of each minor whose name shall appear on said list the amount that said minor shall be entitled to receive: Provided, however, That no payment shall be made to any guardian as such until he produce and deliver to the agent from whom he shall receive such payment the certificate of the judge of the court, attested by the seal of the same, certifying that such guardian has been duly appointed and qualified as such, and give bond, secured by unincumbered freehold surety, in the penalty of not less that three times the amount he shall receive from the United States on account of the payment so to be made for the benefit of said ward, which certificate shall be filed by said agent at the time of making of his report and final settlement. A copy of said list so prepared as aforesaid shall be furnished to said agent, for his guidance in the performance of the duties aforesaid, by the Secretary of the Interior. Said agent shall take the receipt of the persons so paid, attested in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe, which receipt shall be a voucher for said agent in the final settlement of his accounts. Said agent shall receive, in full compensation for the services required by the provisions of this act, a sum equal to three-fourths of one per cent. on the amount that he shall receive. The agent so appointed to make said payments shall, before entering on such duty, take and subscribe an oath, before some United States commissioner or clerk of some court of record, for the faithful performance of the duties imposed by the provisions of this act, and make and execute a bond, payable to the United States, in such penalty and with such security as the Secretary of the Interior shall require and approve. And the receipt of the sum due under this bill shall be a final discharge by each party so receiving of all claims whatsoever under said treaty against the United States Government.

SEC. 6. That there shall be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,500, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, to pay the agents whom the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint for the services and expenses required by the provisions of this act.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to examine the claim of Isaac Vandeventer and James F. McDowell, attorneys-at-law, partners under the name of Vandeventer & McDowell, for services rendered in the defense of certain suits in the courts of the State of Indiana in relation to the taxation and partition of the lands of the band of Meshingomesia, in said State, and for alleged services rendered said band in and about legislation by Congress affecting their said lands and the partition of their lands pursuant thereto, and allow and pay to said attorneys such reasonable compensation as he may find legally or equitably due them for said services, out of the moneys due to said band, or out of the money due to any of said band, as he may deem just. And to enable the Secretary to properly examine said accounts, he may cause or permit testimony to be taken by said claimants and by said band, or by any individual or individuals of said band under such rules as he may prescribe: Provided, That in making any such payment no part of the same shall be deducted from the share of any member of said band who received no part of the land so partitioned, nor shall any part of any such payment be deducted from the share of any member of said band whose membership was contested, and who was required by proof to establish such membership to entitle him or her to share in the partition of said land.

The total sum recommended by this bill:

By the first section	$3,341,787 43
By the second	499,673 70
By the third	224,157 86
In all	4,065,618 99

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. CLYMER in the chair.) The gentleman from Ohio moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. I ask the gentleman from Ohio to yield for the purpose of incorporating into this bill an amendment which is left out of it by mistake.

Mr. MCMAHON. It is impossible for me to do so without according the same privilege to other gentlemen, as I am informed a good many desire to offer amendments. I shall be compelled to refuse any. I will state to the gentleman from Illinois, however, that I will endeavor to have the correction made to which he refers in the Senate. He is undoubtedly correct. The amendment to which he alludes was agreed to by the committee, but by mistake it was left out of the bill.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. For that reason, and because the bill does not state the conclusions at which the committee have arrived, I ask this correction may be made here before a vote is taken upon the bill.

Mr. MCMAHON. After consulting with members of the committee, I desire to repeat that the proposition to which the gentleman from Illinois alludes was omitted by mistake in making up the bill. There is no doubt about that. It was agreed upon in committee, therefore I will allow the gentleman to offer his amendment to the bill, and will then demand the previous question upon the bill and the amendment.

Mr. ATKINS. I hope there will be no objection to that course.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I hope the gentleman will yield to enable me to offer an amendment.

Mr. VALENTINE. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. ROBESON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee a question, as this bill was read during some confusion in the House, whether there is any legislation in the bill which was not assented to by the republican members of the committee?

Mr. ATKINS. There is none that I know of. The gentleman in charge of the bill can probably answer better than I.

Mr. ROBESON. If there be no such legislation, I think there will be no objection on this side.

Mr. MCMAHON. I know of no legislation whatever on the bill, except in two particulars. One little item in regard to the pay of inspectors in the city of New York was put on this bill at the request and earnest solicitation of the Secretary of the Treasury, whose republicanism I have never yet had any reason to doubt. The other piece of legislation was something which passed this House a year ago on the deficiency bill, for the payment of the Miami Indians, under a treaty which expired on the 1st July, 1880. It is substantially the same as the law we adopted last year.

Mr. ROBESON. That is right.

Mr. VALENTINE. I desire the gentleman from Ohio to permit me to offer an amendment to the bill.

Mr. MCMAHON. I decline to yield.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I ask the gentleman from Ohio to yield to me that I may offer an amendment, for the compensation of James C. Rudd, of Owensborough, Kentucky, for the rent of a building for the use of the United States Government for a post-office. The amount is only $3,500. The account is just and ought to be paid.

Mr. MCMAHON. I decline to yield. All those things are matters of claim against the Government unadjusted.

Mr. HISCOCK rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There will be an opportunity for debate for thirty minutes after the motion to suspend the rules is seconded, if a second is demanded. Is a second demanded?

Mr. KEIFER. I demand it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. MCMAHON, and the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. KEIFER.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 151, noes not counted.

So the motion to suspend the rules was seconded.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate agreed to the concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives for printing volumes 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of contributions to North American Ethnology.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. No. 2437) for the relief of several persons impressed into the United States naval service;

A bill (H. R. No. 5832) for the relief of David W. Bell;

A bill (H. R. No. 5088) to authorize the registration of trade-marks and to protect the same;

A bill (H. R. No. 6479) for the relief of Thomas Snell; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 402) to provide for the publication of the memorial addresses on Evarts W. Farr.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. No. 7160) for the relief of John H. Templeton.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. No. 1926) relating to quartermaster stores furnished to the forces of Major-General Lewis Wallace during the Morgan raid through Indiana and Ohio.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McMAHON] for the first fifteen minutes of debate in support of the bill.

Mr. McMAHON. I have no desire to say anything in regard to this bill unless gentlemen upon the other side say something that may require some reply. I therefore yield to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from New York, [Mr. HISCOCK,] fifteen minutes, reserving my fifteen minutes in case I may desire to say anything hereafter.

Mr. VALENTINE. I desire to ask the gentleman from Ohio a question.

Mr. McMAHON. It will be time enough for that after I take the floor.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. Speaker, this bill I have not seen fit to antagonize, because it is chiefly remarkable for that in which it is deficient rather than for that for which it has made appropriations. But I have regarded it as my duty to call the attention of the House to at least three subjects upon which in my judgment more ample appropriations should have been made, desiring at the same time that the attention of the Senate may be called in that way to them.

First I call attention to the appropriation which has been made for the Internal Revenue Bureau. In view of the estimates which were submitted to the Appropriations Committee for the balance of the fiscal year, beyond any question at least $300,000 more should have been appropriated than the committee has seen fit to give. I cannot appreciate that spirit of economy that strikes at the expenditure in a service which is not flexible in its nature and which is absolutely essential to the proper conduct of that service. The salaries of the collectors of internal revenue is in the discretion of the head of the bureau. But with regard to the gaugers, the inspectors, and storekeepers, a class of officers entirely indispensable to the running of the distilleries in the country, the Appropriations Committee have seen fit to make a reduction of the estimate to the extent of $300,000; those estimates, based upon the necessity of the service, as determined by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and by the Secretary of the Treasury, are undoubtedly indispensable for the proper prosecution of that branch of the service. And if no larger appropriation shall be made in the Senate, the Treasury Department will have to confront the fact of allowing the distilleries to be closed or these officers of the Government must work without compensation.

There is another point to which I desire to call attention, and that is in reference to the public printing. This Congress and the last session of the Forty-fifth Congress passed resolutions directing the expenditure of large sums of money for public printing.

On the 1st day of March, for the completion of the work ordered by Congress and unperformed, there should be appropriated the sum of $709,799. Gentlemen upon the other side of the House should bear in mind what I have said. This work was all ordered by the present Congress and by the last Congress. I had hoped that the other side would have been willing to have paid its printing bills before it resigned in favor of the majority in the Forty-seventh Congress.

The amount appropriated in this bill for the deficiency in that branch of the service is but $300,000. On the 1st day of March, all the money available for the purposes of the Bureau of Printing of this Government was about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. There is required monthly for the running of the Printing Bureau, for the payment of the force which is now employed there, the sum of $190,000. This bill appropriates but $300,000 for the service, and as the result, there must go over to the next Congress to be appropriated for by that Congress work, which cannot be done under the appropriation here made, to the amount of $709,000 and for printing ordered by this and the last democratic Congresses.

Mr. WILSON. Will the gentleman allow me right there to interrupt him, because I am in sympathy with his views?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] yield to the gentleman from West Virginia?

Mr. HISCOCK. I will; but I desire to ask the Chair, before my time has expired entirely, to call my attention to it, as I wish to yield a few minutes to another gentleman on this side of the House. I now yield to the gentleman from West Virginia, [Mr. WILSON.]

Mr. WILSON. The printing already ordered by this House will be greatly retarded by the fact that but $300,000 is appropriated in this bill. And to keep the work within the appropriation, the Committee on Printing of this House has rejected $250,000 of printing which we think might have been done. It will be utterly impossible for the Printing Office to get along with this meager appropriation.

Mr. HISCOCK. I understand the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON] to concur with me that the sum appropriated by this bill will be utterly inadequate for the proper performance of the work required of the printing bureau. I repeat again that after all which is appropriated in this bill shall have been expended the sum of over seven hundred thousand dollars will be actually necessary to pay for the printing ordered by this and the last Congresses.

There is another item for which the Committee on Appropriations have failed to appropriate in this bill. There was submitted to the committee by the Attorney-General an estimate of $100,000 required to pay and discharge the fees of the special deputy marshals. I had hoped that after all the excitement to which the nation has been subjected, after the issue of the right of the General Government to guard the election of Representatives in Congress has been so thoroughly canvassed and so emphatically passed upon by the people as it has, the majority of the Committee on Appropriations would have seen fit to have allowed these legal claims against the Government of the United States to be paid, claims which in effect have been passed upon by the highest tribunal in the United States and decided to be legal and just, and the question retired from politics. I confess I was surprised when I found that the Committee on Appropriations were unwilling to turn their backs upon the past, which certainly has not been fruitful of good to their party.

These are the three main items to which I have deemed it my duty to call the attention of the House. I will add further, that in my judgment the unpaid claims against the Government which properly might have been, yes, properly should have been passed upon by this Committee on Appropriations, or if you please audited by the committee, and provision made for their payment, and for which no provision was made by that committee, amount in the aggregate to at least $2,000,000. I was in hopes that when this branch of the Legislature was about to be turned over to us on this side of the House the other side would have been willing to have balanced their books, paid off the debts which they had incurred, and let us take a fresh start, let us have the Government relieved from indebtedness which had been incurred by them. I call attention to this here and now, and do so mainly for the reason that a point be made in the accounts which we are to keep, so that the country may take notice in the future of that which we are compelled to pay, but which was contracted by the other side, and that which we pay that we contracted ourselves.

I now yield to my friend from Iowa, [Mr. DEERING.]

Mr. DEERING. In justice to myself, Mr. Speaker, and to the Committee on Indian Affairs, of which I am a member, I will say that it was my purpose to offer the amendment which I hold in my hand to the bill now under consideration. Until yesterday we have had reason to hope that the proposition would be adopted by the Committee on Appropriations; but in that expectation we have been disappointed.

The object of the amendment is to enable the Secretary of the Interior to reach a fair and honorable adjustment of all pending differences and difficulties with the Ponca tribe of Indians. The amendment has the approval of a majority of the Committee on Indian Affairs. It is in accordance with the expressed wishes of those Indians, and substantially in accordance with the wishes expressed by the President in his recent message to this House, and also with repeated recommendations of the present Secretary of the Interior.

It is well known to every member of this House that this question is attracting the attention at this time, and very justly, of the entire country. It is standing in the way of a fair and equitable adjustment of the great Indian problem of this country. In justice to these Indians and to the country, this important question should be settled by the Government and settled at once.

The amendment proposes to pay the Ponca Indians for such lands as have been taken from them in Dakota Territory, known as the Old Ponca reservation; and to indemnify them for losses sustained by them in consequence of their removal to the Indian Territory. It also proposes to settle them on homes in severalty on their old or their new reservation, as they may elect. This would be a step in the right direction, as it looks to the ultimate adoption of the wise and generous policy of our present able Secretary of the Interior with reference to our Indian wards.

This is all I propose at this time to say on this question. In closing, as I am denied under the motion to suspend the rules the privilege of having the amendment adopted, I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD; and I shall then make an earnest effort, which I hope will be successful, to have the proposition adopted by the Appropriation Committee of the Senate, and embraced in this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there be no objection, consent will be given that the gentleman's proposed amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The amendment is as follows:

For the purpose of enabling the Secretary of the Interior to indemnify the Ponca tribe of Indians for losses sustained by them in consequence of their removal to the Indian Territory, to secure to them lands in severalty on either the old or new reservation in accordance with their wishes, and to settle all matters of difference with those Indians, $165,000, the money to be immediately available, and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as follows:

For the purchase of 101,894 acres of land in the Indian Territory, where most of those Indians are now located, $50,000.

To be distributed per capita among the Ponca Indians in the Indian Territory, $10,000.

For the purchase of stock-cattle and draught animals for Poncas in the Indian Territory, $10,000.

For the erection of dwelling-houses for Poncas now in Dakota and Nebraska, $5,000; for agricultural implements, stock, and seeds for them, $5,000; for school purposes for them, $5,000; for general distribution among them per capita, $10,000; total, $25,000.

To be held as a permanent fund in the Treasury of the United States, at 5 per cent. interest, the interest to be distributed annually among all the Ponca Indians in cash, $70,000.

Mr. HISCOCK. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Two minutes.

Mr. HISCOCK. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Nebraska, [Mr. VALENTINE.]

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the House to Executive Document No. 56, a letter from the Secretary of the Interior dated January 21, 1881, furnishing itemized estimates of deficiencies in the Indian service, among which I find items amounting to fifty-odd thousand dollars for transportation of Indian supplies. These are not included in this deficiency bill. Will the gentleman in charge of the bill be kind enough to inform me why they are not?

Mr. McMAHON. I will allude to that when I take the floor.

Mr. VALENTINE. Will the gentleman allow me, then, to ask questions, and will he answer them? I am willing to let him have a part of my time to get at the facts of the case.

Mr. McMAHON. I hope the gentleman will continue his remarks in such line as may suit him; and when I take the floor I will make such reply as I see fit.

Mr. VALENTINE. Then, as the gentleman does not desire to get up before the House and state the fact, I will state it for him. The committee refused to put in these items because they had not been audited by the Register and Comptroller. [Here the hammer fell.] Just one moment more, if the Chair pleases. In 1878, the Appropriations Committee placed upon one of their deficiency bills a provision denying the authority of these officers to audit these claims until an appropriation had been made. Now they have refused to appropriate for the claims because they are not audited. This is the condition in which we find ourselves. I wish the gentleman would explain it to this House, if he can.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McMAHON] is now entitled to the floor for fifteen minutes.

Mr. STEVENSON. Before the gentleman takes the floor, I would like to ask him whether or not the entire amount appropriated in this bill is not for moneys which have been expended in violation of law—whether there has been any provision of law for these expenditures?

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. Speaker, I have no doubt the House has been much edified by the remarks of my colleague on the committee [Mr. HISCOCK] and the suggestion made by him that when we are going out of power we ought to settle up our debts. I would like to ask the gentleman and the House what part we had in creating the internal-revenue deficiency, what part we had in creating the deficiency in the Department of Justice, what part we had in creating any of the deficiencies that have existed?

Mr. HISCOCK. As the genteman has asked me a question——

Mr. McMAHON. I decline to yield.

Mr. HISCOCK. I desire to answer it here and now.

Mr. McMAHON. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. HISCOCK. I supposed that the democratic party had something to do with the collection of the revenues of the Government. [Cries of "Order!"] I supposed it had something to do with the judiciary department of the Government, and was willing that it should be supported and sustained.

Mr. McMAHON. I see that my suggestion to my colleague on the committee has probed a point that seems not to have occurred to him when he was on the floor. We have had no control of the spending of the money. The very point we made in the last campaign was that we wanted to put in new executive officers, to make a new set of books, and to revise the old ones. During the six years that I have been a member of this House——

Mr. HISCOCK. And the very question which the people decided against the gentleman's party was that they preferred the present government should hold on to the books.

Mr. McMAHON. My colleague is noted for his courtesy on this floor, in the committee, and in private life. I hope he will not continue to interrupt me when I decline to yield.

Mr. HISCOCK. Then do not ask me any questions.

Mr. McMAHON. I am asking the public questions through the gentleman. He knows that I have neither time nor wish for an answer from him. The very point that we made in the last campaign was that we had no opportunity to revise these books; that we had no control over these expenditures; and that when we attempted to control the expenditures by voting less sums of money than had been given in the extravagant days of republican rule, your Departments came forward with deficiencies one after another, and said to us, "If you do not vote this, you will not get your agricultural reports; you will not have your courts; you will not have your railway service; distilleries must stop," and so on. And when they have put forward such declarations, they seem to think that they have reached the climax of an impregnable argument. And what can we do?

Mr. HAWLEY. Let me ask the gentleman one question.

Mr. McMAHON. I cannot yield; life is too short, especially in this House just now.

Mr. Speaker, by what authority are these deficiencies incurred? By what authority does the Public Printer, who is alluded to here, incur a deficiency this year? If you will take his printed letter to Congress, calling attention to the expected deficiency, you will discover he says in his letter that he deliberately exceeded the appropriations for this fiscal year.

Mr. HAWLEY. That is not so.

Mr. McMAHON. I say it is so.

Mr. HAWLEY. I deny it.

Mr. McMAHON. I say, Mr. Speaker, that the printed letter sent to Congress shows I am right.

Mr. HAWLEY. I say the House has ordered hundreds of thousands more than he has money for. The House ordered the printing.

Mr. McMAHON. I hope the gentleman will take it a little easy and not interrupt me.

Mr. HAWLEY. Give me three minutes.

Mr. McMAHON. I think democrats might have fifteen minutes to show the shortcomings of the republican party without being interrupted all the time. I say when Congress gives the Public Printer $1,600,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1881, he has no business to spend any more money in that year. He can easily defer the excessive printing into the next fiscal year.

Mr. HAWLEY. Has he spent any more?

Mr. McMAHON. He will.

Mr. HAWLEY. He will have to stop and will have to discharge every printer.

Mr. McMAHON. But he said in his letter read before the committee that he set deliberately to work in the beginning of the year to employ the full force of his office, knowing that his course would exhaust the appropriation for this fiscal year long before the year was out; and I say here, and I say it in the face of the American people, that man upon his own confession violated his official oath when he deliberately set to work to exceed the appropriations for his department. A friend at my side suggests to me, Why, has the gentleman from Connecticut, who defends the Public Printer, forgotten the lesson he read to the country on the conduct of the Second Assistant Postmaster-General for his postal service deficiency?

Mr. HAWLEY. Also on the printing department I read you a lesson.

Mr. McMAHON. You did not read me a lesson; I beg your pardon. The rule that applies to the one does also to the other. You then insisted upon the doctrine I now urge.

I come now to the Internal Revenue Department, about which my friend from New York makes such a terrible and piteous appeal. Does the gentleman know, and if he does I want the country also to know, that with the deficiency appropriation for salaries and expenses of gaugers, &c., made in this bill, of $500,000 that Department gets $100,000 more for this service for this fiscal year than the Commissioner estimated for the next fiscal year, or the appropriation for that year? What is the matter with the books or the management of the Internal Revenue Department?

Mr. HAWLEY. Twenty million dollars more collected; that is the matter.

Mr. McMAHON. Why is it that for the next fiscal year he wants a total expenditure, as I have figured it up, of only $4,820,330, whereas if we give him this deficiency, as asked by the gentleman from New York, the total for this fiscal year will be $5,255,218? Is the internal-revenue service to decrease $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 next year? Oh, no; this is not claimed, and the excuse which was made before the members of the sub-committee was that the estimates for the next fiscal year were made up by some subordinate in the office while Hon. Green B. Raum was stumping the United States to elect somebody to the Presidency. Yet these very estimates are repeated and indorsed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in his annual report.

Mr. HISCOCK. Will the gentleman let me ask him a single question.

Mr. McMAHON. I cannot. Think of it, Mr. Speaker, that the appropriations asked for the Internal Revenue Department to complete the service of this fiscal year are more than four hundred thousand dollars more than were estimated in his letter to Congress for the service of the next fiscal year! How can this be explained? Even with the deficiency now granted, the provision for this fiscal year exceeds that of next year.

Mr. HAWLEY. And a gain of $20,000,000 of revenue in two years.

Mr. McMAHON. Are we not to gain next year? Does not the Commissioner say that the service is increasing? Why do we need $2,500,000 for gaugers and storekeepers for this year when the Commissioner only asked and received $2,100,000 for the next year?

Mr. HAWLEY. Every new distillery requires a new man to watch it.

Mr. McMAHON. I am glad to see the gentleman is uneasy and takes these statements home, because I want the country to take them home as well, and I want it to understand that either too much has been demanded of this Congress for this year or else these public officers when their estimates were being made were neglecting public interests and engaged in performing upon the stump "civil service reform" for this delightful administration which is drawing to its inglorious close.

We come to the next item; and I consider only those things objected to by the gentleman from New York. But before I leave the Public Printer I wish to say to the House and the country that we have not done this man or his department any injustice. The expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1878, were $1,638,701; the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, $1,716,012, and for the last fiscal year, when he learned the new dodge of putting this deficiency on us they amounted to $2,034,000. We gave him at the beginning of this year $1,600,000, and he stated to the chairman of the sundry civil committee who had this matter in charge, and is my authority for the statement, that he would live within that appropriation.

Now, when we propose to give him $300,000 more, making a sum total of $1,900,000, our republican friends complain that there will be a deficiency, and that he cannot transact the public business. I never in my life have known a republican who did not claim that there was not quite enough in appropriations of the public money. I never knew one that claimed that a Department could live within its appropriations. There are always deficiencies. They are always cramped; always coming up to us with the cry of Oliver for "more, more, more." Always wanting somebody to vote them more money.

The third objection that is raised by gentlemen upon the other side against this bill is that we have not made any provision in the bill for the special deputy United States marshals. Mr. Speaker, when the enormous corruption fund which common rumor says was raised for election purposes last fall to see that Garfield and the republican Congress were put through, I think it rather cheeky at this time for gentlemen of the republican party to come in here and claim that an extra compensation of a hundred thousand dollars should be taken from the Treasury and paid out to these men who were employed without warrant of law for such electioneering purposes. I imagine that gentlemen will hardly wonder that a democratic House refuses to make an appropriation of money expended for such a purpose—money that was used to pay marshals and their deputies employed expressly and exclusively for electioneering purposes. We did leave it out, and I want to say to my distinguished friend from New York, my colleague on the committee, that Hon. John Sherman himself has had honesty and sagacity enough to know that this was not properly a deficiency. He did not recommend that $100,000 be appropriated for the payment of deputy marshals. He knew very well that there was no deficiency. It is a service which was expressly ignored and not appropriated for, and whether they have a right to be paid their money or not is a question which has been discussed in the past, and I need not now revive it. They will not get their money from us.

My friends on the other side suggest that it become a claim against the Government. That is a matter for their determination hereafter.

Now, passing from the disputed points, let me recapitulate some of the principal items of this bill. We appropriate for the Court of Claims $450,000; for the Internal Revenue Department, for deficiencies, over $710,000; for the Post-Office Department, growing out of the increased demand for mail facilities, the opening of new railroads and the increase of service upon them, $280,000; for the Department of Justice, $215,000; for certain land-grant railroads, to pay them 50 per cent. of the amount the Quartermaster's Department finds due them, $275,000; for Army transportation, $125,000; public printing, $300,000; for refunding duties to importers, the excess of deposits, &c., $300,000; for bounty, back pay, &c., to volunteers, about three hundred and fourteen thousand dollars, although the appropriation is indefinite; for payment to the Miami Indians, under the provisions of the fourth article of the treaty of June 5, 1854, $221,000; for lost horses and other property in the military service, being old war claims, we appropriate $67,000; to pay to the State of Kansas under her enabling act, $190,000; for artificial limbs and appliances, $200,000.

These are the chief items of the bill, and I will say to gentlemen upon either side that all other claims either for commutation, for rations, for artificial limbs, or for bounty and back pay, for rent, &c., or anything of that kind, which have been regularly audited by the Auditor and Comptroller, and properly recommended to the committee, will be found provided for in the bill with a very few exceptions. And I will also say to my friend from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] that the items to which he refers, and which were certified to the committee only by the Secretary of the Interior, were not incorporated in the bill. But only those have been omitted for which there was no recommendation from the Auditor and Comptroller.

A large number of these claims came to the committee upon the statement from the Department that they were equitably due; but they were not included in the bill because not duly audited. The practice with our committee has been to refuse to take jurisdiction of claims unless they were properly certified to the committee in the manner provided by law.

I will say to the gentleman that the Senate has passed a bill which will reach these claims, and it is now upon the Speaker's table. No Appropriation Committee, and especially a deficiency sub-committee, would be willing to assume the responsibility of going outside of the usual custom and incorporating matters which did not come properly before them, as a mere Appropriation Committee.

Mr. VALENTINE. The letter from the Secretary of the Interior says that these are not only equitable but they are just claims.

Mr. McMAHON. If they were legal claims they should have been audited and presented to the committee. There are many equitable claims and just claims which have no standing in an Appropriation Committee-room.

Mr. VALENTINE. But has not the committee passed a law that they cannot be audited until an appropriation is made to pay them?

Mr. McMAHON. No, sir; by no means.

Mr. VALENTINE. Then the law has been repealed?

Mr. McMAHON. No, but when a man makes a claim for lost horses it does not require an appropriation to be put into the bill in advance to enable the claim to be ascertained and reported upon; and so also in reference to many other claims of that same kind. It was under the construction of the law of 1878, for which we are not responsible.

Mr. VALENTINE. I understand the gentleman from Ohio to say that it is not the law now?

Mr. McMAHON. The law says that the claim shall be first audited and then reported to Congress, and after the claims are audited then a provision for their payment is incorporated into the bill.

Mr. VALENTINE. You refuse then to put them in for that reason.

Mr. McMAHON. Undoubtedly.

Mr. VALENTINE. But the law says they cannot be audited until the appropriation has been passed to pay them.

Mr. McMAHON. The Committee on Appropriations is not a claims committee. The law does not say so.

Mr. VALENTINE. These are not claims but deficiencies, because they are itemized.

Mr. McMAHON. I have answered the gentleman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time allowed for debate has expired, and the question recurs on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill. This being a general appropriation bill the vote on its passage, as required by the rule, will be taken by yeas and nays. That in the judgment of the Chair is still required, notwithstanding that this is a motion to suspend the rules.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 242, nay 1, not voting 47; as follows:

YEAS—242.

Acklen,	Cravens,	Kenna,	Russell, W. A.
Aiken,	Crowley,	Ketcham,	Ryan, Thomas
Aldrich, N. W.	Culberson,	Killinger,	Samford,
Aldrich, William	Daggett,	Kimmel,	Sapp,
Anderson,	Davidson,	King,	Sawyer,
Armfield,	Davis, George R.	Kitchin,	Scales,
Atherton,	Davis, Horace	Klotz,	Scoville,
Atkins,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Ladd,	Shallenberger,
Bachman,	Deering,	Lapham,	Shelley,
Bailey,	De La Matyr,	Le Fevre,	Sherwin,
Baker,	Deuster,	Lindsey,	Simonton,
Ballou,	Dibrell,	Lounsbery,	Singleton, J. W.
Barber,	Dickey,	Lowe,	Singleton, O. R.
Barlow,	Dunnell,	Manning,	Slemons,
Bayne,	Dwight,	Marsh,	Smith, A. Herr
Beale,	Einstein,	Martin, Edward L.	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Belford,	Elam,	Mason,	Smith, William E.
Beltzhoover,	Ellis,	McCoid,	Sparks,
Berry,	Errett,	McCook,	Speer,
Bicknell,	Evins,	McKenzie,	Springer,
Bingham,	Felton,	McKinley,	Starin,
Bisbee,	Ferdon,	McLane,	Steele,
Blake,	Fisher,	McMahon,	Stevenson,
Bland,	Ford,	McMillin,	Stone,
Bliss,	Forney,	Miles,	Talbott,
Blount,	Forsythe,	Miller,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Bouck,	Fort,	Mills,	Taylor, Robert L.
Boyd,	Frye,	Money,	Thomas,
Bragg,	Geddes,	Monroe,	Thompson, P. B.
Brewer,	Gillette,	Morrison,	Thompson, W. G.
Briggs,	Godshalk,	Morse,	Tillman,
Bright,	Goode,	Muldrow,	Townsend, Amos
Browne,	Hall,	Myers,	Tucker,
Buckner,	Hammond, John	Neal,	Turner, Oscar
Burrows,	Hammond, N. J.	New,	Tyler,
Butterworth,	Harris, Benj. W.	Newberry,	Updegraff, J. T.
Cabell,	Harris, John T.	Nicholls,	Upson,
Caldwell,	Haskell,	Norcross,	Urner,
Calkins,	Hatch,	O'Neill,	Valentine,
Camp,	Hawk,	O'Reilly,	Van Aernam,
Cannon,	Hawley,	Orth,	Vance,
Carlisle,	Hayes,	Osmer,	Voorhis,
Carpenter,	Hazelton,	Overton,	Waddill,
Caswell,	Heilman,	Pacheco,	Ward,
Chalmers,	Henderson,	Page,	Warner,
Chittenden,	Henkle,	Phelps,	Washburn,
Claflin,	Herbert,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Clardy,	Herndon,	Phister,	Wells,
Clark, Alvah A.	Hiscock,	Poehler,	Whiteaker,
Clark, John B.	Hooker,	Prescott,	Williams, C. G.
Clements,	Horr,	Price,	Williams, Thomas
Clymer,	Hostetler,	Ray,	Willis,
Cobb,	House,	Reagan,	Willits,
Coffroth,	Hubbell,	Reed,	Wilson,
Colerick,	Humphrey,	Richardson, J. S.	Wise,
Conger,	Hunton,	Richmond,	Wood,
Converse,	Hurd,	Robertson,	Wright,
Cook,	Hutchins,	Robeson,	Yocum,
Covert,	Jorgensen,	Robinson,	Young, Casey.
Cowgill,	Keifer,	Ross,
Crapo,	Kelley,	Rothwell,

NAY—1.

Dunn.

NOT VOTING—47.

Blackburn,	Henry,	Morton,	Townshend, R. W.
Bowman,	Hill,	Muller,	Turner, Thomas
Brigham,	Houk,	Murch,	Updegraff, Thomas
Cox,	James,	O'Brien,	Van Voorhis,
Davis, Joseph J.	Johnston,	O'Connor,	Wait,
Dick,	Jones,	Persons,	Weaver,
Ewing,	Joyce,	Pound,	White,
Finley,	Knott,	Rice,	Whitthorne,
Frost,	Loring,	Richardson, D. P.	Wilber,
Gibson,	Martin, Benj. F.	Russell, Daniel L.	Yeates,
Gunter,	McGowan,	Ryon, John W.	Young, Thomas L.
Harmer,	Mitchell,	Stephens,

So (two-thirds voting in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. YEATES with Mr. HEILMAN, until further notice.

Mr. WAIT with Mr. JOHNSTON, for this legislative day, both gentlemen being indisposed.

Mr. STEPHENS with Mr. MITCHELL, for this day.

Mr. MARTIN, of West Virginia, with Mr. DICK, for this day, on all questions except a quorum.

Mr. PERSONS with Mr. MCGOWAN, for this day; Mr. PERSONS to be allowed to vote to make a quorum.

Mr. HILL with Mr. RICE, until three o'clock.

Mr. THOMAS TURNER with Mr. JOYCE, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. WHITTHORNE with Mr. HARMER, on the deficiency bill.

Mr. BLACKBURN with Mr. LORING, on this bill.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

FUNDING BILL.

Mr. TUCKER. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is the consideration of the Senate amendments to the refunding bill. The pending question is on the demand made by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] for the main question on the sixteenth amendment of the Senate.

Mr. TUCKER. On concurring in the sixteenth amendment.

The SPEAKER. On the motion to concur.

The question being taken, on a viva voce vote, the Chair stated that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. CONGER. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 101, noes none.

Mr. CONGER. A quorum has not voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will order tellers, and appoints the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. TUCKER, and the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. BURROWS.

The House again divided, and the tellers reported—ayes 114, noes 7.

Mr. CONGER. I want the negative to have a chance. We all feel as they did in "Bluebeard," when they asked sister Anne if she could see anybody coming.

The count was resumed; and the tellers reported—ayes 119, noes 7.

Mr. CONGER. No quorum.

Mr. CARLISLE. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 134, nays 25, not voting 131; as follows:

YEAS—134.

Acklen,	Cravens,	Kitchen,	Scoville,
Aiken,	Culberson,	Klotz,	Shelley,
Armfield,	Davidson,	Knott,	Simonton,
Atherton,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Ladd,	Singleton, J. W.
Atkins,	De La Matyr,	Le Fevre,	Singleton, O. R.
Bachman,	Deuster,	Lounsbery,	Slemons,
Barlow,	Dibrell,	Lowe,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Beale,	Dickey,	Manning,	Smith, William E.
Beltzhoover,	Dunn,	Marsh,	Sparks,
Berry,	Elam,	Martin, Benj. F.	Speer,
Bicknell,	Ellis,	McKenzie,	Springer,
Blackburn,	Evins,	McLane,	Steele,
Bland,	Finley,	McMahon,	Stevenson,
Blount,	Forney,	McMillin,	Talbott,
Bouck,	Frost,	Mills,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bragg,	Geddes,	Money,	Thompson, P. B.
Bright,	Gibson,	Morrison,	Tillman,
Buckner,	Gillette,	Muldrow,	Tucker,
Cabell,	Goode,	Myers,	Turner, Oscar
Caldwell,	Gunter,	New,	Vance,
Carlisle,	Hammond, N. J.	Nicholls,	Waddill,
Chalmers,	Harris, John T.	O'Reilly,	Warner,
Clardy,	Hatch,	Phelps,	Weaver,
Clark, Alvah A.	Henkle,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Clark, John B.	Herbert,	Phister,	Whiteaker,
Clements,	Herndon,	Poehler,	Whitthorne,
Clymer,	Hooker,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Cobb,	Hostetler,	Richardson, J. S.	Willis,
Coffroth,	House,	Richmond,	Wilson,
Colerick,	Hunton,	Robertson,	Wise,
Converse,	Kelley,	Rothwell,	Wright,
Cook,	Kenna,	Samford,	Young, Casey.
Covert,	Kimmel,	Sawyer,
Cox,	King,	Scales,

NAYS—25.

Anderson,	Davis, Horace	Hutchins,	Robinson,
Belford,	Dunnell,	Jones,	Ryon, Thomas
Bliss,	Einstein,	Killinger,	Washburn,
Boyd,	Ford,	Morse,	Yocum.
Browne,	Haskell,	Neal,
Cannon,	Hawk,	Orth,
Daggett,	Hawley,	Page,

NOT VOTING—131.

Aldrich, N. W.	Carpenter,	Forsythe,	Humphrey,
Aldrich, William	Caswell,	Fort,	Hurd,
Bailey,	Chittenden,	Frye,	James,
Baker,	Claflin,	Godshalk,	Johnston,
Ballou,	Conger,	Hall,	Jorgensen,
Barber,	Cowgill,	Hammond, John	Joyce,
Bayne,	Crapo,	Harmer,	Keifer,
Bingham,	Crowley,	Harris, Benj. W.	Ketcham,
Bisbee,	Davis, George R.	Hayes,	Lapham,
Blake,	Davis, Joseph J.	Hazelton,	Lindsey,
Bowman,	Deering,	Heilman,	Loring,
Brewer,	Dick,	Henderson,	Martin, Edward L.
Briggs,	Dwight,	Henry,	Mason,
Brigham,	Errett,	Hill,	McCoid,
Burrows,	Ewing,	Hiscock,	McCook,
Butterworth,	Felton,	Horr,	McGowan,
Calkins,	Ferdon,	Houk,	McKinley,
Camp,	Fisher,	Hubbell,	Miles,
Miller,	Pound,	Smith, A. Herr	Valentine,
Mitchell,	Prescott,	Starin,	Van Aernam,
Monroe,	Price,	Stephens,	Van Voorhis,
Morton,	Ray,	Stone,	Voorhis,
Muller,	Reed,	Taylor, Ezra B.	Wait,
Murch,	Rice,	Thomas,	Ward,
Newberry,	Richardson, D. P.	Thompson, Wm. G.	Wells,
Norcross,	Robeson,	Townsend, Amos	White,
O'Brien,	Ross,	Townshend, R. W.	Wilber,
O'Connor,	Russell, Daniel L.	Turner, Thomas	Williams, C. G.
O'Neill,	Russell, W. A.	Tyler,	Willits,
Osmer,	Ryon, John W.	Updegraff, J. T.	Wood,
Overton,	Sapp,	Updegraff, Thomas	Yeates,
Pacheco,	Shallenberger,	Upson,	Young, Thomas L.
Persons,	Sherwin,	Urner,

So the main question was ordered.

At the conclusion of the second call of the roll,

Mr. TUCKER said: I move to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. CONGER. I object.

The names of those voting were then read.

The following additional pairs where then announced:

Mr. TOWNSHEND, of Illinois, with Mr. HENDERSON, for the remainder of the day, on all questions.

Mr. HISCOCK with Mr. COBB, they being absent on a conference committee.

Mr. PERSONS, (having voted in the affirmative.) I voted inadvertently. I am paired, and withdraw my vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The question was taken on concurring in the amendment of the Senate numbered 16; and upon a division there were—ayes 95, noes 12.

Mr. CONGER. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. The point being made that no quorum has voted the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. CARLISLE. Let us have the yeas and nays ordered at once.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 146, nays 16, not voting 128; as follows:

YEAS—146.

Acklen,	Davidson,	Kitchin,	Scoville,
Aiken,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Klotz,	Shelley,
Anderson,	De La Matyr,	Knott,	Simonton,
Armfield,	Deuster,	Le Fevre,	Singleton, J. W.
Atherton,	Dibrell,	Lounsbery,	Singleton, O. R.
Atkins,	Dickey,	Lowe,	Slemons,
Bachman,	Dunn,	Manning,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Beale,	Elam,	Marsh,	Smith, William E.
Beltzhoover,	Ellis,	Martin, Benj. F.	Sparks,
Berry,	Evins,	Martin, Edward L.	Speer,
Bicknell,	Felton,	McKenzie,	Springer,
Blackburn,	Finley,	McLane,	Steele,
Bland,	Forney,	McMahon,	Stevenson,
Blount,	Fort,	McMillin,	Talbott,
Bouck,	Frost,	Mills,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bragg,	Geddes,	Money,	Thompson, P. B.
Bright,	Gibson,	Morrison,	Tillman,
Buckner,	Gillette,	Muldrow,	Tucker,
Butterworth,	Goode,	Myers,	Turner, Oscar
Cabell,	Gunter,	Neal,	Valentine,
Caldwell,	Hammond, N. J.	New,	Vance,
Carlisle,	Harris, John T.	Nicholls,	Waddill,
Chalmers,	Haskell,	O'Reilly,	Warner,
Clardy,	Hatch,	Persons,	Weaver,
Clark, Alvah A.	Henkle,	Phelps,	Wellborn,
Clark, John B.	Herbert,	Philips,	Wells,
Clements,	Herndon,	Phister,	Whiteaker,
Clymer,	Hooker,	Poehler,	Whitthorne,
Cobb,	Hostetler,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Coffroth,	House,	Richardson, J. S.	Willis,
Colerick,	Hunton,	Richmond,	Wilson,
Converse,	Hurd,	Robertson,	Wise,
Cook,	Kelley,	Rothwell,	Wright,
Covert,	Kenna,	Ryan, Thomas	Yocum,
Cox,	Killinger,	Samford,	Young, Casey.
Cravens,	Kimmel,	Sawyer,
Culberson,	King,	Scales,

NAYS—16.

Baker,	Cannon,	Hawk,	O'Neill,
Boyd,	Dunnell,	Hawley,	Prescott,
Browne,	Einstein,	Jones,	Robinson,
Calkins,	Ford,	Ladd,	Washburn.

NOT VOTING—128.

Aldrich, N. W.	Camp,	Ewing,	Horr,
Aldrich, William	Carpenter,	Ferdon,	Houk,
Bailey,	Caswell,	Fisher,	Hubbell,
Ballou,	Chittenden,	Forsythe,	Humphrey,
Barber,	Claflin,	Frye,	Hutchins,
Barlow,	Conger,	Godshalk,	James,
Bayne,	Cowgill,	Hall,	Johnston,
Belford,	Crapo,	Hammond, John	Jorgensen,
Bingham,	Crowley,	Harmer,	Joyce,
Bisbee,	Daggett,	Harris, Benj. W.	Keifer,
Blake,	Davis, George R.	Hayes,	Ketcham,
Bliss,	Davis, Horace	Hazelton,	Lapham,
Bowman,	Davis, Joseph J.	Heilman,	Lindsey,
Brewer,	Deering,	Henderson,	Loring,
Briggs,	Dick,	Henry,	Mason,
Brigham,	Dwight,	Hill,	McCoid,
Burrows,	Errett,	Hiscock,	McCook,

McGowan,	Osmer,	Sapp,	Updegraff, Thomas
McKinley,	Overton,	Shallenberger,	Upson,
Miles,	Pacheco,	Sherwin,	Urner,
Miller,	Page,	Smith, A. Herr	Van Aernam,
Mitchell,	Pound,	Starin,	Van Voorhis,
Monroe,	Price,	Stephens,	Voorhis,
Morse,	Ray,	Stone,	Wait,
Morton,	Reed,	Taylor, Ezra B.	Ward,
Muller,	Rice,	Thomas,	White,
Murch,	Richardson, D. P.	Thompson, W. G.	Wilber,
Newberry,	Robeson,	Townsend, Amos.	Williams, C. G.
Norcross,	Ross,	Townshend, R. W.	Willits,
O'Brien,	Russell, Daniel L.	Turner, Thomas	Wood,
O'Connor,	Russell, W. A.	Tyler,	Yeates,
Orth,	Ryon, John W.	Updegraff, J. T.	Young, Thomas L.

So the sixteenth amendment of the Senate was concurred in.

At the conclusion of the second call of the roll,

Mr. CONGER said: I move to dispense with the reading of the names.

There was no objection.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER. The next amendment of the Senate, upon which the action of the House has not been had, is to section 4 of the bill, and is the amendment numbered 25, to insert the word "temporarily" in line 3, after the words "to use." I am instructed by the Committee on Ways and Means to move a concurrence in that amendment with an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read the proposed amendment to the amendment, as follows:

In line 3 strike out the word temporarily" and insert in lieu thereof the words "from time to time;" in the same line, after the word "dollars," insert the words "at any one time;" in line 11 of the same section, after the word "of," insert the word "any;" and in line 12 of the same section, after the word "or," insert the words "of the."

The section, as proposed to be amended, is as follows:

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, if in his opinion it shall become necessary, to use from time to time not exceeding $50,000,000 at any one time of the standard gold and silver coin in the Treasury in the redemption of the 5 and 6 per cent. bonds of the United States authorized to be refunded by the provisions of this act, which shall from time to time be repaid and replaced out of the proceeds of the sale of the bonds or Treasury notes authorized by this act; and he may at any time apply the surplus money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, or so much thereof as he may consider proper, to the purchase or redemption of any United States bonds or of the Treasury notes authorized by this act.

Mr. TUCKER. I call the previous question upon concurring in the amendment with the amendment which has been read.

Mr. MILLS. I move to concur with the amendment of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The vote will be first taken on concurring in the amendment with an amendment.

Mr. TUCKER. I call the previous question on the motion to concur with the amendment and on the motion to concur.

Mr. CONGER. Which is the first in order to be voted upon?

The SPEAKER. The motion to concur with an amendment.

Mr. CONGER. Let the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] call the previous question on that motion only at this time. There will be no opposition to that.

Mr. TUCKER. Very well; I will move the previous question on concurring in the amendment of the Senate with an amendment.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The question was upon concurring in the amendment of the Senate numbered 25 with the amendment reported from the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. CONGER. On that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 88, nays 126, not voting 76; as follows:

YEAS—88.

Aldrich, William	Cowgill,	Hubbell,	Robinson,
Anderson,	Daggett,	Keifer,	Ryan, Thomas
Baker,	Davis, George R.	Killinger,	Sapp,
Ballou,	Davis, Horace	Lindsey,	Smith, A. Herr
Bayne,	Deering,	Marsh,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Belford,	Deuster,	Mason,	Thomas,
Bingham,	Dwight,	McCoid,	Thompson, Wm. G.
Blake,	Einstein,	McCook,	Townsend, Amos
Bliss,	Errett,	McKinley,	Tucker,
Bowman,	Felton,	Miles,	Tyler,
Boyd,	Ferdon,	Monroe,	Updegraff, J. T.
Brewer,	Fisher,	Morse,	Updegraff, Thomas
Briggs,	Fort,	Neal,	Urner,
Brigham,	Frye,	O'Neill,	Van Aernam,
Browne,	Godshalk,	Orth,	Voorhis,
Burrows,	Hall,	Osmer,	Ward,
Cannon,	Harris, Benj. W.	Overton,	Washburn,
Carlisle,	Haskell,	Prescott,	White,
Carpenter,	Hawk,	Price,	Wilber,
Caswell,	Hawley,	Ray,	Willits,
Claflin,	Heilman,	Reed,	Wood,
Conger,	Horr,	Robeson,	Young, Thomas L.

NAYS—126.

Acklen,	Cravens,	Klotz,	Shelley,
Aiken,	Davidson,	Knott,	Simonton,
Armfield,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Ladd,	Singleton, J. W.
Atherton,	Dibrell,	Le Fevre,	Singleton, O. R.
Atkins,	Dickey,	Lowe,	Slemons,
Bachman,	Dunn,	Manning,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Barlow,	Elam,	Martin, Edward L.	Smith, William E.
Beale,	Ellis,	McKenzie,	Sparks,
Berry,	Evins,	McLane,	Speer,
Bicknell,	Ewing,	McMahon,	Springer,
Blackburn,	Finley,	McMillin,	Steele,
Bland,	Forney,	Mills,	Stevenson,
Blount,	Frost,	Money,	Talbott,
Bouck,	Geddes,	Morrison,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bragg,	Goode,	Muldrow,	Thompson, P. B.
Bright,	Gunter,	Myers,	Tillman,
Buckner,	Hammond, N. J.	New,	Turner, Oscar
Cabell,	Harris, John T.	Nicholls,	Upson,
Caldwell,	Hatch,	O'Reilly,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Henkle,	Persons,	Waddill,
Clardy,	Herbert,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Clark, Alvah A.	Herndon,	Phister,	Whiteaker,
Clark, John B.	Hooker,	Poehler,	Whitthorne,
Clements,	Hostetler,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Clymer,	Hunton,	Richardson, J. S.	Willis,
Cobb,	Hurd,	Richmond,	Wilson,
Coffroth,	Jones,	Robertson,	Wise,
Colerick,	Kelley,	Rothwell,	Wright,
Converse,	Kenna,	Samford,	Yeates,
Cook,	Kimmel,	Sawyer,	Young, Casey.
Covert,	King,	Scales,
Cox,	Kitchin,	Scoville,

NOT VOTING—76.

Aldrich, N. W.	Gillette,	Loring,	Ross,
Bailey,	Hammond, John	Lounsbery,	Russell, Daniel L.
Barber,	Harmer,	Martin, Benj. F.	Russell, W. A.
Beltzhoover,	Hayes,	McGowan,	Ryon, John W.
Bisbee,	Hazelton,	Miller,	Shallenberger,
Butterworth,	Henderson,	Mitchell,	Sherwin,
Calkins,	Henry,	Morton,	Starin,
Camp,	Hill,	Muller,	Stephens,
Chittenden,	Hiscock,	Murch,	Stone,
Crapo,	Houk,	Newberry,	Townshend, R. W.
Crowley,	House,	Norcross,	Turner, Thomas
Culberson,	Humphrey,	O'Brien,	Valentine,
Davis, Joseph J.	Hutchins,	O'Connor,	Van Voorhis,
De La Matyr,	James,	Pacheco,	Wait,
Dick,	Johnston,	Page,	Warner,
Dunnell,	Jorgensen,	Phelps,	Weaver,
Ford,	Joyce,	Pound,	Wells,
Forsythe,	Ketcham,	Rice,	Williams, C. G.
Gibson,	Lapham,	Richardson, D. P.	Yocum.

So the motion to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment was not agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER. I now move to concur in the Senate amendment, and demand the previous question.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on concurring in the amendment of the Senate.

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENROLLMENT OF THE RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. KENNA. I rise to make a privileged report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, and to ask such action from the House as may authorize two corrections in the enrollment of the river and harbor appropriation bill. By direction of the committee, I submit the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, (the Senate concurring,) That the Committee on Enrolled Bills be, and said committee is hereby, authorized and directed to change the enrollment of the bill making appropriations for the construction, completion, and repair of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, so that the item appropriating $10,000 for the Little Red River in Arkansas shall be stricken out and the word "the" in the item in relation to the Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company be substituted by the word "those;" the first of said changes being necessary to correct a clerical error in the conference report on said bill, and the second correction being necessary to correct a clerical error in a Senate amendment thereto.

The resolution was adopted.

FUNDING BILL.

Mr. TUCKER. The next amendment of the Senate to which I call the attention of the House is the twenty-ninth amendment, to strike out the word "May," in the first line of section 5, and insert the word "July." I move concurrence in that amendment of the Senate and on that motion call the previous question.

Mr. CONGER. Before that motion is put, I desire to be heard. I did not know that the House had voted on the second motion to concur.

The SPEAKER. It did vote.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman calls the previous question——

The SPEAKER. Is there any further amendment from the Committee on Ways and Means?

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman from Virginia has demanded the previous question; I insist that I have the right to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The committee's amendments had better be proceeded with.

Mr. TUCKER. The Committee on Ways and Means authorized me to move concurrence in the amendment to the fifth section, with an amendment——

Mr. CONGER. I desire to be heard.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONGER. But the gentleman from Virginia is calling the previous question.

Mr. TUCKER. The committee authorized me to move to concur with the Senate amendment to which I have called attention, with an amendment——

Mr. SPRINGER. I reserve all points of order.

Mr. BUCKNER. Is this an additional amendment to those proposed yesterday?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not quite able to understand.

Mr. FRYE. I desire to ask the gentleman from Virginia a question. Does he not remember that at this point the Committee on Ways and Means agreed to withdraw the committee's amendment inserting "September" for the purpose of allowing the gentleman from Michigan to offer an amendment?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes, sir.

Mr. FRYE. And this is to be open to the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. TUCKER. Certainly. I am only mentioning now what the committee authorized me to do, so far as their action is concerned.

Mr. FRYE. Does the gentleman state that the committee authorized him to report an amendment inserting "September" instead of "July?"

Mr. TUCKER. No, sir. On the contrary, the gentleman from Michigan asked that we would withdraw that in order that he might move to attach his amendment.

Mr. FRYE. Does the gentleman understand if the House now votes to concur with the Senate amendment that that amendment is still open for the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. TUCKER. I will let the gentleman offer his amendment now.

The SPEAKER. The committee's amendment had better be proceeded with.

Mr. FRYE. If the Speaker pleases, the Senate changed May to July. The committee changed July to September. Then the committee retired from the change from July to September in order to allow the gentleman from Michigan to move the September amendment with another amendment. Now, if the House concurs in the Senate amendment will the gentleman still have his right of moving to amend by changing that to September and something else? If not, then the gentleman from Michigan could offer his amendment at this point.

Mr. TUCKER. I will let the gentleman offer his amendment at this point, and then demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no wish except to conform to the wishes of the committee.

Mr. CONGER. I read the amendment I am permitted to offer at this time.

Mr. SPRINGER. Is this the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. SPRINGER. I reserve points of order on that amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend the fifth section by striking out "July," in the first line, and after the words "provided further," in line 20 and to and including the word "repeal," in line 24; and by inserting the word "September" in the first line in place of the word "July," propcsed to be stricken out.

Mr. SPRINGER. I make the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to say——

Mr. SPRINGER. I have no objection to the gentleman from Michigan being heard, but I insist on my point of order.

Mr. MILLS. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. TUCKER. Withdraw your point of order and let the vote be taken on it.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the Clerk to read the words proposed to be stricken out.

Mr. SPRINGER. I make the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will first cause the words to be read which the gentleman proposes to strike out.

The Clerk read as follows:

The amendment strikes out the word "July" in line 1 of section 5, and inserts "September;" and it also strikes out, in lines 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24, the following words: "That section 4 of the act of June 20, 1874, entitled 'An act fixing the amount of United States notes, providing for a redistribution of the national-bank currency, and for other purposes,' be, and the same is hereby, repealed."

Mr. CONGER rose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia stated some debate was to be allowed, and he does not know whether that debate is to be allowed at this time.

Mr. TUCKER. If any debate is desired, I shall be willing to allow it for a reasonable time.

Mr. FRYE. If the gentleman will allow me for a moment. It is understood there should be some debate when we reach the amendment in the fifth section; that is, this amendment. It may as well be to have it now.

Mr. TUCKER. Under the rule I believe fifteen minutes to each side is allowed.

Mr. FRYE. I understand there are two gentlemen who would like fifteen minutes each.

Mr. TUCKER. I am informed I have an hour, and I will agree to yield thirty minutes to each side.

Mr. FRYE. The two gentlemen I have referred to are the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PRICE] and the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. CONGER.]

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. And I should like to have five minutes.

The SPEAKER. That will be thirty-five minutes on that side. The additional five minutes will have to come out of the half hour allowed to the other side.

Mr. TUCKER. I call for the previous question. There are several gentlemen who wish to speak, and I can only agree to half an hour on each side.

Mr. CONGER. Does this side begin? If so, we wish to reserve a part of our time to answer what may be said on the other side.

Mr. CARLISLE. The question before the House is the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONGER. We propose to stand by the committee's amendment. We find unfortunately we are compelled to sustain the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. CARLISLE. The committee's amendment is not now before the House. The amendment before the House is the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONGER. The committee directed this to be offered.

Mr. CARLISLE. It did not. The committee agreed the gentleman might offer it, but the committee did not agree to it.

Mr. SPRINGER. I reserve all points of order against the amendment.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. Before we proceed I should like to make an inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. It was stated an amendment was to be offered by somebody, providing that nothing herein contained should repeal section 5224.

Mr. CARLISLE. That is the committee's amendment.

The SPEAKER. It will be reached in due time.

Mr. CONGER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. FRYE. The amendment which the gentleman from Michigan offers is one, in my judgment, in the present condition of public sentiment, of very great importance. Sections 5220, 5221, 5222, and 5224 of the Revised Statutes of the United States provide for the voluntary liquidation of banking corporations. In that voluntary liquidation the bank itself, by the action of a certain number of its stockholders, may, under the law, redeem all its bonds on deposit in the Treasury for its circulation in the lawful currency of the United States; and two of these sections providing for that contingency were the revised acts of June, 1874, referred to in section 5 of this bill.

Now, the bill proposed by the Committee on Ways and Means, in this section now under consideration and the amendments proposed by the gentleman from Kentucky, provides for a repeal of that law of June, 1874, and the question meeting this House squarely is simply this: Does that repeal of the law of June, 1874, repeal the right of a national bank to go into voluntary liquidation and redeem its bonds by the use of lawful currency? And, Mr. Speaker, gentlemen are divided, and divided honestly, in their opinion on this subject. Some of the best lawyers in this country to-day are writing to Congress insisting that if the amendment recommended by the gentleman from Kentucky shall prevail, they hold that it will operate as an absolute repeal of all power on the part of the national banks voluntarily to liquidate and redeem their United States bonds deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury as security for circulation by lawful currency. If it does this, if it accomplishes this result, a gross and grave injustice is done to this great interest in this country. If it does not, then the complaint is without foundation. But, sir, a majority of the banking people of the country to-day fully believe that it does repeal that right.

Mr. Speaker, why should there be any question about it? Why should it be left open to doubt? Here we are enacting a law touching the most sensitive thing in the world, finance, (and gentlemen can see how sensitive a subject it is by observing what has transpired within the last week,) and in that enactment we are met with questions of such gravity and doubt as this. In legislating upon a subject so sensitive as this, why should it be left to a doubt if a single amendment, a few words incorporated in it, or if the English language can make it plain, certain, and unequivocal. It is the duty of the House and of the Committee on Ways and Means to make it so certain that a wayfaring man, even though he be a fool, need not err therein.

Sir, the committee, in order to remove all doubt, agreed to an amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. McKINLEY,] providing that nothing in this act shall be construed to effect these sections to which I called the attention of the House.

But, Mr. Speaker, that very amendment is probably open to the point of order, if any gentleman here should make it; and under a former ruling of the Speaker it is very likely that it might be ruled out. What will be the effect? The friends of the bill reject Mr. CONGER'S amendment, also reject or have ruled out of order the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. McKINLEY.]

What meaning will you convey to the country? What will be the signification of your action? Do you not give notice, practically, to the banks that they cannot liquidate without redeeming their bonds held by the Treasury in their own circulation? By rejecting the McKinley amendment do you not send out word to the country that it is the purpose in framing this bill to prevent the banks from liquidating under the existing provisions of law? that such at any rate is your construction? Sir, I hope this House will do nothing of the kind, but will so amend the law that no man can fail to comprehend readily and understand clearly its provisions.

Mr. CONGER. I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from California, [Mr. PAGE.]

Mr. PAGE. Mr. Speaker, I shall not attempt to discuss the merits of the amendment before the House in the brief time allotted to me by the courtesy of the gentleman from Michigan. All I desire to say is this, that I believe the majority of the House have sufficiently satisfied the country of their determination to pass this bill without any amendment. I believe the minority side of the House have sufficiently shown to the country that, notwithstanding their efforts, the majority will triumph, and that the bill will pass this body as it came from the Senate, notwithstanding their efforts to correct its inequalities.

For one I am unwilling to agree to any more delay or filibustering, [laughter and applause on the democratic side,] which I do not claim in the offensive use of the term is filibustering at all. But what I do say and meant to say is that I do not feel that this side of the House, after having exhausted under the rules of the House all of its parliamentary rights, can now afford to prolong or delay the passage of this bill, but leave it to the democratic majority to take the responsibility, and if it be a good law they shall be entitled to get the credit. But, Mr. Speaker, if it be a bad one, as I believe it is, the republican party will have washed its hands of the responsibility of putting the bill before the country without permitting necessary changes or modifications to be made in it.

Mr. CONGER. I now yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. PRICE.]

Mr. PRICE. Mr. Speaker, I would very much like to have had an hour in place of ten minutes on this bill to state what I regard as the true condition of this matter. Those gentlemen upon the other side come in and say to the House they want a 3 per cent. funding bill passed. I am willing to accord to them honesty of intention in that declaration. On this side of the House and possibly some gentlemen upon that side doubt and doubt to-day the policy and practicability of floating a 3 per cent. bond.

And I but repeat what I said once before on this floor when the bill was under discussion at its first passage, and that is, that if a 3 per cent. bond be placed upon the market without any discretion on the part of the funding officer, and if it fails, you have injured beyond redemption almost the credit of the Government.

But that is all past. Instead of bringing in a 3 per cent. clean-cut and unmistakable bill for the issue of a 3 per cent. bond, you bring us in in a bill here in comparison with which, in my judgment, Pandora's box and the Trojan horse were simply innocent toys; a bill unsettling the entire business affairs of the country, alarming the capital of the country, and of course by alarming the capital interfering with all the manufacturing and producing interests of the country.

Now, the gentleman who advocated this bill, and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] particularly, who has the principal charge of this bill, alleges and has endeavored to make gentlemen upon this side of the House believe, possibly has made gentlemen on that side of the House believe, that you do not intend to repeal the sections referred to by my friend, the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. FRYE,] when the last section of his bill provides in terms, not by implication, not by inference, but in terms, that this bill shall be called so and so and that it shall repeal all acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act. And this act provides that you cannot get the bonds out of the Treasury of the United States belonging to a bank that has deposited them there for circulation or for security of deposits made with them by the Government unless you deposit your own paper there for them. The section I refer to provides that lawful money may be deposited and these bonds taken up; while this bill says that they must return their own notes; and it would be base flattery not to call a man very foolish—that is as mild as I can put it—who does not know there never was a bank of issue established in this world that ever got in all of its own notes. And, consequently, if they cannot get in their own notes, and if they cannot get their bonds out any other way than by depositing their notes, they never can get their bonds. In other words, by this fifth section you say they shall do a certain thing that is morally impossible for them to do. And then you say if they don't do it you will put them into the hands of a receiver under section 5234 of the Revised Statutes; and there is no getting away from that section.

But the great bug-bear about this thing is the cry as to the national banks. They are the troublesome element in this matter. There are gentlemen upon this floor of intelligence, of integrity, of standing, not only here but at home, who rush to the front with as much velocity and ferocity whenever you name "national banks" as the wildest bull that ever came from the mountains of Andalusia would rush upon a red flag.

Oh, it is astonishing. What have the national banks done? They furnished a market for your bonds, and they did it at the solicitation of the Government, instead of your having to send your bonds to Europe where you would have to send money to pay the coupons for interest accruing on them; and they did it for the purpose of aiding the Government to float its debt. But that is all forgotten, and the hue and cry was raised from one end of the country to the other that it would not do to put power in the hands of a few men. That restriction was removed and banking was made free, so that any man or set of men who had any money could establish a bank. The trouble is that under this law shysters cannot establish a bank. It is a necessary prerequisite before you can establish a bank under the national banking act you must have some money. And that does not suit some gentlemen that would like to afflict this country as they did in the days of the past, twenty-five years ago, with the wild-cat, red-dog, and stump-tail currency, so that when you went to bed at night with a few dollars in your pocket you did not know whether you would find good money there in the morning or not.

To-day you have under the national banking law what you never had before and never will have again, if you destroy it—and you are bound to destroy it; the handwriting is on the wall; you are rushing at it with as little discretion and judgment as men ever displayed. To-day you have what you never had before, a national currency. The Government gets the benefit of every dollar destroyed. And you have a national currency that is safe in the hands of every man, no matter whether it be issued at Portland, Maine, or Portland, Oregon. You never look to see by what bank your money is issued. It is just as good now as it ever has been. And yet with your insane ferocity you rush upon this national banking system; yes, and you would rush on the thick bosses of Jehovah's buckler if you thought that there was a national bank behind it and destroy it if possible.

That is what the national banks have done. And yet these gentlemen clamor here, "Down with the national banks; down with the combination!" A combination? You had better look at your dictionaries and see what the word means. There are two thousand national banks in this country; and I defy gentlemen on this floor on either side to show me letters or telegrams from over thirty-five banks in the United States since this partisan attack has been made on them.

A combination? No, sir. There are some men in this country who propose that you shall not lock the door on them and throw away the key. They propose to get out while the door is open, and protect themselves against the Vandal that would tear down everything if "national bank" be written on its portals.

I have in my hands here fifty-six letters written from eighteen different States of this Union, not from those who are interested in national banks now in existence, but those who were interested in national banks formerly in existence, banking upon 5 or 6 per cent. bonds. They went out of the business because they could not afford to do business under the national banking law and pay the taxes which that law imposed upon the business.

I have had these letters in my desk for some time, and have wanted to get them before the country in this House. This is the first opportunity I have had since I obtained them. They were written to me voluntarily, because the writers said they wanted the country to understand this matter. You cannot plead that these letters are written by bankers or by persons interested in banks, because the writers are not in the banking business now.

I have the letters here from New York, New Jersey, Tennessee, Virginia—not sectional; there is no solid North or solid South about them—Indiana, Michigan, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Wisconsin, Connecticut, Illinois, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio—yes, even Ohio—Kentucky, Georgia, and Iowa. I have fifty-six letters from eighteen different States of this Union; fifty-six witnesses on the stand to say that national banking, even on a 5 or 6 per cent. bond, is not profitable. And yet if you were to believe the statements of gentlemen on this floor you would believe that to own a share of national-bank stock would make a man almost a millionaire.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, (Mr. CLYMER.) The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PRICE. I am sorry for it.

Mr. CONGER. I will reserve the remaining ten minutes of my time until we can hear from gentlemen on the other side.

Mr. TUCKER. I will yield five minutes to the gentleman from Iowa, [Mr. WEAVER,] and five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE.]

Mr. WEAVER. Let the gentleman from Kentucky proceed first; I will follow him.

Mr. CARLISLE addressed the House. [See Appendix.]

Mr. SAMFORD. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] be allowed to proceed.

Mr. PRICE. Not unless we can have equal time on this side. The discussion may go on for a week if you will give us an equal chance.

Mr. ROBESON. I suggest that the gentleman's time be extended ten minutes, and that ten minutes be allowed also on this side.

Several MEMBERS objected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There are objections. It is not in the power of the Chair to extend the gentleman's time.

Mr. TUCKER. I will agree that there shall be ten minutes more on each side.

Mr. CARLISLE. I did want to present to the House a proposition which I supposed——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will put the request again. It is asked that the gentleman from Kentucky be allowed to pursue his argument for ten minutes longer.

Mr. CONGER. If it is taken out of the thirty minutes allowed on that side, we do not object. Of course we have no control over that part of the time.

Mr. MILLS. Let there be ten minutes more allowed on each side.

Mr. CONGER. Let it be taken out of the thirty minutes.

Mr. CARLISLE. I will not deprive other gentlemen who desire to speak on this bill of the privilege of doing so, by continuing my own remarks, unless upon the terms suggested—that ten minutes additional be allowed to each side of the House.

Mr. MILLS and others. Let that be done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] moves that ten minutes be allowed——

Mr. CONGER. There cannot be any motion of that kind.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent——

Mr. CONGER. Let this additional time of the gentleman from Kentucky be first taken out of the thirty minutes allowed to his side. We shall see hereafter whether more time will be granted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There seem to be objections to the request that the time of the gentleman from Kentucky be extended.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I did, together with the other members belonging to the national party, vote against the passage of this funding bill at the time it passed the House. We then entertained the opinion, to which we all still adhere, that it was the simple and economical duty of Congress to provide for the payment of these maturing bonds by substituting greenbacks for the full amount of national-bank currency, and then canceling the bonds held by the Treasury to secure bank circulation. This would have paid at once one-half of the maturing bonds, and the remainder could have been readily provided for out of the rapidly accumulating surplus revenues of the Government. The simple common-sense of this plan can never be obscured by either sophistry or ridicule. My colleague [Mr. GILLETTE] offered a substitute for the bill containing these very provisions, but it was rejected; and so the bill provided for a new and short loan at 3 per cent. It is impossible to provide for the payment of these securities or to legislate concerning them without in some manner affecting the banks, inasmuch as they are owned by the banks and deposited to secure their circulation.

The bill, however, is very far from relating exclusively to the interests of the banks, but in the broadest and most comprehensive manner relates to the welfare of the whole people. Contrary to the expectations of everybody, the bill passed the Senate substantially as it left this House, whereupon we are informed by the national bankers that the bill is obnoxious to them, and that if Congress persists in the measure they will retire their notes and bring business and financial ruin upon the country. This threat is already in progress of execution, and over sixteen million dollars of our currency has been retired since the 18th of February last. It is the highwayman's threat: "Your money or your life." These banks say, "legislate as we require, or we will let slip the dogs of war upon the business of the people." The Treasurer of the United States (Mr. Gilfillin) in his annual report called attention to grave abuses arising under the national banking law, and it is proposed in the fifth section of the bill to provide a remedy. But the banks say to Congress, do it if you dare, and we will punish, we will chastise the people with a financial panic.

My colleague [Mr. PRICE] says this is an attack upon the banks. Are these bankers so distinct and independent in their rights and interests that a proposed lawful enactment for the benefit of the whole people can be called an attack upon the banks? He says he sees the "handwriting upon the wall." The figure is a good one, and awakens in every mind a classic remembrance—the feast of Belshazzar. The National Bankers' Association is here in force, are literally overrunning the lobby, and have eaten up everything in the House restaurant. Mr. Speaker, the banks have fired upon the Government, and defy the people and the law-making power. Let us accept the challenge. Let us see who legislates for this nation of 50,000,000 of people, Congress or the banks. Sir, we will not do justice to ourselves or the people if we adjourn without providing for the substitution of greenbacks for national-bank circulation, and for the speedy winding up of these institutions. Sir, the war has begun, and it will never stop until these undemocratic, dangerous, and hostile institutions are swept from existence and the people shall have forever reclaimed their sovereign right to issue the money of the country. This is the old Jacksonian battle over again, of the people against the banks.

We have paid the bondholder in interest alone over nineteen hundred million dollars, and they have grown arrogant and dictatorial. It is time such impudence received a backset. But my colleague [Mr. PRICE] imagines that if we get rid of national-bank currency we will necessarily return to "wild-cat" and "red-dog." There is no danger, Mr. Speaker; the national party stands in the way, to guard the people from possible danger in this direction also. It is the sovereign duty and power of the National Government to issue all our currency, and no other power shall issue it if in our power to prevent it. The apprehension from this direction is as stale as it is untrue. Talk about "stability in finance," and cry peace! peace! when there is no peace. Why, sir, this question will not down. It is impossible to settle this great controversy until the false system—the refuge of lies—is swept away forever. The very bill now under controversy, the 5-20-bond clause, preserves the question of the final payment of the debt for controversy in the next presidential struggle. These bonds will become payable one year after the next presidential election, and that feature alone will precipitate the whole question into the next struggle for power. Gentlemen, you had as well conclude now to meet this question, and begin to whet your swords and scrape your lint for the battle.

Oh, yes, "resumption is an accomplished fact and the financial question is settled," was the cry of the two old parties in the late campaign. It is "settled" just as the slavery question was "settled" by the old parties in 1850 and 1852. And the banks are as dictatorial to-day as slavery ever was in its palmiest days. Thank God, their recent action has verified all that we have ever said about them, and the people are aroused to the danger.

Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to print as a part of my remarks an article fromt he November number of the New York Commercial Magazine, showing what the national banks have cost the people in the past sixteen years. It is thoroughly non-partisan and perfectly reliable.

National bank "money;" what it has cost the people.

We extract from published returns of national banks the following aggregates, covering a space of over sixteen years. They will give an idea of what the "currency" which these institutions have furnished cost the people during that time. Friends and enemies, as the humor takes them, praise and blame the banks, often with arguments founded on partial statements, rarely embracing the whole subject. Printed reports are neither attractive nor intelligible to the general reader, and serve rather to bewilder than instruct. We have therefore taken the trouble to present the facts in a manner easily and accurately understood as the basis for correct opinions.

The outstanding circulation of 2,048 national banks October, 1879, amounted to over three hundred and thirteen and three-quarters millions, ($313,786,362,) and by average in sixteen years to over two hundred and eighty-two and three-quarters millions, ($282,863,980.) Government bonds pledged averaging over three hundred and twenty-eight and one-quarter millions, ($328,361,506.)

On these bonds there has been paid an interest by the people and received by the banks over two hundred and ninety-two millions, ($292,055,327,) more than eighteen millions per year, ($18,145,851.)

The amount returned to the Government as taxes on the circulation for the whole time was over forty-two and three-quarters millions, ($42,787,526,) or nearly two and three-quarters millions per year, ($2,674,208,) the net cost to the people on all being over two hundred and forty-nine and one-quarter millions, ($249,267,801,) which would fall due by average in the middle period. If we add interest on this for the half or eight years at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum we have a total near the end of 1879 of nearly three hundred and forty-nine millions, ($348,974,921,) about one-fifth of the whole interest-bearing debt on the 1st of November, 1879, which was then $1,782,967,600.

Hence it is evident, that, if the Government, instead of guaranteeing the circulation by the pledge of its own bonds, had issued its Treasury notes of average volume, about two hundred and eighty-three millions per year, one-fifth of the whole principal of the interest-bearing debt, would have been saved to the people; while the people would have been supplied with a currency surely as good and acceptable, at the cost only of paper, printing, and engraving. This is said in no spirit of hostility to the banks, who have given us a safe, steady, and uniform currency; but, as will be seen, at a very high cost. Dear money may sometimes be the best, and the best is worth paying for if a necessity; but in the case before us no such necessity presents itself.

It is well worth considering how future savings may be made in this respect without inflicting serious injury on vested rights, producing derangement in the currency or impairing what is especially valuable to all who labor and have no capital, its safety, steadiness of value, and uniformity.

Denouncing the banks for using the privileges given them by law is neither just nor courteous; abolishing them would not be wise, and might work public injury. Extreme measures will be frowned down by the sense of fairness and law-abiding disposition of the community. Let the law-making power be appealed to, set before it all the facts, and sooner or later the required remedy will be secured.

We have seen what the people have paid for the bank circulation, let us now examine how much of this remained as profits to the banks. It is fair enough to suppose that they received an average of from 6 to 8 per cent. per annum on the outstanding circulation; or during the whole time at, say, 7 per cent., three hundred and sixty-seven and three-quarters millions, ($367,764,886.) nearly twenty-three millions per year, ($22,985,305.)

From this must be taken what they paid to the United States and State governments as tax on circulation, forty-eight and one-quarter millions, ($48,237,780;) and the interest on the reserve of specie and lawful money which they held as "dead weight," without receiving any interest thereon. The specie so held averages nearly twenty-two and one-half millions, ($22,493,996;) the legal tenders and certificates of deposit average one hundred and eight and three-quarters millions, ($108,758,568;) in all one hundred and thirty-one and one-quarter millions, ($131,252,564;) interest per year $9,187,679, whole time $147,002,864, leaving them a net interest for the whole time of one hundred and seventy-two and one-half millions, ($172,514,242,) or over ten and three-quarters millions per year, ($10,782,765;) all due by average at the middle period, on which interest, eight years, at the same rate, 7 per cent., brings it up November, 1879, to over two hundred and sixty-nine and one-eighth millions, ($269,137,817.)

We have considered these net gains by circulation only, having deducted the taxes paid to the United States and State governments on it; and the interest on the idle reserve they actually held, although this was in excess of what the law required.

Let us take into account the other sources of revenue exclusive of that on their capital, to wit:

On the deposits of their dealers as a rule they pay nothing. These average yearly almost five hundred and fifty-six and three-quarters millions, ($556,698,959.)

United States deposits average yearly almost eighteen and three-quarters millions, ($18,729,492.)

At 7 per cent. on these two sources, would have yielded them near six hundred and forty-four and one-half millions, ($644,479,865.) We must deduct from this taxes to the United States and State governments, namely, on deposits, $80,900,118; on capital, $18,059,075, and on current expenses, $105,689,334, or a total of $204,648,527, leaving a net of $439,831,338 realized at the middle period.

Adding, as before, interest for eight years, it becomes, November, 1879, $86,136,887; adding to this the net gain on circulation of $269,137,817, we have a total profit to the banks of $955,274,704, on the supposition of their having realized 7 per cent. per annum, and without allowance for losses.

Their capital averages $432,859,164, and was not idle, of course, but, like the rest of their assets, yielded an annual income. Dropping estimated gains, let us now see what they actually divided, and what they have left as surplus, their capital being kept intact.

Before 1869 they were not required to report their dividends. In a little over ten years since they so reported their dividends were $473,562,799, or $47,356,279 per year; nearly 11 per cent. on their whole average capital.

In the six previous years their undivided profits, less current expenses, besides a surplus of $86,165,334, were $154,366,251, or $25,727,708 per year, on a average capital of $360,418,409; an amount, including the surplus, over 11 per cent. per annum.

The whole amount divided into ten years as reported, and net earned in six years as stated, being nearly six hundred and twenty-eight millions ($627,929,050) realized at the middle period; adding interest, 7 per cent., we have, in November, 1879, over nine hundred and seventy-nine and one-half millions, ($979,569,318,) or more than twice and one-quarter their capital in sixteen years, over 13 per cent. per year, still having it left intact; and on November 1, 1879, $114,786,528 as a surplus, or 26½ per cent. of its average amount besides, after charging off losses from 1875 to 1879 of $85,845,069.

If they had gained nothing by circulation, they could still have divided over 10 per cent. annually and have the same surplus. Therefore by taking from them only the function of the right to create currency circulation, there would still remain to them profits in fair and full requital of their capital, skill, and labor employed, while they could render public services in exchanges, moving crops, &c.

If the Government issued their own in place of the national-bank notes, not in promises to pay but simply that they would be received for all debts, public and private, including duties on imports, the people could not and would not wish better "money." If besides this the existing greenbacks were retired, and replaced by Government notes as above, with the release to usefulness and activity of most of the amount now idle in the Treasury, would give the currency required, of a kind as safe, uniform, and convenient as could be provided or desired.

The more coin passing from the Treasury into circulation as currency the less Government paper would be required. By prudent and proper legislation, its volume could be kept within such limits as to prevent undue inflation, and yet afford a regular and steady supply for the legitimate wants of the business and commercial community.

Mr. TUCKER. I now yield for five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, there has been much said on the floor of this House and in the country as to what this bill means. There has been much misapprehension on the floor of this House and in the country as to what it means. National banks have been talked about. It is not my purpose either to attack or defend national banks.

I have but one desire under this or any other funding bill, and that is to inquire how can the 5 and 6 per cent. bonds be refunded at the lowest rate of interest? And when any man can show me how that can be done, then I am ready to vote for that bill. But I am frank to say that I do not believe this bill will refund these bonds, and therefore I shall vote against it.

Some gentlemen on both sides of the House seem to consider this bill as an attack upon the national banks. Now, the fact is, the debt to be refunded is over six hundred million dollars. The national banks hold about two hundred million dollars of this amount at 5 and 6 per cent. interest. The friends of this bill claim that the banks will have to surrender under its provision their 5 and 6 per cent. bonds and take three percents or go out of business. This is not so; and the bill will not so operate. Under its provisions the banks have until the 1st day of July next to deposit 4 or 4½ per cent. bonds in lieu of the fives and sixes. Will they do it? Look at it from a business stand-point. The four percents mature in the year 1907. They are now at a premium of 12½ per cent. At 18½ per cent. premium they are equal to three percents at par. The three percents under this bill mature in five years. What people and banks want is stability and permanency, and the banks would buy four percents at 18½ per cent. premium, or even more, before they would take three percents at par; and this can be done until the 1st day of July next. What is the result? The banks will supply the place of the fives and sixes with fours. They will purchase the same from the holders thereof, largely held in Wall street and by great capitalists. The price of fours will go up. The Wall street operator will make his profit by their advance, and as soon as the banks are supplied the price of fours will recede, and whenever they are at a less premium than 18½ per cent. the Government cannot sell the three percents at par. The result will be that your refunding act will fail in doing anything except to benefit the "bloated bondholders of Wall street" that some gentlemen on the other side and in the center are so fond of denouncing. It gives them temporarily an increased price for the four percents which they now hold, arising out of the necessities of banks (engaged in legitimate bnsiness of the country) imposed upon them by this bill. Then your act will fall flat, and the banks will not take a single 3 percent.; the people of the country will not take a 3 percent. There is not a 3 per cent. bond on the face of the earth this day that is at par. The English consol that is never redeemable is not at par.

I am opposed to this bill because it will not refund, and for no other reason. I have not offered any undue opposition to the bill. I have opposed it as I had the right to do. But I have voted, and will vote to make a quorum. If a majority of this House believes this bill will refund, so far as I am concerned they shall have the right to make a trial, and if it does not refund then the responsibility is upon their heads.

Mr. TUCKER. I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. MARSH.]

Mr. MARSH. Mr. Speaker, in the five minutes allotted to me, I desire simply to say that I favor this bill, including the fifth section, because I believe it is in the interest of the people of the country. I favor a 3 per cent. bond because I believe that a 3 per cent. and Treasury note can be negotiated in this country at par.

I favor the provision which requires national banks, after the 1st day of July, that desire to get circulation in addition to that which they now have, and national banks which desire to organize under the law after that time—I favor the provision that requires them to deposit these 3 per cent. bonds, because I believe it will aid the Government materially in negotiating this loan.

And, Mr. Speaker, let it be remembered by gentlemen on this side of the House that the two great fundamental grounds or reasons upon which the national-banking act was originally passed and upon which we have defended it before the people from that time until now were these: We pledged the people in the first place we would not issue over $400,000,000 of legal tenders. It was discovered that was not sufficient currency with which to do the business of the country. We could not violate that. We found that the State-banking system would not furnish the currency. Another reason for establishing the national banks was we were desirous of furnishing a market at home for our bonds, so that they might be held by our own people and the interest, which was payable semi-annually in gold, might be retained in the country instead of being shipped abroad to foreign bondholders. These were the two reasons for the organization originally of the national-banking system; and the section of the law that provides that a national bank organized after July 1 next shall deposit 3 per cent. bonds is equivalent to saying to these gentlemen what we said in the first place: It is for the purpose of enabling the Government to negotiate the more easily this loan at 3 per cent.

Now, Mr. Speaker, while my time is limited I will pass hurriedly over these points and come to sections 5159 and 5160 of the Revised Statutes, which this bill proposes to re-enact. These sections were a part of the original law. They remained a part of the original law until 1874, when they were repealed and that section 4 of the act of June 20, 1874, was substituted in their place. When this bill was pending before the House prior to its being sent to the Senate, I favored the re-enacting of these two sections because I wanted to take from the power of the national-banking institutions the right and ability to create the very panic and disturbance which they have created in the business mind of the country during the last ten days. [Applause on the democratic side.] If I had any doubt in my mind when I cast my vote to re-enact those sections, that doubt has been entirely dissipated and removed by the action of a few of these banks in New York. The very object that was contemplated by the passage of that bill has been developed in the last few days in an attempt which has been made by the banks to mold public sentiment against this bill.

These national banks were not organized for their benefit. They were organized for a great public necessity, and they should be kept clearly subservient to that great public purpose and should not be clothed with the power, dangerous in itself, by which they can surrender their circulation and in ten days paralyze the business interest of this entire country. [Applause on the democratic side.]

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, gentlemen upon the other side having used twenty minutes of their time, and twenty minutes having been used upon this side, I now reserve ten minutes of the time for myself, so that I may have an opportunity to reply to the gentleman from Michigan, who will now proceed for his ten minutes.

Mr. CONGER. I will reply to the gentleman in five minutes' time, and yield five minutes to the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. FRYE.]

Mr. FRYE. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kentucky was a little mistaken when he said that I was directing my argument entirely to the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan strikes out that repeal or change of the fourth section. The gentleman will remember also that the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio simply provides that that law shall not be construed to repeal certain sections; so in effect both amendments operate in the same spirit precisely, and I was arguing in reference to both.

Besides, sir, I did not state my own opinion at all as to the effect of the fifth section. I have not stated it. I was simply stating that which is a fact to-day in this country and which we must recognize as an existing fact that there is a difference or division of opinion, and I was demanding that this House should recognize that, and if it passed their bill that there should be no question whatever of its effect, that its terms should be clear and explicit.

Now, sir, look a moment at this action of the House. Take the Kirkwood amendment, section 3, the sixteenth amendment in this bill. The Committee on Ways and Means, by a large majority—leading men on that committee joining in it—propose an amendment of great, and in my judgment of vital importance to the bill, if it becomes comes a law. The Kirkwood amendment provides that this loan shall be before the public for thirty days, giving the preference to two-thousand and one-thousand-dollar subscriptions, and then says if, at the end of thirty days, more than the whole amount is subscribed, that the large subscriptions shall be cut down pro rata, while the subscriptions below $2,000 shall be allowed to remain and get their bonds in full.

What is the effect? The effect certainly will be simply to prevent any bids under this public call. Your two-thousand-dollar men and one-thousand-dollar men wait until confidence is established by bankers, men of wealth and financial reputation, making their subscriptions for forty, fifty, and one hundred millions, then come forward and confidently make their subscriptions, small in fact but large to them. Will the men of wealth and recognized financial skill set them this example? Clearly not. What would they gain by it? They must wait the thirty days; then, if more than the bonds offered are subscribed for, they must be scaled down, while the small takers get in full.

The broker or banker makes his engagements, then his subscription to meet the same. Will he do it if the result is in such doubt? This result is inevitable; the public loan will not be taken at all in the thirty days. Then you will be compelled to pass it over to syndicates and national banks to place, first having yourselves stamped it "a failed loan." The amendment of the Committee on Ways and Means obviates all this difficulty. It was indorsed by eminent democrats of the committee, adopted by a large majority, and yet in the House they cannot influence a half score of their own side in its support, and the vote was over there almost solid against the amendment recommended by the Committee on Ways and Means. And the very next amendment, changing a clerical error in the bill, a mistake in the use of the English language, is voted down by the same majority, though recommended by the same committee.

And now the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCKINLEY] has had accepted by the committee his amendment construing that law; and yet every gentleman on that side will vote against it, though it is a necessity. Why? Because they dare not send that bill back to the Senate of the United States with one single amendment upon it, for fear that the Senate may have had their eyes opened since they passed that bill, and will defeat it—a democratic Senate, too. Why would they defeat it? Because it is wrong, and a recognized wrong, and because they know the bill will prove a failure.

Mr. SPRINGER. The fear is that there being no previous question to operate in the Senate the bill would be talked to death.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. BURCH, its Secretary, notified the House of the concurrence in concurrent resolution of the House in reference to correcting an error in the river and harbor appropriation bill.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. KENNA, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and a joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. No. 205) granting a pension to Jacob Gelwicks;

A bill (H. R. No. 440) for the ascertainment of the amount due the Choctaw Nation;

A bill (H. R. No. 802) granting a pension to Wyatt Botts;

A bill (H. R. No. 1280) to amend section 2326 of the Revised Statutes, relating to suits at law affecting the title to mining claims;

A bill (H. R. No. 1452) for the relief of James B. Furman;

A bill (H. R. No. 1469) granting a pension to Mary Ann McCarrol;

A bill (H. R. No. 2165) to amend section 2297, of title 32 of the Revised Statutes, relating to homestead settlers;

A bill (H. R. No. 2269) for the relief of Calvin Bronson;

A bill (H. R. No. 2437) for the relief of several persons impressed into the United States naval service;

A bill (H. R. No. 2439) granting a pension to Henry Mills;

A bill (H. R. No. 2549) granting a pension to Edward H. Mitchell;

A bill (H. R. No. 2769) to amend the act entitled "An act to encourage the establishment of public marine schools," approved June 10, 1874, so as to extend it to the ports of Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Galveston, and in Narraganset;

A bill (H. R. No. 2773) granting a pension to James P. Hunter;

A bill (H. R. No. 3309) for the relief of John T. Neale;

A bill (H. R. No. 3450) for the relief of Lewis A. Kent;

A bill (H. R. No. 3742) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to sell certain real estate belonging to the United States, and vesting the title to certain other lands in the city of Vincennes, in the State of Indiana, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 3751) to amend chapter 198, volume 16 of the Statutes at Large;

A bill (H. R. No. 3789) for the relief of Homer Fellows;

A bill (H. R. No. 4411) to establish an additional land district in the State of Kansas;

A bill (H. R. No. 4477) to regulate the mode of purchasing tobacco for the United States Navy;

A bill (H. R. No. 5066) to provide for the preparation of classified abridgments of all letters-patent of the United States;

A bill (H. R. No. 5627) to amend section 1486 of the Revised Statutes, in order to preserve the meaning of the original law from which it was taken, with reference to the rank of engineer officers, graduates of the Naval Academy;

A bill (H. R. No. 5832) for the relief of David W. Bell;

A bill (H. R. No. 6248) directing the payment of certain awards in favor of parties therein named;

A bill (H. R. No. 6479) for the relief of Thomas Snell;

A bill (H. R. No. 6529) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. No. 7032) to amend the act incorporating the Capitol, North O Street and South Washington Railway Company;

A bill (H. R. No. 7104) making appropriations for the construction, completion, repair, and preservation of certain works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; and

A joint resolution (H. R. No. 186) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish States, for the use of agricultural colleges, one set of standard weights and measures.

FUNDING BILL.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to reserve the five minutes which remain to me till I hear from the other side.

Mr. TUCKER. How much time remains to the gentleman from Michigan?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Four minutes. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has still ten minutes.

Mr. TUCKER. I desire to reserve the ten minutes.

Mr. CONGER. Oh! let the gentleman divide up his time and occupy five now.

Mr. TUCKER. Very well; I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. BUCKNER.]

Mr. BUCKNER. I shall not attempt to discuss the legal aspects of this question, but shall refer to some facts that this House and the country ought to know in order to determine the animus of those who are opposing this provision of the fifth section. The country ought to know and this House ought to know that there is a direct pecuniary interest in the banks of the United States of $4,500,000 to defeat any form of refunding, or at all events this form of refunding, for a single year. They hold two hundred millions of the five and six percents that we propose now to refund at 3 per cent.; and it would be giving them credit for more liberality and generosity than belong to banking institutions to suppose they are not controlled to a great extent by that consideration, and that they desire to defeat this bill on some pretext or other. I say their interest in this question, the money that will go into their pockets if this bill is defeated, amounts to $5,500,000 for a single year which would be saved to the people of the United States by the passage of this bill, those banks being the holders of these bonds to the amount of two hundred millions. It is an important matter to them, therefore, to delay the refunding for a single year.

I hold, then, Mr. Speaker, that these are pretexts and mere pretexts suggested by hypocritical cupidity to defeat this bill I do not speak of the gentlemen on the other side. But I do speak of the banking interests of this country when I thus characterize it. Why, sir, have the gentlemen on the other side read the report of the Treasurer of the United States as to the effect—and we have already seen it within the last ten days—the effect in another aspect of this provision of the law which they want to retain? I refer them to that document, which shows that these banks have been acting as bulls upon the market in reference to bonds of the United States; that they have been speculators in bonds of the United States, and that this provision gives them the power at any time to buy or sell by giving up their circulation. Why, sir, there is given the instance of one bank which in the last three years has exchanged its circulation as many as six or seven times; so that while it only shows $460,000 on its books of circulation, there are outstanding $852,000 of its notes. I commend this report to the attention of bank gentlemen on this floor.

Mr. ATKINS. What report is it?

Mr. BUCKNER. The report of Mr. Gilfillan. And what has been done in the last ten days in opposition to this measure? The country complained, with a great deal of reason, of a contraction of the currency of this country from 1875 to 1878 of $65,000,000 of the greenback and bank-note circulation, for they both have been contracted under the operation of the resumption act. And yet these banks, having this power which the gentlemen on the other side desire to retain in them, a power ruinous to the business interests of the country, ruinous to the stability and security of its circulation, in the last eighteen or twenty days have diminished the circulation by $18,000,000 and created panic and pecuniary troubles all over the country.

Are you willing, gentlemen, that these banks shall retain this power? Are you willing that we shall be forever at the mercy of men who have the power to make money out of their promises to pay? This section of the bill is intended to curtail that power.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CONGER. I yield two minutes of my time to the gentleman from Minnesota, [Mr. DUNNELL.]

Mr. DUNNELL. One great duty confronted Congress when it convened on the first Monday of December last. That duty was to provide for the refunding of $637,000,000 of early maturing Federal bonds. I was one of those who believed and who still believe that that quantity of bonds could be negotiated at 3 per cent. I voted against the great bulk of my party in favor of this bill as it passed the House. I confess that since the passage of the bill I have been led to feel great doubt whether my vote was a correct one, because of the construction that is being put on the fifth section of the bill.

I say to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] that I think he did a wrong to this great refunding interest when he insisted that the fifth section should be made a part of this refunding bill. But for that fifth section this 3 per cent. funding bill would have passed this House; would have passed the Senate; would have been approved by the President, and, in my judgment, would have been an eminent success.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DUNNELL. My time cannot have expired.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman had but two minutes. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] is entitled to the floor for two minutes.

Mr. CONGER. I reply to the gentlemen who find fault with the action of the republicans on this side of the House in opposing this bill, and who say we are opposing a funding bill, with the remark that a simple funding bill has not been presented for our consideration, but a bill which already by its shadow is bringing panic and revulsion of business and disturbance of the renewed prosperity of the country beyond parallel by any other bill.

I do not wonder that the democracy desire to use the last days of their power in this House in an effort to bring ruin and destruction upon the interests of the country in the future. [Derisive laughter on the democratic side.] Sir, I do not wonder that they desire to place in the pathway of the incoming administration all the obstruction and all the hinderances to a prosperous administration that are in their power.

I believe that is the object of those amendments which have been thrust into this funding bill. That is the effect of them. A simple funding bill would have created no disturbance; it would have been passed without opposition. If it had become a law it would have received the approval of the people and aided in the development of the great vital interests of our country. As it is, it hangs like a nightmare upon the prosperity of the people of this nation. The very threat of it in advance brings the appearance and the dread of ruin.

The gentlemen of the Committee on Ways and Means of this House decided by a large majority that there were defects in this bill which must be obviated; and they directed the chairman of that committee to report proper amendments to the House. Sir, the democracy of this House have no faith in their Committee on Ways and Means. They vote down all their recommendations; they vote down all their propositions. Sir, the democracy of this House has even less faith in the wisdom of their Committee on Ways and Means than have the republicans on this side of the House; and God knows that is little enough. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONGER] has expired. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has still five minutes remaining.

Mr. DUNNELL. By the permission of the gentleman from Virginia, I am allowed to ask that by unanimous consent this debate may be extended twenty minutes.

Many MEMBERS. No! No!

Mr. DUNNELL. One word.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. DUNNELL. When the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] closed his remarks a few minutes ago, he closed in the midst of an argument. It was unjust to him, it was unjust to his side, it was unjust to the question. Let him have ten minutes more; and let there be another ten minutes. Nobody will be hurt by it.

Mr. ATKINS. Does the gentleman want it?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Minnesota, [Mr. DUNNELL?]

Many MEMBERS objected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is objection on all sides of the House.

Mr. PAGE. There is no objection on this side of the House.

Mr. TUCKER. In closing this debate it is due to the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, whose name has been connected with the fifth section of this bill, that I should give to him the last five minutes. I do so with great cheerfulness.

Mr. CONGER. Four minutes; the gentleman has occupied one.

Mr. CARLISLE. I am much obliged to the gentleman from Virginia for yielding to me his time, and I promise the House that I will use no part of it in a political discussion.

Mr. ROBESON. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] has promised to yield to me for a question. [Cries of "Regular order!"] I will make it in half a minute, and make it in the beginning of his argument, that he may answer it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not out of his time.

Mr. ROBESON. I do not care about that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Kentucky yield?

Mr. ROBESON. I ask the gentleman whether there are not $310,000,000 of greenbacks——

Many MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. CARLISLE. I am willing to yield, if it does not come out of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It will come out of the gentleman's time.

Mr. ROBESON. I will take none of the gentleman's time.

Mr. CARLISLE addressed the House. [See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] has expired.

Mr. TUCKER. I now move the previous question upon the motion which I have already made.

Mr. SPRINGER. The time has now arrived when my point of order must be decided by the Chair. I desire to state it. I make the point or order——

Mr. CONGER. This is the Punic faith I had reason to expect.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman says this is the Punic faith he had reason to expect. I have promised nothing in regard to this matter. I have assumed no obligations as to my course here. I am not a member of the Committee on Ways and Means; I did not as a member of that committee agree not to filibuster in case certain amendments were submitted to the House, and then come in and make filibustering motions.

I make the point of order in good faith; and I have a right to make it. It is that this amendment proposes to strike out portions of the bill which have been agreed to by both Houses of Congress and are no longer in dispute between them. Such a motion, I submit, is not in order and cannot be entertained. It is unnecessary for me to submit any argument to the Chair on so plain a proposition. As I am aware that the Speaker is thoroughly informed upon this subject, I submit the question at once to his judgment.

Mr. CONGER. Does the Chair entertain the point of order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is obliged to entertain the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. I desire, then, to say that the amendment I have offered is in the usual form, and is in order under all the parliamentary rules that ever existed in this body, recognizing the right to concur in a Senate amendment with an amendment. That particular, distinct proposition I make. I have moved to strike out certain words in section 5. The Senate amendment is a part of that section. I have moved to strike out other words in the section. I have moved to strike out and insert. That is legal, proper, and parliamentary. I move to strike out a word and then to insert a word in place of the word stricken out. That is proper and parliamentary. Besides, sir, the Committee on Ways and Means distinctly guaranteed that the amendment should be proposed in the House before the previous question was called, and the previous question was to operate upon it. That is the object of that amendment. That is the reason it was put in. The Committee on Ways and Means were in such a situation that the time had passed for their session. They could not even get an order to report their own amendments, and, in order that on our side we should concede they might report their amendments, this was agreed to. Otherwise their amendments would not have been up nor their report on this bill before this House. Hence I say the good faith of the committee of the House, in my judgment, requires that we should have the right to vote on this amendment, and that is what we ask. If it did not mean that it meant nothing. If it did not mean that, I and my colleagues of the Committee on Ways and Means have been the ignorant dupes of our superiors in intellect. Not much of a compliment to them, perhaps, and not remarkably complimentary to us. [Laughter.]

Mr. FRYE. The gentleman's colleagues do not admit their superiority.

Mr. CARLISLE. Does the gentleman's colleague admit the correctness of that statement? Do his colleagues on the republican side agree to the statement he now makes?

Mr. FRYE. I have not the floor.

Mr. TUCKER. I leave it to the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. CARLISLE. The gentleman will not say so.

Mr. CONGER. How many want to talk at a time?

Mr. MILLS. When you make such an assertion as that on the floor can you prove by your own people that your assertion is correct?

Mr. CONGER. How many want the floor?

Mr. MILLS. I am the peer of the gentleman from Michigan in regard to all the privileges of the floor.

Mr. CONGER. I have the floor, and the gentleman from Texas will retire.

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman cannot make an incorrect statement about the committee without being told of it.

Mr. CONGER. I do say, at the time there was an agreement these amendments were to be reported to the House, we had passed the hour of eleven o'clock, and by the rules of our committee no further business could be done if one member objected. Who disputes it? Not a soul, [laughter,] nor a body. [Renewed laughter.] I did say, in addition to that, as a condition for permitting the report to be then made, and not have it go over to another meeting, I did propose to withdraw objection to action at that time if the amendment I proposed could be reported to the House, with an opportunity of having a vote on it. Who disputes that? Not Texas. Not anybody. That is the assertion I have made, and to that I stand. Is the understanding we had in the Committee on Ways and Means as the only means by which they could report their amendment and get the bill before the House without going over to another meeting, is that to go out on a point of order, and are we to be refused an opportunity to have a vote on it? That is the proposition. I wait with that kind of anxiety I wait to see the minds of good men develop a result.

Mr. CARLISLE. Do I understand the gentleman from Michigan to say—and I confess I did not hear distinctly what he said—that it was agreed by the democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means, or by any member of the Committee on Ways and Means, that he should offer his amendment and have a vote on it? That is the question I put to the gentleman.

Mr. FRYE. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CONGER. I desire to answer that. I made my statement I think so plain that no one would dispute it. I asked for dispute. I said at the time this bill was under consideration no business could be transacted, except by unanimous consent, after the hour arrived when the House was in session, as we had not the right to sit during the sessions of the House; that at that time I did object to proceeding from fifteen or seventeen minutes after eleven o'clock unless the committee would agree that whoever had charge of the bill should permit my amendment to be offered before the previous question was called. [Laughter.]

Mr. TUCKER. And we have permitted it.

Mr. CONGER. That is what I said before. I say now, with a view of having that submitted to the House and included in the previous question and having a vote in the House on it, I permitted the Committee on Ways and Means to go on and prepare their report to the House, which I could have prevented.

Mr. CONVERSE. I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan a question, with his permission.

Mr. CONGER. Certainly.

Mr. CONVERSE. I would like to inquire whether the Committee on Ways and Means had this bill before them at the time he claims they were acting upon it? The bill, as I understand, was on the Speaker's table, and not before the committee at all.

Mr. CONGER. Whatever authority the Committee on Ways and Means had to act upon it and prepare their report and amendments, or whatever instructions they had, I am unable to say. I did not raise the question as to the particular Senate bill being there, because we had a copy of the Senate bill, and were acting as though we had the original. It is not my fault, at all events, for it was not on my motion, if the committee undertook to act upon a bill they did not have before them. I made no point that the bill was not present, for we were trying to act upon the substance of the bill upon the Speaker's table, having, as I understood it, a true copy before us. I think there is no question about that. But the committee were acting upon it as though present, and prepared their report to this House in that way.

Mr. SPRINGER. The gentleman from Michigan does not seem to understand the point of order I make. The point of order I make is that the amendment he proposes to introduce is not germane to the amendment of the Senate which strikes out "May" and inserts "July," and it undertakes to operate upon portions of the bill which were not in dispute. For both reasons it cannot be entertained at this time. Even if it did interfere with amendments which were incorporated by the Senate, it is not germane to the question presented here; and not being germane it cannot interfere with a part of the bill which is agreed to by both Houses, and in reference to which there is no question.

Mr. CONGER. In regard to that it is not for the Chair to determine what the judgment of the House may be as to the object and effect of the amendment; because there might be in other parts of the section a necessity for a change of time as this amendment contemplates. If that were the case, nobody would pretend for a moment that the change could not be made. Now, the motion was to strike out particular words incorporated by the Senate, with other words, which has been allowed, for it is done repeatedly. It is for the House to determine the question. There is nobody who pretends that the amendment as to July was not acted upon by the Senate and was not in it then and now and always. The motion is to strike out or amend the amendment of the Senate, to strike out one word and other words and insert in their place a new word. It is not liable to the charge that we cannot reach the Senate amendment or the clause that has been voted upon by the House and adopted by the Senate.

I admit that if section 5 had not been amended at all we could not reach it by any amendment here; but having been amended, the House may concur with that amendment or may concur with an amendment, or it may amend the amendment if other parts of the bill should require it to make it correspond.

The door is open to amendments, and to the full extent to which amendments may be allowed under the parliamentary rules, notwithstanding the rule that you cannot change any bill which has been agreed upon by both Houses; but you can change any part of the bill to conform with modifications which have been made in the bill by the Senate. In other words, you must make the bill harmonious.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I understand the statement of the gentleman from Michigan in reference to what occurred in the Committee on Ways and Means in some sort to indicate that there has been a departure from the understanding between the members of the committee as to the action that was to be taken in reference to the amendment he was to offer to the House.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I deny utterly that there was any agreement or any understanding that the amendment which the gentleman from Michigan proposes was to be voted upon in this House. I will state to the House what occurred at that time. I do not deny, although I do not exactly remember, how long a time had elapsed after eleven o'clock, and I am perfectly willing to admit that the gentleman from Michigan then, as on this floor, always called time or made some point of order in reference to proceeding whenever it did not suit him to go on with the business; but whenever it was, we had already agreed to an amendment to strike out the word "July," which had been substituted by the Senate, and insert "September." The gentleman from Michigan then asked to offer an amendment, which he has offered here to-day, to strike out a particular provision in reference to legal tenders, that part of the bill which relates to the withdrawal of the circulation of the banks. That amendment was voted upon in the committee and rejected. Then the gentleman from Michigan asked that he might have the permission of the committee to offer his amendment before the previous question was called in the House.

The gentleman from Michigan said he proposed to amend by striking out "July" and inserting "September," and adding the other provision to it. I replied: Why, the amendment is July, and September has been already adopted by the committee; and the gentleman from Michigan said he was afraid, or words to that effect, of the point of order; that it would exclude his amendment unless he had leave to amend the word "July" by adding "September," and therefore asked us to withdraw our amendment and let him incorporate the amendment "September" with the amendment here.

Mr. CONGER. That is true.

Mr. TUCKER. So that the question of order was in his own mind, and was presented to our minds by his mind, and he made the motion in the form in which he has done it here in order, as he said, knowing more of parliamentary law than we seemed to do, to bring his motion within the rule.

Mr. CONGER. That is what I said and say now.

Mr. TUCKER. The gentleman repeats his statement that that was the understanding. Then the question was, if that permission is awarded to you will you make factious opposition to the consideration of this bill, and he said "no."

Now, sir, where is the Punic faith? [Applause on democratic side.] The gentleman speaks of Punic faith on our part. I appeal to my republican colleagues on that committee if I have not kept faith to the last moment, and when the gentleman from Michigan has filibustered against the consideration of this bill, I have still stood to our agreement that he should be permitted to offer his amendment in the House. I say, as I said yesterday, I have shown bona fide. I have not raised the point of order on the gentleman's amendment, and I would not do it, and I asked the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] to withdraw it.

Mr. CONGER. I wish he would.

Mr. TUCKER. And all my colleagues on the committee, so my friend from Texas [Mr. MILLS] tells me, have asked him to do so.

Mr. MORRISON. I have not.

Mr. TUCKER. All except the gentleman from Illinois, [Mr. MORRISON.] Where, then, is there room for the imputation there has been any bad faith? I cannot deny—how can I deny?—the right of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] to make that point of order.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have been compelled to make this exhibit to the House in my own vindication and in the vindication of my honorable colleagues upon that committee; and I appeal to the gentlemen who are republicans on that committee, as well as to democrats, to say whether I have not made an accurate, fair, and candid statement of the whole facts.

Mr. BELFORD rose.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to say one word.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado has been recognized.

Mr. CONGER. Will the gentleman allow me to say one word?

Mr. BELFORD. Yes, provided I do not yield the floor.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not take the floor from the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. CONGER. The gentleman has stated substantially what I had said and has repeated it. Whether the gentleman makes the statement accurately that I had said I would not filibuster in this proceeding myself, I cannot say; he may be correct; I do not deny it; that has been a matter of dispute between him and me in private and I do not propose to bring it here. But I do say I was informed as soon as this report had been made, to my surprise, that the point of order was to be made on my amendment; that members of the Committee on Ways and Means had declared it was susceptible to the point of order; and I think I may say as the justification for my course that I was informed the Speaker had his attention called to it, not perhaps in connection with this particular thing, but in the form in which the question is presented, and had already declared what the law would be on such a subject.

The SPEAKER. The Chair never made any such declaration.

Mr. CONGER. I was so informed. The Chair knows I went to him to ascertain if that statement was correct.

The SPEAKER. And the Chair stated to the gentleman from Michigan the Chair had made no such declaration.

Mr. CONGER. I had that conversation with the Chair. I had a conversation also with the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE.] I said to him if the object was merely that I might offer a naked amendment not to be voted upon, not to give my friends an opportunity of expressing an opinion upon it, and it was to be ruled out upon a point of order, I would be at liberty to conform to the wishes of those who for months have been kind enough to intrust me with the floor management of this side of the House. I said if I was required to agree to a certain course for a mere pretense, without gaining any substantial advantage, I had no right to do so. Again I told the gentleman from Kentucky, and he at least will bear me witness that I came to him with all frankness to say that if we were to reap none of the advantages of a vote on my amendment, I could not consider myself bound even by what gentlemen on that side assumed to be my promise.

Mr. CARLISLE. That is correct.

Mr. CONGER. And that occurred before any proceeding was had on this floor.

Mr. CARLISLE. It is quite correct that before any proceedings took place here the gentleman from Michigan came to my seat and told me what he has just stated.

Mr. CONGER. I thought it right to go frankly to the gentlemen with whom I had had the conversation, and who had received a certain impression with regard to what would be my conduct, and to tell them if I had bargained for the wind I must withdraw the assent if they thought I had given it. They admitted that was a frank and honorable way to meet the case. That was admitted by the gentleman from Kentucky, [Mr. CARLISLE,] whose frankness and sincerity every gentleman in this House estimates in the highest degree. That is the position. That is all there is of it; and that is all I desire to say about it.

Mr. BELFORD. When this bill was before the House on the 18th day of January last I voted against its passage, because I was opposed to the whole scheme of refunding the national debt. I believed that that debt should be paid out of the surplus revenue of the national Treasury, amounting to the sum of $90,000,000 annually, according to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury. During the year ending March 1, 1881, we decreased our national debt over one hundred and fifteen million dollars.

Mr. HOUSE. I rise to a question of order. The gentleman is not speaking to the point of order.

Mr. BELFORD. I am coming to the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will listen to the gentleman.

Mr. BELFORD. I have voted against the dilatory proceedings in this House, and ask the gentlemen on the other side to hear me as a friend of fair play and honest dealing on this question.

I say that during the year ending March 1, 1881, we reduced the national debt over one hundred and fifteen million dollars. I refer to this to show you upon what ground I predicated my opposition to the passage of a refunding bill which perpetuates this debt beyond the time when we could pay it out of our surplus revenues. When that bill was up for passage certain republicans voted for it, and among them I find the name of Judge KELLEY, whose knowledge of finance no one will question; the name of Mr. DUNNELL, of Minnesota, who has been favorably mentioned in connection with the Speakership of the next House; and the name of Mr. UPDEGRAFF, of Iowa, who won a national reputation by reason of his sturdy opposition to the river and harbor bill. Does any gentleman on this floor question their republicanism or their good sense?

True, I differed with these gentlemen, but I respect them for their manly and independent conduct. If dilatory motions looking to the defeat of this bill were justifiable, why did you not interpose them on the 18th of January last when the bill was before this House? The Carlisle amendment was in it then, and you contented yourselves with voting against it. Why do you not now content yourselves with voting against it? Has the bank clamor disturbed your equipoise and overcome your judgment?

I say that I have steadily voted during the sessions of this House for the consideration of this bill. I know that the democratic party has a majority in this House, and we live in a Republic where the majority governs theoretically and practically. They govern in church meetings; they govern in corporations; they govern in courts; they govern in municipal affairs; they govern in county elections; they govern in State elections; they govern in national elections and they should govern in this House. And I for one am willing at all times to permit the majority to assume their just responsibility of legislation, and to have the right to bring their bills before this House, and have them voted upon either for or against, by every member of Congress. Hence I have set my face steadily and at all times against dilatory and filibustering proceedings.

Now, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For the point of order. [Laughter.]

Mr. BELFORD. There is something more involved in this question than a mere point of order. It is a question of the right of the majority to govern; it is a question of the orderly proceedings of the representatives of fifty millions of people. It is a question involving the agreement made by the members of the Committee on Ways and Means with each other, and to that question I am speaking.

Mr. Speaker, I say it seems to me that if it were agreed by the majority of the Committee on Ways and Means that the gentleman from Michigan should have the right to have his proposition considered, the easy way out of this trouble, the way to save time, the way to bring this bill to a consideration by this House is to allow him to have a vote upon it. It has been already demonstrated that he has a sufficient following to prevent the passage of this bill. And I ask you gentlemen to agree that he may have a vote on his amendment.

I shall vote against it. I do not propose to be influenced by the manufactured and artificial clamor of a few national banks in the city of New York, [great applause,] who, in my judgment, have formed an unholy alliance and a criminal union with the stock-jobbers of Wall street, and out of this union has sprung the terror that disturbs the judgment of the people.

But I say that the gentleman from Michigan, in all justice and candor, should be allowed to have a vote in this House upon his amendment, and I appeal to you gentlemen on the other side to allow him to have this vote in order that we may economize time, because if you do not, as certainly as God reigns you never will proceed one inch further with the consideration of this bill. [Loud and continued laughter.] He is the parliamentary master of the situation. Like Roderick Dhu, one blast from his horn is worth a thousand men, and if you deny him the right of a vote on his amendment he will have a following sufficient to prevent the further progress of this House in this matter.

Mr. ROBESON. I desire to be heard on the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. ROBESON. The point of order, if I understand it——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois on the right of the Chair [Mr. SPRINGER] makes a point of order twofold; first, that the amendment is not germane to the amendment of the Senate to which it is proposed; and, second, that it is not actually in order under the parliamentary practice of the House.

Mr. ROBESON. I understand the question before this House to be the question whether the point of order taken by the gentleman from Illinois is well taken or not. His point is that the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan is a substantial amendment to a section which was agreed to by the Senate, and which does not come before us for our consideration, it having already been accepted by both Houses.

Now, if I understand the proposition of the gentleman from Michigan, it is to strike out the Senate amendment to the fifth section, which substitutes the word "July" for the word "May," and to insert in its place the word "September;" also, to strike out the proviso in the final portion of the section.

The point of the gentleman from Illinois is that the proviso of that section has already been agreed to by both Houses. But it is a proviso to a section which has been amended in the Senate, and materially amended. Let me establish the point that it is a material amendment by the Senate.

The time fixed when the three percents authorized under this law were to be and remain the only basis for banking circulation is by the fifth section of this bill, as passed by the House, the 1st of May next. The Senate changed that time to the 1st of July next, altering the whole force and effect of that section and altering to that extent the effect of the whole proviso.

Mr. HOOKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. ROBESON. I am discussing the point of order.

Mr. HOOKER. I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. There is already one point of order pending.

Mr. HOOKER. I understand that, and it is in reference to that that I make the point of order.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ROBESON] has the floor on that point of order.

Mr. HOOKER. What I want to say (and I do not wish to apply it particularly to the gentleman from New Jersey) is that there is a rule which makes it the duty of the Speaker to decide all points of order, after the previous question has been ordered, whether on appeal or not, without debate.

The SPEAKER. The previous question has not been ordered.

Mr. ROBESON. Since the previous question has not been ordered——

Mr. HOOKER. The motion for the previous question has been made.

The SPEAKER. But it has not been ordered.

Mr. HOOKER. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the concluding clause of Rule XVII of the House, under the head of previous question. That clause declares that "all incidental questions of order arising after a motion is made for the previous question"—not after the previous question is ordered, but after the motion is made for the previous question—"and pending such motion, shall be"—using the imperative language—"shall be decided, whether on appeal or otherwise, without debate." I do not make this point invidiously against the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. ROBESON. Pardon me for one moment. We have had a long discussion on this point of order, which has wandered far from the point of order itself.

Mr. HOOKER. And that is precisely what I want to cut off.

Mr. ROBESON. I am discussing purely and strictly the point of order, and no man can gainsay that proposition.

Mr. HOOKER. It is utterly impossible that we shall ever have a termination of this debate, unless the rule to which I have referred and called the attention of the Chair is enforced.

The SPEAKER. There is no doubt that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HOOKER] is correct in his construction of the rule.

Mr. ROBESON. But the point comes too late.

Mr. HOOKER. It is never too late to cut off debate that is out of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to say, however, that he has allowed this discussion to proceed briefly——

Mr. ROBESON. I am making my point, I think, clearly and directly.

The SPEAKER. And the Chair thinks the gentleman from New Jersey is speaking directly to the issue involved in this point of order. The Chair would like to have the rule waived until the gentleman from New Jersey can briefly state his position.

Mr. SAMFORD. Before the gentleman from New Jersey proceeds, I should like to inquire whether or not it would be in order to make a motion to suspend the rule under which the gentleman from Illinois has made his point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will examine that point.

Mr. ROBESON. Mr. Speaker, as I was about to say, this alteration of two months in the time when this change in the basis for circulation, as required by this bill, is to take effect is a substantial alteration of the greatest importance. The proviso to the fifth section as agreed to by the Senate was agreed to with this change of time. It was not agreed to as a single abstract matter, but it was agreed to with the amendment changing the time. The Senate might just as well have said in so many words, "Provided you accept the word 'July' instead of 'May,' then we agree to this proviso." Except on that condition the Senate has not agreed to it; and as the insertion of the word "July," is an amendment qualifying the whole provision, so it is an amendment which never has been agreed to between the two Houses. Therefore the point of order of the gentleman from Illinois is not well taken.

Now, upon the materiality of that amendment, let me state that this fifth section presents to the country just three alternatives: First, the retiring of $210,000,000 of national-bank currency; secondly, if that be not done, the going into liquidation of the country banks that cannot retire their currency in time; and, thirdly, if neither of those things be done, the banks must take $210,000,000 of 3 per cent. bonds. There is now secured by the 5 and 6 per cent. bonds of this Government $210,000,000 of our circulation. The banks must either return that much circulation to the Treasury to have it destroyed, making a contraction of the currency to that extent, or they must go into liquidation, destroying the national banking system, or they must make to the Government a forced loan of $210,000,000 on 3 per cent. bonds.

Mr. WARNER. The gentleman will allow me to state—— [Cries of "Regular order!"] Mr. Speaker, what is the question before the House?

The SPEAKER. The question is on the point of order made by the gentleman from Illinois; which is twofold: first, that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan to the amendment of the Senate is not germane to that amendment; and secondly, that it is not in order under parliamentary practice, because it proposes to change a provision upon which the two Houses have agreed.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I made this point of order in good faith. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELFORD] has notified the House that, in case this point of order is insisted upon, no further action will be allowed upon this bill. I do not desire, nor will I permit, the gentlemen on the other side to unload the responsibility of the defeat of this bill upon this side of the House or upon myself individually. Therefore I propose to withdraw the point of order, on condition that gentlemen on the other side will agree that the votes shall be continued without dilatory motions until the bill is finally disposed of. If this agreement can be made that the votes shall go on until the bill is finally put upon its passage, I will withdraw the point of order.

Mr. REED. Was it the object of the gentleman from Illinois in making the point of order to have something to trade on?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; my object in making the point of order—and I made it in good faith—was to interpose what I believed a parliamentary right to arrest a particular amendment. Now I will ask unanimous consent to withdraw this point upon the condition that there be no further dilatory motions until the bill is finally put upon its passage.

Mr. WILBER. Those on this side must enjoy the same rights as the gentleman did.

Mr. McKINLEY. I hope the Chair will decide the point of order.

Mr. KEIFER. Is not the gentleman from Illinois willing to add the stipulation that gentlemen on his side will vote for the amendment?

Mr. SPRINGER. I am making the proposition in good faith. If we can now proceed without dilatory motions to vote on the amendments of the Senate this point of order will be withdrawn.

Mr. FRYE. Why, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman had not made the point of order the bill would have been passed by this time. The Committee on Ways and Means agreed, and there was no trouble——

Mr. SPRINGER. Will the gentleman from Maine assure me then that the vote will go on?

Mr. FRYE. No, "the gentleman from Maine" will not agree to anything, and has no right to do so; and no other gentleman had any right to commit this side to filibustering any further.

Mr. SPRINGER. Upon the assurance of the other side——

Mr. FRYE. No assurance whatever.

Mr. REED. None whatever. The gentleman from Illinois must take his own course.

Mr. SPRINGER. I will not withdraw it when gentlemen on the other side persist in stating they will give no assurance.

The SPEAKER. The Chair states that the gentleman from Maine made a statement which indicates to the Chair there will not be much dilatory action. [Cries of "Withdraw it!" "Withdraw it!"]

Mr. SPRINGER. Believing that gentlemen on the other side who are in favor of proceeding with the public business will now resist all further dilatory motions, and trusting to their honor to do so, I withdraw my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The question recurs on ordering the main question on concurring in the Senate amendment with the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. KEIFER. Does it include the other amendments?

The SPEAKER. Of course it includes the amendment which has precedence under the rule. It is on concurrence in the Senate amendment with the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CALKINS. Is the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan divisible?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

The amendment was again reported.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 117, nays 132, not voting 41; as follows:

YEAS—117.

Aldrich, N. W.	Crapo,	Keifer,	Ryan, Thomas
Aldrich, William	Crowley,	Ketcham,	Ryon, John W.
Anderson,	Davis, George R.	Killinger,	Sapp,
Bailey,	Davis, Horace	Lindsey,	Shallenberger,
Baker,	Deering,	Loring,	Sherwin,
Ballou,	Dunnell,	Mason,	Smith, A. Herr
Barber,	Dwight,	McCoid,	Starin,
Bayne,	Einstein,	McCook,	Stone,
Beltzhoover,	Errett,	McGowan,	Thomas,
Bingham,	Felton,	McKinley,	Thompson, W. G.
Bisbee,	Ferdon,	Miles,	Townsend, Amos
Blake,	Fisher,	Monroe,	Tyler,
Bliss,	Fort,	Morse,	Updegraff, J. T.
Bowman,	Frye,	Morton,	Updegraff, Thomas
Boyd,	Godshalk,	Neal,	Urner,
Brewer,	Hall,	Newberry,	Valentine,
Briggs,	Hammond, John	Norcross,	Van Aernam,
Brigham,	Harmer,	O'Neill,	Van Voorhis,
Browne,	Harris, Benj. W.	Orth,	Voorhis,
Burrows,	Haskell,	Osmer,	Ward,
Butterworth,	Hawk,	Overton,	Washburn,
Calkins,	Hawley,	Price,	Wells,
Camp,	Hazelton,	Ray,	White,
Cannon,	Heilman,	Reed,	Wilber,
Carpenter,	Hiscock,	Rice,	Williams, C. G.
Caswell,	Horr,	Richardson, D. P.	Willits,
Claflin,	Hubbell,	Robeson,	Wood.
Clark, Alvah A.	Humphrey,	Robinson,
Conger,	Hutchins,	Ross,
Cowgill,	Jorgensen,	Russell, W. A.

NAYS—132.

Acklen,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Kitchin,	Scoville,
Aiken,	De La Matyr,	Klotz,	Shelley,
Armfield,	Deuster,	Knott,	Simonton,
Atherton,	Dibrell,	Ladd,	Singleton, J. W.
Atkins,	Dickey,	Le Fevre,	Singleton, O. R.
Bachman,	Dunn,	Lowe,	Slemons,
Barlow,	Elam,	Manning,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Beale,	Ellis,	Marsh,	Smith, William E.
Berry,	Evins,	Martin, Benj. F.	Sparks,
Bicknell,	Ewing,	Martin, Edward L.	Speer,
Blackburn,	Ford,	McKenzie,	Springer,
Bland,	Forney,	McLane,	Steele,
Blount,	Frost,	McMahon,	Stevenson,
Bouck,	Geddes,	McMillin,	Talbott,
Bragg,	Gibson,	Mills,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bright,	Gillette,	Money,	Thompson, P. B.
Buckner,	Goode,	Morrison,	Tillman,
Cabell,	Gunter,	Muldrow,	Tucker,
Caldwell,	Hammond, N. J.	Myers,	Turner, Oscar
Carlisle,	Harris, John T.	New,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Hatch,	Nicholls,	Waddill,
Clardy,	Henkle,	Phelps,	Warner,
Clark, John B.	Herbert,	Philips,	Weaver,
Clements,	Herndon,	Phister,	Wellborn,
Clymer,	Hill,	Poehler,	Whiteaker,
Cobb,	Hooker,	Reagan,	Whitthorne,
Coffroth,	Hostetler,	Richardson, J. S.	Williams, Thomas
Colerick,	House,	Richmond,	Willis,
Converse,	Hunton,	Rothwell,	Wilson,
Cook,	Hurd,	Russell, Daniel L.	Wise,
Covert,	Kenna,	Samford,	Yeates,
Cravens,	Kimmel,	Sawyer,	Yocum,
Davidson,	King,	Scales,	Young, Casey.

NOT VOTING—41.

Belford,	Henry,	Muller,	Stephens,
Chittenden,	Houk,	Murch,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Cox,	James,	O'Brien,	Townshend, R. W.
Culberson,	Johnston,	O'Connor,	Turner, Thomas
Daggett,	Jones,	O'Reilly,	Upson,
Davis, Joseph J.	Joyce,	Pacheco,	Wait,
Dick,	Kelley,	Page,	Wright,
Finley,	Lapham,	Persons,	Young, Thomas L.
Forsythe,	Lounsbery,	Pound,
Hayes,	Miller,	Prescott,
Henderson,	Mitchell,	Robertson,

So the Senate amendment was not concurred in with the amendment of Mr. CONGER.

During the roll-call,

Mr. KILLINGER moved by unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the names.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The following additional pairs were announced from the Clerk's desk:

Mr. LAPHAM with Mr. CULBERSON, on this vote.

Mr. SINGLETON, of Mississippi, with Mr. NEAL, on the funding bill, the right being reserved to Mr. SINGLETON when necessary to vote for the purpose of making a quorum.

Mr. LOUNSBERY with Mr. MILLER, until half past seven o'clock this evening.

Mr. COX with Mr. UPSON, on this vote.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER. I now move to concur in the Senate amendment changing May to July, and on that I demand the previous question.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. TUCKER. I was instructed by the Committee on Ways and Means to report the following amendment to the fifth section:

At the end of section 5 add the following proviso:
"Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal or in any manner affect or modify sections 5220, 5222, 5223, and 5224 of the Revised Statutes of the United States of America."

Mr. ATKINS. I desire to know if this is the McKinley amendment?

Mr. TUCKER. It is the McKinley amendment.

Mr. WARNER. I should like also to ask whether this is not included in the proposition to be offered hereafter by the gentleman from Kentucky? [Cries of "Order!"]

Mr. TUCKER. I demand the previous question.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 130, noes 13.

So the main question was ordered.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the main question was ordered; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. McKINLEY. I am sorry gentlemen have changed their minds on the other side on that amendment. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 114, nays 128, not voting 48; as follows:

YEAS—114.

Aldrich, N. W.	Crapo,	Keifer,	Russell, W. A.
Aldrich, William	Crowley,	Ketcham,	Ryan, Thomas
Anderson,	Davis, George R.	Killinger,	Sapp,
Bailey,	Davis, Horace	Loring,	Shallenberger,
Baker,	Deering,	Mason,	Sherwin,
Ballou,	Dunnell,	McCoid,	Smith, A. Herr
Barber,	Dwight,	McCook,	Smith, Hezekiah B.
Bayne,	Einstein,	McKinley,	Starin,
Belford,	Errett,	Miles,	Stone,
Beltzhoover,	Ferdon,	Monroe,	Thomas,
Bingham,	Fisher,	Morse,	Townsend, Amos
Bisbee,	Forsythe,	Morton,	Tucker,
Blake,	Fort,	Newberry,	Updegraff, J. T.
Bowman,	Frye,	Norcross,	Updegraff, Thomas
Boyd,	Gibson,	O'Neill,	Urner,
Brewer,	Godshalk,	Orth,	Valentine,
Briggs,	Hall,	Osmer,	Van Aernam,
Brigham,	Harmer,	Overton,	Van Voorhis,
Browne,	Harris, Benj. W.	Pacheco,	Voorhis,
Burrows,	Haskell,	Page,	Ward,
Butterworth,	Hawk,	Prescott,	Washburn,
Calkins,	Hawley,	Price,	Wells,
Camp,	Hazelton,	Ray,	White,
Carlisle,	Heilman,	Reed,	Wilber,
Carpenter,	Hiscock,	Rice,	Williams, C. G.
Caswell,	Horr,	Richardson, D. P.	Willits,
Claflin,	Humphrey,	Robeson,	Wood.
Conger,	Hutchins,	Robinson,
Cowgill,	Jorgensen,	Ross,

NAYS—128.

Acklen,	Culberson,	Kimmel,	Scales,
Aiken,	Davidson,	King,	Scoville,
Armfield,	Davis, Lowndes H.	Kitchin,	Shelley,
Atherton,	De La Matyr,	Klotz,	Simonton,
Atkins,	Deuster,	Knott,	Singleton, J. W.
Bachman,	Dibrell,	Ladd,	Slemons,
Barlow,	Dickey,	Le Fevre,	Smith, William E.
Beale,	Dunn,	Lowe,	Sparks,
Berry,	Elam,	Marsh,	Speer,
Bicknell,	Ellis,	Martin, Benj. F.	Springer,
Blackburn,	Evins,	Martin, Edward L.	Steele,
Bland,	Ewing,	McKenzie,	Stevenson,
Blount,	Felton,	McLane,	Talbott,
Bouck,	Finley,	McMahon,	Taylor, Robert L.
Bragg,	Ford,	McMillin,	Thompson, P. B.
Bright,	Frost,	Mills,	Tillman,
Buckner,	Geddes,	Money,	Turner, Oscar
Cabell,	Gillette,	Morrison,	Upson,
Caldwell,	Goode,	Muldrow,	Vance,
Chalmers,	Gunter,	Myers,	Waddill,
Clardy,	Hammond, N. J.	New,	Warner,
Clark, John B.	Harris, John T.	Nicholls,	Weaver,
Clements,	Hatch,	Philips,	Wellborn,
Clymer,	Herbert,	Phister,	Whiteaker,
Cobb,	Herndon,	Poehler,	Whitthorne,
Coffroth,	Hill,	Reagan,	Williams, Thomas
Colerick,	Hooker,	Richardson, J. S.	Willis,
Converse,	Hostetler,	Richmond,	Wilson,
Cook,	House,	Robertson,	Wise,
Covert,	Hunton,	Rothwell,	Wright,
Cox,	Hurd,	Samford,	Yeates,
Cravens,	Kenna,	Sawyer,	Young, Casey.

NOT VOTING—48.

Bliss,	Henry,	McGowan,	Russell, Daniel L.
Cannon,	Houk,	Miller,	Ryon, John W.
Chittenden,	Hubbell,	Mitchell,	Singleton, O. R.
Clark, Alvah A.	James,	Muller,	Stephens,
Daggett,	Johnston,	Murch,	Taylor, Ezra B.
Davis, Joseph J.	Jones,	Neal,	Thompson, W. G.
Dick,	Joyce,	O'Brien,	Townshend, R. W.
Forney,	Kelley,	O'Connor,	Turner, Thomas
Hammond, John	Lapham,	O'Reilly,	Tyler,
Hayes,	Lindsey,	Persons,	Wait,
Henderson,	Lounsbery,	Phelps,	Yocum,
Henkle,	Manning,	Pound,	Young, Thomas L.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. CANNON, of Illinois, on this vote, with Mr. FORNEY.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that this amendment was to come in as an additional proviso, and is not, in fact, an amendment to any part of the fifth section.

Mr. McKINLEY. That is correct.

The SPEAKER. And therefore the vote will stand on concurrence in the Senate amendment.

Mr. CARLISLE. That is the understanding of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it proper to make this statement for the reason that this amendment comes in a little out of order.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. TUCKER moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was disagreed to; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SUPPLEMENTARY FUNDING BILL.

Mr. CARLISLE. I ask unanimous consent to introduce at this time and put upon its passage the following bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objections.

Mr. PRICE. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa objects.

Mr. WILBER. I object to the introduction of the bill.

Mr. ATKINS. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. CARLISLE. Objection being made, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. CONGER. Let me ask whether the other bill is passed finally?

The SPEAKER. The refunding bill has passed both Houses of Congress.

Mr. CONGER. It can be recalled, then, and amended.

The SPEAKER. It has passed both Houses.

Mr. KEIFER. But it is not the law of the land yet. Has it received the approval of the President?

The SPEAKER. It has not yet been signed.

Mr. CONGER. By unanimous consent it can be called back an d this amendment made in it. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be recalled.

Several MEMBERS objected.

Mr. WARNER. Regular order.

Mr. KEIFER. There never was an attempt to change legislation in this way that I have ever heard of before.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the bill. Before concluding,

Mr. CONGER. I make the point of order, and I make it now in order to get the ruling of the Chair upon it, that we have not left the business on the Speaker's table. I think the Chair decided in another case that the motion to suspend the rules could not be entertained while business on the Speaker's table was pending.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is too late now to make a point of order raised by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WILBER. I objected at the time.

Mr. KEIFER. Why is it too late?

The SPEAKER. Objection was made to unanimous consent; but this is a motion to suspend the rules. No objection was raised until after the bill was partly read. The point of order, therefore, comes too late.

Mr. KEIFER. But why is it too late to object?

The SPEAKER. Because the bill had been read.

Mr. PRICE. But I objected to it directly myself when the gentleman first introduced it.

Mr. WILBER. So did I, and before it was read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman objected to unanimous consent, which the gentleman from Kentucky asked. This is a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. REED. The time to make objection is after the bill is read, not before it is read.

Mr. SPRINGER. No objection can be made to the motion to suspend the rules. That is undoubtedly in order.

The SPEAKER. This bill has been considered, and the objection is, the Chair thinks, now too late.

Mr. REED. But our time to object is after the bill has been read.

The SPEAKER. The way to object is to vote against it. This bill has been presented and considered.

Mr. KEIFER. How?

The SPEAKER. By being read.

Mr. REED. The Speaker decided only yesterday that the reading of a bill was not considering it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has entertained a motion under the rule, and the Chair thinks that the point of order cannot now be made against it. The Chair holds that the point of order made by the gentleman from Michigan comes too late. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. REED. But the Chair cannot rule a point of order out of order that is made before the bill is read. We could not object before.

The SPEAKER. The objections were made, as the gentleman from Maine will understand, to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky for unanimous consent. Objection was made when he requested to introduce the bill by unanimous consent. This is an entirely different motion.

Mr. PRICE. But I objected when the request was first made.

The SPEAKER. That is very true, but that was in reference to the question of unanimous consent to its introduction.

Mr. REED. That objection was made at the time——

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair recognized the gentleman to move to suspend the rules and pass the bill. The point of order should have been made then and before the bill was read, if made at all. But no point of order was made, and the Clerk commenced the reading of the bill. The Chair holds that it is now too late.

Mr. REED. But, Mr. Speaker, was it possible to make a point of order upon it until we knew from the reading what it was?

The SPEAKER. This is a proposition to suspend the rules, which will enable the gentleman to know what it is. The remedy is to vote it down. [Cries of "Read!" "Read!"]

Mr. REED. I am very sure the Chair does not intend to make a ruling that will commit him to such a doctrine as that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair states that the point of order came too late.

Mr. REED. But the Chair cannot state that the point of order came too late when it was made as soon as we understood what it was that was sought to be presented here. Why, we are entitled to make the point of order on a bill as soon as it is presented to us; and no one can make the point of order till he knows what it is.

Mr. CARLISLE. I had moved a suspension of the rules.

Mr. SCALES. Was the point of order reserved?

The SPEAKER. The point of order could have been reserved, but it was not.

Mr. CARLISLE. I have moved to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. REED. The Chair has ruled, as I understand, that it was too late to make the point of order.

The SPEAKER. That it was too late to make the point of order against the motion.

Mr. REED. What motion?

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Kentucky to suspend the rules.

Mr. REED. On what ground does the Chair so decide?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so decides because the point of order was not made in time.

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. PRICE] says he rose to make the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa did not say so, and the Chair does not think he will say he did. He only made an objection to the introduction of the bill. The Chair has carefully watched every step in the proceedings.

Mr. REED. But the whole motion is to suspend the rules and pass a particular bill.

The SPEAKER. There was no attempt to make the point of order against the motion. The Chair does not decide now whether the point of order could have been successfully made or not, but there was none made.

Mr. CONGER. The Chair cannot say the point of order was not made. He may say it was made too late; but I certainly made it very distinctly. [Cries of "Read!" "Read!"]

The Clerk resumed and continued the reading of the bill until interrupted by,

Mr. WILBER, who said: There is so much disorder in the Hall that we cannot hear what the Clerk is reading.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen will be seated. The Chair will cause the reading of the bill to be again commenced from the beginning, so that every gentleman may hear it.

Mr. KEIFER. Before the reading is proceeded with, that we may not be too late, and as some of us desire to have a second, I reserve the right to call for a second.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, and then, of course, the demand for a second will be allowed.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill, which in full is as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the last sentence in section 1 of the act entitled "An act to facilitate the refunding of the national debt," passed at the present session of Congress, and known as the funding act of 1881, be, and the same is hereby, so amended as to read as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to authorize public subscriptions, at not less than par, to be received at all depositories of the United States, and at all national banks and such other banks as he may designate for the bonds and for the Treasury notes herein provided for, for thirty days before he shall ask for or award any portion of such bonds or Treasury notes to any syndicate of individuals or bankers or otherwise than under such public subscriptions. And if it shall happen that more than the entire amount of said bonds and Treasury notes, or of either of them, has been subscribed within said thirty days, he shall award the full amount subscribed to all persons who shall have made bona fide subscriptions in order of time of said subscriptions and at the rates most advantageous to the United States."

SEC. 2. That section 4 of the said act be, and the same is hereby, so amended as to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to use, from time to time, not exceeding $50,000,000 at any one time, of the standard gold and silver coin in the Treasury for the purposes mentioned in said section, and the surplus remaining in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, or so much thereof as the Secretary of the Treasury may consider proper, may be applied to the purchase or redemption of any United States bonds or of the Treasury notes authorized by the said act.

SEC. 3. That section 5 of said act be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding thereto the following words: "And provided further, That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to repeal, modify, or in any manner affect sections 5220, 5221, 5222, 5223, or 5224 of the Revised Statutes of the United States of America."

Mr. CALKINS. I hope the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] will allow that bill to be printed in the RECORD and let it go over till to-morrow morning that members may read it.

Mr. CARLISLE. It is nothing in the world but the amendments which the gentlemen on the other side have voted for.

Mr. CONGER. But we have the judgment of the other side of the House that it is very improper to pass such amendments.

Mr. CARLISLE. That it was improper to pass such amendments, under the circumstances, to the bill just passed.

Mr. CONGER. Now, here is an attempt to huddle into four sections what is required to perfect the other bill, when it would take ten or twelve sections to do it. It is a hasty, premature, ill-advised attempt——

Mr. CARLISLE. The gentleman from Michigan has voted for every proposition in that bill.

Mr. CALKINS. If the gentleman from Kentucky is sincere in seeking to pass this, I ask him to let it go over till to-morrow morning.

Mr. CARLISLE. It would seem as if gentlemen on the other side did not want what they have been asking for.

Mr. KEIFER. The gentleman from Kentucky must not say that. He ought to allow us time to examine his bill. The gentleman may be bringing it in for the purpose of having it defeated. We can scarcely infer anything else from the way in which he has brought it before the House.

Mr. CARLISLE. I call for a vote on the proposition.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. KEIFER. Yes, sir; a second is demanded.

Mr. LAPHAM. I desire to make a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LAPHAM. I make the point of order that it is not competent for us to pass an act amending an act which has not yet become law. We have a right to recall that act if it needs amendment. But we cannot pass a supplementary bill amending a bill which has not yet become a law.

The SPEAKER. The House has already done exactly the same thing.

Mr. REAGAN. I desire to say a word on the point of order. The House is cognizant of its own record. It takes notice of its own actions. It may see that a bill has passed which needs revision; and certainly it must be competent for us to pass another act to make a necessary correction.

Mr. LAPHAM. I desire a ruling from the Chair on the point of order I have raised. But before he rules on it I wish to add a word or two to what I have said.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from New York as to the point of order without reference to the question whether it was made in time.

Mr. LAPHAM. I suggest that even if the bill had gone back to the Senate the House has the power to recall it for the purpose of amending it; if it had gone to the President we would have the power to ask him to return it.

The SPEAKER. The two Houses would have the power to do that.

Mr. LAPHAM. Until it becomes a law it is not the subject of legislation here of another bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that a case exactly similar has occurred before, notably the bill——

Mr. REAGAN. The river and harbor bill.

The SPEAKER. That is not precisely like this case.

Mr. LAPHAM. The bill is not even engrossed yet; it has not passed the House.

The SPEAKER. That is a matter for the House to consider; not the Chair.

Mr. LAPHAM. The Chair knows he has not signed it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has nothing to do with what the House wishes.

Mr. LAPHAM. Let me make another suggestion. Suppose the bill to which this proposed bill refers never becomes a law. What becomes of this bill?

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suppose that this would not become a law, as the same power would control this that would prevent the other from becoming a law.

Mr. LAPHAM. And if we desire to amend a bill which has just passed, let us take it up and amend it in a manly way, and not let us, by a mere subterfuge like this, try to avoid the evils which are contained in the bill which we have passed. You have not signed any bill yet to which this refers. The bill is within our control; and it is not yet legislation; it is not yet the subject of supplemental or additional legislation. On the contrary, this proposed bill, on the face of it, purports to be an amendment of a bill which it recites has just passed the House.

Mr. CARLISLE. I never was a member of a legislative assembly in which just such things have not been done.

Mr. KEIFER. Where were you ever before a member of a legislative assembly?

Mr. CARLISLE. I was in the Kentucky Legislature for twelve years.

Mr. KEIFER. And you there amended bills before they were laws?

Mr. CARLISLE. Allow me to make my statement. I say I have never been a member of a legislative assembly in which there have not been other bills or joint resolutions passed to correct any error that may have occurred in the passage of a bill, or to amend any clause that required amendment in a bill upon which the body had acted. Now, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAPHAM] says that we can recall this funding bill. He forgets that every vote——

Mr. REED. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. CARLISLE. When I get to the end of my sentence I will. The gentleman from New York forgets that upon every vote by this House on that bill a motion to reconsider was made, which motion to reconsider was laid upon the table; so that the bill has passed beyond the control of this House.

Mr. PAGE. Will the gentleman allow me one question?

Mr. CARLISLE. Certainly.

Mr. PAGE. The gentleman from Kentucky then admits that there are errors in the bill we have just passed that require additional legislation?

Mr. CARLISLE. I do not admit any such thing.

Mr. PAGE. I thought you did.

Mr. CARLISLE. I say that you gentlemen say that it is subject to a certain construction, and I want to remedy that difficulty.

Mr. REED. Will the gentleman from Kentucky say——

Mr. CONGER. How can a bill——

Mr. CARLISLE. One at a time.

Mr. CONGER. How can a bill be called an act which is still a bill unenrolled and unsigned?

Mr. CARLISLE. It is described as such by its title, and that is the designation given to it in its last section.

Mr. CONGER. But that is not an act yet.

Mr. REED. Does the gentleman from Kentucky mean us to understand that in the Legislature of Kentucky he has participated in the passage of a bill which was introduced before the bill it was intended to correct had become a law?

Mr. CARLISLE. Often.

Mr. REED. Often?

Mr. CARLISLE. Yes.

Mr. REED. Before it had become a law?

Mr. CARLISLE. Yes; and we did it here on the river and harbor bill.

Mr. REED. Before the Speaker had signed it?

Mr. CARLISLE. Yes, sir.

Mr. REAGAN. Unanimous consent was given this very day to do that very thing in regard to the river and harbor bill. This House has a right to control its own action. The question which the gentleman from New York raises goes beyond the question now before the House. The question before us is simply whether we will conduct our own legislation in our own way, and leave to others to do the same.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon ordering the main question, upon which a second is demanded.

Mr. WILBER. I do not think there is one man in ten in this House that heard that bill when it was read.

The SPEAKER. That is not the fault of the Chair, it is the fault of members themselves.

Mr. WILBER. How can we vote on anything of that kind when we have not heard it? I vouch that not one in twenty here knows what it is.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order. Gentlemen may as well take their seats and be quiet first as last. [After a pause.] There is a demand for a second of the previous question.

Mr. LAPHAM. I desire a ruling on the point of order I made.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not understand the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAPHAM] to make any point of order.

Mr. LAPHAM. Certainly I made a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. CONGER. I take an appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. SPRINGER, it was agreed to, there being—ayes 131, noes 27.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on seconding the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. KEIFER called for tellers; and Mr. KEIFER and Mr. CARLISLE were appointed.

The House divided; and the tellers reported ayes 142, noes 11.

So the motion to suspend the rules was seconded.

The SPEAKER. Is debate desired on the motion to suspend the rules? [Cries of "No!" "No!"]

Mr. KEIFER. Yes, sir.

Mr. WARNER. I want the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARLISLE] to state that the propositions embraced in this bill are identically those already voted on.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] asks that there be debate. [Cries of "No!" "No!"]

The SPEAKER. It is the gentleman's right. The rules allow fifteen minutes debate on each side.

Mr. KEIFER. I hope that the gentleman who offers the bill will be heard, so that we may understand what the bill is.

Mr. CARLISLE. I am very sorry to hear gentlemen saying that they do not understand what these propositions are, for they have voted for every one of them on calls of the yeas and nays yesterday and to-day.

Mr. WILBER. How do we know that? We have not heard the bill read so as to distinguish anything. This is the first statement of the kind that we have had. If the printing of the bill in the RECORD had been ordered so that we could read it in the morning, we might then be ready to vote on it.

Mr. CARLISLE. The first section of this bill proposes simply to so amend the bill known as the funding bill as to make it conform to the provision offered by the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. FRYE;] that is, it proposes to incorporate into the Senate amendment which, as it now stands, constitutes the last sentence of the first section of the funding bill, the amendment which the gentleman from Maine offered in the Committee on Ways and Means, and which that committee reported to the House. The gentleman from Maine has seen this bill, and knows that this is exactly what it does.

The second section proposes to so amend the fourth section of the bill as to make it conform exactly with the amendments which the Committee on Ways and Means proposed to the Senate amendments to that section. The Senate so amended the fourth section with regard to the use of the $50,000,000 of standard gold and silver coin by the Secretary of the Treasury as to make it very doubtful whether or not the Secretary could use that fund, as he had said before the Finance Committee of the Senate he desired to use it or have power to use it; that is, as a capital fund in the process of refunding the public debt. The amendment of the Senate left it doubtful whether the Secretary of the Treasury could use that $50,000,000 more than once, whether when he had once used $50,000,000 of standard gold and silver coin in the Treasury in purchasing outstanding 5 and 6 per cent. bonds and had once replaced that money out of the proceeds of the sale of the 3 per cent. bonds, he could use it again. The Secretary of the Treasury said in effect before the Committee on Finance that he ought to have the power to use that fund from time to time as occasion might require and as his judgment might dictate in the course of this process of refunding; and the Committee on Ways and Means reported to the House certain verbal amendments to the fourth section which would undoubtedly have given him that power; but the House refused to adopt those amendments. This bill corrects that, and contains no other provision on that subject.

The third section of the bill is, I think I can say, in the identical words of the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCKINLEY] upon which the very last vote of this House was taken.

Mr. KEIFER. The gentleman voted against it.

Mr. CARLISLE. No, sir, I voted for it.

Mr. KEIFER. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. CARLISLE. You voted for it too.

Mr. KEIFER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CARLISLE. That amendment, as the gentleman from Maine has stated, was designed to meet a difficulty about the fifth section.

There is an apprehension in the public mind in some quarters that the fifth section might be so construed as to prevent a bank desiring to go out of business and close up its affairs from depositing lawful money in the Treasury and withdrawing its bonds at once. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio was designed to remove all doubts upon that subject by providing that nothing contained in that act should be so construed as to repeal, modify, or in any manner affect sections 5220, 5221, 5222, 5223, and 5224 of the Revised Statutes. That amendment was rejected; and I have included it as the third section of this supplemental bill. These are the three propositions and the only propositions contained in the bill.

Mr. HUBBELL. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. CARLISLE. Certainly.

Mr. HUBBELL. Is the gentleman in favor of this bill?

Mr. CARLISLE. I am.

Mr. HUBBELL. Then, of course, the gentleman admits that the republicans in voting for the amendments to the Senate amendments to the funding bill voted right and the gentleman's friends voted wrong.

Mr. CARLISLE. I voted for this amendment with the republicans. I had agreed to do so in the Committee on Ways and Means, and I did it all through, as did several others on this side. Without reproaching anybody, I wish to say that, in my judgment, but for a report which reached this side of the House late yesterday evening, that it had been said by some gentlemen on the other side that if they could secure the adoption of a single amendment they would defeat the bill in the Senate, this side of the House would have adopted those amendments.

Several MEMBERS. Every one of them.

Mr. CONGER. Did so little a thing as that terrify the democracy?

Mr. CARLISLE. So large a thing as that—the utter defeat of the funding bill—did.

Mr. CONGER. With a democratic Senate?

Mr. KEIFER obtained the floor. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen need not call "vote," because the gentleman from Ohio is entitled to the floor.

Mr. EINSTEIN. I desire to answer the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky in which, I suppose, he referred to me. The report was in circulation last night, as the gentleman from Kentucky very truly says, and, being traced to its fountain-head, it was denied by the gentleman from Pennsylvania on the other side that I had made any such remark. The gentleman from Pennsylvania said the remark was gathered together on his own side, and that his side understood it from the remark he had made and had added to it themselves. So far as the remark referred to me, I cannot see how it influenced the other side.

Mr. CARLISLE. I have not charged or insinuated any gentleman of that side had made a remark. I merely said a report was circulated on this side that such a remark was made. I accept the gentleman's statement that he did not make it.

Mr. EINSTEIN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania—— [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. KEIFER. I have the floor, and I yield five minutes of my time to the gentleman from Maine, [Mr. REED.]

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I suppose it would be difficult to find a more characteristic example of democratic legislation than we have had in this refunding bill with this corollary which is attempted to be added to it. It seems as if they had no connection with the business interests of the country. It would seem as if they cared nothing about giving serious shock to the present prosperity which this country has. Nobody has objected to this bill upon the simple question of the rate of interest. Some of us have entertained the opinion that a bond bearing 3 per cent. interest and running the length of time which this bond runs would not be negotiable in the market; but all that is question of opinion, and had the fifth section been left out, this bill would have taken its course according to the ideas of the majority. And yet perhaps had it not been hoped the Senate would make due amendment to it, it might have been defeated at the time when it passed the House with the fifth section in it. But believing, as we did, that the Senate would make amendment to it, it passed the House; but the Senate failing to amend it, we all of us saw what effect it had upon the business of the country.

Mr. LAPHAM. The Senate committee did amend it.

Mr. REED. The Senate committee did amend it, but the Senate did not, and we all saw the effect which it had upon the business of the country.

Now, it is utterly idle for gentlemen on the other side to sneer at that fact by talking about stock-jobbing. It is true that it manifested itself in Wall street, but it is equally true its effect was spreading to all the other business of the country, so that the legitimate business of the country was being injured by it, and it only recovered from the shock because it was believed that the bill would never become a law. And on that, in my judgment, depends the business interests of the country; and because I believed that, for my part I have helped in the most strenuous opposition to the passage of the bill. The question as to whether we shall fund our bonds at 3 per cent. or more is a simple question compared with the paralysis of the business of the country.

Now, I want to say to gentlemen that the continuance of the business of the country is not a question of figures, or a question of addition, or a question of mathematics. It is a question of human nature and of the operations of human nature, and we all of us know that while that trite saying that confidence is a plant of slow growth is true, it is equally true that the first frost may blight the flower. And, gentlemen, I want to warn you that it is not wise for us to do anything which produces a shock to public confidence. In order that business may go on harmoniously it is necessary for the business men of the country and the people of the country, all of us, to have confidence in the capacity of its business for development, and it was the shock which this bill gave to it which was the injury we have complained of and against which we have fought.

And our democratic friends themselves admitted their bill needed amendment, by making the proposition to amend it and expecting to carry it by a two-third vote. They have made the proposition in a manner which seems to me to be without precedent, notwithstanding the remarkable experience of my friend from Kentucky. Here is a bill which the Speaker has admitted by his silence was not signed by him at the time this was introduced, and was consequently within the control of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

The Chair will take the liberty of reading in this connection a single paragraph from the Manual:

> If an amendment be proposed inconsistent with one already agreed to, it is a fit ground for its rejection by the House, but not within the competence of the Speaker to suppress it as if it were against order.

That relates to amendments, and by analogy the Chair thinks the same would apply to a bill.

Mr. REED. Now, I want to finish what I have to say on that point. [Cries of "Regular order!" "The gentleman's time has expired!"]

Mr. CONGER. It is a perfect mockery to give us fifteen minutes and not allow us to be heard, if gentlemen are to be interrupted all the time.

Mr. KEIFER. I will yield to the gentleman from Maine more time if he wants it.

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEIFER. I will yield two minutes to him.

Mr. REED. The gentleman from Kentucky, in replying to my objection, said this very House had amended the river and harbor bill. But as I understand it, though I have not seen the record myself, this was a mere order to the Committee on Engrossed Bills that they should make a verbal change where a clerical error had been made, and that was the extent of it.

The SPEAKER. That was done to-day.

Mr. REED. And that was by unanimous consent; and I submit, Mr. Speaker, it was on a transaction as different as the world is wide from the amendment which is proposed here to be attached on as an explanatory clause to a bill which has not yet become a law. Why, the very title of this attempted transaction shows the absurdity of it. Here is a "bill to amend an act," and there is no such "act" on the face of the earth. The bill would not become an act until it has passed from the control of the House, from the control of the legislative power, and the President has exercised the power which he has in the premises. But we are therefore, owing to the exigencies in which the democratic party finds itself, reduced to the absurd position of proposing to amend an act which is not an act and may never be.

Mr. CARLISLE. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has ten minutes.

Mr. CARLISLE. I wish to yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. COX.]

Mr. KEIFER. Do you wish to use your time now?

Mr. CARLISLE. I have no choice. If the gentleman desires to proceed I am willing he may do so.

Mr. KEIFER. I have no objection to the gentleman from Kentucky going on and reserving my eight minutes to conclude.

Mr. CARLISLE. Then I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York, [Mr. COX.]

The SPEAKER. The usual practice is to allow the time to be divided so that the last five minutes will belong to the member who makes the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. CARLISLE. I have no objection to yield to the gentleman from New York if he desires to proceed now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman then yields five minutes to the gentleman from New York; that will leave five minutes in which to close the discussion. After the gentleman from New York has concluded the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] for eight minutes remaining on that side, after which the gentleman from Kentucky will have his five minutes to close the debate.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, this bill seems to me to be very much like renewing the contest which we had during the consideration of the other bill, except in this way: our republican brethren are opposing the very thing that they were then understood to favor. [Cries of "Oh, no!" on the republican side.] If I am wrong we will notice it in the RECORD to-morrow morning. Why are they now opposing this explanatory bill? How can they excuse themselves for voting as they have done, except by opposing this bill in this most miraculous and curious manner? What is the object of opposing the bill? Do they wish to raise the question between the banks and the people? I warn them at the threshold of their administration that they will go down with their favorite monopoly before the people on this question.

We have contended here, Mr. Speaker, for a decent percentage in the placing of our bonds. I am not sure, gentlemen, but that your Secretary of the Treasury favors this very bill. And why are you fighting it?

Mr. WILBER. None of us know what it is yet.

Mr. COX. Are you assured to the contrary? Are you certain that the Secretary does not favor it? I await your response. You are dumb.

Mr. PRICE. I am not dumb. I know he does, for I have it from his own mouth. Now, if the gentleman wanted the information he has got it.

Mr. COX. Nobody ever suspected that you were either deaf or dumb. [Laughter.]

I am not and never have been in the interest of the national banks. Has my friend from Iowa any interest in them? Is he not president of a bank? [Cries of "He is dumb now!" on the democratic side.] He is now both deaf and dumb. Why does he not answer the question?

I believe if the people had fair and free representation here they would ask for the retirement of the national-bank currency and their replacement by United States notes.

Mr. PRICE. What do you mean by saying that I am interested in national banks?

Mr. COX. How are you interested?

Mr. PRICE. I say what do you mean by my being in the interest of the national banks?

Mr. COX. I did not say "interest." I said the gentleman was an officer of a national bank.

Mr. PRICE. And I want to say I am not. I am not an officer of a national bank.

Mr. COX. Not a stockholder?

Mr. PRICE. A stockholder? Yes. If you will keep on guessing you will find out all you would like to know; my name, where I was born, and everything else.

Mr. COX. And do not you take any interest in your own stock? Of course my friend from Iowa takes some interest in his own stock. Even a cattle man would do that. [Laughter.]

There is some reason why gentlemen on the other side oppose this bill; some reason which the people will find out. Whether it is because the banks have tried to depreciate the white coin by not receiving it except in small quantities, trying to make it a drug on the market, to break down the constitutional currency; or whether for other purposes which I cannot understand, it is desired to perpetuate their charters. One thing remains, that the banks of the United States, our creatures, are endeavoring to rule their creators, and that cannot be done while true republicanism, represented by my friend from Illinois, [Mr. MARSH,] and true democracy stand up as they have done to-day against this monopoly.

Mr. WEAVER. And true greenbackism. [Laughter.]

Mr. COX. If I had only known my friend from Iowa and his friends——

A MEMBER. Every one of them voted against the bill.

Mr. COX. I did not know they voted against the bill.

Mr. WEAVER. We voted against the national banks.

Mr. COX. My time is nearly out; something like my friend from Iowa, who never got his chance to serve as President.

Mr. WEAVER. In the electoral count I authorized the Speaker of the House to withdraw my name. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. That is correct. That is the fact.

Mr. COX. I think the remark of the gentleman from Iowa, although it was seconded by yourself, Mr. Speaker, is a little irrelevant to this bill. One thing, however, ought to be done by this Congress before we adjourn. We are about to die. The democratic party goes down with a popular majority.

Mr. HASKELL. It has already gone down.

Mr. COX. But we will come up again on this very issue. We will have another chance, and perhaps my friend from Iowa may be with us. All we ask is a fight for free, honest revenue, tariff reform, and a fair square fight against all monopolies. And all hell then cannot prevail against the democratic party. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. KEIFER. I hope the same extension of time will be given to us.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not give the gentleman from New York more time than he was entitled to. The Chair is guided by the watch in the hands of his clerk.

